

明治二十五年三月三十日第三種郵便物認可

The Japan Weekly Mail:

A REVIEW

OF

JAPANESE COMMERCE, POLITICS,

LITERATURE AND ART.

VOL. L.

<sup>July</sup>
~~June~~ to December, 1908.

INDEX.

明治廿五年三月廿日第三種郵便物認可

MISCELLANEOUS ARTICLES:—

Admiral Nebogatoff ... ..	521
Admiral Rojdestvensky ... ..	249
"Agenor" Case, The ... ..	472
Airship, The ... ..	273-329
Air Torpedo ... ..	378
Alleged Japanese American Entente... ..	674
Alleged Treason ... ..	103
A matter of Headlines—and of fact ... ..	776
America ... ..	181
America and China ... ..	213
America and Japan ... ..	238-327
—488-519-611-645
America and the Great Exhibition in Japan	709
American Battleship Fleet, The... ..	427
American Commissioners, The ... ..	631
American Elections, The ... ..	364-496
American Fleet and School Children ... ..	503
American Fleet, Departure of ... ..	529
American Fleet—Harbour Rules ... ..	465
American Fleet's Reception ... ..	478
American Fleet, The ... ..	486-489
American Merchandise in Manchuria ... ..	91
American Politics... ..	392-428
American Tariff, The ... ..	676
American Visitors, The ... ..	393
A Misapprehension ... ..	775
A Mischief Monger ... ..	775
An American on American Women... ..	347
An Anniversary ... ..	299
An Impostor... ..	579
An Interview... ..	574
Anti-Japanese Writing and Fair Criticism... ..	653
Arbitration Convention between Japan and the United States ... ..	343
Army Re-organization... ..	776
Army, The ... ..	216
Arrival of the U.S. Fleet ... ..	500
Artificial Silk... ..	64
A Suggestion ... ..	217
A Psychological Study... ..	775
Auction of Horses... ..	598
Australia and America ... ..	425
Australian Horses... ..	139-195
Autumn, Manœuvres, The... ..	612
"B" ... ..	547-584
Back from the East ... ..	475
Balkan Complication, The ... ..	609-711
Balkan Crisis, The ... ..	454-579-652
Balkan Trouble, The ... ..	490
Balkan Question, The ... ..	52-683
Banquet at the Bankers' Club ... ..	7
Baron Kikuchi ... ..	272
Baron Motono ... ..	9
Baron Sakatani ... ..	494-515
Battleship-cruiser, Real Function of the ... ..	469
Belgian-Japanese Bank ... ..	644
Bethell Case, The... ..	744
Bethell Libel Case, The ... ..	761
Birthday Ball, The ... ..	554
Birthday Reception ... ..	627
Bishop Awdry and his Assistant... ..	577
Bonnie Scotland: is She Degenerating? ... ..	475
Boycott, The ... ..	740
Boycotting and Boycotted ... ..	493
Brazilian Battleship, Launch of ... ..	529
Brazilian Battleships, The ... ..	288
British Association ... ..	781
British Fairplay Vindicated... ..	475
British Naval Policy ... ..	247
Britain's Newest Ship ... ..	723
British Newspapers in Korea ... ..	22
Britain's Share in the Trade of Japan ... ..	669
British Society, The ... ..	553
Budget for 1909-10 ... ..	577
Budget for Next Year ... ..	712
Budget Items... ..	609
Budget, The ... ..	777
Bund Reclamation ... ..	225
Burglary on the Bluff ... ..	137
Business Men of the Pacific Slope ... ..	462-550
Camphor Monopoly, The ... ..	611
Cause of Anti-Missionary Riots ... ..	505
Census in Tokyo ... ..	189

MISCELLANEOUS ARTICLES:—

Chess ... ..	696-727-765-791
Chientao ... ..	156-239-489-517
Chientao Fracas, The ... ..	553
China and Japan ... ..	335-4-7
China, List of Higher Metropolitan and
Provincial Authorities of ... ..	515
China, The New Power in ... ..	680
Chinese Army, The ... ..	712
Chinese Porcelain... ..	649
"Chiyo Mare," The ... ..	747
Christians and the American Fleet ... ..	445
Civilization in Danger ... ..	502
Clearing Houses, The... ..	1-4
Cocking, Mr. S. ... ..	226
College of Science (Tokyo) Journal ... ..	494
Coins ... ..	669
Commander Islands, affair at ... ..	515
Commercial Situation in China ... ..	492
Convention between Japan and the Netherlands ... ..	199
Converting Waste Heat into Electricity ... ..	668
Coronation Day in China ... ..	676
Count Komura ... ..	125-742
Count Okuma ... ..	215
Captain Hobson ... ..	61
Court Mourning in Japan ... ..	647
C. P. R. Train Service... ..	465
Cricket Ground Question ... ..	72
Crime ... ..	627
Culture Level of the Foreign Community ... ..	241
Customs Appeals ... ..	137-535-616
Customs Protests ... ..	18-72
—376-437-536-561-746
Customs Question... ..	743
Dalai Lama, The... ..	224-302
Dean Wace on Biblical Criticism ... ..	14
De Forest, Rev. Dr. ... ..	588
Departure of Mr. A. Bellamy Brown... ..	74
Deserving Family... ..	758
Diplomatic ... ..	273
Diplomatic Changes ... ..	436
Domestic Politics ... ..	680-741-770
Doyo ... ..	255
Dr. Post... ..	255
Dr. Sven Hedin ... ..	554-567-574-610-645
Dr. Koch ... ..	189
Durham White Stevens ... ..	229
Eastern Colonization Association ... ..	312
Eastern Colonization Company ... ..	156-273
Eastern Development Company ... ..	331-364
Education of Foreign Children in Japan ... ..	238
Educational Reaction in China ... ..	188
Eleven-inch Shells ... ..	273
Emperor and Admiral Sperry ... ..	488
Emperor, Departure of the... ..	594
Emperor's Birthday in Yokohama ... ..	557
Engagement of Mr. R. Loonen and Miss
Morss ... ..	771
English Press, The ... ..	395
European Situation, The ... ..	551
Evidence of Former Minister Dun ... ..	102
Exhibition, The ... ..	240-268-298-330
Extravagance among Soldiers ... ..	215
Fair Nagasaki ... ..	436
Fakumen Again ... ..	462
Features of Japan's Hospitality ... ..	491
Festivities in Tokyo ... ..	518
Field Marshal Nodzu ... ..	520
Fifty years of Open Japan ... ..	580
Farewell banquet at the Foreign Office ... ..	518
Female Suffrage ... ..	256
Fighting the Insurgents in Korea ... ..	243
Finance ... ..	95-151-212
Finance, The Portfolio of ... ..	333
Financial ... ..	120-246-270-299-329
Financial Situation, Marquis Katsura on the
302 ... ..	328
Financial speech by Marquis Katsura ... ..	328
Fires ... ..	198-316-377-410-533
Fires in Tokyo ... ..	778
Fishery Question, The... ..	216-246
Fishing in Russian waters ... ..	436
Foreign Capital ... ..	125
Foreign Trade ... ..	9-399

MISCELLANEOUS ARTICLES:—

Foreigners and the Collection of Fine Arts
in Japan ... ..	781
Forestry in Japan... ..	185
Forgery of Shares... ..	255
Formosa ... ..	123
Formosan Natives, The ... ..	439
Fourteenth of July ... ..	68
Fourth of July ... ..	47
Free Trade and Development in the New World... ..	313
Fraser River, The... ..	35
French views on England ... ..	318
Fushun ... ..	679
Gaol Outbreak at Shanghai ... ..	227
General Marquis Nozu ... ..	367
German and Russian Newspapers ... ..	364
German Episode, The... ..	611
German Society School, The ... ..	649
Germany, An appreciation of ... ..	359
Germany and England ... ..	644
Germany and the Trutti ... ..	459
Germany in China ... ..	397
Government, The... ..	124-180
Great Bush Fire, The ... ..	285
Great Exhibition, The... ..	211
Great Injustice, A... ..	612
Green and Blue ... ..	494
Hague Conference, The ... ..	362
Hara Affair, The ... ..	460
Health of Manila, The ... ..	504
Heavy Rain ... ..	103
Heavy Snowfall ... ..	626
Hindu Declaration ... ..	284
Hirado and Will Adams ... ..	228
Home news and opinion ... ..	594-628-694-759
Honesty ... ..	361
Hongkong Promoters of Japanese Boycott
angry ... ..	347
Horse Race Club ... ..	693
Horse Racing... ..	424
Hsiang, The Manuscript of... ..	580
Hydrophobia... ..	188
Ideograph, The ... ..	247
Illumination Extraordinary ... ..	495
Impartiality ... ..	217
Imperial Audience ... ..	490
Imperial Diet... ..	779
Imperial Household ... ..	771
Imperial Rescript ... ..	460
Imperial Registry in China... ..	666
Import Trade of China and Japan ... ..	301
Income-tax notices ... ..	649
India ... ..	245
India and Japan ... ..	124
"Indomitable," The ... ..	348
Interchange of Courtesies between Newspapers... ..	584
International Courtesies, Interchange of ... ..	517
International Intercourse ... ..	184
International Parliamentary Conference ... ..	516
International Pize Court ... ..	364
Inukai Ki on the Chinese Complication ... ..	647
Japan and China ... ..	517
Japan Brewery Case ... ..	471
Japan Colombian Treaty ... ..	751
Japan in Korea ... ..	7-227
Japan in Manchuria ... ..	33-431
Japan Painting and Applied Art... ..	652
Japan's Economics ... ..	738
Japan's Foreign Relations ... ..	362
Japan's Trade with China ... ..	285
Japan's Welcome to America ... ..	461
Japanese Abroad, A ... ..	553
Japanese Agricultural Immigration in o
Korea... ..	142
Japanese America Convention ... ..	685
Japanese American Entente The ... ..	739
Japanese Battleship and the "Dread-nought" ... ..	281
Japanese English ... ..	494
Japanese Mercantile Marine, The ... ..	299
Japanese Politeness towards Foreigners ... ..	430
Japanese Professors at the Peking University

MISCELLANEOUS ARTICLES:—

Japanese Ships in the Yangtze ...	677
Japanese Statesmen on America ...	489
Journalism in Japan ...	239
Judgment in the "Teutonia" Case ...	79
Kaiser Again, The ...	646
Kaiser's Utterances, The ...	546
"Kamo Maru," The ...	133
Kanagawa Coolie Trouble ...	188
Katsura Cabinet, Opinions on the ...	375
Katsura (Marquis) on the Situation ...	610
Kawakita Affair, The ...	181-213
Kawashima, Mr. ...	271
Korean Insurrection, The ...	652
Korean National Debt Redemption Fund ...	380
"Kreuz Zeitung," The ...	493
Kuropatkin's Book ...	271
Ladies as Chairmen ...	282
Last General Election and Political Parties in Japan ...	71
Law Courts of Korea, The New ...	202
Literary Miscellany, A ...	534-526
Literary Notes ...	105
Lodging Houses for Female Operatives ...	70
Long Sea Voyages ...	378
London Correspondence ...	656
Lord Cromer's Warning to England ...	288
Mad Dogs ...	256
Major-General Acki ...	552
Malversation Case, The ...	183
Manœuvres, The ...	483
Map of Central Asia ...	460
Marriage Customs in Southern Nigeria ...	227
Marquis Inouye ...	273-303-333
Medical Inspection, A Question of ...	303
Mercantile Marine of Japan, The ...	150
Minnesota's Fast Passage ...	312
"Miye Maru" Affair, The ...	153-243-272
Mock Parliament Sendai High School ...	691
Marriage by Photograph ...	97
Money Order Exchange between Japan and Siam ...	346
Moral Greatness of the People of Japan ...	595
More American Lynch Law ...	250
Motor Tragedy in San Francisco ...	505
Mr. Kato ...	330
Mr. Ku Hung-Ming ...	724
Mr. Loomis ...	429
Mr. Murdoch ...	327
Mr. Preston ...	430
Mr. Preston and an unfounded charge ...	396
Mr. Sheng ...	333
Mysterious Death ...	690
Mystic's Aim ...	654
Musical Treat to come ...	685
Naruo Race Course ...	525
New Ambassador to Britain ...	301
New Buildings (Messrs. S. Samuel & Co.) ...	166
New Chrono-Photographic apparatus ...	345
New Penal Code ...	364
New Penal Code and Race Clubs ...	377
Newspapers ...	397
Newspaper Affair ...	679
Newspaper Correspondence ...	556-562
"New York Herald" The ...	303
New Zealand's Reception of the Battleship Fleet ...	285
New 44-mile Canal ...	562
Nippon Horse Company ...	376
Ni pon Race Club, The ...	67-562
Nonconformist Conscience at the Sea-side ...	373
Notice to Mariners ...	410-465-627-660
Novel Denature in Journalism ...	278
"Novoe Vremya," The ...	158
Official Secrecy ...	155
Official utterances ...	712
Old Chinese Porcelain and Works of Arts ...	456
Opinions ...	612
Oriental Development Society ...	393
P. & O. Service ...	169
Pari Motuel Question, The ...	457
Patent Office Circular Letter from People's Parliament, A ...	689
Persia ...	305
Petroleum in Japan ...	680
Petroleum in Japan ...	683
Political ...	184
Political Parties ...	121-327-711
Politics ...	520-575-647
Port Arthur ...	132
"Port Maria" The Stranding of the ...	200
Portsmouth Negotiations, The ...	215
Position of Foreigners in Japan ...	645
Post Offices in China, List of ...	750
Prefects, The Council of ...	493
Prefectural Governors in Tokyo ...	464
Present and Future in the Far East ...	507
Presidential Election, The, 457-519-547-578
Presidential Message, The ...	741
President Roosevelt ...	124
President Roosevelt and the Y.M.C.A. ...	15
Press Methods ...	331
Press on the Financial Programme ...	332
Primary School Teachers ...	497
Prince and Princess Ito ...	519

MISCELLANEOUS ARTICLES:—

Prince Ito ...	64-94-121-216-245
Prince Ito's Reminiscences ...	652
Privy Council, The ...	436
Professor MacClintock in Japan ...	9
Professor I hiki ...	64
Professor Sakurai's Jubilee ...	363
Professor Terry ...	364
Profits of Race Clubs, The ...	159
Protection of Birds ...	410
Public Notaries Law ...	76
"Punch" on the Split Infinitive ...	256
Race Club Regulations ...	625
Race Clubs ...	397-612
Railroads of the World ...	67
Railway Accidents ...	281-314-595-628
Railway Freights in America ...	97
Railway Nationalization Question ...	428
Railways in China ...	723
Railways in Manchuria ...	552
Reception to the American Fleet ...	313
Repayment of First War Loan ...	5
Resignation of the Cabinet ...	30
Retailing Deceit ...	495
Rev. Mr. Loomis ...	277
Rice ...	300
Rice Crop, The ...	275
Riot at Hashima ...	139
Rope Bridges ...	347
Royal Family of England, The ...	549
Rudeness unexampled in Japan ...	550
Russia ...	553
Russia and Japan ...	123
Russian News ...	37
Russo-Japanese Society, The ...	430
Saghalin ...	359
Sale of Race Horses ...	68
Samuel Samuel & Co's New Building "Scharnhorst," Fire on the ...	166
School Hygiene Congress ...	183
Science Honoured ...	611
Scientific value of the O-Ana Sama ...	531
Secret Causes of the Russo-Japanese War ...	346
Secret Causes of the War with Japan ...	371
Scranton, Dr. on Korea ...	429
Sedition in India ...	470
Seizure of Two Russian steamers ...	375
Seoul Affair, The ...	210-239
Seoul Trial, The ...	80
Sequel to the Olympic Games ...	619
Shanghai Trans, The ...	653
Sheng Iwhai ...	305
Shipping Accidents ...	76-100-137
Shoji in one Day ...	440
Silk ...	776
Silk Goods for Export ...	370
Sino-Japanese Convention ...	689
Snow ...	401
Snow and Hail ...	471
South Manchurian and East China Railways ...	521
South Manchurian Railway Co. ...	4
South Manchurian Railway, The ...	459-707-742-773
Speech by Mr. Preston ...	308
Spotting Offer, A ...	198
Standard Oil Company, The ...	648
Stock Exchange Scandal, The ...	679
Storm ...	17-195
Storm in Tokyo ...	409
"Strained Relations" ...	110
Strange Telegram, A ...	612
Sub Judice ...	10
Subsidies to Steamship Services ...	743
Sugar ...	743
Suicides ...	378
Sven Hedin ...	461-497-679
Sven Hedin in Tibet ...	475
Sven Hedin meets Annie Besant ...	627
Takamine, Dr. ...	301
Takayama Beach ...	251
Tang Shaoi ...	461-521
Tea ...	400
"Tenyo Maru" criticised ...	313
The Acme of Suspicion ...	710
The Anglo-Japanese Bank ...	107
The Boycott ...	551-574-642-708-776
The Cabinet ...	93
The Cabinet Crisis ...	58
The Conditions of Peace between the East and the West ...	108
The Empire Day Cup ...	37
The Entente ...	708
The Exhibition ...	397-428-459
The Fleet ...	531
The Fleet arrives ...	500
"The Free Hindusthan" ...	37
The French Language Society ...	9
The Highest Mountain Ascents ...	499
The Japanese Navy ...	5
The Kaiser ...	679
The Korean Delegate ...	95
The Latest Seoul Canard ...	95
The Nagasaki Affair ...	97
The Nationalization of the Railways ...	5

MISCELLANEOUS ARTICLES:—

The New "Rurik" ...	561
The Palace ...	552
The President and the "World" ...	776
The Railway Question ...	10-710
The Raising of Railway Freights in America ...	97
The Romaji ...	31
"The Times" and the Publishers ...	585
The "Unagi Kai" ...	64
The United Chambers of Commerce and the Government ...	10
The Weather ...	333
Thunder Storm ...	224
Tientsin ...	411
Tokyo ...	302
Tokyo City Assembly, The ...	395
Tokyo Jockey Club ...	80-113
Tokyo Municipality, The ...	96-156-363-516
Trade-mark appeal ...	256-267
Trade-mark Decision ...	593-625
Trade-mark Protest ...	377-786
Trademarks ...	579
Trade-marks Convention, The ...	179
Trade-marks, etc., Convention between Japan and America for Protection in China ...	194
Trade-marks, etc., Convention between Japan and America for Protection in Korea ...	194
Trade of Japan ...	84
Tragedies ...	48-408
Trans-Asian Communications ...	184
Trans-Pacific Trade, The question of the ...	150
Train-Riding in Tokyo ...	274
Trans-Siberian Railway ...	192
Traveller's Story, A ...	431
Treaty between Britain and Japan ...	246
Trial of Yang Kitaik ...	413
Tributes from Admiral Sperry and Capt. Murdock ...	536
Trouble in the K.R. & A.C. ...	233
Tuberculosis, Conference on ...	463
Two Burglaries at Kobe ...	103
Two Schooners, The ...	212
Typhoon in Hongkong ...	201
Uninhabited Island ...	370
Union Church ...	594
United States and Japan ...	580
United States Fleet ...	517
United States Squadron at Amoy ...	552
United States, The ...	584-647
Vessels completing at Nagasaki ...	315
Viscount Enomoto ...	198
Vladivostok ...	592
Wakatsuki, Mr. ...	297
War of 1904-5, The ...	271
War, The ...	296
Washington and Annapolis ...	502
Water Polo ...	103-129
Water Tube Boilers and the American Fleet ...	539
Weak Spot in the Budget ...	777
Weather, The ...	185-217-249-275-303
When Wars Shall cease ...	475
Where Guilt Lifts up its Head ...	280
World's Sunday School Association ...	277
Wu Tingfang ...	272
Yalu Timber Convention, The ...	296
Yalu Timber Question, The ...	329
Yang Affair, The ...	245
Yang Case, The ...	333
Yang Trial, The ...	302
Yangtze Ports ...	96
Year's Earthquakes ...	593
Yokohama Dock Co. ...	721
Yokohama Literary Society ...	73
Yokohama Railway, The ...	345
York, The New Archbishop of ...	648
Youngest British Minister ...	373
Zeppelin Airship Disaster ...	285

ENTERTAINMENTS:—

A Literary Society Anniversary ...	660
Chinese Y. M. C. A. ...	49
Chronophone at the Gaiety ...	758
"Dorothy" ...	721-722-747
"Dorothy" in Tokyo ...	780
Garden Party in Tokyo ...	648
Girls' Club Evening Fete ...	163
Hongo-zu Theatre ...	345
Mr. Griffiths' Concert ...	470
Pastoral in Tokyo ...	462
Professor Fulton's Recital ...	531
St. Andrew's Ball ...	689
St. Joseph's College ...	40
The Chronophone Show ...	17
The St. Luke's Hospital Concert ...	15
Tokyo Literary and Musical Society ...	445
Union Church Recital ...	593
Y. A. R. C. Open Air Concert ...	168
Yokohama Literary and Musical Society ...	531
Yokohama Literary Society ...	557-685-721-755-789
Yokohama Literary Society ...	438-470-504

LEADING ARTICLES:—

A Critic of Japan's Foreign Policy	619
Amur Railway, The	189
Armaments and Hypocrisy	369
Armaments and Responsibility	339
A Strange Theory	587
"B"	618
Bishop Awdry	101
Canada and Japan	618
China	617
China and Japan	434-498
"Chinese Public Opinion"	587
Conscriptions in England	686
Constitutional	435
Co-operative Enterprises in Japan	338
Dr. Loenholt	307
Education for Foreign Children in Japan	220
Exhibition, The	278
Facts and their Effect upon some Publics	404
Female Suffrage	338
Financial	13
Foraker Incident, The	574
Foreign Capital	220
German Naval Expansion	525
Insurrection in Korea, The	221
In the Wake of the Battleship Fleet	278
"Is Saul also Among the Prophets?"	498
Japan and Russia	307
Japanese Development	13
Journalistic Jugglery	435
Kaiser and World's Peace	524
Labour in Japan	716
Libel Case in Shanghai	101
Mr. Consul General Cockburn	402
National Ideals	403
Occultism	586
One Law for me	466
Orders and Titles	558
Perfidious Albion	655
Railways in Japan	718
Reliance on Officialdom	251
Sentiment in Japan	69
Some aspects of Modern Sport	467
The Airship	307
The Bethel Case	13
The Bethel Trial	782
The Cabinet	128
"The Christian Literature Society For China"	782
The Christian Movement in Japan	587
The Currency in China	748
The Debt Redemption Case	434
The Destinies of Nations	748
The Empress Dowager	617
The Fukumen Railway	4-69
The Feminist Movement and the Sex	716
The Fushun Mine	716
The Interview Again	749
The "Japan Gazette"	402
The Kaiser	655
The Licensing Bill and Temperance Reform	686
The Naval Situation	783
The Question of Tram Fares	687
The Tokyo Railway	41-251
Tradal Depression	369
Yang Case, The	466

MEETINGS:—

Ama eur Dramatic Club	219
Asiatic Society of Japan	16-622-693-756
Bank of Japan, The	223
Banquet in Tokyo	32
Clearing House Bankers	328
China Association	476
For Eastern Public Hall Co.	223-256
Farwell banquet to Mr. A. F. White	9
Grand Hotel, The	135-164
Hongkong and Shanghai Bank	319
Japan Baptist Missionary Conference	21
Kindergarten Union of Japan	228
Kumiai (Congregational) Churches	89
Nippon Race Club	7-7
Nippon Race Club Golfing Association	692
Opening Shun-in Commercial School	733
Presentation to H. E. Baron Sulu	17
St. Andrew's Society	440
The British Society	688
To-yo Chamber of Commerce	3-8
Tokyo Industrial Bank	167
Union Estate and Investment Co.	758
West Japan Presbyterian Mission, The	222
Y. A. R. C. (Presentation to Mr. Robinson)	693
Yokohama Amateur Dramatic Club	46
Yokohama Amateur Rowing Club	166
Yokohama Charity Organization	532
Yokohama Chess Club	440
Yokohama Engine and Iron Works	135
Yokohama Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals	134
Yokohama Specie Bank	312
Yokohama Subscription Library	20-409-475

CORRESPONDENCE:—

Adherents of the Different Buddhist Sects	761
A Disgraceful Nuisance	412
"Alpha" and "Beta"	763
"Alpha" and the Summaries	696
"Alpha's" Special Pleading and Insularity	790
A Missionary Incident	283-348
An Invitation	760
An Impossible Position	630
A Preacher of Humility and Patience	537
A Personal Affair	597
Assertions without Proof	538
A Tramp across India	537
Automatic Writing	411
"B"	563-598
"B" and Mr. E. C. Davis	538
"B" and the "Pari Mutuel"	537
"Beta's" Language and Logic	761
British Association Language Scheme	228
Clergymen and Clergymen	537
Criticism of Foreigners	791
Does Horse-Racing improve the Breed	161
Education for Foreign Children in Japan	27
Elementary Buddhism	380-537-598
Fair Nagasaki	536
Foreign and Japanese Intimacy	380
Foreigners and the Race Track	538
F. Schroeder v. De Silva	443
Has "B" been justly Treated?	563
Horse Racing	506
Hypnotism	283
Japan and the United States	562
Japanese Government and Race Track	506
Gambling	761
J. H's Query	735
"Layman's" Impossible Position	536
"Lest we forget"	457
Mad Dog, The	536
Monthly Summaries of Japanese Religious Press	536-562
Mr. Gubbins' Dictionary	49
Mr. Hall's Lecture on Milton	790
Naval Expansion in Japan	49
"Perfidious Albion"	695
Police promptness	443
Postal Affairs	107
Postal Inquiry Office	412
Professor Terry	380
Race-Books	564
Religion and Morals in France	630-631
Rev. A. Pieters	760
Reviews and Reviewers	507-562-660-790
Russian Mails	380
Suay Dogs	228
Summaries of Religious Press	597-629
Thanksgiving 1908	662
The Adherents of the Different Buddhist Sects in Japan	760
The Art of Clerical Defence	696-726
The Attack on the Writer of the Religious Summaries	760
"The Attempt to Evade Customs Duties"	761
The Bitter Cry	563
The Buddhist Sects of Japan and their Adherents	791
The Canadian Elections	562
The Choja-machi Post Office	107
The Christmas Mail to America	661
The "Comet"	197
The Customs Scandal Trial	726
The English Knowledge needed, and its Attainment	21
The Financial Situation	443
The Highest Ideal in Composition	754
The Japan Brewery Co. Case	563
The Japanese Sailors' Home	538
The Knell of Dogma	630
The Late Empress Dowager of China	661
The Licensing Bill	632
The Mad Dog	228
The Monthly Religious Summaries	725
The Presidential Thanksgiving Proclamation	662
The Public Hall	380
The Religious Press Summaries	696
The Religious Summaries	661-727
The Religious Summaries once more	727
The "Rudder" Cup	228
The South Manchurian Railway, etc.	696
The Totsuka Shooting Match	49
The "World" and President Roosevelt	791
The Writer of the Monthly Summaries and his controversial Methods	726
The Writer of the Religious Summaries and His Opinions	760
"Vossische Zeitung" and Marquis Katsura	380
Warning to Hotel Keepers	49
Wonders of Yamaguchi Ken	257
Yokohama Yacht Club	197-228

POETRY:—

A Picture in Japan	337
Hanari Yama	159
Outside the Church	269

REVIEWS:—

A Bounty Boy	190
Brassey's Naval Annual	133
British and Foreign Navies	163
Caracteres Ideographiques	42
Dean's Hall	190
Drusilla's Point of View	14
English Customs, Manners and Etiquette	685
"Fifty Years of Old Japan"	216
Films of Blue	128
From Peking to Mandalay	277
From Peking to Sikkim	15
Grammaire Japonaise, Langue Parlée	684
Holy Orders	59
Islam: A Challenge to Faith	190
"Japan Financial and Economic Monthly"	551
Lord Hotta, the Pioneer Diplomat of Japan	276
Milly and Olly	161
Modern England	374
"More Japonico"	785
Nippon Yusen Kaisha	690
No. 222 of the "Kokka"	779
Redemption	14
Rinri to Kyoiku	42
Selected Masterpieces	128
Shakespeare	191
Shooting in China	162
Social Psychology	161
The Angel and the Author and others	160
The Enchantress	14
The Flight of an Arrow	337
The Fifth Queen Crowned	14
The Forefront of the Battle	139
The Forewarners	160
"The International"	191-337
"The Japan Financial and Economic Monthly"	37-185-646
The Japan Year Book	580
The "Keshranjan Diary"	301
"The Kokka"	129-365
The Lady Mary of Tavistock	15
The Magic of May	129
The Moth and the Flame	160
The National Review	365
The Orchard Close	160
The Positive Science of Morals	785
The "Romaji Zasshi"	677
The Science of Jurisprudence	786
The Singular Republic	276
The Social Evil in Japan	102
The Stem of the Crimson Dahlia	589
The Story of Two Women	405
The Truth about Port Arthur	42
Third Easter Dawn, The	224

CONTRIBUTIONS:—

Abe (Professor) on the Yokohama Cricket Ground Question	72
Around Port Arthur	222
Chinese Railways	663
General Terauchi	279
Head Hunters of Lepanto-Bontoc, Luzon	140
Influence of English thought on French mind	530
Island of Enoshima, The	169
Literary Indebtedness of England to France, The	530
Lodging Houses for Female Operatives	71
Newspaper Writing and Public Opinion	528
Psychical Research	344
The New Peking	662
The Situation in China	625
Ugly Symptoms in Japanese Society	223
Universal Suffrage in Japan	162
Wallace, Darwinism, Theologians and others	588
Washington and Annapolis	502

OBITUARY:—

Admiral Viscount Enomoto	521
Cameron, Sir Ewen	755
Death of Mr. Kojima Iken	35
Death of Mr. W. Tucker	313
Death of Mrs. Vaughan-Smith	127
Field Marshal Marquis Nodzu	494
Hongkong Postmaster-General	471
Inouye, General Baron	779
Mr. G. Camperdon	722
Mr. I. Alcantara Figueiredo	690
Mr. J. H. Curtis	715
Okazawa, General Viscount	740
Professor Ayton	62

WEDDINGS:—

Bertolette-Meigs	531
Gooch-Simpson	533
Goodban-Kilby	504
Kondo-Yamada	758
Loomis-Wallace	723
Robinson-Lloyd	687

TRADE REPORTS:—

The Trade of Korea	445
--------------------	-----

SPORTS:—

Gymkhana at Kamakura ... ..	627
Hakodate Race Club ... ..	348
Interport Rowing ... ..	560
Keihin Keiba Club ... ..	347
N. R. C. Autumn Meeting ... ..	558-590
Shooting Competition at Omori ... ..	335
Tennis Tournament ... ..	345
The Imperial University ... ..	629
Y. A. R. C. Autumn Regatta ... ..	471
Y. A. R. C. Swimming and Diving Competitions ... ..	279

TRANSLATIONS:—

Industrial Rights in Korea ... ..	42
Law in the Enforcement of the Criminal Law ... ..	317
Public Notaries Law ... ..	49
The Chinese Obituary Decrees ... ..	662

REPORTS:—

Hongkong and Shanghai Bank ... ..	259
Industrial House, Sendai ... ..	19
The P. & O. Co.'s Half-Yearly Report ... ..	43
Union Estate and Investment Company ... ..	660

CHINA ... ..	2-34-63-
90-118-152-178-214-244-266-
294-332-366-394-422-458-491-
514-548-576-642-678-706-738-773

KOREA ... ..	6-36-62-92-
122-151-182-214-242-270-297-
326-358-390-426-456-492-516-
549-579-610-648-676-709-740-772

BUSINESS NOTES ... ..	1-38-65-98-
125-157-186-218-248-274-304-
334-366-398-432-463-496-522-
554-581-613-650-681-712-745-779

MANCHURIA ... ..	66-
94-124-156-183-300-330-396-
427-492-518-609-684-710-741-775
THE FAKUMEN RAILWAY ... ..	7-33-
78-120-155-184-246-258-462-493

TOKYO STOCK EXCHANGE ... ..	12-67-100-
127-158-188-219-248-275-305-
336-365-399-433-464-497-526-
556-585-615-653-680-715-744-780

NOTES ON CURRENT EVENTS ... ..	12-
40-68-100-127-159-187-217-
249-275-306-336-367-400-433-
464-495-523-556-653-684-747-780

FORMOSA ... ..	12-61-
97-362-391-677-743-773

IMPERIAL COURT, THE ... ..	137-
167-191-226-255-282-368-408-
437-471-497-531-659-689

MONTHLY SUMMARY OF CURRENT JAPANESE LITERATURE. 44-192-310-478-620-752
--	--

MONTHLY SUMMARY JAPANESE RELIGIOUS PRESS ... ..	130-252-
406-526-718-787

YOKOHAMA ... ..	18-47-75-104-
138-168-195-225-254-280-14-
346-377-409-440-474-504-535-
537-593-627-659-695-72-751-789

YACHTING ... ..	12-47-
74-135-161-195-226-256-281-
315-345-375-410-433-471-536-592

THE LAW COURTS ... ..	19-
72-139-196-255-281-
315-344-375-401-437-472-473-
534-561-626-657-692-722-758-789

TOKYO RAILWAY ... ..	8-61
----------------------	------

BASEBALL ... ..	47-76-
99-137-163-185-225-281-282-
348-378-408-439-475-533-654-695

SUMMARY OF NEWS ... ..	1-29-57-89-
117-149-178-209-238-265-293-
325-357-389-421-453-485-513-
545-573-605-641-673-705-737-769

FOOTBALL ... ..	592-
693-711-723-742-758-774-790

CRICKET ... ..	19-
68-137-197-255-315-376-440-476

CHESS ... ..	598-632-664
--------------	-------------

SHIPPING ACCIDENTS ... ..	281-
313-36-690

NEWS OF THE WEEK ... ..	19-48-
76-105-139-169-198-256-282-
316-349-378-410-441-476-506-
561-594-629-660-695-723-759-790

DAILY MARKET REVIEW ... ..	282-
316-347-378-410

TELEGRAMS ... ..	22-50-81-110-
143-171-202-231-29-286-319-
350-383-414-446-479-508-539-
564-598-633-664-697-728-762-792

SHIPPING ... ..	25-55-86-114-
148-174-207-235-264-291-324-
355-387-419-451-483-511-544-
571-603-630-671-703-735-767-797

COMMERCIAL. 25-53-85-113-146-
175-205-233-262-289-322-350-
353-386-417-449-482-510-542-
569-601-638-669-70-733-766-795

The Japan Weekly Mail

毎土曜日 A REVIEW OF JAPANESE COMMERCE, POLITICS, LITERATURE, AND ART. 一回刊行

No. 2.

REGISTERED AT THE G.P.O.
AS A NEWSPAPER.

YOKOHAMA, JULY 11TH, 1908.

明治卅五年三月廿日
第三種郵便物認可

VOL. L.

CONTENTS.

Summary of News	29
Resignation of the Cabinet	30
Banquet in Tokyo	30
Japan in Manchuria	31
The Fukuoka Question	33
China	34
The "Roma"	35
The Fraser River	35
Death of Mr. Kojima Iken	35
Korea	36
"Japan Financial and Economic Monthly"	37
Russian News	37
"The Free Hindus"	37
The Empire Day Cup	37
Business Notes	38
The Tokyo Stock Exchange	40
Notes on Current Events	40
St. Joseph's College	40
Leading Articles:
The Tokyo Railway	41
The Fukuoka Railway	42
The Bookshelf	42
The Law Courts	43
The P. & O. Co.'s Half-Yearly Report	43
Monthly Summary of Japanese Current Literature	44
Yokohama Amateur Dramatic Club	44
Y. A. R. C.	46
The Fourth of July	47
Yokohama	47
Tragedies	48
News of the Week	48
The Chinese Young Men's Christian Association	49
Correspondence:
The Totsuka Shooting Match	49
Naval Expansion in Japan	49
Mr. Gubbins' Dictionary	49
Warning to Hotel-keepers	49
Public Notaries-Law	49
Telegrams	50
Lowest Commercial	53
Latest Shipping	55

"FATS CE QUE DOIS: ADVIENNE QUE POURRA!"

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

No notice will be taken of anonymous correspondence. What is intended for insertion in the "JAPAN WEEKLY MAIL" must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer, not for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

It is particularly requested that all letters on business be addressed to the MANAGER, and Cheques be made payable to same; and that literary contributions be addressed to the EDITOR.

YOKOHAMA: SATURDAY, JULY 11TH, 1908.

BIRTHS.

On July 2nd, at 5-A Tsukiji, Tokyo, a Daughter to Mr. and Mrs. JOHN TRUMBULL SWIFT.

At No. 64-B Bluff, on July 9th, 1908, the wife of J. E. GRAY, of a Son.

SUMMARY OF NEWS.

THE Rev. J. H. de Forest, of Sendai, has been elected a Vice-President of the American Peace Society.

MR. I. YAMAGATA, formerly Minister for Communications, has been appointed a member of the Upper House.

It is reported from Shidzuoka that owing to the heavy rains the second crop of tea will be reduced by 10 per cent.

OWING to heavy rain, the river Tone overflowed its embankment. A large part of the district of Inashiki was flooded.

A CHANGE has been made in the time-schedule of the Tokaido Railway. The alteration will come into force on August 1st.

TWO freight trains collided on the night of July 1st at Kombu station on the Hokkaido Railway. Eight wagons were smashed.

MR. CARL F. DEICHMAN has been appointed American Consul in Tamsui, Formosa. On July 6th, the Foreign Office issued his exequatur.

THE Nippon Yusen Kaisha's steamer Bago Maru collided with a junk off Mitajiri on the evening of July 2nd on the way from Moji to Ujina. The boat was wrecked and one of the sendos was missing, two being saved by the seamer.

THE cruiser Aso (formerly the Bayern) having been completely repaired at Maidzuru, went on a trial trip on July 7th which proved satisfactory.

IN consequence of the rains, a land-slide occurred in the village of Osawa, Niigata prefecture, two persons being killed and two injured.

SEVERAL cases of an epidemic disease have appeared on the cruiser Iwami at Ujina. She was removed to Ninoshima on the morning of July 7th.

IN consequence of the present dullness in the shipping trade the Mitsui Bishi Ship-building Yard, Nagasaki, intends to discharge a large number of workmen.

ON July 4th, fire broke out in a hospital belonging to an oculist, in Shima Yamate, Kobe, destroying the building. One of the patients was severely injured.

A MOJI telegram states that owing to heavy rain, about 30 yards of the Kyushu Railway between Yatsushiro and Sakamoto collapsed, traffic over the section being stopped.

THE Nichi Nichi states that recently Mr. Miller, the American Consul-General, applied to the Foreign Office for consent to open an American consulate office at Yokkaichi.

SIX employees of the Wakayama Station on the Kwansei Railway were arrested on July 7th on a charge of having stolen valuable goods from luggage belonging to passengers.

THE American cruisers Rainbow, Chatanooga, and Galveston, under Rear-Admiral Hemphill, will leave Shanghai on July 15th for Tientsin and Vladivostok. The fleet will visit Japan.

EARLY on the morning of July 7th, fire broke out in a tobacco factory in the district of North Murayama, Yamagata prefecture. The building and three private houses were destroyed.

THE Training Squadron, consisting of the Irukushima and the Hashidate, returned on July 5th from a deep sea cruise. At 9.30 a.m. on July 5th, the squadron passed Moji Strait.

I. FUJII, the chief accountant of the Kyowa Bank in Kobe, which is under liquidation, was arrested on July 7th on a charge of having misappropriated yen 20,000, belonging to the bank.

OWING to heavy rain which fell on the night of July 6th and 7th, damage was sustained in several districts at Kagoshima prefecture. In consequence of landslides, a number of houses were destroyed.

THE German Consulate in Taipeh, Formosa, has been closed. Herr F. Reinsdorf, Consul, has been appointed to a similar position at Moji. The Formosan Government purchased the buildings of the consulate for yen 75,000.

OWING to the heavy rains, a specially low temperature prevails in Aomori Prefecture. On July 3rd, the average reading was 54° F. Such weather, says a telegram to the Asahi, has not been experienced for the last thirty years.

THE Emperor gave a tiffin on July 9th at the Palace to Mr. W. H. Denison, adviser of the Foreign Office; Baron Motono, Ambassador in St. Petersburg, who recently returned on leave; Barons Chinda and Hayashi, Ambassadors to Berlin and Rome respectively; and Mr. Ijuin, and Mr. Yoshida, Ministers to China and Siam, who shortly leave for their posts. Princes Arisugawa and Takeda were present.

K. TATSUNO, a well known grain merchant in Moji, has been arrested on a charge of having obtained yen 15,000 from the Moji branch of the Dai Ichi Ginko and two other banks by offering false bills of lading as securities.

THE Hochi says that Mr. Okano, director of the Bureau of Legislative Affairs; Mr. Yoshiwara, Vice-Minister for Home Affairs; and Mr. Minami, Chief Secretary of the Cabinet, will shortly be appointed members of the House of Peers.

A NAGASAKI telegram states that 1,200 workmen employed at the Shimabara Tobacco Factory struck on July 1st, for an increase in their wages. The officials of the factory sympathise with them and are endeavouring to induce the Monopoly Office to grant their request.

A TRAIN consisting of 4 cars and 5 wagons overturned at 8 a.m. on July 2nd about 2 miles north of Kotsunagi on the O-u Railway. No one was injured though the permanent way was damaged and traffic over the section was delayed until noon on the following day.

ACCORDING to the Nichi Nichi the number of officers in the standing Japanese army at present are as follows:—Generals, 16; Lieut-Generals, 31; Major-Generals, 85; Colonels, 221; Lieut. Colonels, 372; Majors, 1,022; Captains, 3,306; Lieutenants, 4,015; Ensigns, 10,492; Paymaster-General 1; Paymaster-Inspectors, 5; Surgeon General 1; and Surgeon Inspectors, 6.

THE Nippon Yusen Kaisha's new European liner, Kamo Maru, having been completed at the Mitsui Bishi Shipbuilding Yard, in Nagasaki, the vessel will be handed over to the steamship company on July 9th. The Kamo Maru will leave about the middle of July for Yokohama. About the 29th of July she will be despatched for Europe under the command of Captain F. L. Sommers.

THE new Governor of Macao is Lieut.-Col. Alves Rodadas, an old Colonial Officer, who has seen a lot of service in Africa and elsewhere. Last year he led an expedition against the Cuamatos, a native tribe of West Africa, and the operations were successfully carried out, in recognition of which he was promoted to Lieut. Colonel and decorated with the insignia of the order of the Tower and the Sword.

M. G. BAKHMETIEFF, the retiring Russian Minister, proceeded to the Palace at 10.30 a.m. on July 8th and was received by the Emperor in audience. His Excellency presented a letter from the Tsar informing the Emperor of his release from duty. The Minister and Madame Bakhmetieff were afterwards received by the Empress in the Paulownia Hall. They left for home on Saturday.

THE death took place on June 7th on board the N. Y. K. steamer Hitachi Maru, between Penang and Colombo, of Mr. Edward Noble, formerly chief engineer of the N.Y.K. Kanagawa Maru. Mr. Noble, who was being invalided home, succumbed to softening of the brain and paralysis. He leaves a widow and family in Bedford, England. The deceased gentleman was one of the oldest employees of the N.Y.K., and had been in Japanese service for nearly twenty-five years.

RESIGNATION OF THE CABINET.

Saturday, July 4.

It need hardly be said that the Cabinet crisis occupies a large share of public attention and a wide space in journalistic columns. The serious condition of Marquis Saionji's health is universally recognised as the proximate cause, but nearly all the Tokyo journals agree in stating that since the spring of this year the Cabinet has found itself on bad terms with the Elder Statesmen and has recognised that its financial policy is disapproved by the leading business men of the country. Nevertheless these journals are evidently persuaded that the emphatic mandate given by the country to the Seiyun-kai at the last general elections would have induced the Cabinet to ignore all difficulties and to remain in office had not Marquis Saionji's health completely broken down. The question of paramount interest is, who will undertake to form a new Ministry? Marquis Katsura is universally designated, and it is even stated that he has been invited by Marquis Saionji to consult for that purpose. Neither does there seem to be any doubt that Marquis Katsura would accept the responsibility. But it is plain that everything must depend on the amount of support which the Seiyun-kai are willing to give him. If Marquis Katsura takes the reins of power with a following formed by the Progressists, the Daido Club, the Yukokai and the Independents, he would have to control a team so heterogeneous as to defy the efforts of any charioteer however skilful, not strong enough to command a majority in the Lower House, and doomed from the very outset to encounter vehement opposition at the hands of the Seiyun-kai. It is plain, therefore, that if the Marquis takes office, he must do so with a promise of support from the Seiyun-kai. His best chance of successful administration would be to organise a Cabinet including some of the leading members of the Seiyun-kai, and that is probably what his Excellency will aim at effecting, for the day is past when a purely neutral Cabinet could hope to successfully direct the affairs of State in Japan for any appreciable interval.

The Nichi Nichi publishes a remarkable utterance which it attributes to some of the Seiyun-kai politicians, but of course every thing appearing in the columns of the Nichi Nichi Shimbun commands close attention at a juncture like the present. The view expressed is that the true cause of the crisis is not to be sought in the adverse criticisms of business men or in the difficulty of compiling the next budget, but is to be traced wholly to pressure brought by the Elder Statesmen at the instance of Marquis Katsura. The latter, according to this account, sees that if the Seiyun-kai politicians remain in power for another year, they will become masters of the situation in the Upper House as well as in the Lower, and will thus acquire something like administrative omnipotence. Thus the interference of the Elder Statesmen has created a situation which necessitates reference to the Throne, and Marquis Saionji has met his opponents' attack by stepping down from the seat of power and inviting them to occupy it as best they can. This would mean that a new Cabinet must count on the hostility of the Seiyun-kai, but we are greatly disposed to doubt that Marquis Saionji would lend himself to such a course.

The Fiji Shimpō treats this matter in its usual exhaustive style. Its language is diplomatic, but no one can peruse its editorial columns without deriving a clear conviction that our contemporary believes the crisis to be due to pressure from the Elder Statesmen. It dwells upon the fact that according to the fundamental principles of constitutional government a cabinet is responsible first to the Emperor and secondly to the nation. If it fails to discharge its responsibility in either of these directions, it must resign. But it has no responsibility towards any third power standing between the Throne and the nation. If Marquis Saionji's illness were the true and only cause of the crisis, the example set by England in several similar cases could easily be followed by the Ministry remaining in office under a new Premier, as was seen lately in Great Britain when Mr. Asquith took over the reins from Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman. But apparently Japan has not yet reached the ideal stage of constitutional government. Her Cabinets are subject to vicissitudes which have their roots in nominally obsolete systems.

Sunday, July 5.

On the morning of the 4th inst. Marquis Saionji repaired to the Palace and placed his resignation in the hands of the Emperor, at the same time recommending Marquis Katsura as his successor. (Perhaps we should explain that the Prime Minister returned from his sea-side villa about three weeks ago, his health having been partially restored, but some time after his arrival in the capital, he fell ill again, and it was then discovered that congestion of the liver had been added to his other complaints.) At an earlier hour on the same day the Marquis had invited the leaders of the Seiyun-kai to his residence and explained to them the reasons of his resignation. He subsequently started for Oiso by the 11 o'clock train. As for the above reasons they do not appear to have gone beyond the state of the Premier's health. He explained that all important problems of administration and finance had either been solved or were on the verge of solution, and that on that score no reason existed for surrendering the reins of government. But his health had fairly broken down and he was obliged at length to obey the doctor's injunctions to take a complete rest.

It seems to be universally agreed that Marquis Katsura will succeed Marquis Saionji, but it is uncertain whether the final arrangements will be made before the return of Prince Ito. We are ourselves inclined to think not, but some of our Tokyo contemporaries take a different view. Marquis Katsura on Saturday visited Prince Yamagata and Marquis Inouye and conferred with them at some length. It is expected that a meeting of the Elder Statesmen will take place in the Palace on the 6th inst., and in view of this fact many people infer that Prince Ito's return will not be waited for. On the other hand, it is quite plain that neither Marquis Katsura nor any other statesman can hope to conduct the Government satisfactorily without the support of the Seiyun-kai, and whether that support can be secured without Prince Ito's intervention is perhaps problematical.

With regard to this question of the Seiyun-kai's attitude, the Fiji Shimpō analyses it in two ways. One section of the Party is said to be very averse to the idea of supporting a Katsura Cabinet. The leaders of this section claim that they have surmounted many political complications, that they have borne the burden and heat of the day in solving administrative and financial problems, that they have already given their support to unconstitutional Cabinets because they desired to smooth the path to the full achievement of constitutional ends, that they have opened the way to a good understanding with the Upper Chamber, and that they have just received a distinct mandate from the nation. In these circumstances they do not see the sense or the justice of being once again required to serve as mere official hacks. But there is in the Party another section which argues that it would not become the Seiyun-kai to follow the example of the Progressists by opposing the Government at every point merely because they are in opposition. The proper rôle for a great party is to support measures of which it approves and to oppose only those which it condemns. This second section is supposed to represent the sentiment of the Party leaders and if so, we shall see a repetition of the situation which existed during the war. In any circumstances the fact of laying down the wand of office will probably weaken the Seiyun-kai to the extent of at least a score of members whose habit it is to support the party in power. These seceders will doubtless range themselves on the side of the Daido Club, which Party will thus again hold the balance of power, and the old situation will be fully restored.

Of course this event puts an end to the project of union amongst the "Outs." The only motive for such a union was essentially destructive, and as nothing now remains to destroy, the project lapses with the occasion. There is not the slightest chance of the Daido Club abandoning its envious position of balance-adjuster for the sake of losing itself in the ranks of a combination.

As to the members of the new Cabinet there are various opinions. The Mainichi Shimbun inclines to think that either Viscount Kiyoura or Mr. Komatsubara will hold the portfolio of Home Affairs; Count Komura, that of Foreign Affairs; Viscount Sone or Baron Matsuo, that of Finance; Baron Oura that of Communications; Baron Hirata or Mr. Komatsubara that of Agriculture and Commerce; Mr. Hatano that of Justice; Mr. Kubota, Baron Kikuchi or Baron Tsudzuki that of Education, and, as to the portfolios of War and the Navy, some conjecture that they will remain unchanged and others predict that Marquis Katsura himself will take the portfolio of War and that Viscount Yamamoto will take that of the Navy.

As to the question whether the change of Cabinet will produce any radical change of financial policy, it has to be remembered that the Seiyun-kai may be said to have succeeded to the programme of Marquis Katsura, and that the latest developments of that programme were arranged through the mediation of the Marquis. In these circumstances it is difficult to entertain any hope that the new Ministry will essay any conspicuous alterations.

Monday, July 6.

The parliamentary members of the Seiyun-kai now in Tokyo to the number of over 50, held a meeting on the afternoon of the 5th inst. and received from Mr. Haseba a statement made to him on the preceding day by Marquis Saionji. By this statement the members were informed that the Seiyun-kai Ministry had grappled with the difficult problems of post-bellum enterprises and had successfully solved them. The Budget for the year 1909-10 had been drawn up and actually signed by the Cabinet. It provided for a postponement of expenditures on account of the Army and Navy to the extent of some 40 million yen, and it furnished the necessary appropriations for all purposes without any recourse to fresh loans or any increase of taxation. The great problem of the railways had also been virtually dealt with by placing their income and expenditure in a separate account and devoting their net earnings to the redemption of the bonds paid in connexion with the process of nationalization. This redemption would be completed in the space of 23 years, and thereafter the railways would yield a revenue of 80 million yen annually. Moreover, all the necessary arrangements had been made for the great Exhibition in 1912 and due steps had been taken for regulating the administration so as to effect necessary economies while at the same time increasing the salaries of underpaid officials. As to foreign affairs, some questions still remained open with regard to Korea and China, but in all other respects the situation was perfectly satisfactory. Thus the business of the State was being successfully conducted, and further the Ministry had received a new and emphatic mandate from the constituencies so that it now commands a majority in the House of Representatives. In these circumstances the resignation of the Premier might be regarded as a somewhat extreme measure, but it was due solely to the state of his health. Always more or less delicate, his Excellency had developed liver trouble some three months ago and had been warned by his physicians that he must desist from work. At that time, however, the general elections were pending and moreover several important problems were awaiting solution. The time had now come, however, when the Premier's condition forbade his continuance in office, but he expressed an earnest resolution to go on working with undiminished zeal in the interests of the Party.

Mr. Itakura then rose and said that from Mr. Haseba's statement they understood broadly the reasons of the Premier's resignation and they fully appreciated his continued services in spite of the state of his health. But it was necessary to know what attitude the Party should take hereafter. Were they to be a Government Party or an Opposition? They gathered from the statement just submitted that in all directions the business of the State was moving satisfactorily, and in these circumstances they felt that the resignation of the Cabinet at such a juncture must have some cause apart from the illness of the Premier. They wanted to know what that cause was, and they wished also to know in what capacity Marquis Saionji proposed to go on working.

Mr. Haseba replied that there was no cause apart from the illness of the Premier, and that as to whether Marquis Saionji would continue to lead the Party or not, there was no information available.

Mr. Tanabe then inquired whether the next Cabinet would carry out the policy of the Seiyu-kai, for upon that the attitude of the Party must depend. Mr. Haseba replied that the nomination of Ministers of State being the Emperor's prerogative, nothing could yet be affirmed on that subject. It would be for the Seiyu-kai to simply pursue its own policy.

Mr. Tachikawa Gumpei then rose and protested that Mr. Haseba had ignored the purport of the main question put to him. If, as could not be doubted, the conduct of State affairs was perfectly satisfactory in the hands of the Seiyu-kai, he ventured to allege that not one man throughout the whole country would accept the Prime Minister's illness as a sufficient reason for the Cabinet's resignation. There must be some other and very much graver cause and it was necessary that the Party should be distinctly informed of it.

Mr. Haseda repeated his reply as to the Premier's health being the sole reason, whereupon Mr. Yoshikawa rose and moved that a general meeting of the whole Party throughout the Empire be held at once. The Seiyu-kai's management of State affairs was not open to any censure. It had adjusted the Budget, helped the country to emerge from a state of financial depression, and received the unqualified approval of the nation. If in these circumstances it was to step out of office, making way for an independent Cabinet or a Clan Cabinet, it would be violating its responsibility to the Constitution. There must be no ambiguity in such a matter. The Party must know distinctly under what flag it marched and which way it was to face. Therefore a general meeting was essential.

This proposal met with wide approval and was adopted by a large majority, but the date for convening the general meeting was left to the discretion of the managing committee.

The above is only an outline of what took place at the meeting. Every thing moved in a perfectly orderly manner, but it was evident that a strong feeling animated the members. A ridiculous rumour has been circulated and has found its way into the columns of several leading journals to the effect that the resignation of the Premier is due in reality to action taken by Prince Yamagata, who is said to have stated to the Throne that if the Seiyu-kai were allowed to develop without restraint, they would ultimately lead the country to a republican form of government as the foremost figures in the Party were all men of the French school. This rumour, wholly incredible as it is, has apparently created much excitement. It is held that if such be the reason for a change of Cabinet, the situation may be said to amount to a suspension of the Constitution. If the rumour obtains further credence, it will be almost impossible to induce the Seiyu-kai to support a Katsura Cabinet, and any resolute attempt in that direction would lead to a rupture of the Party.

Even the Fiji Shimpō evidently thinks the above rumour worthy of some credence, for it gives to it a prominent place in its columns, though in a somewhat modified form; namely, that the so-called clan statesmen, being apprehensive that if the Seiyu-kai were left longer in office their strength would become irresistible, have arraigned them to the Throne on the plea that their manner of dealing with socialism is so lenient as to be a menace to the nation.

Meanwhile the members of the present Cabinet are quoted as insisting that the Prime Minister's illness is the sole cause of the crisis and that the time has been chosen so that the new Cabinet may have ample leisure to make all its preparations for meeting the next Diet.

It now seems not improbable that the formation of a new Cabinet, will have to be deferred until Prince Ito's return.

It need hardly be said that there are all sorts of rumours about the redistribution of the portfolios, and what form the matter will ultimately take there is no possibility of predicting. From the point of view of foreign onlookers it appears pretty evident that if the Premier's illness were the sole difficulty, the simple course would be that Viscount Terauchi or some other prominent member of the Cabinet should relieve Marquis Saionji for a few months until the latter's health was restored.

The Fiji Shimpō says that a Chamberlain has been sent by the Emperor to Prince Ito, and there is some talk now of the Prince not leaving Seoul until the 20th inst. But in truth rumours are so various that the only definite conclusion one can reach is that things are in an exceedingly unsettled state.

Some newspapers predict that this crisis will lead to a split in the ranks of the Progressists, Mr. Oishi Masami and his followers going over to the Daido, and Mr. Inukai and his partisans alone remaining under the Progressists' banner.

Tuesday, July 7.

It was expected when we last wrote on the above subject that a Court Council of Elder Statesmen would be held on the 6th inst. and that thereafter His Majesty would have summoned Marquis Katsura and entrusted him with the duty of forming a new Cabinet. But this expectation appears to have been somewhat premature. Things are not progressing quite so rapidly, and indeed it was hardly to be expected that they would. The uncertainty hinges upon the steps taken by the Emperor to consult Prince Ito. It is thought that the despatch of Mr. Hitaka to Seoul may be interpreted as signifying that he is instructed to obtain a clear statement of Prince Ito's views and to transmit them by telegraph to Tokyo. If that be so, the new Cabinet will be formed without waiting for Prince Ito's return to Tokyo. But other authorities express the opinion that no final step will be taken pending the Prince's return.

Meanwhile the Fiji Shimpō has a telegram from Seoul which quotes Prince Ito as saying that he places no faith in rumours as to united pressure having been brought to bear upon the Cabinet by Prince Yamagata and Marquises Inouye and Matsukata. The Prince says that Marquis Saionji's determination to resign dates from last March, and that the consummation of his purpose was deferred only until after the general elections. In announcing the step to Prince Ito the Premier said merely, "I am carrying out my intention of resigning as you know I have long contemplated." Prince Ito's analysis of the situation is that the Statesmen in power have grown weary of bearing the post-bellum burdens and are transferring them to other backs. His Highness does not see that any material change can thus be effected in the financial position. There can be no substantial amelioration so long as the present programme with regard to armaments is deemed essential. The Prince further thinks that this crisis will probably lead to some important recasting of political parties, but he doubts whether it will take place immediately.

There are all sorts of rumours about the probable personnel of the new Cabinet, some alleging that Marquis Katsura finds the greatest difficulty in choosing among the numerous applicants for office, and others saying that he is tied by obligations which he can not recognise in practice and which, if neglected, may prove very embarrassing. It is rumoured that the Emperor has returned the resignations of Viscount Terauchi and Baron Saito, but that the former is determined to persist in retiring. For our own part we believe that although the Court Council has not yet been held, the recipients of the most important folios have already been fixed.

Marquis Saionji and the Seiyu-kai leaders are doing their best to quiet the rank and file of the Party and to convince them that the wisest course in their own interests is to maintain a reserved and dignified demeanour at this crisis. It is evident, however, that a section of the Party attaches credit to the absurd rumours which are now circulated in certain quarters with respect to the danger of a growth of republican sentiment. This wild story is now supplemented by a statement that the new criminal code, for which the Saionji Ministry are responsible, will have the effect of encouraging socialism and republicanism, inasmuch as it very largely extends the discretionary power of the judiciary. No one appears to be sure as to the source from which these wild rumours emanate, and we are surprised to observe that they are treated quite seriously by some of the Tokyo journals. Not that there is any evidence of belief in them, but merely that they are thought worthy of grave discussion.

Mr. Ozaki Yukio is said to be urging upon the Seiyu-kai leaders the necessity of uncompromising opposition to a Katsura Cabinet. He declares that if the banner of Constitutional government be definitely raised at this juncture by the great Party, he will join the movement and bring with him 20 recruits.

It is now thought that the general meeting of the Seiyu-kai will be held in Tokyo on the 15th of August, but the stories that are circulated about this affair contain elements so incredible as to be unworthy of serious attention.

Wednesday, July 8.

The Cabinet held its last meeting on the 7th inst., all the Ministers except Marquis Saionji and Admiral Baron Saito being present. Viscount Terauchi acted for the Premier, and all arrangements having been made for transferring the portfolios, the Council broke up.

It appears to be now generally felt that the situation centres upon Prince Ito. The impression is that an Imperial Messenger was sent to the Prince for the purpose of hastening his return, which otherwise would not have taken place until after the 20th inst. but which is now expected almost immediately.

Meanwhile there are many conjectures about the new holders of portfolios. Interest attaches chiefly to the portfolios of Finance and Foreign Affairs. For the former, Viscount Sone would doubtless be nominated if he could be spared from his post in Korea. But he can not be spared and therefore the choice lies between Barons Hirata, Matsuo and Takahashi Korekiyo. It would be exceedingly inconvenient, however, to remove either of the last two officials from their present positions as Presidents of the Bank of Japan and the Specie Bank respectively. Therefore, by a process of exhaustion, Baron Hirata is reached, though there is much talk of Baron Ito Miyoji, whose advent to power would be welcomed by many people. For the portfolio of Foreign Affairs public opinion is agreed in indicating Count Komura.

The Committee of the Seiyu-kai held a meeting on the 7th inst. at 2 o'clock and decided that until the formation of the new Cabinet was announced, it would be premature to fix any day for the projected general meeting. The Asahi reports that the attitude of the Seiyu-kai has undergone a marked change and that a feeling of satisfaction seems to have replaced the indignation of a few days ago. The Party appears to be resolved to maintain a dignified and reserved demeanour and await the course of events. By some observers this softened mood on the part of the Seiyu-kai is construed as an indication that the new Cabinet may possibly be formed on union lines.

We need not fill our columns with reproductions of the innumerable rumours and conjectures which are necessarily rife at such a time. We are glad to observe, however, that the silly talk about republicanism and socialism has dwindled to a scarcely audible murmur. Its origin seems to be traced to the fact that Mr. Matsumoto Kumpei, the celebrated "high collar" politician, is said to be in favour of universal suffrage and to be agitating in behalf of that system. There is much talk about the attitude of political parties but evidently nothing certain is known.

Thursday, July 9.

It appears that Mr. Hitaka, the Imperial Messenger to Prince Ito, reached Seoul on the 7th inst. and at once conveyed to the Prince the Emperor's message. Prince Ito is said to have immediately expressed his approval of Marquis Katsura's return to power, and to have advised that the formation of a Cabinet should be left entirely in the hands of the new Premier. In point of fact this arrangement was discussed and endorsed when Prince Ito visited Tokyo in March last, so that although the public has been taken by surprise, the country's leading Statesmen were well prepared for what has happened. At first sight it may be thought that this statement relegates Marquis Saionji's sickness to the category of pretexts. But it will be remembered that the Marquis himself has explained that his physicians have been urging the necessity of complete rest ever since the spring of this year, and that he refrained from following their advice until the conclusion of the general elections. Prince Ito's reply to the Emperor's queries having been despatched from Seoul on the 8th inst., it is expected that the personnel of the new Ministry will be announced on the 10th inst. or possibly even earlier. The expectation that Viscount Sone will be Minister of Finance appears to be now abandoned, and Baron Hirata or Viscount Kiyoura are spoken of for the post. That Count Komura will take the portfolio of Foreign Affairs and Baron Oura that of Home Affairs seems to be regarded as certain. According to present forecasts, Viscount Terauchi will resign and Marquis Katsura himself will discharge the duties of Minister of War, his Excellency's intention being to reduce the expenditures for military purposes. There is, however, another rumour in the sense that Baron Sakatani will resume the portfolio of Finance and that Marquis Katsura will hold it until the Baron's return. Some authorities think that the names of the new Ministers will not be announced until after Mr. Hitaka's return, which would bring the event to the 12th or 13th inst. As for Prince Ito, his movements are not definitely known but the balance of opinion is that he will return to Tokyo before the 20th inst.

It may easily be supposed that until the names of the new Ministers are published, surmise and conjecture are very busy with the matter. Undoubtedly there must be great difficulty in forming a Ministry suitable to the occasion. Marquis Katsura has the choice of three courses; namely, first to distribute the portfolios amongst his own henchmen; secondly, to construct a united Cabinet including Elder Statesmen, members of the Seiyu-kai and members of his own Party; and thirdly, to go into a wider field and select new men who would be in closer touch with business circles and the bulk of the people. The Mainichi Shimbun alleges that his Excellency will adopt this last course. The Asahi gives prominence to a rumour that Admiral Count Yamamoto will be the new Premier, that Marquis Katsura will be Minister of Finance, that the portfolio of Foreign Affairs will go to either Mr. Tsudzuki Keiroku or Mr. Katsu Inouye, that of Home Affairs to Baron Oura, and that of War to Lieut.-General Baron Kigoshi, or Lieut.-General Baron Usagawa, no change being made at the Naval Department. We ourselves attach no importance to any rumour which does not place Marquis Katsura at the helm, but we reproduce these various conjectures as an index to the trend of public opinion.

The Nippon contains an extraordinary paragraph. It is to the effect that the rumours attributing socialistic or republican sentiments to the Saionji Cabinet originated from Dr. Ichiki, a Professor of Law in the Imperial University and a member of the House of Peers. This gentleman is said to have taken for text the 17th article of the new Criminal Code which leaves to the bench very wide discretion—imprisonment for three years to penal servitude for life—in dealing with cases of forging Imperial rescripts or using the Imperial seal feloniously. This article is construed by the learned jurist as a clear indication that the compilers of the law and the statesmen who endorsed it are not very zealous in their ideas of protecting the sanctity of the Throne. Dr. Ichiki's view appears to have obtained some vogue, but the curious thing is that he himself was a member of the committee which revised the code and that he did not say a word on that occasion with regard to the incriminated article.

The Jiji Shunpo published an extra on Thursday evening saying that the following Ministers of State have been chosen:—

Premier.....	Marquis Katsura.
Foreign Affairs .....	Count Komura.
Home Affairs .....	Baron Oura.
Finance.....	Baron Hirata.
Education.....	Mr. Komatsubara.
Navy.....	Admiral Baron Saito.
Army.....	General Baron Inouye or General Baron Usagawa.
Communications .....	Baron Goto Shimpei.

The portfolios of Justice and of Agriculture and Commerce have not yet been assigned.

BANQUET IN TOKYO.

On the 6th instant Mr. R. Kondo, President of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha, gave a banquet in Tokyo in honour of Captain T. H. James, manager of the London Office of the Company, who is now on a visit to Japan. Some seventy covers were laid, and among these present were Barons Iwasaki and Sakamoto, Mr. T. Kato, several Vice-Admirals and Rear-Admirals of the Japanese Navy, all the principal members of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha staff, etc. Mr. Kondo proposed Captain James' health in a graceful speech. He recalled the time when not only the Nippon Yusen Kaisha, or Japan Mail Steamship Company, but even the fact that Japan possessed any mercantile marine at all, had been entirely unknown abroad. That was not further back than 12 years, and when the Company opened its London office, it had been necessary to contend not only against this ignorance on the part of Occidentals but also against the prejudice which is inevitably provoked by the intrusion of new adventurers in an old field. It was not, he thought, too much to claim that these difficulties had been successfully overcome and that the Company now occupied a strong and prosperous position, having not only established itself but also done something towards making Japan known abroad. Neither would it be too much, perhaps, to say that to these facts was due in a certain degree the growth of the mutual acquaintance which had matured in the Anglo-Japanese alliance. For all this Captain James was to be largely thanked, as through his able management these results had mainly been brought about. Throughout the whole 12 years of the existence of the London office, he had directed its business with conspicuous zeal and ability. Then had followed the unhappy war with Russia. Its outbreak had found the Company with several of its large steamers westward of the Suez Canal, and there had been a time of keen anxiety as to means of effecting the safe return of these ships. It was not merely a question of pecuniary loss, though that would have been very heavy had the vessels fallen into Russian hands. There was also the still more important consideration that the ships had to carry out to the East material of war urgently required by Japan, and that, after their arrival in these waters, they had to serve as transports, a duty of the highest moment which they had discharged from the beginning to the end of the war. To these successes Captain James had materially contributed by his able management, and in consideration of such services the Emperor had been pleased to confer on him the Second Class of the Order of the Sacred Treasure, an honour to which, they would all agree, he was fully entitled. This retrospect would not be complete were not reference made to Captain James' services in connexion with the Imperial Navy. He had come to Japan many years ago as a member of the Naval Mission to which this country owed so much, and it must be a source of profound gratification to him to see around him this evening so many of his former students, now occupying positions of high honour, rank and responsibility, and to reflect that by him and his comrades the foundations of these officers' fortunes had been laid and their patriotic careers commenced. He called upon all present to raise their glasses to the health of Captain James. (Loud applause).

Captain James, in acknowledging the toast, said:—

MR. KONDO, YOUR EXCELLENCIES AND GENTLEMEN.—I find great difficulty in replying to the kind and flattering remarks that Mr. Kondo has made. And you being nearly all old friends and knowing well how small was my share in the events to which allusion has been made, will, I am sure, sympathize with me in my embarrassment. I came, was sent, here in 1876 as the junior and least important member of the British Naval Mission, and I am sure the individuals of that Mission would be the first to disclaim any particular merit. We just did day by day what lay to our hands to do, with interest of course, but certainly without thought as to the results, the startling results, may I say. We builded better than we knew, for it may fairly be said that the British Mission and the young officers, many of whom are seated at this table to-night, laid the foundation of the Anglo-Japanese alliance, for without a victorious Japanese Navy the alliance in its present form, at any rate, would hardly have been a possibility. Of that mission only two have been fortunate enough to continue their association with Japan, and on me falls the reflected glory, which, if deserved at all, belongs to the Mission as a body, and that light comes from the great and glorious Navy of Japan, the creation of which is due to the devotion of their young officers with whom the mission was associated. All honour to them, their names go down to posterity with the names of Nelson and his captains. Honour is due, too, to the Mercantile Marine of Japan, for without the fleet of efficient transports it placed at the service of the country, the victories of the Navy would have been barren victories. The lesson that in an Inland Empire a flourishing mercantile marine is the necessary complement of a victorious Navy has again been repeated with a force that should make it remembered.

Vice-Admiral Baron Sakamoto then rose and on behalf of himself and his comrades, who, in by-gone years, had profited by the able instruction of Captain James, thanked the guest of the evening for his services to Japan and fully endorsed everything that Mr. Kondo had said as to the valuable assistance rendered by the fleet of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha both to the Army and the Navy in the late war. The Naval Mission, of which Captain James was a member, had laid the foundations of whatever successes the Empire had gained at sea, and so long as the country existed that record would not be forgotten. He asked them again to drink the health of Captain James, and to wish him long life and every happiness.

The party broke up at half-past ten after a most delightful evening.

JAPAN IN MANCHURIA.

For the first time we are brought face to face with a detailed statement of the doings of Japan in Manchuria, which are held to be in violation of the principle of the open door and equal opportunities. The charges are said to have been formulated in America, and by an adroit use of the press they have been carried before a wide forum and have obtained large credence. The first accusation is that the Japanese Government ships large quantities of its own tobacco in its own vessels, carries the tobacco duty free to Manchuria and sells it at a price which defies competition. The Asahi Shimbun, from which we take this statement, quotes what professes to be an official answer to the allegation. It is that certainly during the war, when Japan had some hundreds of thousands of troops in Manchuria, she sent tobacco for their use in Government transports. But this ceased altogether when peace was restored, and when the troops were withdrawn. As a matter of fact very small quantities of Japanese tobacco are now sold in the Three Eastern Provinces, the market being almost monopolised by other brands, especially Russian. The second accusation is somewhat vague. It speaks of American kerosene, calico and flour as being ousted by the Japanese articles in consequence of official protection given to the latter, but it does not specify the form which the protection takes. The answer to this is not that in Manchuria alone but even in Japan herself American kerosene practically usurps the market. As for flour, the mills established by the Russians at Harbin during the war did actually close the door in the face of the American product, but that was not Japan's doing. In the matter of cotton piece goods, if the Japanese merchant is getting the better of his American competitor, that result is obtained by ordinary trade methods and has nothing to do with official protection. The third count is that the Custom House at Tairen, being under the management of a Japanese commissioner, treats Japanese goods with special indulgence and grants unfair rebates to Japanese merchants. To this it is replied that had the Japanese Government insisted upon its rights, it would have refused to allow the establishment of a custom house at Tairen until a corresponding step was taken on the northern frontier. In deference, however, to foreign opinion the Japanese Government had waived this right and the Chinese Inspector-General of Customs had been entrusted with full power to organise a station at Tairen. As a matter of fact, the work of levying duties is said to be carried on at the Tairen station with much greater rigour than at the northern stations, and frequent complaints are made by Japanese merchants on this score. At all events the Japanese authorities exercise no control whatever in the matter of customs management at Tairen.

THE FAKUMEN QUESTION.

This weary question is galvanised into some interest by a retrospect appearing in the columns of the Hochi Shimbun. According to that journal, the Chinese Government planned a northerly extension of the Shanhaikwan Railway in the days antecedent to the War, when the Russians had just built the South Manchuria line, and when they threatened to usurp the whole railway system in the Three Eastern Provinces. To avert that result the Peking Government, acting under the advice of the eminent engineer, Mr. Kinder, conceived the idea of building a line on the west of the Russian road and nearly parallel to the latter. But when the Russians acquired information of this project they imposed a strenuous veto, which China had to respect. Subsequently in pursuance of the same policy Peking sought Russia's consent to the linking up of the two systems by a line from Hsinmintun to Mukden. But this, too, was vetoed by Russia. Then, during the war, the Russians for strategical reasons laid a military line between Mukden and Hsinmintun, and this, having fallen into Japanese possession, was converted into a permanent road and ultimately handed over to China. Misled by this incident into supposing that Japan was much easier to deal with than Russia, the Chinese Government revived its project of a parallel line via Fakumen, and attempted to carry the scheme to such a stage without the knowledge of Japan that the latter would virtually be precluded from objecting. Such is the chapter of history which our Tokyo contemporary now unfolds.

Baron Goto is about to proceed to Peking and he will concert with the Chinese Government practical measures for placing the development of Manchuria's resources in the hands of Occidentals. We do not interpret this as signifying that there will be any concession in the matter of the Fakumen Railway. The true analysis would seem to be that just as the Residency General in Seoul has answered foreign charges of favouritism by bringing about the grant to an American firm of one of the most valuable mining concessions in Korea, so Baron Goto will confer with the Peking authorities in such a manner as to give practical proof of Japan's determination not to stand in the light of any foreign enterprise in Manchuria.

In connexion with this visit of Baron Goto to Peking there has been some attempt to renew the recently circulated rumours as to a grave collision of views between the Cabinet and the President of the South Manchuria Railway. But the Asahi Shimbun emphatically denies that there is any such collision. Baron Goto goes to China as the exponent of views entirely endorsed by the Ministry.

CHINA.

Friday, July 3.

It is stated that the Chinese Government has given its consent to the opening of Changkiakow to foreign trade. Changkiakow is commonly known as Kalgan. It constitutes the pass from China to Mongolia through the Great Wall and lies on the northeast of Peking.

The area inundated in south China is said to cover 400,000 square li, or nearly 45,000 square miles. According to telegrams from Canton the distress caused by this terrible calamity is very poignant.

A Chinese company has been formed with a capital of a million taels to establish a line of steamers between Ningpo and Shanghai. No foreigners will be allowed to become shareholders. The projectors have taken up 400,000 taels worth of shares.

Mr. Commissioner Kurosawa, who officiates at Tairen, writes as follows in his Trade Report for 1907:—"Supposing that the total value of the trade of Manchuria be 80 million taels, this might roughly be divided as follows: Newchwang, 40 millions; Siminfu, 10 millions; Dairen, 20 millions; Antung and other routes, 10 millions. Two-thirds of these figures will represent the import trade, which, again, denotes the purchasing power of Manchuria. Supposing, further, that the population of Manchuria is eight millions, as is believed to be approximately the case, this would give a buying power per head of over six and a half taels—a far larger sum than the average native of Manchuria can possibly spend in a year on foreign goods at his present economic stage." We are somewhat surprised to learn that the population of Manchuria is estimated at only 8 millions. Mr. Kurachi, of the Foreign Office in Tokyo, recently put the figure at 16 millions.

The annual trade reports of the Chinese Imperial Customs show that an interesting question promises to crop up at Antung. A succinct statement of the matter is made by the Hongkong Daily Press, from which we take the following:—

Antung, the port on the north bank of the River Yalu, is in close touch with Chefoo and Dairen. It has a good deal of shipping, both steamers and sailing junks. Steamers drawing nine feet may anchor off the Bund, or what should be the Bund, according to Mr. Commissioner Palen, who recommends effort in the direction of river conservancy and improvement. The river is eating away the Chinese town, and in November last it "tore away a liberal piece of the shore off the Japanese settlement." Chinese cargo pays extra in time and money for transportation from the present anchorage. Antung might have "combined railway and cheap water connections," but in the absence of dredging and bunding operations, it looks as if it must be satisfied with railway only. For a bridge is projected to cross the river at the present lower harbour limit, to carry the trains of the Korean railways to the Chinese shore, and to form the connecting link between the Japanese Government-owned lines on the Peninsula and the Antung-Mukden arm of the South Manchuria Railway system. A survey was being made in February, for a fixed bridge 3,182 feet long, with spans of two to three hundred feet, thirty feet wide, and 26 feet above high water. The Chinese have asked that it be made a swing or draw-bridge, to allow the shipping to pass. At present the issue is not an urgent one, as the budget arrangements for an outlay of two and a half million yen may take time; also, the South Manchuria gauge has not yet been changed to standard. Until the Chinese show some disposition to start with the dredging and bunding, and until these other factors are dealt with, there is no need to talk of the unmade bridge as producing the development of the Chinese town, nor to go so far as Mr. Palen does, when he remarks that "to force across a navigable boundary-line river, in the face of protests from one of the riparian States, a closed bridge of such a height as to hamper that State's sea-going traffic, is not such an act as may be admitted to come within the previously established standards of international comity." This almost amounts to "calamity-howling," and it is strange to find it in such a conservative publication as the I.M.C. reports have hitherto been.

Saturday, July 4.

The Legislative Council in Hongkong has passed a resolution strongly sympathizing with the sufferers by the floods in Kwangtung and Kwangsi, and has voted a sum of 30,000 dollars for purposes of relief. This money, together with a copy of the resolution, has been forwarded to the Viceroy in Canton.

From Shasi in Hupeh also comes news of inundations. It is said that the country is under water to a depth of from 1 to 3 feet, and that the inhabitants are going about in boats.

Sunday, July 5.

It appears that the provinces of Kwangtung and Kwangsi are not the only places suffering from floods. Hupeh and Anhui are also in a sorry plight. The Emperor of China has granted a sum of 100,000 taels out of the Privy Purse for relief purposes.

The Asahi Shimbun has a telegram from Peking saying that the Chinese Government has determined to reconstitute its navy during the next eight years, that is to say, the period between now and the next meeting of the Hague Conference.

It is stated that out of the five demands preferred by France in connexion with the Annam complication China has definitely rejected three and has reserved two for further consideration, namely, the punishment of the offenders and the payment of the sum of 250,000 francs. France does not appear disposed to dispute this attitude on China's part.

The Mainichi Dempo, in publishing this news, suggests that the original demands were formulated at the instance of the Colonial Party and that they did not represent the convictions of the French Government. At all events it is probable that France will insist on China making some better arrangements for the control of her disaffected subjects, and China on her side may well be supposed to desire that her relations with a friendly Western Power should not be complicated by incidents such as that which recently occurred.

Monday, July 6.

The committees appointed to draw up regulations for the conduct of the Yalu Timber Felling Enterprise have held six sittings in Mukden, but it appears that on the Chinese side proposals have been made which are difficult for the Japanese to accept. In short the rights-recovery mood is making itself felt at the negotiations and a speedy solution is not apparent.

The complication about the purchase of timber carried to Antung by Chinese woodsmen has not been settled. The Taotai concluded that in view of the signature of the Yalu Timber Felling Convention, no occasion existed for further compulsory sales to the Japanese, but a protest against this decision having been entered by the Japanese Consul at Mukden, Viceroy Hsu issued orders that purchases must go on for the present as usual. The Taotai seems to have been unable to enforce this order and has asked for three days' grace.

It appears that Russia also is troubled by a frontier question with China. The Hung-hutsh in the Amur and Kilin regions, when hard pressed by the Chinese troops, crossed the Amur and enrolled themselves among the workmen on the Russian Railway. Negotiations are going on with reference to this matter.

It appears that the Chinese Government is seeking to increase its revenues by raising the rate of the salt tax, which measure is meeting with much opposition.

The Asahi Shimbun alleges that the boycott is losing its force in South China. Our contemporary explicitly affirms that the movement derived the greater part of its force from the instigation of British merchants in southern China, who are hostile to Japan and who moreover saw their account in fomenting the boycott. These merchants have been making a good thing by themselves importing Japanese marine products and selling them to the Chinese distributors at very high prices. But the Chinese have discovered that they alone are the losers by this arrangement, and they are now commencing to send their own orders direct to Japan. We (Japan Mail) quote this story for what it may be worth. In all probability it is a great exaggeration, but any denial, to be effective, must come from Hongkong itself.

According to statistics compiled in January last by the Chinese Legation, there were then only 7,000 Chinese students in Japan. These were distributed among the Universities of Tokyo and Kyoto and the Colleges of Waseda, Law, Meiji, Nippon, Toyo and elsewhere.

Tuesday, July 7.

Telegrams from Peking say that the Chinese Government had decided to raise the transit tax on salt by 4 wen a pound, the idea being to recoup the losses entailed by the abolition of the opium licences. It is expected that this extra tax will produce 5 million taels of revenue, one-half of which will be devoted to the purposes of the Army, and one-half will go to the provinces to make up the deficit in their revenues caused by the anti-opium edict.

The Asahi has news from Peking that Mr. Bland, representing the British Syndicate which obtained the contract for the building of the Fakumen Railway, has published in the Chinese capital a long document vehemently denouncing Japan's action as contrary to the principle of the open door and a distinct violation of China's sovereignty in Manchuria. This document contains what the Asahi's correspondent describes as a flagrant error, namely, a statement that at the time of the negotiations for the Peking Treaty of 1905, the Chinese Plenipotentiaries, wishing to avoid all ambiguities likely to lead to future trouble, sought to have a limit of distance fixed within which parallel lines were not to be built, but the Japanese Plenipotentiaries refused to agree to any such provision. We (Japan Mail) can not see that this argument, even if well founded, has much value. The vital question is what the treaty contains, not what it omits.

It is stated (Asahi Shimbun) that the object of Lieut.-General Baron Fukushima's visit to Tientsin is to confer with the Chinese authorities on the subject of a request made by them for the education of military officers in Japan. The present Minister of War, Tieh Liang, wishes to obtain very extensive educational privileges for military cadets in Japan. He desires in short to mould the Chinese Army completely after the fashion of the Japanese. But Japan's educational machinery is not capable of being stretched to such an extent and she has found it necessary to refuse the greater part of China's proposals. Baron Fukushima is instructed to explain fully the reasons of this refusal and to offer all possible facilities within the limits of Japan's capacity. He will also visit and inspect the places in the provinces where Japanese military instructors are at work.

Reports continue to arrive of damage caused by inundations in China, especially in the province of Hupeh. It is stated that the injuries suffered by the Peking-Hankow Railway are such as to preclude the resumption of through traffic for two months.

The detailed arrangements for linking up the East China and South Manchuria Railway systems do not appear to have made much progress towards completion. It is not suggested, however, that any complications have arisen. On the contrary, the present expectation is that a thoroughly satisfactory settlement will be reached. The South Manchuria Railway Company will open an office in Harbin and it is now seeking a suitable building.

Wednesday, July 8.

The Shanghai press, according to telegrams received by the Mainichi Dempo and the Asahi Shimbun, is unanimous in regarding Marquis Katsura as one of the leaders of the military party, and all the English journals in the settlement concur in expressing an apprehension that his accession to power may injure Japan's credit abroad. But it has to be remembered that although Marquis Katsura is strongly Li with Prince Yamagata, the undoubted head of the military party, his recent policy has been in the direction of postponing expenditures on the Army and Navy, and whatever may be done in the matter of reducing these expenditures under a Katsura Cabinet, there is little likelihood of them being increased.

A long telegram to the Shanghai Mercury of the 6th inst. is recabled to the Asahi Shimbun. It epitomises the views expressed by the London Economist in a leading article. The great English financial organ says that in itself the Faku-men Railway question is not of cardinal importance, but as a test of Japan's sincerity in carrying out the policy of the open door and equal opportunities it is of prime moment. Japan now enjoys the confidence and respect of the world, but she can retain them only by doing nothing to create the impression of an intention to pursue her own interests at the sacrifice of those of others. She is engaged redeeming her national debts, but it is certain that she still needs large sums of foreign money to develop her resources, and Western States will not lend her money if it is to be applied to their disadvantage and to her sole gain. Nothing is more necessary for her at present than to behave so as not to convert into suspicion and hostility the friendly confidence with which she is now regarded by the West.

Thursday, July 9.

The complication at Antung with regard to the timber-felling question has been settled on the basis of reversion to the status quo ante. The purchases of timber from Chinese woodsmen will continue as before, pending the operation of the new Convention.

It is stated that the Governor-General of Kwantung has ordered a revision of the mining regulations so as to facilitate the working of mines in the leased territory by foreigners as well as Japanese, the object being to carry out the reality of the open door. Even the mine at Liaoteshan, which lies within the zone of fortifications, is to be included in the category of leaseable property, and it is said that altogether there are about 100 mines at the disposal of the Japanese, 20 of which are already worked.

Mr. Tanaka, one of the managing directors of the South Manchuria Railway, has returned from Harbin whither he went to confer about drawing up regulations for the linking of the two railway systems, namely, the East China and the South Manchuria. He reports that owing to the as yet incomplete state of the former Railway's preparations, it was not found possible to draw up entirely practical regulations, but agreement was reached with regard to all the cardinal parts and the conference was of the most friendly character. The Japanese railway authorities have consented to carry at reduced rates timber coming over the Russian line from north Manchuria, and the Russians on their side have made a similar concession with regard to coal coming by the Japanese line from the south. This indicates, we presume, that Russian locomotives will obtain their fuel chiefly from the Fushun Mines.

THE "ROMAJI."

The promoters of Romanization in Japan continue their courageous and persevering course, though as yet no very signal success has crowned their efforts. The last number of the magazine published by them—Romaji—is quite up to their highest mark and will be found to be excellent reading in the case of any one desiring to study the genius of the Japanese language. Indeed we doubt whether a better or more accessible teacher could be found, and we therefore strongly recommend the magazine to any of our fellow-residents who entertain the laudable idea of learning Japanese. Take for example the following delightful little rustic narrative which appears over the initials "S. Y." under the title of Sumire—

Kyo wa Aka kara yoi Tenki nanode, nantonaku kokoroga ukaitte, jito shite Orareni. Sokode jibun wa, hosoi Sutekki wo motte burarito dekaketa.

Uoko to iu ate mo naku, Mugi-batake no aida wo tadotte iku. Soyosoyo to fuite kuro kaze wa, Mugi-batake e midori no Nami wo tateru.

"Nobe no Hibari wa ito takaku, Kumoi harukani maite naku" to kawai koe de Kodomora ga utatte oru, Kirosu Tanpoko-no-Hana ni, shiroi Hane no Chōcho ga, yukaisōni nemutte oru. Itsu no nika, jibun wa 3 bonsuji e kita.

"Sa, korekara dochi e itaru yokaiō? Ume wa tokuni chitte shimatta. Sakura no sakari wa sugiteshimatta. Sochi e ite mo dameda. Kochi e ite miyō" to hitorigoto inagara, hidarino ho e nagatta.

Koko wa, amari Hito ga toranuto miele, michi wa dandan hosoku natte, Kusa bakari haite oru. Jibun wa Tani no yona, hikui tokoro ni sashikakatta toki ni, chisana Te wo hirogete, nikori waratte, jibun wo mukairu monoga atta. Sorewa Sumire de aru. Sumire wa hontoni kawai, yasashii mono de aru.

Mukashi, Bashō to iu Hito wa "Yamaji kite naniyara yukashi, Sumire-kusa."

to Hokku wo yonda koto ga atta. Mata America no Uta-bito wa kō utatta:

"Ah, Sumire! Ai no tsutsumeru Nanjino chiisaki kokoro wa, tsunenai naganuru Ozora no gotoku irodorareti.

"Nanji no Meniwa Namida ari. Kowa Nanji ni tsukawashishi 'Shizen-no-Mei' nishitagai sono meizeshi gotoku sono tsutome wo mattoshitaru yorokobi no Namida naruka."

Jibun wa kono uta wo kurikaeshite.

"Ah Sumire! Ai no tsutsumeru. . . " to utatte oruto "Niisan, konna tokoni itano?" to iu koe ni odorite furimuite miruto, mā, yoku mo sagashite kitamonoda. Fumi-chan ga tatte ita.

Jibun wa, kore wa Sumire no Keshin dewa naika to ayashinda. Shikashi hontono Fumi-chan de atta. Fumi-chan wa "nanika hanashite chōdai" to, hidari no Te ni suguru. Sokode jibun wa arukinagara kataridashita.

"Mukashi Naboreon to iu Hito ga. . . "

"Naboreon te donna Hito?"

"Are, Tokuhon ni attarō, Taiko-sama no yōna Hito yo. Naboreon ga Ikusa ni makete Shiina-nagashi ni sarerutoki, Tomodachi ni katauyō 'rainen, Sumire no Hana ga saku koroniwa, mata kaite kuru' to ita.

"Konotoki kara, Naboreon no mikata no mono wa, Sumire no Hana wo medetai shirushi to shite, Kin-no-Yubiwa niwa, Sumire no katachi wa horitsuke nado shita.

"Sōshite, Naboreon wa rainen no haru, honto ni, nagasareta Shima wo nigedashite kaite kita. Sōsuruto, Pari no Onnadomo wa, Kago ni Sumire wo irete uri aruki, Naboreon no mikatano Hitobito wa, mina Sumire no Hana wo katie, nune no tokoro e hasanda tosa."

"Pari te doko?"

"Fransu to iu Kuni no Tokyo sa."

Kō katatta toki, Fumi-chan wa, tsunde kita Sumire wo mune no tokoro e sushite,

"Watashi mo Naboreon no mikata!" to hoemi nagara itta.

One might vainly search the columns of readers or phrase-books to find a more useful guide to every-day Japanese than the above furnishes. Its simplicity and purity are delightful. But why should the editors of the Romaji persist in crediting the impractical doctrine that uniformity is a matter of no importance in a system which it is desired to popularize? Why should they allow any and every contributor to write Romaji according to the dictates of his own sweet will? Take the following words for example:—Sikan for shikwan; sotugyō for sotsugyō; niti for nichi; husimi for fushimi; zikan for jikan; tuite for tsuite; tikaku for chikaku; nusi for nushi; lutta for futta. What is the idea of publishing this quaint style of Romanization? Do the editors intend to proclaim the fact that they have not been able as yet to agree among themselves about the rules of an etymology which they invite the public to adopt? We entirely fail to comprehend the wisdom of this confusion of methods. It really seems as though the advocates of Romanization sought to bewilder rather than to enlighten the public.

THE FRASER RIVER.

It appears that the Japanese are to be completely excluded from any share in the Fraser River fishery industry, which they had pursued with eminent success for many years. The new regulations enacted by the Government of British Columbia are enforced so strictly that only three licences have been granted to Japanese fishermen this season although hundreds of applications were sent in as usual. This attitude on the part of the authorities is considered as destructive of all Japanese participation in the valuable industry of salmon fishing.

It is certainly curious to read of such incidents as the above in the context of the London Economist's solemn warning to Japan against doing anything whatever that might be capable of interpretation in the sense of a departure from the great principle of the open door and equal opportunities. Japan does not get equal opportunities in the Occident, nothing like equal opportunities, yet she is required to grant them in the fullest manner to all Occidentals within her own sphere.

DEATH OF MR. KOJIMA IKEN.

We regret to have to announce the death of Mr. Kojima Iken, formerly Chief Justice of the Court of Cassation. He died of consumption at his Omori residence on the 2nd inst. after an illness of two years. Mr. Kojima's name was much on men's lips at the time of the Otsu outrage. The Government at that era held that Tsuda Sanzo, the assailant of the Tsarevitch, ought to be capitally punished, but Mr. Kojima insisted that the attempted assassination must be regarded as a common assault, inasmuch as the Japanese law did not contain any special provision for the protection of foreign potentates in Japan. Mr. Kojima was 72 years of age at the time of his death.

KOREA.

Friday, July 3.

Telegrams state that the rosy reports published some months ago about the newly opened port of Chongjin on the northeast coast of Korea induced hundreds of Japanese settlers to proceed thither, but on arrival they found nothing to do, and many of them, being without funds for their return journey, are said to be in great distress.

The Il Ching hoi seem to have abandoned, ostensibly at all events, their attitude of hostility to the Prime Minister, Mr. Yi-Wangyong. No reason is assigned publicly for this change of front, but it is stated that the Prime Minister holds office virtually at the beck of Sung Yongchun.

The extreme anxiety of the Japan Chronicle to whitewash the much-besmirched name of the ex-editor of the Korea Daily News, who is now serving a term of imprisonment in Shanghai, finds striking illustration in the Kobe journal's latest contention, namely, that the Seoul Press shows bad taste in commenting on Mr. Bethell's journalistic career while he is away in Shanghai. That is one of the quaintest theories we have ever heard. Were it acted upon, a London journal would be precluded from commenting on the career of a law-breaker imprisoned in Boston or New York, and Paris would have to keep silence about a malefactor in Berlin unless he happened to be on a visit to the French capital. When and by what publicist was such a restriction ever acknowledged? It certainly is not acknowledged by the Japan Chronicle itself and it would be laughed to scorn by any European or American editor. Mr. Bethell has achieved the highest success he could ever have hoped for: he has acquired notoriety. And he deserves it. If any English journal approves of his methods, public opinion may fairly be trusted to deal with such a journal.

Saturday, July 4.

It appears that the collision between a Japanese soldier and a Korean subject in Pyongyang was somewhat different from the accounts already published. What really happened was that a Japanese soldier-servant led an officer's horse into the compound of a Methodist missionary in order that the animal might feed on the grass growing there. This palpable trespass provoked a remonstrance from the Korean servant of the missionary, and an altercation ensued which ended in the Japanese administering a severe beating to the Korean and pursuing him round the compound. Formal complaint having been lodged with the Residency-General, an order was issued to the officer commanding the corps to which the man belonged, and the result was a sentence of three months' imprisonment for the offender and confinement to the barracks for from three to seven days in the case of a colonel, a major and a captain. The punishment of these officers seems to have been due to their failure to preserve proper discipline among the men under their charge, some of whom recently behaved with violence at a school kept by a Presbyterian missionary. The Commander-in-chief of the troops in Korea has also issued a stringent order directing that all soldiers shall be strictly warned against any exhibitions of rudeness or roughness towards persons or properties of Koreans or foreigners.

The concessionaires of the Kapsan mine, accompanied by the United States Consul, have waited upon the Resident-General to return thanks for his Excellency's action in settling this long disputed claim in a manner entirely satisfactory to the claimants. It is said that the incident has given much satisfaction to foreigners; that it is likely to lead to greatly increased investments of foreign capital in Korea, and that the new regulation exempting machinery from payment of duties will probably have a wholesome effect.

Prince Ito, when entertaining the Korean Ministers of State and Elder Statesmen at the Residency-General on the 28th ultimo, seems to have made an exhaustive speech. His Highness entered into an explanation of the various important reforms recently effected in Korea, namely, the drafting of the new codes of law, the establishment of a competent judiciary, the transfer of the Throne's property to the State, the re-organisation of the local administrative system, the measures taken to quell the insurgents and the formation of a body of auxiliary gendarmes. He invited his guests to express their opinions with absolute frankness. This brought to his feet Mr. Yi Yong-wong, an old statesman of 78, who in the name of himself and his colleagues spoke in warm appreciation of the services rendered by Japan to Korea. There were some Koreans, he said, who doubted the sincerity of Japan's intentions, but he could vouch that none of those present that evening entertained any such suspicion. They all sincerely hoped that Japan would continue her efforts under the wise direction of Prince Ito to save Korea from every evil fate.

At an entertainment given by Mr. Oka, Vice-Minister of Home Affairs, on the 2nd inst. in Seoul, Mr. Sung Pyongchun is quoted as having made a remarkable speech with reference to a statement published by a Japanese journal in Seoul to the effect that he was plotting for the overthrow of the present Cabinet and for his own elevation to the post of Prime Minister. He declared that nothing could be further from his thoughts. If the present Premier's action was open to any criticism, it was in connexion with essentially trivial issues, and so far from desiring a change of Ministry, he, Mr. Sung, was devoting his whole strength to consolidate the present Cabinet as an instrument for carrying out the essential reforms directed by Japan, and as a means of convincing the Korean nation as to the necessity of cementing the closest possible relations with its neighbour on the East.

Sunday, July 5.

At length some fragments of news have leaked out about the doings of the Japanese forces in Korea. News comes this (Sunday) morning that on the 2nd inst. a Japanese detachment came into collision with 400 insurgents at a place called Paju in the north of the province of Chhungchong-do. Ten of the insurgents were killed, and Yi, who is one of the principal leaders of the insurrection, was made prisoner. Another of the leaders, Han, has been arrested in Seoul, and it is thought that the apprehension of these two men will go far towards allaying the spirit of disorder.

The transfer of the property of Lady Om to the State has been effected, but, as might have been anticipated, its real bulk was largely diminished before the transfer, private dispositions for sale or grant having been largely made in anticipation. The property of the Throne is next to be dealt with and will doubtless be the object of similar manoeuvres.

The latest statistics show that at the end of June the number of Japanese subjects in Korea was 111,299, the increase since the end of May having been 4,800.

It is stated that Prince Ito will hasten his departure, on account of the Cabinet crisis, and that he will leave Seoul for Tokyo on the 7th inst.

Tuesday, July 7.

The insurgent leader Ho has been handed over by the police authorities to the Criminal Court for final trial. In the course of his examination by the police the fact is said to have been elicited that Hyon Yong-un is implicated in the insurrection and he has accordingly been apprehended. This Mr. Hyon is well known in Japan under the name of Genyemon. He has a Japanese wife and was at one time a more or less conspicuous figure in Korean political circles.

The Elder Statesmen and ex-Ministers of State in Korea who were entertained by Prince Ito a few days ago gave a return banquet on the 6th inst. at the house of Mr. Yi Chiyong.

Mr. Hitaka, private Secretary to Marquis Tokudaiji, was to arrive in Seoul on the 7th inst. He has been sent to Korea on a special mission in connexion with the ministerial crisis in Japan.

Wednesday, July 8.

Mr. Hitaka, who has been sent by the Imperial Court to Seoul in connexion with the Cabinet crisis in Japan, reached that city on the evening of the 7th and delivered his message to Prince Ito. It is now stated that the Prince will return to Japan but that he will not leave Seoul until after the 10th inst.

The Jiji Shimpō has a telegram from Seoul which quotes Prince Ito as expressing a conviction that Baron Hirata, Mr. Oura, Count Komura and Baron Saito will certainly hold portfolios in the next Cabinet, but as to the other Ministers nothing is yet certain. The Prince speaks of the slate being filled in two or three days.

It is stated that between the 29th of June and the 3rd of July the Japanese troops had 24 collisions with the Korean insurgents, being an average of 6 fights per diem. This indicates that the campaign is being conducted over a wide area. The losses of the insurgents were 120 killed and 51 wounded, but nothing is said as to the casualties on the Japanese side. It is added that the number of insurgents who have surrendered and made act of submission since the beginning of the campaign—a date which we have no means of fixing—totals 4990.

At the return banquet given by the Elder Statesmen of Korea to Prince Ito, the spokesman of the hosts is quoted as saying (Jiji Shimpō's telegrams) that all the troubles which have hitherto arisen in Korea have been due to the action of thoughtless persons. The wiser class of Koreans trusted the regeneration of their country to Japan's assistance under the guidance of Prince Ito, and although they, the Elder Statesmen, have no direct responsibility, they promised to exercise a limited power in the cause of genuine progress. Prince Ito in reply said that the crying needs of the time were the decentralization of administrative power and the extension of local autonomy. What chiefly troubled him at this juncture was, not the insurrection, but the restoration of peace and good order so that all classes of Koreans might be able to pursue their avocations in confidence and security.

Thursday, July 9.

According to telegrams from Seoul, the officer commanding the Japanese forces in Korea reports that the work of subduing the insurgents is going on in a satisfactory manner, but that in two or three localities they are still holding out obstinately. Between the 4th and 6th inst. there were 19 encounters between the troops and the insurgents, with the result that 180 of the latter were killed and 40 taken prisoners. It is further reported that the work of establishing telegraphs and telephones throughout the Peninsula is proceeding rapidly, so that it will soon be possible to concert the movements of the troops in the most complete manner. A collateral advantage of this work is that the inequalities now existing in the prices of commodities in various districts will be more or less corrected.

"THE JAPAN FINANCIAL AND ECONOMIC MONTHLY."

Mr. Mochizuki's valuable magazine is a little late this time in making its appearance, for the May number has only just seen the light, and consequently some of the information contained is stale. Even this part of the periodical is valuable, however, as a record. A large space in this number of the magazine is devoted to the Budget for the current fiscal year, and as every item of revenue and expenditure is given in the clearest manner with the full official analyses attached, we have this important document in a commodious and comprehensive form, local finances being embodied as well as national. We observe that the capital of companies newly formed during the period July, 1905, to February, 1908, is put by Mr. Mochizuki at 1,312,438,800 yen, and the sum added to the capital of already established companies is stated to have been 538,568,440 yen, the grand total being 1,851,007,240 yen. But this is not of so much interest as it would be were we informed at the same time what amount of the aggregate was actually paid up. Among the mass of interesting information contained in the volume we find an exhaustive table showing the fluctuations of the share market from March, 1897, to February, 1908, but some corrections have to be applied in a few cases in order to distinguish watered shares from those not thus treated. There is one very curious note which we hesitate to believe without confirmation. It is to the effect that the Daiya Iron Mine was discovered by a German, who had been employed by Viceroy Chang Chih-tung to search for ore, but instead of reporting the discovery to his employer, the German cabled to his own Government, which lost no time in opening negotiations with Peking for a mining and railway concession at Daiya. The Viceroy's influence sufficed to thwart this scheme, but only at the cost of contracting with German firms to supply machinery and experts. It is further stated that when the Japanese Government endeavoured to make arrangements for permission to work the mine, the Germans took steps to prevent the agreement, and their opposition was with difficulty overcome by Dr. Nishizawa, a Japanese mining expert. Is all this true, we wonder.

RUSSIAN NEWS.

The S. S. Anur, which belongs to the Russian Volunteer Fleet, is reported to have been destroyed by fire at her moorings in Vladivostok on the 6th inst.

There is a rumour, difficult to comprehend, that while closing Vladivostok on the one hand, the Russian Government contemplates the opening of another free port at some place in its vicinity. This message is unintelligible in the above meagre form.

There is to be a daily paper published in Vladivostok in Korean script, having for its avowed object a campaign against the administration of the Resident-General in Korea. The editor and proprietor is said to be Colonel Mihailoff, who is now on the retired list. It is not easy to see what such a newspaper could accomplish. It could not hope to support itself by the patronage of the small Korean community in Vladivostok, and its circulation in Korea would be at once interdicted if it contained matter inciting to rebellion.

The new Russian Ambassador to Japan arrived at Tsuruga on the 7th inst. and was welcomed by the local officials. His Excellency is quoted as saying that he had been entrusted by his Imperial Master with the duty of dispersing the last of the clouds which the war has left upon the horizons of the two countries, and that he sincerely hoped that the Japanese nation would view with calm and discriminating eyes the progress of Russian undertakings in Eastern Asia.

The Fiji Shimpō has an article heartily greeting the new Ambassador. It says that his long service in the Foreign Office at St. Petersburg, where he was in daily contact with that eminently liberal minded statesman, Mr. Iswolsky, has doubtless equipped him with a sincere desire to promote the friendship between Japan and Russia and to extend their commercial relations. Our contemporary sincerely hopes that success may crown his efforts and promises that nothing shall be wanting to that end on Japan's side.

"THE FREE HINDUSTHAN"

That is the name of a small periodical (monthly) published in Vancouver. From the first line of its two narrow pages to the last it is filled with incitement to rebellion against British rule in India. The heading of one article is:—"The condition of India to-day is infinitely worse in every respect than ever it was under the worst form of native rule"; that of another is:—"The British Government is less beneficial to the people of Hindusthan than the Russian autocracy to the Russian people"; and that of a third is:—"Britain demands humanity in Congo but she denies it in Hindusthan." Here, again, are some extracts:—

Now, are we equally free and do we enjoy equal rights like all Britishers in Hindusthan? Isn't it a fact that the people who want to do anything for the good of our countrymen are all seditious-mongers in the eyes of the Bureaucratic Government and the distinctions they achieve are by rigorous imprisonment and deportation, without trial?

Have we any liberty of opinion in Hindusthan? Have we any honor when our dignity is nothing but a member of an enslaved community, however qualified may we be—life without liberty is not worth living. Now-a-days resistance to oppression is treason in Hindusthan.

Has any of the laws of the present government in Hindusthan are sanctioned by us or through our elected representatives? How is partition of Bengal carried out? Does the British Government of Hindusthan ever ask the people about the taxation of the land? Has the people of Hindusthan any voice in the financial or fiscal questions of the country?

People of Hindusthan, where does your sovereignty lie,—is it with you or with the foreigners? As a nation, have you any authority regarding the government of the country? No! it is vested to a body of people which does not constitute as a part of your nation.

What is the sole motive of the present British Government in Hindusthan? Is it public good or commercialism, i.e., exploitation of the country which has caused famine and plague? Have we secured the free representation in the present so-called legislative, executive and judicial bodies? Executive and judicial powers should be distinct and defined; but what is it in our country? We have been praying for over fifteen years for separation of executive and judicial functions but have we got it or will we ever get it by petitioning? No!

Is there any precision of the criminal laws now-a-days in Hindusthan? Is it not a fact that criminal law regarding sedition is always ready for us if we want to do good to our country? Have you any doubt about the fact that a Britisher can easily get free without any punishment on simply paying a fine, of a few rupees even when killed a Hindustanee, but our countrymen when attempting to defend themselves from any injury done by Englishmen, are thrown into prison?

Isn't it the case that the best and fittest are always for the Britishers? However qualified may we be we have no right to be a chief presidency magistrate, far from being a governor. Does the British Government of Hindusthan assess an income tax of 65 per cent. to the British people in Hindusthan as she mercilessly does in the case of the peasants of the central provinces in the shape of taxation?

Have we any right to examine and correct the faults of the present rotten system of government? No, we have not, because we are slaves in our own country. Have we any equal right to the government of our country? No. Civil service examinations are held in England so that we may not get an equal chance to appear in examination.

Brothers of Hindusthan, rise up from your slumber and strive manfully to get the sacred rights of man. We firmly assure you that we shall get them not before acquiring Swraj, the absolute self-government.

Great Britain is generally too humane when her personal interest is concerned. She is always the first exponent of "Free Trade" and "Opendor" policy for her commercial interest. For the sake of Humanity she forced opium in China and Hindusthan! Of course it is generous for Great Britain to ask Belgium to abolish "forced labor," but she is deaf and blind in case of her treatment towards Hindusthan. When she is bragging so much for stopping "forced labor" in the Congo, why does she not stop the outrageous "Begar System" forced labor in Hindusthan? "Begar System" is peculiarly original in its own way. In the Punjab and other parts of Hindusthan, the British officials while on tour or at home force private workmen to do work for nothing. People can not refuse to obey the order of the almighty British officials because disobedience may cause death. The editor of "The Punjabee" was sentenced to six months imprisonment when he exposed an incident that a man was shot down by a British official when refused to forced labor of carrying a carcass of swine which no Mohammedan can touch according to religious belief of the community. This is not all, when the British regiments move from one quarter to another it is generally the case that the villagers are to supply poultry and other food stuffs, sometimes without payment, and the villagers are generally forced to carry tents for the officers in tour without any compensation. Who will demand Humanity from Great Britain in respect to her dealings with the people of Hindusthan? Were these outbursts credible, it would follow that Great Britain is treating her Indian subjects with great inhumanity and that cruelty and extortion are practised by Englishmen in Hindusthan. But are they credible? And if they are not, if Englishmen decline to believe them, why should belief be unhesitatingly extended to similar accusations brought by Korean subjects against Japan's doings in Korea?

THE EMPIRE DAY CUP.

The first prize in The Daily Mail 200 guinea cup shot for on Empire Day was won by the East London Club, Cape Colony, with a score of 824, or an average of 103 out of 105 for each of the best eight men whose scores were counted. Next came the Railway and Works Club, Brisbane, Queensland, with 807.

The fourteen best scores were:—

East London R.C., S. Africa .....	824
Railway and Works R.C., Brisbane .....	807
Bendigo R.C., Victoria .....	798
Cape Peninsula Rifles .....	793
Witwatersrand Rifles .....	792
Bathurst Civilian R.C., N.S.W. ....	792
North London R.C. ....	792
Queen's Edinburgh R.C. ....	788
Halifax R.C., Australia .....	786
Australian Rifles R.C. ....	784
Southern Rhodesia Vol. (West Div.) .....	783
Waltham R.C., Australia .....	782
Petersburg R.C., Australia .....	781
Victorian Railways R.C. ....	780

(Shanghai's score was 743)

BUSINESS NOTES.

Friday, July 3.

The marked increase of deposits in the Post Office Savings Bank is attracting some attention. The figures for the last six years are as follows:—

	Number of depositors.	Yen.
1903 .....	3,028,918	30,742,028
1904 .....	3,967,921	34,140,826
1905 .....	5,292,757	45,869,225
1906 .....	6,130,761	58,560,428
1907 .....	7,457,202	80,783,195
1908 .....	8,217,112	100,163,069

Of course this phenomenon must be primarily attributed to the unsettled condition of the economic world during the last fifteen months. The middle and lower middle classes have lost confidence in the ordinary banks, and prefer to deposit their money in a perfectly secure institution even though they get a lower rate of interest. There is nothing to be said against this machinery for encouraging a spirit of thrift, but the authorities recently inaugurated a system called furikaye chokin, which practically cuts into the functions of ordinary banks and though it confers great convenience for purposes of buying and selling, this innovation is somewhat resented by the banks and is denounced as a fresh intrusion on the part of officialdom into the realm of every day business. If these furikaye depositors be included, the total number of the Post Office Saving Bank's clients reaches 8,232,000 yen, and their deposits aggregate 102,554,000 yen.

Tokyo journals allege that the City Council held a secret meeting on the 2nd inst., and that in its sequel the Mayor himself, accompanied by Messrs. Koizuka and Nakajima, repaired to the Department of Agriculture and Commerce and explained to the Minister that the City had intended to employ the electric railway as an important source of revenue in connexion with the great Exhibition, and that the Government's refusal to sanction the municipalization would prove very embarrassing. What answer the Minister made to this appeal the papers do not state. The Mayor and his colleagues are said to have visited Viscount Kaneko also, and to have declared that without the assistance of the railway the City will be much perplexed to find the 14 million required for the purposes of the Exhibition. All this is naturally interpreted by the press as plainly proving that had the Railway come into the possession of the Municipality there would have been a very substantial increase of rates. The Asahi Shimbun says that the Government's formal refusal to sanction the municipalization was handed by the Department of Home Affairs to the Governor of Tokyo on the 2nd inst., and that it will be duly communicated to the Municipality and the Company without delay. Nothing now remains for the Municipality except to agree to such a rise of fares by the Company as shall insure a substantial payment to the Municipality. Our readers doubtless remember that this konokin, as it is called, begins to be payable when the Company's net profits reach 7 per cent., the City receiving one-third of everything over that amount. Thus if the Company were in the position to pay a dividend of 10 per cent. the City would receive 1 per cent. and the shareholders 9 per cent. speaking roughly. As to the question of resignations, the Mayor is quoted as saying very justly that until he sees the Government's veto it is impossible for him to estimate his own responsibility or the responsibility of his colleagues. If the official refusal is based simply on considerations of national finance, there is no reason why anybody of the Company or the Municipality should be held to have lost face. It is, however, thought that whatever view be taken, Mr. Nakajima Koko will resign. He and Mr. Tsuboi have always been recognised as absolutely disinterested advocates of municipalization and they will probably assert themselves now by stepping down at all costs.

The formation of the Waterpower Electric Company seems to be proceeding satisfactorily. London lost no time in underwriting its half of the capital, and in Japan many of the leading business men and prominent private persons are subscribing. Thus the Mitsui and Mitsu Bishi have each taken 5000 shares, Princes Shimadzu and Mori 3000 each, Marquis Nabeshima 2000, Baron Shibusawa 1000, Baron Takahashi 1000, Baron Matsuo 1000, and Messrs Kondo Rempei, Okura Kihachiro and others 1000 each. The enterprise is full of promise. A contract has already been secured for supplying electric power to the Tokyo Railway to the extent of 20,000 horse power, which means that on the one hand the new company will start with a large assured asset, and, on the other, the Tokyo Railway will get its motive power at a cost of 20 per cent. less than it is now paying.

Saturday, July 4.

In formally rejecting the proposal for municipalization of the Tokyo Railway the Government has carefully avoided giving an exposé of its reasons. The document of rejection is brevity personified. It merely says that the application received on the 6th of last January "can not be considered" (sengishi-gatashi). Thus the Government leaves its reasons to be conjectured by the public and the situation becomes additionally difficult for those directly concerned. Had considerations of State economy been assigned, neither the Mayor of Tokyo nor the City Council need have resigned. But the probability now is that all these men will consider it necessary to tender their resignations. It is easy to interpret the Government's reluctance to commit itself to any lucid declaration, but the embarrassment of the Municipal authorities is not lessened by that fact. As for the Company, the Directors will doubtless consider it necessary to tender their resignations. They are quoted as saying in effect that their last semi-annual report exposed the situation accurately. If there are to be no improvements or extensions of the service, the Company can carry on by hook or by crook for some time longer, but if Tokyo is to have anything like a proper system of electric trams the schedule of fares must be revised.

The Committee which has been sitting for some time to discuss the problem of the State railways is said to have brought its deliberations to a conclusion on the 3rd inst. The decisions adopted are, first, that all functions connected with the floating of domestic loans, or the raising of money by other processes for railway building purposes, shall be left in the hands of the Finance Department, which charges itself with the duty of providing the money. Secondly, that the profits derived from the railways shall be devoted to paying off the principal and interest of the debt on the basis of fifty years' amortization. Thirdly, that there shall be no increase in the expenditure now sanctioned by law, namely, 114 million yen representing the capital of the former State railways, 500 million yen representing the capital of the nationalized railways, and 112 million yen representing the domestic bonds which have still to be issued under the provisions of the Railway Law. Thus the capital of the railways will aggregate 776 millions.

The Mainichi Dempo draws attention to the very marked increase of what is called direct export in the silk trade. Collating the statistics for the last three years, the following figures are obtained:—

	To America.	To Europe.	Totals.
	Boxes.	Boxes.	Boxes.
July 1905 to June 1906.	54,971	19,386	74,357
" 1906 "	71,083	27,100	98,183
" 1907 "	70,444	33,236	103,680

Out of the above total of 70,444 boxes sent to America in the year just closed, the Mitsui Firm shipped 25,517 boxes, and the Kiito-Gumi shipped 18,172, so that these two firms handled nearly 60 per cent. of the total trade to the United States, leaving only some 40 per cent. to the 26 or 27 foreign firms engaged in the business.

Sunday, July 5.

Opinions differ as to whether the change of Cabinet will injuriously affect the project of a reasonable revision of the Tokyo Railway's schedule of fares. We should think it pretty certain, however, that at least some delay will be entailed. Meanwhile it does not appear that the Mayor and the members of the City Council are likely to resign office in consequence of the rejection of the municipalization scheme.

Our readers doubtless remember that there was talk some time ago of the engagement of a French weaving expert at a salary of 60,000 francs a year by the Fuji Gass Spinning Company for the purpose of weaving a special kind of habutaye. This project appears to have now been abandoned, temporarily at all events.

Monday, July 6.

The Mainichi Dempo says that there will be no resignations among the Municipality or the directors of the Tokyo Railway Company. Since municipalization is not allowed, the schedule of fares will be revised and thus the Company will be able to carry out its work while the City will receive a substantial increase of revenue.

It appears to be pretty generally thought that although there will be no specially rapid appreciation in the share market, a steady rise may be anticipated, with minor fluctuations due to profit-taking sales. It is held that whatever Cabinet comes into power officialdom will devote much pains to improving the financial condition of the country, and moreover signs of general improvement have now been for some time apparent in all directions. If only the rice harvest be plentiful, marked activity may be anticipated in the autumn.

Tuesday, July 7.

The Fiji Shimpō publishes a list of the principal shareholders of the projected and now nearly established Water-power Electric Company. Estimates are also given as to the expenses that will be incurred at each stage of the work.

The Mainichi Dempo thinks, and we are disposed to agree with it, that the change of Cabinet will not be followed by any material change in the financial programme. The Budget for next year, as fixed by the Saionji Ministry, probably represents the best that can be done at present. In consequence of placing the railways in a special account the Treasury will sustain a loss of about 7 million yen annually, and in consequence of not floating any more loans there will be a deficit of some 13 millions. The only question is how to make up this 20 millions, and it is thought that the thing can be accomplished by administrative economies and by other feasible means. Whatever Statesmen are in power they can not do better than this unless it were possible to still further reduce the appropriations on account of the Army and Navy.

The negotiations for a union of the two sugar refining companies, the Ensuiko and the Toyo, are still going on, but a difference of opinion exists as to the value of the former Company's shares in terms of the latter's. The present proposal is that one of the Ensuiko's shares should be counted as three of the Toyo's shares, inasmuch as the latter Company has about 600,000 yen of its capital locked up, partly in the Omori Ginko and partly in other securities which can not be easily realised. Meanwhile there is talk of a sugar trust in Formosa. Several refineries projected last year, or the year before, will soon be at work in the island and will then produce something like 130,000 piculs, whereas the demand does not exceed 100,000. To prevent undue competition it is therefore proposed to form a trust in which all the sugar refining companies both in Japan and in Formosa will be included. The headquarters will be at Takao and a regular Sugar Exchange will be established there if the project matures.

The Asahi Shimbun says that the revision of the schedule of fares of the Tokyo Railway promises to be easily effected as the Municipality is in urgent need of funds, and the easiest way to obtain them is by a more rational system of fares accompanied by an increase of the amount payable to the City out of the Company's profits. The fixed figure now is one-third of everything over 7 per cent., but the idea is to make that ratio somewhat larger, by which procedure the consent of the City would be at once secured.

Wednesday, July 8.

The City Council held a secret meeting on the 7th instant at which it is said to have almost determined to approach the Cabinet again with a request for municipalization. To do this, however, it would be necessary to sign a new agreement with the Company, and the principal shareholders are not at all likely to agree to anything of the kind as it would entail a fresh period of delay and depression. The idea of the Aldermen who approved this course is that the new Cabinet may possibly regard municipalization with favour, and at any rate the proposed plan would postpone the necessity for any resignations. Meanwhile the Company is said to be drafting schemes for a revised schedule of fares. One plan—which we sincerely trust will be vetoed—is to continue the uniform system and simply add one sen to the present charge. The second idea is to have a graduated fare, the prices being regulated by the distance traversed. The third plan is to charge increased fares in certain districts only. At all events, the object in view is to increase the net revenue by about one and a half million yen, of which three or four hundred thousand would go to the City.

Very good results appear to have been obtained in Formosa in carrying out the ten year programme which was inaugurated in 1899 and will therefore be brought to a conclusion next year. The items of this programme are as follow:—

	Yen.
Railways .....	23,800,000
Repurchase of land-lies' rights.....	6,000,000
Harbour construction .....	2,000,000
Land surveys.....	3,000,000
Jails .....	800,000
Official residences .....	400,000
Total .....	41,000,000

These various undertakings have been carried out by floating bonds to the extent of 34,508,500 yen—with the exception of the second item in the above table,—and as the proceeds of the works have been unexpectedly large, the volume of the bonds has now been reduced to 32,900,000 yen. It will be seen therefore that Formosan finance is in a flourishing condition.

The Takarada Oil Company continues its process of absorbing all its rivals. Some time ago, news was published that it had purchased the Namboku and the Fuji Companies for a sum of 1,650,000 yen, and rumour says that it has now effected the purchase of the Bokuyetsu Company for 260,000 yen, of the Yamato for 100,000 yen and of the Mitsu for 75,000 yen.

A feeling of less apprehension seems to be growing in Japan with regard to the ultimate action of the five American Railway Companies which threatened to raise their fares on goods carried eastward from the Pacific coast. If the originally proposed schedule be adopted, a crushing blow will be given to the trade in Japan's miscellaneous manufactures which now occupy a highly important place in her export trade. A combined protest having been made by the Nippon Yusen Kaisha, the Mitsui Company, the Toyo Kisen Kaisha, and the Morimura Guild, it is thought probable that the directors of the five Railway Companies will reconsider their decision. They were to hold a meeting in Chicago on the 8th inst. for the purpose of reconsidering the subject.

The Mainichi Dempo says that although in Japan's domestic finances ends can be made to meet without any further recourse to loans, such is not the case with regard to Japan's enterprises in Korea and Manchuria. There will be wanted 20 million yen for the South Manchuria Railway, 20 millions for the projected Kwangyo Bank in Korea and 20 millions for the Eastern Colonization Company. Our contemporary thinks that Baron Sakatani's visit to America and Europe has some connexion with these loans.

Thursday, July 9.

The Railway Council held its 7th meeting on the 7th inst. at the residence of the Prime Minister and arrived at conclusions which, though not yet published, are epitomised by the Asahi Shimbun as follow:—First, that the railways shall be placed in a separate account, their earnings being appropriated solely for railway purposes. Secondly, that the money already expended upon the railways and that to be hereafter expended shall be regarded as their capital. These monies are, 120 million yen already spent upon State lines, 500 millions expended upon nationalizing the private lines and 160 millions to be hereafter spent upon extensions and improvements under the provisions of law. This gives a total of 780 millions. Thirdly, the railway accounts shall be under two headings, namely, capital account and profit and loss account. Fourthly, that the interest on railway loans shall be paid out of the profits of the lines and that the remaining revenue shall be suitably devoted to redeeming loans or to supplying capital for purposes of extension. Fifthly, that if circumstances dictate such a course, the fact that the earnings of the lines are thus appropriated may be recorded on the face of the bonds. Sixthly, that for purposes of railway extension and improvement loan bonds may be issued in the future, the power of issue being reserved to the Treasury. Seventhly, that if the conditions of the market be unsuited for the issue of bonds, the sum required may, within certain limits, be borrowed from the Treasury, provided that it is repaid so soon as the bonds can be floated. Eighthly, that should a sum be required in excess of the bonds floated for a given purpose, temporary recourse may be had to Treasury assistance. Ninthly, that from the date of the operation of this new system the profits made by the railways, within a certain limit, shall be lodged in private banks, after the above fixed amount has been lodged with the Bank of Japan. This is regarded by business-men as one of the most important of all the provisions, since it will have the effect of preventing the diversion of large sums to the Treasury vaults. The tenth article is that the railway accounts are to be presented to the Diet at the same time as the general budget, and the eleventh, that any points apart from the above shall be settled by Imperial ordinance.

In the sequel of the private meeting held by the City Council on the 7th inst. the Mayor of Tokyo is said to have approached the Railway Company with a proposal that the application for municipalization of the Railway should be once more presented to the Government, as the new Cabinet may take a different view from that entertained by the late Ministry. A meeting of the Railway Directors was to have been held yesterday to consider this proposal, but in all probability the Directors have decided to submit the question to the shareholders at a general meeting. It is believed that a majority of the shareholders consider it eminently unwise to re-open the question of municipalization. Meanwhile there appears to be a growing agitation among some sections of the City Assembly in favour of calling upon the Aldermen to resign at once owing to their failure in the matter of municipalization.

The arrangements with regard to the Water-Power Electric Company seem to be progressing favourably. Some questions relating to the differences between the laws of England and Japan had to be settled, but these have been satisfactorily adjusted by Mr. Kabayama who is now in London whither he was accompanied by the well known barrister, Mr. Kishi. It is stated that the necessary steps have been taken for quoting the Company's shares on the London market.

The Indo-Japanese Society held a meeting on the 8th inst. in Tokyo and listened to an address from Count Okuma, who strongly advised the Indians not to gird against British rule but to labour zealously for the improvement of their country. If they showed a really earnest spirit in that sense, they might count on Great Britain's generosity. It was folly to talk of England absorbing the riches of India to herself. She had expended enormous sums on the development of her great dependency, which, but for that free-handed outlay, would be in a very different condition to-day.

We read in the Chuo Shimbun that in the sequel of the Government's determination to abstain from floating any bonds this year or next, it has been arranged to effect the following postponements of departmental expenditures:—namely, the Army Department 15 million yen, the Navy Department 10 million yen, the Communications Department 7½ millions, and the other Department 5 millions, making 37½ millions in all.

THE TOKYO STOCK EXCHANGE.

Monday, July 6.

Business was brisk on the Tokyo Stock Exchange on Saturday. All quotations rose, with few exceptions, the most notable of which was the Tokyo Railway Company, probably because the change of Cabinet is thought to impair the Company's prospects in the matter of fares. Otherwise the general feeling was buoyant.

Tuesday, July 7.

The Stock Exchange opened dull on Monday, apparently owing to the unseasonable weather and to doubts with regard to the nature of the Cabinet changes. In the afternoon some slight improvement was witnessed. The Tokyo Railway suffered most, the prospects of a revised schedule of fares being imperilled, or at any rate postponed, by the Ministerial crisis.

Wednesday, July 8.

Prices declined all round on the Tokyo Stock Exchange yesterday. The cause is to be sought in two things, one is the unseasonably cold weather which, if it continues, will stunt the growth of the young rice; the other, and more directly important, is perplexity about the ministerial crisis. All kinds of rumours are in circulation and until something definite is decided, a depressed condition may be looked for in financial circles.

Thursday, July 9.

The Tokyo Stock Exchange opened firm but with little movement on Wednesday. Owing to the improved state of the weather and to rumours that the new Ministry would be formed without difficulty, a buoyant feeling prevailed, but did not affect quotations until the afternoon, when the receipt of news that the Osaka market was brisk gave the necessary impetus and a general rise of prices took place.

Friday, July 10.

Thursday was a dull day on the Tokyo Stock Exchange. Rumours as to difficulties in forming a Ministry were current, and these supplemented by apprehensions connected with the low temperature prevailing although great heat should now be the order of the day, induced buyers to hold their hand. Nearly all shares showed fractional falls. The following are the quotations for September delivery:—

	July 8th.	July 9th.
Tanko Kisen .....	85.30	85.10	— .70
Tokyo Railway .....	58.35	58.20	— .15
Kei-Hin Railway .....	67.50	—	—
Yusen Kaisha .....	84.40	84.00	— .40
Toyo Kisen .....	—	—	—
Tokyo Gas .....	82.70	82.60	— .10
Tokyo Dento .....	—	—	—
Fuji Gas Spinning .....	85.70	85.65	— .05
Tokyo Spinning .....	41.10	41.10	—
Kanegafuchi Spinning .....	88.45	88.70	+ .25
Beer .....	79.55	79.20	— .35
Sugar .....	71.00	70.70	— .30
Takarada (Hoden) Oil .....	108.50	—	—
Nippon Oil .....	—	—	—
Namboku Oil .....	—	—	—
Stock Exchange .....	115.80	115.70	+ .10

NOTES ON CURRENT EVENTS.

The continuous rain of the past few days has been due to the approach of a centre of depression from the Yangtze valley which, after entering the China Sea, broke into two storms, one passing up the Sea of Japan and the other travelling out into the Pacific. This country was caught in the fork of the disturbance, but happily there was no gale and thus little injury seems to have been done.

A representative of the Asahi Shimbun has had an interview with the new Russian Ambassador at a station on the line between Harbin and Vladivostok. M. Malevitch is quoted as saying that the Amur Railway is intended solely to develop the resources of the regions through which it passes and to encourage colonization. Russia's position in Siberia was virtually the same as Japan's position in Korea. The Ambassador himself had observed, as he passed along in the train, that settlers swarmed in the vicinity of the railway, which was a practical proof of the influence exercised by means of communication. There are, his Excellency proceeded, people in Japan who regard the building of the Amur Railway with suspicion, and there are men in Russia who look with apprehension at the expansion of Japan's naval and military forces. But the former is purely economical, and the latter is recognised by sensible onlookers as an inevitable adjunct of Japan's newly acquired position in Asia. It is much to be desired that the peoples of the two empires should lay aside mutual distrust and cultivate warm and friendly relations with each other. Baron Goto's recent visit to St. Petersburg contributed to that end, and Japanese newspapers have it in their power to greatly promote it.

Baron Goto's visit to China has been postponed for a week in order that he may be able to submit certain reports to the Emperor. It is alleged that the Baron hopes to make all arrangements for opening the new steam-ship service between Tairen and Shanghai from the 1st of August. That is one of the objects of his visit to China. He will then proceed to organize the service from Taiwan to the Philippines and Australia. It is plain that the future of the South Manchuria Railway is not to suffer for want of energy on the part of its President.

The popular notion of Portia, in the "Merchant of Venice," is of an eloquent young advocate, and so she is commonly represented in the trial scene. This is wrong, as a learned Shakespearean commentator long ago pointed out. "In the representation of this scene," he says, "pictorially or on the stage, it seems never to be remembered that Portia throughout the trial appears as a judge, not an advocate, and that her proper place therefore is on the judgment seat rather than on the floor of the court in front of the stage." In Mr. Tree's presentation of the piece this view has been adopted, and Portia appears on the Bench beside, but a little below, the Duke. On a careful perusal of the scene it is plain, says the Law Journal, that Portia's true position is that of a legal assessor to the Court, occupying much the same relation to the Duke as the Recorder of London does to-day to the Lord Mayor.

The Kobe Herald understands that Mr. H. G. Parlett, British Vice-Consul at Tairen, has been appointed Consul at Hakodate, and that Mr. Wawn, of the British Legation in Tokyo, will go to Tairen as Vice-Consul.

ST. JOSEPH'S COLLEGE.

The Seventh Annual Commencement Exercises and prize-distribution of St. Joseph's College took place on Tuesday afternoon at Van Schaick Hall. Previous to the ceremony a very entertaining programme was gone through most creditably by the boys, consisting of instrumental music, songs, acting, recitations etc. All reflected great credit on Mons. L. Stoltz, Director, and his staff. The Hall was well filled, the audience including many ladies.

The prize winners in the various classes were as follows:—

1st year.....	1 Theo. Fachman
	2 Fred Wolf
2nd div. ....	1 Arnold Houben
	Frank Schoening
2nd Preparatory ...	1 James Kingdon
	2 Eugene Barchicoski
	3 Leslie Worden
3rd do .....	1 Theo. Bennett
	2 James Stewart
	3 K. Wagen
4th do .....	1 Geo. Colton
	2 Henry Powers
	3 Fritz Holm
1st Commercial ...	1 W. H. Quou
	2 A. Fachman
2nd do .....	1 Noel Kingdon
	2 V. Worden
	3 Woo Kok San.
Graduates .....	Geo. Pohl, L. Andreis and Ch. Holm

The musical programme was as follows:—

Overture Chorus: Flowers Blooming,	by F. Schubert .....	School Choir.
Papa's Birthday.
Characters: Papa .....	V. Worden.
	Dudley, .....	D. Harrison.
	Harold, .....	H. Tiesze.
	Arnold, .....	A. Houben.
	Fred, .....	Fr. Wolf.
	Frankie, .....	Fr. Schoening.
Unisson: (a) Tyrolienne (ex. W. Bell) by Rossini.
	(b) Chanson Sonabe.
Violins: Th. Bennett, G. Philip, J. Rhine.

The Rehearsal.

Characters: John, Manager .....	H. Powers.
Harry, Macbeth .....	W. Schoening.
Will, Lady Macbeth .....	F. Holm.
Dick, Ghost .....	H. Colton.
Sam, The Company .....	G. Colton.
Tom, Prompter .....	L. Howe.
Piano—Bolero by Constant Sieg .....	Th. Yareshenko.
Le Malade Imaginaire par Molière. (2re Partie.)
Personnages:
Argan, malade imaginaire .....	D. Scherbinin.
Damis, neveu d'Argan .....	Ch. Borioni.
Ariste, autre neveu d'Argan .....	G. Philip.
Beralde, frère d'Argan .....	L. Suzor.
Mr. Purgon, médecin .....	L. Andreis.
Mr. Fleurant, apothicaire .....	V. Noskin.
Antoine, valet d'Argan .....	E. Carroll.
Romance by Henry Tollhurst.
1st Violin .....	W. Fachmann.
2nd Violin .....	A. Fachmann.
Piano.

Le Malade Imaginaire. (2me Partie.)
Chorus: When My Ship Comes Over The Sea
by W. L. Thompson .....

by W. L. Thompson .....

School Choir.

Farce: IN TWO SCENES.

Cast of Characters:

Sam, Keeper of Swan Hotel .....	E. Carroll.
Ebenezer, .....	Geo. Watt.
Sons of above .....	Ch. Borioni.
Joshua, .....	Ch. Holm.
Sharp, alias Rockefeller .....	L. Andreis.
Sly, alias Frick .....	W. Fachmann.
Cunning, alias Astor .....	mann.
Farmer Trudge .....	Geo. Pohl.
Judge .....	V. Worden.
Prosecuting Attorney .....	R. H. Mirza.
Defendant Attorney .....	Geo. Moss.
Police at Court—Criminal—Boy.
Allegro Spirituoso by Gebauer.
1st Violin: O. Fachmann, D. Scherbinin.
2nd Violin: W. Fachmann, A. Fachmann, Ch. Holm.
Flute: L. Andreis.
Alto—Cello—Piano.

Farce: 2ND SCENE.

Chorus: Les Lauriers by W. Moreau .....

I. Komata, a sub-sergeant in reserve, living in Akasaka, Tokyo, has been arrested on a charge of raising money by dishonest means. It is stated that he lost money at various race clubs since last autumn and then raised nearly two thousand yen by fraud.

THE TOKYO RAILWAY.

WE observe that our critics seek to convict us of inconsistency because, writing nearly eight months ago, we said that rejection of the Municipalization of the Tokyo Railway would produce a serious debacle on the share market, whereas we now say that the refusal of the authorities "has already exercised a wholesome effect upon the share market." We doubt whether this criticism is seriously intended, for it must be obvious to the most casual observer that circumstances alter cases, and that what is true in December may not be true in the following July. There can be no manner of doubt that had the municipalization scheme been rejected in the fall of last year, a disastrous effect would have been produced on the share market, whereas, by postponing rejection until the market had in some degree recovered tone and elasticity, the danger was greatly lessened. But that is not all. If the quotations of the Company's shares have hardened in the presence of non-municipalization, it is not simply because the transfer of the property to the city has been vetoed, but because the veto is accompanied by a good prospect of fare-revision. Retention of the enterprise by the Company under a different schedule of fares, and the vetoing of municipalization without any change of the schedule, are two radically different things, as even the most obdurate of our critics must admit.

It is somewhat singular that the arithmetic of this problem seems to remain as obscure as ever to some observers. Even quotations which are public property escape their attention. Thus the Japan Herald alleges that the 85 yen which the municipality was asked to pay for each 50-yen share of the Company is "only 5 yen below the figure reached at the time of the boom on the stock market early in 1907." That is a grave error. The maximum quotation in January, 1907, was 115 yen, so that the price agreed to by the City was 30 yen, not 5, less than that maximum. Further, our contemporary says, "The price at which the Municipality was to take over the concern was an outrageous one," and "the interest the Municipality would have had to pay on the bonds was larger than the net profits of the concern." It will occur to the majority of observers that the Mayor of Tokyo, the aldermen, the committees of business-men appointed by them, and the City Assembly itself were not likely to have agreed to pay "an outrageous price" for any such property. Be that as it may, however, we perceive that our local contemporary still ignores some of the salient points of the account, and as the matter has direct interest for many of our readers, we offer a brief explanation.

The fare now paid by a tramway passenger is 5 sen, out of which 4 sen go to the Company and 1 sen is paid to the Government as transit tax. If the Municipality owned the Railway, no transit tax need be paid, and thus, without altering the present fare, the city would receive 5 sen. Now a 4 sen fare produces a daily revenue of sixteen thousand yen—we use approximate figures. Therefore a 5 sen fare would produce twenty thousand. Again, when the municipal purchase was discussed and arranged, the Company was paying a dividend of 8 per cent. on a capital of 35 million yen, and the running expenses absorbed about one-half of the gross earnings. Therefore we have a simple sum in proportion:—If a daily net revenue of 8,000 yen gives a dividend of 8 per cent., what dividend will be given by a daily net earning of 12,000 yen (namely, 8,000 plus 4,000, since the running expenses remain the same). The answer is 12 per cent. Now 12 per cent. on 35 million yen is 4,200,000 yen. Thus the City's receipts would be 4,200,000 yen, whereas the interest (6 per cent.) payable on the purchase price (65 millions) would have been 3,900,000 yen. What, then, becomes of the statement that "the interest the Municipality would have had to pay on the bonds was larger than the net profits of the concern"? Nor is that all. The Company has to hand to the City under the present charter one-third of the net earnings over 7% of the paid-up capital; it has to set aside every year a due amount for amortization, and it would have had to hand over to the Municipality all its unspent capital, a sum of some 5 million yen. All these factors go to improve the bargain from the City's point of view, without saying anything of the fact that the Municipality would have been in a position to raise the fares so as to relieve the City's financial straits. When these figures are considered, it will be agreed that neither the Railway Company, the Municipality, nor the Department of Home Affairs is justly chargeable with having proposed, accepted or sanctioned an "outrageous" bargain. There was nothing "outrageous" in the business, so far as we can discern. Owing to the depressed state of the money market the city had an opportunity of acquiring a valuable property on advantageous terms, but the Government has declined to sanction the arrangement for reasons which are not authoritatively stated.

THE FAKUMEN RAILWAY.

THE journalistic agitation about the Fakumen Railway in England is quite remarkable. Telegrams to the Shanghai Mercury—which journal seems now to have obtained a special and very excellent service of news—show that the Westminster Gazette, the Daily Chronicle, and the Standard all discuss the question in much the same spirit, and the interest of the matter has extended to France where Le Temps also comments on it. These journals may be said to be unanimous in their views. All maintain that Japan's action with regard to the Railway must be construed as a violation of the principle of the open door, and that it seems to indicate a determination on her part to develop the South Manchuria Railway and her own commerce with Manchuria at all hazards. It is hinted that an agitation is being fomented by influential persons and that the Foreign Office in London will shortly be approached on the subject. These journals insist that Japan must act up to the spirit not merely the letter of her engagements if she wishes to preserve the confidence of Western nations. All this shows that to touch the pocket of English capitalists is a very serious matter. It is not to be credited that any Western Power situated as Japan is in Manchuria would act differently. The chief, if not the only, asset accruing to this country in the sequel of one of the most tremendous and costly wars on record is the South Manchuria Railway and its associated properties. In return for the opportunity of developing her commerce by means of this line Japan saved for China the whole of the Three Eastern Provinces, which would otherwise have been inevitably added to Russia's dominions, and yet now the world cries out because China is not allowed to take a course which would largely depreciate the value of the South Manchuria Railway. Nevertheless public opinion has pronounced itself indubitably, and it now becomes a very serious question for Japan whether some sort of compromise would not entail less loss in the long run than she must inevitably suffer by adhering to her present position. This is the one really difficult problem of foreign politics which the outgoing Cabinet hands over to the incoming. Japan's treaty right is unquestionable, and every onlooker can see that China's game is to reduce to a minimum the profits derived by Japan from the Manchuria Railway and the leased territory, so that in a few years this country may be willing to step out of Manchuria altogether in consideration of very trifling compensation. No one can blame China for adopting such a policy. It is essentially an ungrateful policy. In fact no more flagrant example of ingratitude is to be found in the pages of history. But the obligations of gratitude do not count for much in the intercourse of States, above all in the case of a country which is labouring, as China now is, under the influence of a rights-recovery mania. It might be worth the while of European Powers to seriously consider the wisdom of fostering that mania by helping China to tear up her treaties, for there is not any room to doubt that the building of the Hsinmintun-Fakumen Railway is contrary to the terms of the Peking Treaty of 1905. No departure however small from her conventional obligations has ever been permitted to China by Great Britain, France, Germany or Russia, but it would seem that when European financial or commercial interests are likely to be affected, China's treaties with her Eastern neighbour are to be regarded as waste paper. It is a hard and manifestly unjust situation. If Baron Kōmura takes the portfolio of Foreign Affairs, he will have to approach this question at once and to determine whether compromise or consistency is the more profitable course.

THE BOOKSHELF.

The Truth About Port Arthur; by E. K. NOJINE; translated and abridged by Captain A. D. LINDSAY; edited by Major E. D. SWINTON, D.S.O. Mr. John Murray, Albemarle Street, London, W.

X This book in its original form was published in Russia in 1907, its author being an accredited war-correspondent who went through the greater part of the siege of Port Arthur. With his permission an English translation was made, but scarcely had it been finished when the decision to try by court-martial some of the senior officers who had conducted the defence became known, and it was accordingly resolved to postpone publication of the English version while the case was sub judice. The Translator and the Editor tell us in their preface that M. Nojine had exceptional facilities for collecting material "as he was all through in close contact with the fighting leaders of Port Arthur and had access to official documents and diaries." There is abundant evidence of the partial truth of this appreciation, for verbatim copies of many interesting despatches, telephonic communications and field orders are given in the book. But there is also evidence that the author allows his dramatic instincts to outweigh his historical morality. For again and again he gives verbatim reports of conversations at which he was not present and could not have been present. These reports disturb the confidence of the reader. He feels that he is perusing a romance rather than a conscientious record of facts. The truth appears to be that M. Nojine, for some motive which it is useless to conjecture, deliberately took a part, and devoted his undoubtedly great descriptive talent and literary ability to "writing up" that view of the situation. He applies himself diligently to demonstrate that Generals Stoessel and Fock were responsible for the demoralization of the garrison and the surrender of the fortress, whereas General Smirnov would have defended it successfully for at least a month longer. In proof of this many statements are made which sound almost, if not altogether, incredible, and, in the end, Smirnov himself perplexes us as much by his tame acquiescence in the suicidal result as do Stoessel, Fock and Reuss in the preliminary stages. What may be gathered confidently from the appalling narrative is that these last three officers were more or less overcome by their humane instincts, and that the strategical gains realizable by protracting the defence did not, in their opinion, balance the shocking sufferings entailed. What those sufferings were may be pretty clearly gathered from the narrative of M. Nojine himself. Speaking of the state of the hospitals in the month of December—that is to say, the month before the surrender—he says:—

Just glance at one of these 'infernos' in the month of December. Outside it is freezing; inside, in spite of the musty and sickening stench, the cold is intense. On all sides is filth, nothing but filth, and on it and amongst it crawl millions of grey lice. The silence is only broken by the sighs and groans of the sick and the hungry—for all in here are both sick and hungry. Death, the Liberator, is also here. He is in every corner, at the doors, at the windows, crawling along the floors and on to the bed boards; he envelops everything—and waits. At the front a man dies suddenly, and all is over. In the hospitals Death is fought. But here, everything is in his power—he only has to wait. Second after second, minute after minute, hour after hour, men pass into eternity, into oblivion. There are hundreds of cases of scurvy. They lie side by side on the floor, on the bedboards, underneath them, just as they were placed when they came in—some in great coats, some in tunics, some in miserable boots, some barefooted. The faces are shapeless, swollen, and distorted, and upon the yellow skin are large dark blue bruises. The swollen gums, covered with hideous sores, project out of many grinning mouths, and show the lack of teeth, which are continuously falling out. . . . Here, far away from their friends and relations, forgotten by all, in horrible, complete consciousness, they are silently waiting the end.

Was such a state of affairs compatible with continued resistance? It is true that in the immediate sequel of this harrowing recital we read:—"And to think that much of this suffering might have been spared these men had the Medical Service been properly organized, had the highest authorities done their duty, instead of busying themselves writing orders. Things would not have been so bad even if Stoessel had confirmed the resolution of the Council of War about the killing of horses on Dec. 8th. Feeding the garrison on horse flesh and white bread would at once have checked the growth of the disease; and there were more than 3,000 horses and 3,000,000 lbs. of flour in the fortress." Why did Stoessel refuse? That is just what we are not told. In short, from first to last, Stoessel's reasons are nowhere exposed. His acts alone are related, and always in such a way as to reflect seriously on his judgment and his competence. Therefore the story strikes one as being essentially partial. But, read as it stands, it constitutes a crushing indictment of Stoessel and his fellow-thinkers, and, after all, this verdict has been confirmed by a court martial in Russia. Only one essential link is wanting in the chain of hostile evidence: it has never been shown that Stoessel had any grounds for estimating the importance of postponing capitulation. If he had known the state of things in the north; if he had known that by keeping the flag flying over Port Arthur for another month, he would have postponed by a corresponding period the attack upon the Russian lines at Mukden, and that during that month the lines would have been materially strengthened, it can scarcely be doubted that he would have stifled his sentiments of humanity. But he did not know. There is no evidence that Kuropatkin managed to communicate with the fortress during the final and fateful month. So little did the hard-pressed garrison know of what was going on outside that almost until the very end they cherished hopes of relief from the north. Ought Stoessel to have divined the truth? That must remain a matter of opinion until and unless much fuller evidence is available.

Caracteres Ideographiques, par A. BOURGOIS. Yokohama, Kelly & Walsh; Tokyo, Sanscisha.

FOLLOWING M. Lemarçhal's admirable "Dictionnaire Japonais-Français," which is remarkable for fullness of matter and happiness of definitions, M. Bourgois has just published a volume designed to aid students of the ideographs and to serve at the same time as a lexicon. The method adopted by the learned author is to arrange the characters according to their radicals; a procedure which at first sight seems to place some difficulties in the way of the user of the work, but, after all, anyone who seriously sets himself to study the Chinese ideographs must commence by learning the radicals. That is an absolute necessity, and when once the radicals have been acquired, it is almost as easy to employ them for purposes of reference as it is to use the alphabetical order. For the rest, each ideograph has its sino-Japanese pronunciation (on) placed first; then its pure Japanese sound (kun), and then its meaning, is given briefly and succinctly.

An asterisk is prefixed to each character in common use, and 2,350 are thus indicated, it being agreed by scholars that that number suffice for purposes of every-day business. The book appears to us to be well conceived and carried out with great care and profound research. It should be invaluable to any one desirous of acquiring the ideographs.

Rinri to Kyōiku (Ethics and Education). By Dr. INOUE TATSUJIRO. Kōdōkwan, Tōkyō. Price 1 yen 50 sen.

This book, covering 630 pages, consists of short essays or articles which have already appeared in various magazines, carefully edited by the author. Dr. Inoue's views on religion, ethics and education have in past years been so frequently brought to the notice of readers of the Japan Daily Mail that I shall content myself with reproducing in an epitomized form only such remarks of the learned Doctor as have not been given in these columns. The work is divided into 32 chapters, each chapter being subdivided into from 5 to 10 parts. The style is semi-colloquial and lucid to a rare degree everywhere. The subjects treated embrace almost everything connected with the progress of modern Japan. The tone of the writing is serious throughout. Dr. Inoue writes like a man who feels he has a mission. His language is didactic everywhere. The book is probably intended to be used by students and school teachers principally, to whom Dr. Inoue has a great deal to say on ethical and educational subjects.

Writing on religion, Dr. Inoue says that it differs from ethics in that it can not go hand in hand with science as ethics do. Religion can never be regarded as so universally binding on mankind as is morality. Great materialistic writers like Haeckel, while rejecting religion, support morality. But in that religion satisfies to some extent some of the higher aspirations of certain minds, it has always commanded homage among mankind and it always will do so. Between religion and superstition there is no distinguishable radical difference, Dr. Inoue thinks. In the progress which thought undergoes the teaching that has been rejected men call superstition; that which remains they call religion. As regards the future of religion Dr. Inoue predicts that sectarianism will go, and that religious teaching will be wholly ethical on the broad lines laid down by Japanese and Western moralists.

In the teaching of morality in schools, in addition to the help given by science and philosophy, the help of religion is often needed, Dr. Inoue thinks, but he is in favour of only relying on the native creeds for this help and not introducing foreign religion.

Writing on social intercourse between the sexes, Dr. Inoue would restrict it in this country to ladies and gentlemen. He is careful to guard the Japanese term dunjo kōsai from the obvious misconception to which with vulgar minds it lies exposed. He recommends that great care be taken in introducing Western customs relating to intercourse between the sexes here. He points out that social intercourse between the sexes is on an entirely different footing in England, Germany, France and America. He thinks that the highest ideal is reached in England. Germany, he considers, stands next to England. France follows at a long distance off, and America is too far removed from Japan's way of thinking to furnish a model for imitation. That in the introduction of foreign customs here great care is needed was illustrated some years ago by the evils that followed the sudden adoption of the foreign way of dancing. Education alone can prepare the Japanese girl for high class social intercourse with members of the opposite sex, and that education is now being imparted. Hitherto the Japanese girl has been too backward, but in educating her care must be taken not to make her too forward.

As regards the morality of future Japan, Dr. Inoue thinks it will be a compound of the individualism of the West and the patriaralism and national solidarity inherited from Japanese ancestors. That the blending of the two principles is possible Dr. Inoue entertains no doubt, having himself witnessed the actual process going on in certain cases.

When writing on the Tōkyō Imperial University, Dr. Inoue speaks out boldly on the evils which its connection with the Mombushō have caused and advocates the establishment of this great seat of learning on an entirely independent basis. That learning is superior to politics no thinking man doubts, observes Dr. Inoue. Politics and learning should be kept quite separate from each other here as they are in the West. That outside officials should be at liberty to dictate to University Professors what they should teach is preposterous. It seems that interference with the University on political grounds or for political objects is perpetual, and this indicates, Dr. Inoue thinks, that learning in this country has not yet reached the dignified position it holds in Western countries. (Sore de tokidoki no Naikaku no tsugō ni yotte, ayete midari ni Daigaku ni kanshō suru to iu koto wa, kono gakumon no songen ni kwankei shite kuru. Sh-shite sono kekkuwa gakumon no songen (尊嚴) ni bujoku wo atayasu to iu koto ni natte kuru.) Many of the Ministers of Education, Dr. Inoue tells us, are totally ignorant of University affairs, and still they venture to interfere with the management of the institution. This has been a long standing grievance for which a remedy ought to be found.*

Dr. Inoue has a great deal to say in praise of the Bushidō, most of which is perfectly familiar to readers of this journal. He affirms that there is no scholarly opposition to the system. Here he ventures to think he is wrong. I have repeatedly read very scholarly articles such as those written by men like Dr. K. Ukita, for instance, pointing out how essentially feudal and hence defective the system of morals known as Bushidō actually is. A very good article in English appeared on this subject a few months ago in an Episcopal magazine edited by the Rev. R. Cho'mondeley, which shows conclusively how exaggerated are many of the statements made by enthusiasts like Dr. Nitobe on the Bushidō. What place this system of morality will occupy in Japan's future ethical standard it is at present difficult to determine. In a modified and improved form it may survive. Dr. Inoue is confident that it will do so.

Dr. Inoue's book contains an interesting chapter (Chap. XII) on "Mental Distress and Culture." In this he deals in a thorough manner with the great importance attached to the development of will power and the obstacles that young men especially encounter in this kind of self culture. In Part I of this chapter he enumerates five separate causes for the mental distress and perplexity from which serious-minded young men suffer so much nowadays. Some of these are the result of the sudden changes which have taken place in modern Japan, which have naturally bewildered the minds of certain young men. Modern iconoclasm has destroyed the authority of old moral and religious creeds and not a few young men are like ships which have left an old anchorage and are drifting hither and thither in search of a new one.

In Chapter XI and Chapter XIX Dr. Inoue gives us a very interesting account of a most remarkable man who died at the age of 71 in 1857, Ninomiya Kinjirō, whose nom de plume was Sontoku. He was the author of four interesting works, namely the Hōtoku ki, 報徳記, the Yawa (Night Talks), the Hōtoku Gwai-ki (外記) and the Goroku 語錄. Sontoku Dr. Inoue pronounces to have been different from any scholar whom Japan has produced. Like Kimazawa Banzan he was as great a moralist as an economist. But his views on economy had none of the drawbacks which characterized those of Banzan. Sontoku was an entirely self-made man. He started in life as the son of a poor peasant and enjoyed no educational advantages whatever. He had no instructor, no guide in the path of learning. What knowledge he acquired was obtained by reading and keen observation. The style of the Hōtoku ki is very superior and its contents remind one constantly of the language of the Four Gospels, observes Dr. Inoue. The Yawa and Goroku were written in imitation of the Rongo, like other moral treatises published in China and Japan. Dr. Inoue discusses at some length Sontoku's views on Good and Evil. Like Hobbes and Buzo Sorai (1666-1728), the Japanese philosopher who was one of the founders of the Kōgakuha, and, I may add, like some modern scientists, Sontoku held that in nature there is neither good nor evil. Sontoku pointed out in the clearest manner that the terms good and bad as used of natural phenomena must not be understood as representing inherent qualities or characteristics in the things or processes to which these terms are applied, but as expressing simply the manner in which man regards natural phenomena. The point of view of the persons who use such terms is invariably narrow. The farmer calls the rain good when he needs it for his crops and the pleasure seeker condemns the weather as bad when it interferes with his pleasure. Things that hinder men from realizing their purposes are pronounced to be bad, though they occur in obedience to nature's unchangeable laws and form a part of the great scheme of the universe which was not determined on to suit man's comfort or convenience. In Sontoku's Wayu this is very clearly and philosophically pointed out. He protests against the idea that man is the measure of all things, that is, like G. Gore and other writers on scientific morality, he attacks and destroys anthropocentric and anthropolatric dogmas and shows that nature's way is not our way. Human life and human comfort are nothing to her. Dr. Inoue rightly considers that it is very remarkable that a man who had no academic or private training of any kind, who was no more than a self-taught peasant should have discerned so clearly and expounded so ably the true nature of good and evil and the entire absence of both qualities in nature. With what Dr. Inoue says in opposition to Dr. Katō's remarks on Sontoku's views I do not agree. I think that the two passages he quotes from Sontoku:—Shizen ni okonawaru kore Tenri nari. Tenri ni shita gau to iedomo, mata jini wo motte okonau wo jindō to iu and Tendō wa shizen nari; jindō wa Tendō ni shitagau to iedomo mata jini nari must be so interpreted as not to contradict what Sontoku says in an earlier part of the Yawa. There he declares that man can not learn what is right and what is wrong from observing the working of nature's laws only. In the passages quoted above, the term nature seems to me to be used in a different sense, in a more restricted sense, but I have no space here to discuss the subject thoroughly.

Dr. Inoue devotes a chapter to a discussion of Dr. Katō's views on certain ethical questions. The two philosophers have for years past been in opposite camps. The fundamental difference in their views has several times been pointed out by me in these columns.

Dr. Inoue's book closes with 12 moral precepts addressed to students and 15 to primary school teachers. Students are warned against disgracing themselves by over-drinking and advised to abstain from liquor altogether if they can. In none of these precepts does Dr. Inoue go to extremes. They are an embodiment of the common-sense morality which is taught in the majority of Japanese schools to-day. In both sets of precepts self-culture and the pursuit of high ideals are enjoined as far more important than anything else. The observance of Dr. Inoue's precepts could not but produce a very fine type of humanity. W.D.

Count Gallina, Italian Ambassador, who will shortly leave for home, having resigned his post, had audience of the Emperor at 11.30 a.m. on July 6th at the Palace, presenting his letter of resignation to His Majesty. The Ambassador and Countess Gallina were afterwards received by the Empress. At noon on the same day, Count and Countess Gallina were entertained at the Homei Hall in the Palace, Prince and Princess Kan-in, Prince and Princess Higashi Fushimi and a number of high officials being present.

THE LAW COURTS.

THE "AGENOR" CASE.

Judgment was delivered on July 8th in the Tokyo Appeal Court in the case of A. Lewis and C. A. Hill, charged with having wrecked the sailing vessel Agenor and with committing fraud. The Court sat at 10.30 a.m.

Judge Nakajima stated that the appeal must be dismissed. As to the grounds of the dismissal he said that it was proved that Lewis had committed fraud. In connexion with this crime, Lewis and Hill jointly wrecked the sailing vessel Agenor. These facts were proved by the statements of several witnesses and by various letters produced in Court. Considering all the facts from a legal point of view he held that the fact of obtaining money by false pretences falls within the purview of Clause 1 of Arts 390 and 394 of the Penal Code. The second act, the scuttling of the sailing vessel, comes within the scope of Art. 415 of the same Code. The sentence of the Appeal Court regarding punishment—penal servitude for life—confirmed the finding of the Yokohama District Court, where the accused were first tried and sentenced.

With regard to the civil case filed by Messrs Sale and Frazar, Judge Nakajima said that the accused were held liable for the loss of the cargo, 13,023 bags of wheat. From the cost of the grain, must be deducted yen 15,213.53 standing to the credit of Lewis in his deposit account with the firm, and yen 30,007.06 which Messrs. Sale and Frazar received from Lloyds as a portion of the insurance: when these sums are deducted a total remains of yen 22,778.31. The defendants are ordered to pay this to the firm.

The Judge further said that the accused might appeal against the present judgment if they were dissatisfied with it. A grace of three days for appeal was allowed.

The Public Prosecutor said that as the result of the present judgment, the bail of Hill was cancelled and he would be removed to Tokyo Jail. Thereupon the Public Prosecutor handed a warrant to a policeman who had already been summoned to the Court.

According to Mr. Hiraoka, one of the Counsel for the defence, the accused will lodge an appeal to-day, July 9th, in the Court of Cassation.

THE P. & O. CO.'S HALF-YEARLY REPORT.

The following is a summary of the 135th half-yearly report of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company:—

The tonnage stands at 416,891 tons. Several of the Company's cargo steamers are laid up at present owing to lack of employment. The express steamer Salsette will be delivered by the builders in the course of next month (July), and will take her departure for India in October. On arrival at Bombay she will assume her station on the Aden-Bombay mail line. The "M" mail ships, which are being built by Messrs Caird and Co., and Barclay, Curle and Co., respectively, are advancing rapidly, and it is intended that the Morea shall be included in the autumn programme of sailings, the Mahua and Mantua following on somewhat later. The troopship season closed sooner than usual this year, and the five vessels engaged in this work are at present laid up in Southampton Water. The Revenue returns for the half year, as compared with the corresponding period of last year, have been maintained, but with an increase in expenditure, owing to the enhanced cost of fuel beyond the point which had previously been reached. The passenger traffic has been unfavourably affected by two distinct causes: First, by a falling off in the ordinary winter tourist traffic, owing presumably to the financial crisis in the United States; and in the second place by a loss of business on the Egyptian line, due to a dull season, and to extreme competition in that quarter. There has been, however, a fair advance in the Australian passenger receipts. Without exception, freights have been adverse during the last six months, throughout the sphere of the Company's operations, and at the present moment business, both export and import, particularly in the Indian trade, has fallen to a very low level, with little apparent prospect of an early revival. It may be considered satisfactory that so far as the half-year up to the end of March is concerned, there has not been an actual decline in the freight earnings, but the outlook for the rest of the year, it must be frankly said, is not encouraging.

* Since the words quoted were penned, a remedy has been found. The Imperial University is now practically independent of the Department of Education, I am told.

MONTHLY SUMMARY OF JAPANESE
CURRENT LITERATURE.

Last month we reproduced the substance of four articles that appeared in the Yoroshu Chishō entitled "Our Attitude to Occidentals," written by a Japanese residing in England who signs himself "Kwazan-sei." We now proceed to give the gist of the remaining three articles. "The West has love, but no respect; the East has respect, but no love" is the title of Art. V. of the Series we are epitomizing. This generalization must not be pushed too far, but on the whole it is true, says "Kwazan-sei." Since all depends on love in the West, the married couple become the centre of everything in society. But in the East respect being the predominant sentiment, all revolves around the parent, the master and the lord. There are radical differences between the sentiments of parents towards children and of children towards parents in the East and the West. The children in our country sleep in the same room with their parents and pass the day on the same mats as those occupied by their parents. In the West children in their younger days occupy nurseries. They have bedrooms of their own, where their cries do not reach the mother's ears. In many cases the parents go off to the theatre or to a concert or to a dinner-party and the children are left at home to take care of the house. In Japan this is quite different: the children are usually taken to theatres and to yose along with their parents. In the West they have societies for preventing cruelty to children. In Japan we are in need of a society for preventing the indulgence of children. Foreigners are fond of saying that we are polygamists, we might retort by saying that the tendency in the West is for one woman to marry one man after another. Women of 40 or 50 who marry here are rare, but in the West they are very common. The free way in which marriages are arranged by the parties concerned without the interference of relations facilitates the contracting of all sorts of unnatural alliances. The fact is that there are far too many women for the men in most countries of the West. The forwardness of certain women astonishes us. The brazen-faced way in which women will go into court and, in order to obtain money for breach of promise, the readiness with which they will refer openly to the number of times they have been kissed or listen to the reading before large audiences of the love-letters they have received is a shock to our sense of feminine propriety. All this and the scandalous revelations made by foreign women in Divorce Courts plainly show that Western women and Eastern women are as far apart as the poles.

In Art. VII. the impossibility of Japan's slavishly following foreign customs is insisted on. Foreign dancing introduced into Japan was found to lead to abuses. In the matter of present-giving Japan goes to extremes, says "Kwazan-sei." The occasions on which it is customary to give presents in the West are few. But among Japanese the obligations in this matter are very onerous. Japanese who have relations with foreigners often fail to take notice of the difference of customs as to present-giving between East and West, and consequently they make handsome presents in a way that greatly embarrasses their recipients. Our diplomats, if report be true, use the money allowed by the Government for entertainments very indiscreetly. With us Japanese lavish expenditure over things that fail to make a great impression on Europeans is all too common. Failure to look at things with the eyes of foreigners involves us in much fruitless expenditure.

In the last article "Kwazan-sei" alludes to Baron Kaneko's remarks on the Bushido to President Roosevelt. The Baron predicted that this system of morality would soon become popular in America. Dr. Kikuchi's observations in England on the Imperial Rescript are cited also. The ideas entertained by these scholars on the reception Japanese thought is likely to receive in the West display profound ignorance of the state of feeling and opinion in America and England. Anybody who knows the Americans well would ridicule the notion that Bushido precepts or principles will find favour with the Americans.

And nothing could be more ridiculous than Dr. Kikuchi's expectation that our Japanese Imperial Rescript on Education will ever exercise the faintest influence on English thought and opinion, in either education or morals. To say that in the conception of Europeans that Oriental document will henceforth rank with the 10 Commandments which Christians observe is to show ignorance of the convictions of Europeans. No proclamation of King Edward VII. even would ever be regarded as equally binding on Christians as the 10 Commandments. Loyalty to God is conceived of as far higher than loyalty to a monarch. There is no country in Europe where our Imperial Rescript on Education would be found capable of application at all. Even if it could be applied, it would certainly be universally rejected by Christian countries. Dr. Kikuchi's idea that Englishmen are prepared to exalt our Japanese Imperial Rescript to the level of the Bible, the Creed and the Ten Commandments shows how superficial is his acquaintance with the deeper thoughts of Englishmen. The Imperial Rescript was framed to suit opinion on education and morality in Japan, but neither its wording nor its underlying principles can be understood or appreciated by ordinary Englishmen. Europeans will not imbibe Oriental thought in the easy way that Dr. Kikuchi seems to anticipate. The anti-oriental spirit is still strong in most Western countries (Ima mo narete Seiyō wa Tōyō no mono wa iyashimite, kore wa haisen to su) Europeans are confident that their ways, their civilization, their religion and morality are superior to anything we have.* That the West is in a mood to sit at the feet of the East and learn its ways is the wildest of chimeras. Our scholars and our diplomats must not allow themselves to be deceived by the flattering remarks of a few pro-Japanese enthusiasts. Conservatism is written on English institutions. English convictions and English thought. "Kwazan-sei's" seventh article concludes with the expression of dissatisfaction with the terms of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance as it now stands. England's interests are so much greater than those of Japan that it does not seem fair to expect Japan to back England all over the world when England can only possibly be called on to help Japan in the Far East, observes this writer. It seems to us that there is no real cause for the anxiety he expresses. One of these Powers would certainly not insist on helping the other unless requested to do so. "Kwazan-sei" says that it would be distasteful to Japan to rely on England for help against a Power that she could fight and overcome unaided. She need have no anxiety on that score. In such a case England would not interfere. Neither does the English Government contemplate relying on Japanese help in India even should she be engaged in a big war there, to say nothing of Europe. The two nations can be trusted to interpret the provisions of the Alliance in a common-sense way. Its existence is a guarantee of peace. That it will ever be put into operation is most unlikely. It is not by any means the only alliance whose written articles seem to promise more than could in certain conceivable contingencies be converted into realities.

We regard it as somewhat of a misfortune that the Taiyō has taken to the practice of filling its pages with the reports of speeches, reproduced just as they were taken down by the stenographer. Many of these speeches make tedious reading. They are unnecessarily long. The monotonous colloquial endings of sentences, a great deal of repetition, the commonplace character of many of the observations made and other drawbacks disqualify these compositions to rank as fairly high class literature. One has only to compare them with Mr. Toyabe Shuntai's classical prose to see how unworthy they are to occupy prominent places in a first class magazine. Only a very few Japanese speeches will bear reporting in full as they are delivered. With the majority the pruning knife needs to be used freely. In these busy days few people want to wade through 10 or 12 pages of the Taiyō in order to find out what Mr. Ōishi, Mr. B. Nakano, Mr. Shimada, or Mr. Ebara thinks on any given subject. The June Taiyō is full of speeches. Dr. Hatoyama leads off with an address on "Japanese National Policy," followed by Mr. S. Ebara, whose subject is "The Spirit of the Rising Nation." Next comes Mr. M. Ōishi's speech on "Diplomacy and Finance," followed by that of Mr. M. Katō on "The Present State of Finance." Messrs. Nakano, S. Ōhashi and Shimada bring up the rear of the long cavalcade with lengthy discourses on three separate subjects. The speakers all seem to be anti-Government, with the single exception of Dr. Hatoyama, whose recent change of camp rubs his utterances of the weight that might have otherwise been attached to them. Several of the speeches in the June number of the Taiyō are incomplete. Owing to great length they appear in pieces in successive numbers of the Magazine. This is the case with Mr. Shimada Saburō's discourse on "A New Era in our National Activity." Mr. Shimada seems to believe that the whole nation is about to take a lively interest in politics and to realize what representative government signifies. Hitherto political parties only have wrangled over the various lines of policy or the various programmes that have formed subjects of discussion, but now, says Mr. Shimada, the situation has changed and the people are beginning to constitute themselves a court of appeal where plaintiffs and defendants may endeavour to show which have the most right on their side. In the course of his speech Mr. Shimada touched on a great many subjects. We will content ourselves with recording here in the briefest way possible a few of his opinions. His views demand attention, as he is one of Japan's oldest politicians and a man who has figured conspicuously as a journalist and a member of the House of Representatives from the birth of the Diet to the present day. He undoubtedly has many admirers in this country. Japan can be quite sure of at least 10 years of peace, says Mr. Shimada, so there is not the slightest reason for the large increase of armaments on account of which the nation is being so heavily taxed. The existence of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance for the next 10 years is Mr. Shimada's reason for concluding that peace is assured for this period. England's requiring Japanese help on the Indian frontier is regarded as a most improbable contingency that is hardly worth considering. Coming to Russia's outlook as it bears on Japan, Mr. Shimada points out that the large sums of money that have to be paid to France and Germany within the next few years and the necessity of large outlays on the Army will certainly stand in the way of the rapid creation of a new and powerful fleet. Then France's new relations to Japan and France's relations to Russia will tend to prevent Russia's wishing to attack Japan. Notwithstanding the existence of this peaceful outlook, Japan has increased her Army from 13 divisions to 19 and her fleet from 350,000 tons to about 550,000 tons. In many particulars Japan's recent history resembles that of England in the last century when she was suffering from the effects of a series of wars. But there is this great difference, whereas England showed herself to be strong in war she showed herself to be equally strong in the manner in which she adjusted her finances in time of peace, but Japan is utterly weak when it comes to finance, so much so that there is hardly any guarantee that she can maintain financial independence at all (Nihon wa bu ni oite tsuyoku shite, keizaiyoku ni oite hanakada yowaku, hotondo deokurisu no keizai teki seiryoku ga nai to iwanakereba naranu) When England has had big wars on, she has all along been able to borrow money at a low rate of interest from her own people. It was not so with us in the late war. Had America and England been unwilling to lend us money, we should have been compelled to sue for peace within a few months of our declaration of war. Nobody can affirm that this is an enviable position for a country to occupy, yet it seems to give our statesmen little concern. Is it to be supposed that England's navy would be feared as it is feared were her finances in the state that ours are to-day? England's financial strength was displayed a few years ago by the ease with which she provided the large sum of money required to send to a distant seat of war and maintain there for several years 300,000 men. Her own people did it all and did it quite easily. The mere increase of armaments is no adequate preparation for war. The sinews of war we don't possess to-day. What would be the effect on our future of further heavy foreign loans is something we can not contemplate without alarm. What is the use of a country's possessing big armaments without possessing the financial strength to use these armaments in case of necessity? No publicist who looks beneath the surface can regard our present position with unconcern. Were anything serious to occur, all our public bonds would go down to a very low figure. To raise further big loans either at home or abroad would prove an impossibility. We should certainly be financially stranded. To move the big army we have created and make efficient use of it would become impracticable. It is quite plain that we are attempting something that we have not the means of carrying through. Immediate drastic retrenchment is the only way out of the financial difficulties into which we have been led by the mistaken policy of the Government and the servility of the Seiyūkai, without whose support the Government could never have committed the big blunders which have marked its administration since it came into power. Supported by this worthless Party, the Government has appropriated all the most lucrative businesses in the country and so far has managed most of them badly. The potentialities of the nation have been thus weakened, while heavy war taxes are still levied with a merciless hand. If ever there was a time when the voice of the nation should make itself heard it is now. The situation is grave and demands immediate attention.

* This is undoubtedly the belief of the majority of Europeans. In an article that appeared in the Spectator on May 16th on "The Unrest of Asia" we find the words:—"That we of Europe are the superiors we all believe firmly; but we assume too readily that this superiority is acknowledged, and are at once too confused and too presumptuous as to its ultimate reasons." Belief in his superiority seems to be a part of the Christian's creed that clings to him even after much else has gone. (WRITER OF SUMMARY.)

Mr. S. Fukumoto contributes to the Tuiyō an article on foreign Universities, in which the leading characteristics of Oxford and Cambridge are dwelt on. Dr. Miyoshi, Professor of Botany at the Imperial University, gives an account of travels through tropical regions.

There is one rather striking fact connected with the opinions of some of Japan's greatest students of foreign literature and that is that they remain conservative in some cases after years of study. Dr. Inoue Tetsujirō is regarded by his fellow-countrymen as a conservative. Dr. N. Ariga is evidently a scholar of the same class. In the June number of the Tetsugaku Zasshi we find a long essay from his pen entitled Nihon Kokumin no Seishinjō no Gimon written to demonstrate that the Japanese mind has in some important respects deteriorated as a result of foreign influences. The first part of the essay is historical. It shows in a clear and interesting way how for many centuries reverence for the Emperors was always connected with reverence for the gods. The Emperor's authority was great because it represented the authority of personages who were regarded as greater than himself. With the introduction of Buddhism and Confucianism this sentiment was considerably weakened, leading eventually to the usurpation of authority that belonged to the Imperial family by Shōguns. When at the beginning of the Meiji era supreme authority was again restored to the Emperor, attempts were made to revive in the nation the old belief in Shintōism, the old reverence for the throne based on theocracy. But these attempts mostly ended in failure owing to the power of certain modern influences. The granting of the Constitution, the introduction of foreign learning, the propagation of Christianity and extensive intercourse with other countries combined together to weaken the belief that the human authority wielded by the Emperor rests on Divine authority. Dr. Ariga writes regretfully of the change in sentiment that came over the nation and he seems to think that the State Absolutism which in recent years has been preached by certain politicians is distinctly inferior to the Imperial absolutism which had the authority of the gods as its basis. There was a time when to be a Japanese was to accept the teaching of the Kannushi in reference to the establishment of the Japanese State, when to reject Shintōism was regarded as impossible as denying history. (Nihon no Kokumin ni tote wa Shinto wa shinjū, shinjinai no ron de nai.) But since Shintō has been regarded as on a level with other religions, which can be accepted or rejected at will by Japanese subjects, the old theocratic basis of our State authority has gone, and to me it seems, says Dr. Ariga, that modern attempts to find a suitable substitute for this basis have signally failed. When men thought that in serving the State they were serving the gods they served it gladly and made great sacrifices from religious motives. But now this feeling exists no longer. The State Absolutism which is taught in this country to-day is opposed by all those who, like the late Mr. Fukuzawa, preach individualism and independence as a fundamental ethical principle. The Mita system of ethics is founded on self-respect and independence. In this system each individual's moral standard is settled by himself or herself, and it goes without saying that State Absolutism becomes impossible. Dr. Ariga proceeds to point out the defects of the State Absolutism now in vogue in this country in the following terms. (1) The morality of the State Absolutism is shallow.—For a State to say that there is nothing above it, nothing more to be feared or to be revered, for it to constitute itself the final court of appeal in moral matters produces an unfavourable impression on the subjects of the empire, since the men who represent the State lack the qualities which inspire awe or reverence. A State must be able to appeal to something higher than itself in order to establish its claim to supreme authority in moral matters. Down to the fourth or fifth year of Meiji it was customary to rest State authority on something that seemed higher than it, but this practice has been discontinued.

(2) State Absolutism as a moral basis is too narrow to suit the present age.—Japan's foreign relations are extending. She is trying to govern Korea. Now in her relations with other Powers and with alien peoples she needs something to appeal to beyond her own authority.

(3) State Absolutism as it exists in Japan to-day is certainly opposed in principle to Constitutional Government.—There are Western countries where though the monarch is absolute in theory representative Government is carried on. The Emperor of Germany, for example, rules for the most part despotically. But with other countries, though there may be crowned heads, it is the people who are ruling. One of the reasons why our new form of Government does not work well is that in principle it is opposed to the State Absolutism which has been put in the place of the old theocratic absolutism. That in this country people's minds are bewildered in respect to the ultimate basis of authority is unquestionable. When it was steadfastly believed that Emperors were God's viceregent, they were obeyed willingly, but men are asking to-day whence the State derives its authority and the answers they receive are by no means calculated to silence doubt or allay anxiety.

In the Tō-Zai Nam-Boku we find an article written by Viscount Sone on the development of Korea in which he says that the notion that agriculture is very backward in Korea is not correct. There is practically no uncultivated land in the peninsula. In ploughing the Koreans are ahead of the Japanese, often using 3 oxen for one plough. Viscount Sone says that the Koreans have very good laws of their own and that it is only the administration that needs improving. He thinks that great care will be needed in starting new enterprises in that country. Some of those projected by Japanese seem ill suited to the conditions found in Korea.

* There is a note of alarm in all this. It is not State Absolutism only but State Socialism following on the top of it that Dr. Ariga and his fellow-thinkers regard with fear.—(WRITER OF SUMMARY.)

The Tō-Zai Nam-Boku being of the nature of a Japanese Review of Reviews, it quotes pointed extracts from various papers and magazines on sundry topics. Here are a few specimens. In the Shinfunjin (New Woman). Mr. S. Kanda writes as follows on the fundamental difference between filial piety as conceived of in this country and as conceived of in Europe and America. In the West, says Mr. Katō, for a child to become independent and make a name for itself is deemed the best way of displaying affection for parents. That being the opinion of parents, they place no obstacles in the way of the children who do this, nor do they expect to be supported by the children in after-life. But here in Japan children are supposed to exist principally for the sake of their parents. If educated, it is that they may be better able to support their parents. If it happens that during the process of their education parents need their attendance, they are removed from school abruptly. The view here is that out of gratitude for their maintenance during the early years of childhood, children must serve their parents all through life. Animals rear their offspring without exacting such heavy payment in return for kindness shown. For the parent to expect to be maintained by grown-up children should not be regarded as virtue, as it is here. Virtue only exists when children of their own accord from pure affection for their parents provide for them in old age (Yūe ni sodateru on ni taishite, mukui wo motomeru to iu koto wa, oya no hō kara mite wa futoku de aru; ko no hō kara susunde okonau koso, hajimete bitoku to naru koto o omou.)

In No. 38 of the Fūsoku Gwahō Mr. J. Yamashita writes: The notion that we Japanese first learnt how to use cannons from the Portuguese is not correct. According to Western books of reference the Chinese were the first to invent gunpowder. Its use began in the 12th century. According to a statement in the Nelson Encyclopedia recently published, cannons were first used in naval warfare in 1346. But according to remarks on this subject found in two Japanese accounts of the Mongolian invasion, which took place in 1281, that of the Mōko Shōgunki Bengi and the Hachinan Mōko-ki, cannons of a rough kind were certainly used by the Mongol Tartars on that occasion. The following passage, which is worth quoting in the original, conclusively shows this:—Teppō tote, tetsugwan ni hi wo tsutsumu de, hage-shiku tobasu. Atatte waruru toki, shūhō ni kwan hodobashirite, kemori wo motte kuramasu. Mata sono oto hanahada takakereba, kokoro wo mayowashi, kimo wo keshi, me kure, mimi futagarite (fusagarite) Tō-sai wo shirazu naru. Kore ga tame utaruru mono ikari. (On this account the number of people who were hit was large). From a still earlier period than that referred to in the passage quoted the Chinese and the Arabs used an explosive consisting of a compound of saltpetre and stone ground small. The gunpowder now in general use dates from about the middle of the 13th century. That used by the Mongol-Tartars was evidently of a very rough kind.

In the Shinkōron Dr. K. Katayama, writing on "Drinking and Colonization," affirms that abstemious colonists are far more successful than those who are known as drinkers. The German love of beer has been a hindrance to German colonization, according to this writer. The Japanese who have settled in Korea and Manchuria are far greater drinkers than their fellow-countrymen at home. Dr. Katayama tells us. (Inshu no heigai ga naichi ni sūbai seru wa Man-Kan wo junyū shita hito wa kanarazu kono akushikwan wo jikken shite oru koto o omou.) This fact does not attract the attention of the world, it may be, but that it constitutes an obstacle in the way of the success of Japanese colonization is beyond dispute, says Dr. Katayama.

Dr. G. Miwada, writing in the Fujin Sekai affirms that Japanese girls of the present day are far too fond of making excuses for small failings. It seems to come from conceit. A boy, says Dr. Miwada, when reproved by his teacher either does not reply at all or acknowledges himself to be blameworthy, but a girl will try to make out that her neglect was caused by some circumstance which she could not control.

The sense of shame in some girls seems to be developed to a silly extent, says Dr. Miwada.

The To-Zai-Nam-Boku on July 1st appeared in the form of a newspaper. The new series opens with an article from Count Okuma on the desirability of introducing new blood in the body politic. Here is the gist of what he has to say on this subject:—I rejoice to see that a number of young men entered the Diet at the last Election. This is a hopeful sign. There is a great need for new energy throughout the country to-day—not energy displayed in speaking and writing as much as spirit shown in the actual transaction of business. To commit all the affairs of state and the business of the world to the management of old fogies is the way to ruin the country. The great changes in the early days of the Meiji era were effected by young men. There are lots of people to-day who profess to be able to teach young men how to succeed. With numbers of noisy preachers success is exalted beyond everything else, and the kind of success that is held up before young men is by no means a high class article. It is a mistake, says Count Okuma, to be prating so much about success. Let young men begin by failure. It will teach them wholesome lessons. Young men who fear failure will accomplish little. "Success" in the sense in which the word is used by most people to-day simply means the accumulation of wealth. We do not want American money-worship introduced here. Let young men strive to be energetic and let them strengthen their will power and they will accomplish great things, even though poor.

The To-Zai-Nam-Boku is henceforth to appear twice in the month, on the 1st and 15th instant. The extracts from various publications which appear in the first number of the new series seem to us excellently chosen and there is probably no fortnightly newspaper in existence in this country which supplies such a large variety of matter for so sen as that contained in the To-Zai-Nam-Boku.

* * *

In the June Chūō Kōron Mr. Kamada Eikichi, President of the Keiōgijuku, points out that there is some danger of Japan's overdoing her preparations for the Exhibition of 1912. Countries like Italy and Switzerland that have laid themselves out to please tourists have suffered much therefrom. The inhabitants of these lands who live on foreigners have lost their self-respect and their independence of spirit. In an article entitled (Kyōten koku to naru nakare (Don't Turn the Country into a Hotel). Mr. Kamada opposes the notion that the Japanese Government should take part in preparing for the entertainment of visitors. Private citizens should do what they can, but they must keep their heads and not allow the ordinary duties of life to be interrupted nor the even tenor of their ways to be disturbed by the abnormal event that will occur. It would be an evil day for Japan should she try to cater for the pleasure of the tourist in the way that Paris does year after year, or should she try to fleece visitors in the way they are habitually fleeced in some European countries. Whether such a warning as this is needed here it is hard for a foreigner to say. Mr. Kamada seems to be of opinion that it is.

The Chūō Kōron still continues the practice of publishing articles on the writings and the characters of living authors and journalists. Mr. Tokutomi Solo is discussed in the June number by Messrs. Yamaji, Togawa, Omachi, Miyazaki and two other writers. Mr. Yamaji tells us that he was one of Mr. Tokutomi's literary pupils. He writes in very laudatory tones. He refers to Mr. Tokutomi's early success as a writer for young men and attributes this success partly to character and partly to the literary style which was begotten by the personality of the writer. Mr. Tokutomi's style to-day, says Mr. Yamaji, is very different to what it was 20 years ago, but it still retains one quality for which it has always been noted. That quality is lucidity. Readers of Mr. Tokutomi's numerous articles and essays are never in any doubt as to his meaning. Though he has published many lengthy works, his power as a writer has shown itself more conspicuously in his short essays on divers subjects, in the opinion of Mr. Yamaji. This is perhaps natural enough in a man who has devoted his whole life to journalism.

* There is a whole class of literature on this subject that we believe to be most injurious to young people. The lives of American millionaires with all their speculation and other worse things are placed before Japanese youth as worthy of imitation. It is to this class of writing that Count Okuma refers—(WRITER OF SUMMARY.)

Mr. Togawa draws attention to the faithfulness with which Mr. Tokutomi followed English literary models, especially Macaulay and John Morley.

Mr. Omachi Keigetsu in substance affirms that though the master of a fascinating style, Mr. Tokutomi never has been a deep thinker. The consequence is that the effect left on the minds of thoughtful readers of his essays is confined to the temporary gratification derived from the perusal of a string of ornate sentences. As for imparting new ideas or offering suggestions which are likely to prove of great use to readers, this he seldom does. According to Mr. Omachi, Mr. Tokutomi is not a great thinker nor an original writer, but just the sort of man that suits the rôle of the editor of the Kokumin Shimbum has played these many years past, which Mr. Omachi pronounces to be a very ordinary one.

YOKOHAMA AMATEUR DRAMATIC CLUB

The annual general meeting of the Yokohama Amateur Dramatic Club was held on Thursday at the rooms of the Yokohama Foreign Board of Trade. Among those present were Messrs. E. Beart, G. G. Brady, (Hon. Treas.) Cyril Allen, J. M. Mollison, A. E. Cooper (Hon. Sec.) E. Eddison, Lewis, F. J. Hall, McChesney, A. L. Robinson, S. Moss, W. K. E. Vincent, McWilliams, B. C. Foster, etc. Mr. E. Eddison took the chair.

On the motion of Mr. Beart seconded by Mr. Hall the minutes of the last meeting were taken as read. The Chairman in presenting the accounts stated that neither of the two plays put on this season was a financial success although the pieces themselves were well performed. The only alterations in last season's committee were that Messrs. Beart and Lewis took the place of Messrs. Hay and Ward, who were absent, the committee being thus as follows:—Mr. E. C. Davis, President, and Messrs E. Eddison, E. Beart, Lewis, C. F. McWilliams, G. G. Brady and A. E. Cooper.

It was then proposed by Mr. Brady and seconded by Mr. Colman that at least one musical play and two comedies should be presented this year, which was carried after much discussion.

The report and accounts were as follow:—

The Committee have the pleasure of submitting their Report and Balance Sheet for the Season 1907-1908.

The two plays produced this season were "Lady Huntworth's Experiment" and "Dr. Wake's Patient." Both were very successfully given. Owing to the numerous visits of Professional Companies to Yokohama your Committee did not find it possible to produce more than two plays.

The Committee would draw your attention to the fact that "Lady Huntworth's Experiment" and "Dr. Wake's Patient" have been made to bear the cost of the scenery and properties necessary for production, but it should be borne in mind that these, acquired to the extent of at least yen 500.00, represent available properties, etc., for future productions. Under these circumstances, as the A.D.C. will in future be provided with godown space where all scenery and properties can be stored, your Committee think that it would be advisable to open a scenery and properties account. The inventory has been taken of the accumulated stock, and at an estimated valuation the cost is yen 2,300.00. The Committee proposes that this be written down to yen 1,000.00 and that future plays be debited with a percentage to be settled upon.

20 Shares of the Far Eastern Public Hall Association have been applied for and allotted.

The thanks of the Committee are due to Mr. Cyril Allen for his invaluable help in coming forward to play a leading part in "Lady Huntworth's Experiment" at the last minute.

Thanks are also due to those ladies who have kindly assisted in the Club's performances, and to Mr. Lawson for Auditing the accounts.

"LADY HUNTWORTH'S EXPERIMENT."

DR.	Yen.
To Scenery and Properties.....	392.65
" Bijou Orchestra .....	23.00
" Refreshments .....	35.90
" Costumes account .....	65.85
" Printing and Advertising .....	163.00
" Public Hall .....	185.40
" Sundries .....	21.00
" Balance to General account .....	24.12
	912.92

CR.

By C. Thwaites & Co (cheque) .....	912.92
	912.92

"DR. WAKE'S PATIENT."

DR.	Yen.
To Scenery and Properties.....	488.17
" Bijou Orchestra .....	57.00
" Refreshments .....	125.51
" Costumes account .....	163.80
" Printing and Advertising .....	278.50
" Public Hall .....	233.38
" Cost of Play £10 at 2/- 1/6 .....	98.21
	1,444.57

CR.

By C. Thwaites & Co (cheque) .....	1,119.54
" Balance to General account .....	285.03
	1,444.57

CHARITY PERFORMANCE.

DR.	Yen.
To Sundry expenses.....	36.99
" Public Hall.....	60.00
" Cheque to Bijou Orchestra.....	150.00
" " " General Hospital.....	74.01
	321.00

CR.

By C. Thwaites & Co., and tickets sold.....	321.00
	321.00

GENERAL ACCOUNT.

DR.	Yen.
To Hire of Hall, General Meeting.....	10.00
" Wire to Shanghai .....	7.20
" Lumber (Stock) .....	108.00
" Drill do .....	61.00
" Fireplace do .....	22.50
" Printing and Advertising .....	11.25
" Woodruff (collecting Subscriptions).....	9.60
" H. & S. B. C. Fixed Deposit.....	240.00
" Wages Saito (5 months) .....	75.00
" Balance Dr. Wake's Patient .....	285.03
" Balance in H. & S. B. C. .....	780.82
	1,611.00

CR.

By Balance .....	1,327.62
" Subscriptions 1907/8 .....	240.00
" Int. @ 2% on current a/c H. & S. B. C. ..	14.26
" Scenery hire (Pollard) .....	5.00
" Balance Lady Huntworth's Expt.....	24.12
	1,611.00

I have examined the books, vouchers and Fixed Deposit receipt as herein stated and find same to be correct.

A. B. LOWSON,

Auditor.

G. G. BRADY,

Hon. Treasurer.

F. A. R. C.

The first water-polo match of the season was played on Tuesday evening at 5.45 p.m. off the Y. A. R. C. bathing barge between the following teams:

WHITES.	Goal.	REDS.
J. Laffin		W. Nicolle
G. Neville		G. G. Franklin
	Halves.	G. W. Gregory
A. B. Pollock		B. Deveson
V. Church		C. von Fallot
S. Vincent	Forwards.	E. Eagling

The game ended in favour of the Reds by 6 goals to 2. Whites played one man short.

THE FOURTH OF JULY.

American Independence Day was celebrated in due form by American residents on Saturday. Rain fell heavily in the early part of the day and led to the frequent expression of an idea that the Fourth is specially afflicted in this respect. Some colour of course is given to the suggestion by the fact of the day's inclusion in the nyubai, the visitation of rain being thus more than a mere chance, but as a matter of record and fact the Fourth has been more than favoured, having regard to the weather dangers with which it is environed. Here is a list showing the conditions prevailing during eight years on the day to be celebrated and none but the most captious can find fault with them:

1900.—Fine weather; sky overcast; fireworks excellent.

1901.—To the surprise of most people graced by splendid weather; fireworks interfered with by northerly wind and moist atmosphere.

1902.—Fine weather. Fireworks excellent.

1903.—Rain fell heavily; stopped baseball; display of fireworks postponed.

1904.—Very fine weather. Fireworks splendid.

1905.—Heavy morning fog; hot day, good weather for fireworks.

1906.—Opened dull and misty, turned out bright sunny day. Few drops of rain hastened display of fireworks but weather in the evening excellent.

1907.—Fine weather; fire works good.

And so we come to 1908 when the weather though rainy and disappointing in the forenoon cleared up later, permitting of baseball and yachting, only to become disagreeable at night. The fireworks, indeed, were largely spoiled by the northerly wind beating in the rain and diving in the smoke so as to obscure the illuminations, especially the set pieces, of which perhaps the best was the Stars and Stripes. For a considerable space of time after 9 p.m., however, there was plenty of noise and fire evoking from the assembled multitudes along the Bund loud expressions of wonder.

During the day Americans displayed the national flag on their houses and places of business, and calls were made on the Consul-General as usual between 10 a.m. and noon. The customary reception at the Embassy was abandoned owing to the absence of the Ambassador.

In addition to the decorations provided by Americans the hotels on the bund hung out flags, the French yacht dressed ship, and at two of the hotels, the Grand and the Oriental, bands played selections during tiffin and dinner.

These with baseball and yachting formed the exercises of the day and if, on the whole, the weather was not all that it might have been still the celebration can leave few but pleasant memories.

YACHTING.

The wind was north to north-east when the big boats started, Mary, Maid, Wanderer and Asagao crossing the line. The course was Tsurumi-Widow Buoy and after working out of the harbour Mary assumed the lead and kept it to the end but lost the prize to Asagao on the latter's time allowance of 39 minutes. Times:—

	Start.	Finish.	Corrected.
	h.m.s.	h.m.s.	h.m.s.
Mary .....	2.00.15	4.09.07	4.09.07
Marion .....	2.00.16	4.26.05	4.08.05
Wanderer .....	2.00.40	5.02.30	4.23.30
Asagao .....	2.00.40	4.42.10	4.03.10

Seven 22 raters started round the Mandarin Bluff—Tsurumi—Tachibana course and the race resulted in Winsome coming home first, but losing to Elsa on time allowance. Times:—

	Start.	Finish.	Corrected.
	h.m.s.	h.m.s.	h.m.s.
Pete .....	2.15.45	4.09.20	4.09.20
Edna .....	2.15.30	4.05.30	4.03.30
Winsome .....	2.15.20	4.05.18	4.05.18
Sunbeam .....	2.15.20	4.06.20	4.05.20
Albatross .....	2.15.35	4.12.16	4.03.26
Elsa .....	2.15.25	4.07.15	3.58.15
Kneith .....	2.15.30	4.24.40	4.00.40

The Larks had two races during the day. In the first which started in rainy weather at 9 a.m. No. 10 took the lead and kept it till the harbour entrance when No. 13 got in front and finished first. No. 11, last boat but one, took second place because No. 3 was disqualified for fouling and also went round the Lightship wrong way. Three boats, 3, 10 and 15 rounded the Lightship in the wrong fashion.

In the afternoon another Larks race took place, which resulted in No. 12 coming in first at 4. 24. 52, No. 11 next at 4. 30. 46, and No. 3 third at 4. 31. 50.

BASEBALL.

Owing to the rain the first match scheduled for 10 a.m. against the Nobles' School was not played till about 1.30 in the afternoon when the Y. C. and A. C. won by 7 runs to 1 in a 5 inning game.

Score:—Y. C. & A. C. .... 1 0 3 2=7
Nobles School..... 0 0 0 0=1

The second game played in the afternoon against the Yokohama Commercial School turned out to be one of the most exciting of this season, thirteen innings having to be played before it could be decided who were to be the winners. A large crowd gathered to witness this match the grand stand being filled to overflowing with ladies and foreign and Japanese gentlemen, while the boundaries of the field were massed with Japanese all intensely interested in the contest.

The game started punctually at 3 p.m., Yokohama being the first to bat. No runs were scored until the 2nd inning when Nicholl and McChesney each got home through a passed ball, and in the 3rd Kellogg scored a run through the centre field's error. In the 6th inning the Commercial School made a run off a fine hit over the pitcher's head, and in the same inning Lo-On made a beautiful catch preventing the school from getting another, though in the 9th inning the Commercial School scored 2 more runs through some bad errors of the Y. C. & A. C., the score thus being 3 all. Going on to the 10th inning each side scored a run apiece. No more were made until the 13th inning when Kellogg got home through an error, the Y. C. & A. C. thus winning by the narrow margin of 5 to 4.

McChesney and Kellogg made several brilliant catches during the game, though the fielding of the Yokohama men was not good towards the end, several bad errors being made. The Japanese played a very good game, their fielding and base stealing being very accurate.

The line up was as follows:—

Y. C. & A. C.	Y. C. S.
Nicholl.....	P.....
Walker.....	Suzuki.....
Gonzales.....	Ishikawa.....
Baker.....	Nakamura.....
O'Connor.....	Fujiki.....
Lo-On.....	Matsumura.....
Kellogg.....	Yamaguchi.....
McChesney.....	Kato.....
Mollison.....	Kobayashi.....
	Sato.....

Score:— ..... 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12 13
Y.C.S. .... 0 0 0 0 1 0 0 0 2 0 0 0=4
Y.C. & A.C. .... 0 2 0 1 0 0 0 0 1 0 0 1=5
Scorer H. S. Stetson.

The prizes kindly presented by Mr. H. B. Miller were won by Mr. Kellogg who was adjudged the best outfielder, Mr. Walker, the best infielder, and Mr. Nicholl the best batter.

Mrs. E. W. Frazar assisted by several ladies presided over the tea in the Pavilion, and a band played selections during the course of the afternoon.

YOKOHAMA.

The post-men employed at the Oiso Post Office struck on July 1st, for an increase of wages.

A man named Y. Kato, aged 39, living at No. 3060, Negishi, has been arrested on a charge of theft. It is reported by the Tobe police that since October, 1906, he broke into several warehouses in Negishi, Hommoku and Kanagawa and stole money and articles, valued at yen 15,000 in all.

A committee of the Yokohama City Assembly met on July 4th and discussed the proposal to improve the water works at a cost of yen 7,000,000, in accordance with the scheme of Mr. Hara. The committee agreed to ask the Central Government to defray one-third of the cost, and to raise two-thirds by means of a loan. They further decided to commence the work next year as the demand for water has greatly increased. The views of the committee will shortly be introduced in the City Assembly.

Four men were arrested on July 1st at Bentendori for having infringed the Rice Exchange Regulations, their houses being subsequently searched.

A suspicious case of cholera appeared on July 1st in West Tobe-machi, the patient being a pupil of the Tobe Primary School.

Eleven men were arrested early on the morning of July 4th while gambling in the room of a betto at the residence of a foreigner on the Bluff.

Samples of new raw silk have been collected by the Yokohama Five Merchandise Exchange and they will be exhibited to silk traders on July 10th and 11th.

Some foreign merchants dealing in raw silk recently agreed to present a complaint to silk manufacturers through the Japanese Cocoon and Silk Guild to the effect that the deniers of silk now offered on the market are not carefully regulated. In connexion with the complaint, Mr. Shito, Director of the Yokohama Silk Conditioning House, says that female workers employed in real silk from old cocoons were now put on reeling from new cocoons. As there is a difference of temperament between the old and new cocoons, sometimes a slight mistake is made by the workers. For instance, they make out the silk to be 15 or 16 deniers instead of 14½ which was originally intended. This explains why silk of different qualities get mixed up. The defect in the work, however, was being remedied as the workers become more familiar with the new cocoons. In conclusion, the Director said that the quality of silk is generally inferior to that of last year.

On July 7th, the Yokohama municipality held a conference. They considered the proposed reception of officers and men of the American Fleet, which is expected to arrive in Yokohama during October. Mr. N. Mitsuhashi, Mayor, proposed that a garden party be held on the cricket ground to which should be invited about 2,300 American officers, the American Ambassador and his staff, and that about twenty thousand yen should be spent by the City Office on this entertainment. The proposal was unanimously carried. A bill providing for the expenditure will shortly be submitted to the City Assembly. Leading citizens will also give a dinner party at a foreign hotel in honour of the American officers. Beside the foregoing entertainments, the Yokohama Chamber of Commerce intends to give a dinner to the American visitors at a tea house.

A Dane named Charles Ferstedt has been punished by the Kaga-cho police with 10 days' detention on a charge of having tried to extort money from a Japanese by fraud.

A union meeting of various baseball clubs in Yokohama will be held on July 19th on the cricket ground. Most of the players are children of various primary schools.

The health returns of Kanagawa prefecture during the week ended July 5th are as follows:—

Yokohama—	Cholera.	Dysentery.	Typhus.	Diphtheria.	Scarlet fever.	Small pox.
New cases .....	—	2	3	—	—	—
Died .....	—	—	—	—	—	—
Other Districts—
New cases.....	—	1	16	4	—	—
Died .....	—	—	—	1	—	—

As already reported, the Yokohama City Assembly held a special meeting at 4.30 p.m. on July 7th. A bill providing for the improvement of the Yokohama Water-works was introduced. Mr. Hara, the chief engineer, gave an explanation of the plans attached to the bill. He said that the population of Yokohama is expected to increase within the next thirteen years to 800,000 if the last census could be taken for forming an estimate. The present quantity of the water—18 gallons—supplied to each person will be increased to 25 gallons, making the total quantity twenty million gallons. A pipe 36 inches in diameter would carry 14,600,000 gallons every 24 hours. The bill was at once adopted. The question with regard to the raising of seven million yen to pay for the new scheme was not considered.

The Yokohama Silk Conditioning House intends to give an exhibition of implements, etc., used in the sericultural industry. The collection will be gathered from different provinces. The exhibition will open in October.

The Yokohama reception committee to welcome the American Fleet in October will meet on July 11th to consider a special proposal with regard to the entertainment of the American officers and men apart from the plan already adopted.

Nine persons, including a woman, were arrested on July 6th in Matsukage-cho on a charge of having infringed the Rice Exchange Regulations, the houses of four of them subsequently being searched. The nature of the offence was practical y gambling. They were making bets on the fluctuations on the Rice Exchange.

A case of dysentery is reported in Yokohama, the patient being a nurse employed in a small hospital in Magane-cho.

The Kagacho police report that a boy of 14 years, Sudzuki Kyoza by name, son of a jinrikisha coolie living in Moto-machi, was arrested on July 6th on a charge of having taken money from some children of the Moto-machi Primary School by menaces and fraud.

A case of hydrophobia is reported in Yokohama. On the evening of the July, a dog belonging to a Japanese living at No. 35 Yamashita-cho, attacked a coolie in Nakamura-machi and inflicted severe injuries.

The Yokohama Municipality sent an application on July 9th to the Central Government through the prefectural office, petitioning for financial assistance in the matter of the improvement of the Yokohama Water Works. The Municipality suggest that the Government pay one-third of the estimated expenditure, yen 7,000,000. It is reported by the municipality that the amount requested will be included in the budget to be submitted at the next session of the Diet, if it is approved of by the Central Government.

Another case of hydrophobia is reported in Yokohama. On the evening of July 8th, a woman staying at a small hotel in South Yoshida-machi was attacked by a dog in Chitose-cho, sustaining severe injuries on the feet.

Mr. Y. Okada, Superintendent of the Yokohama Harbour Police, was promoted, on July 8th, to the sixth high official class.

S. Morita, the proprietor of a laundry, No. 188, Yamashita-cho, has been arrested by the Kagacho police on a charge of theft. It appears that he sustained a heavy loss at the recent meeting of the Nambu Trotting Club in Kobe. On his way home by train, he stole a land-bag containing a gold ring and several other articles, valued at about yen 350 in all, belonging to a passenger. When arrested he was trying to sell the goods.

A Chinaman named Chang Hochan was arrested on the evening of July 6th in Horai-cho while trying to sell a number of lottery tickets.

TRAGEDIES.

An old man attempted to commit suicide late on the night of July and by throwing himself into the creek near the Minato bridge. Two coolies who happened to be passing saved him. Poverty is reported to have been the cause.

A tailor named Y. Aoki, aged 23, attempted to commit suicide about 7.15 a.m. on July 3rd at a house in Kanagawa by injuring his throat with a short sword. A heavy debt is reported to have been the cause.

The dead body of one of the fishermen who were reported to have been missing since the recent storm, was found in the sea near Hemmi, Yokosuka, on July 3rd.

A workman fell into the sea and was drowned on July 3rd while descending a ladder on the cruiser Sudzupa at Yokosuka. His body was found the same evening.

On the morning of July 5th, a student of a law college in Tokyo murdered a woman in Naito Shinjiku, Tokyo, by shooting her with a revolver. He committed suicide immediately after with the same weapon. The cause is not reported.

The dead bodies of two men were found in the sea near the Bund, Yamashita-cho, and off the Customs House respectively on July 5th. They were both attired in foreign costume. As they were not identified, the corpses were handed over to the City Office.

A telegram from Sapporo states that on the night of July 5th, a man attacked three persons in the district of Uryo with a sword. He subsequently set fire to his house and then committed suicide by throwing himself into the flames.

About 6 a.m. on July 7th, Sudzuki, a workman employed at a barber's shop in Kanda, Tokyo, attempted with a short sword to murder Sudzu, aged 17, a daughter of his employer. He inflicted on her severe injuries. Soon after he gave himself up to a police office near by.

An armed man broke into the house of the chief priest of the Buddhist temple Gwaryoji in the district of Matsushima, Miyagi prefecture, on the night of July 6th, killing four of the occupants and making off with money and other valuable articles.

About 4 p.m. on July 7th, a man dealing in dry goods, murdered a woman in Saya-cho, Kyoto, with a sword. While trying to escape, he was arrested by the Gojo police. Jealousy is reported to have been the cause.

A Matsuyama telegram states that a man attempted to murder the female servant of a small hotel in Teppo-machi on the evening of July 6th, injuring her severely with a cooking knife. He also severely injured the proprietor of the inn and his wife who tried to prevent the crime. The keeper of the hotel succumbed to his injuries a little later. Jealousy is stated to be the cause.

The dead body of a man, about 50 years old, was found in a forest near Hodogaya on the evening of July 6th. A coolie, who was for some time employed at the Hatoba, was found dead in an unoccupied house in Hanazaki-cho on July 7th. It is reported by the Isezaki-cho police that he had been suffering from lung disease for several weeks.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

A case of cholera is reported in Hakodate, the patient being a coolie.

On the night of July 7th, snow fell in the district of Ono, Hida province (Gifu prefecture.)

The 25th graduation ceremony of the Waseda University took place on the afternoon of July 5th. About 2,000 persons were present including a number of peers and high officials. There were 777 graduates to whom certificates were awarded by the heads of the department concerned. Count Okuma, President of the institution, gave an address to the students, who are leaving the University.

The July number of The English Teacher's Magazine, published by a group of teachers and devoted to the interests of English language teaching in Japan, has several interesting articles, among which may be mentioned "The Teaching of Grammar" published in our columns some years ago and "The Aim and Scope of Modern Language Teaching in France" by Messrs K. Kobayashi and H. Fardel respectively.

The Blue Funnel steamer Telemachus ran ashore in Akashi Strait on her way up on Saturday morning last. The Kobe Herald understands that the accident was brought about by the presence of a large number of fishing boats. In trying to avoid the fishing craft the Telemachus struck. Fortunately there is a sandy bottom at the place where the accident occurred, and after being lightened the steamer got off at eight o'clock on Sunday night and went on to Kobe.

A murder took place at 8.30 p.m. on July 2nd in Kobe. Y. Hirata, aged 27, living in Koto-cho, shot with a revolver H. Hirata, a dealer in sundry goods in Ikuta-machi, his wife, Tame, and another woman named Shige. His wife died instantly. The assailant also attacked with the same weapon a policeman who appeared on the scene. In spite of his injuries, the policeman arrested him with the assistance of some of the neighbours. At this moment, the murderer loosened one of his hands and committed suicide by shooting himself.

The N. C. Daily News regrets to record the death of Mr. Hugh Weir Roxburgh, chief engineer of the C.M.S. Hsinming, which occurred at the Victoria Nursing Home, Shanghai, on the 1st inst. after a brief illness. Although not yet fifty years of age, the deceased had spent nearly thirty years in China and was highly esteemed by all members of the shipping community. For some years after his arrival here he was employed by the Nippon Yusen Kaisha, but for the last twenty years he had been in the service of the China Merchants' Steam Navigation Company and was a valued and trusted servant of the Company.

A Naval Court was held at the British Consulate, Kobe, on Thursday morning to enquire into charges of refusal of duty brought by Mr. G. T. Crerar, Master of the British steamer Strathclyde, against six Chinese seamen, Nos. 22, 23, 24, 25, 26 and 29. Mr. H. Bonar, H. B. M.'s Consul-General, presided, and the other members of the Court were Mr. C. F. Lockstone, Master of the Peshawar, and Mr. A. R. Stewart, Master of the Zeenkai. Mr. F. C. Greatorex acted as Clerk. Originally only four men were charged, but when the Court opened Captain Crerar stated that two more had refused duty that morning. These men agreeing to be charged with the others, summonses were at once prepared and served upon them. The complaint and notice convening the Court having been read, Mr. Yang San Chai, who had been instructed by the Chinese Consul to act as interpreter, was sworn in Chinese fashion. The finding of the Court, after hearing the evidence, was that the accused should pay various fines, forfeit sums to provide substitutes and bear the expenses of the Court. At the close of the trial the accused made something of a row outside the court, threatening and attempting to attack the court, the interpreter, the captain, and the chief mate, and in the sequel were arrested and will be tried on various other charges in connexion with their disorderliness.

Life at Kobe, said the Herald of that port on Friday June 3, is not so peaceful as it used to be, but it is rarely that so many untoward incidents are crowded into twelve hours as was the case in the latter part of yesterday and the early hours of this morning. The series opened with a violent scene at the British Consulate-General caused by some Chinese seamen into whose conduct a Naval Enquiry had been held. A few hours later, a young Japanese seriously injured another man, shot dead one woman, slightly wounded a second, and finally, after gravely wounding a policeman, fatally shot himself in a jinrikisha. Then, early this morning, a serious affray took place at the railway pier, as the result of which a man sustained bullet injuries to which he has since succumbed, while four others were wounded. In the meantime two burglaries at foreigners' residences had been committed, one on the Hill (Mr. W. Brent's) and the other at Shioya (Mr. Taverner's). It may be added that as the result of a mixing up of these varied happenings, accounts of which will be found elsewhere, a number of sensational rumours got about. One of these alleged that five policemen had been shot dead by a desperate burglar, while another asserted that some foreigners had been wounded in a fight with coolies. There was consequently some excitement in the Settlement this morning.

THE CHINESE YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

The annual closing exercises of the Chinese Young Men's Christian Association Evening English School were held in the Auditorium at Kanda on Tuesday evening. A crowded audience listened to a well arranged programme which included a concert, a speech by Pastor Liu of the Chinese Student Church, and a representation of the Court Scene from "The Merchant of Venice." The latter was well rendered by students and teachers of the Young Men's Christian Association English School. Portia and Shylock by Mr. Z. Z. Kway and Mr. T. T. Woo, respectively, were acted in a manner really gratifying. That the audience enjoyed the representation was shown by their applause at various stages of the play. The Duke was well acted by Mr. Wang, and Antonio had a dignified interpreter in Mr. K. Y. Ma, who was ably supported in Bassanio by Mr. S. C. Li. Gratiano was personated well by Mr. Voong. The Young Men's Christian Association is to be congratulated upon an excellent performance and especially upon the really good English of its students and teachers.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE TOTSUKA SHOOTING MATCH.

(TO THE EDITOR OF THE "JAPAN MAIL.")

SIR,—I note an article in your paper of the 30th June, wherein you mention that there was considerable dissatisfaction at some of the sport provided at the opening meeting of the Yokohama Shooting Club, held at their new grounds at Totsuka, on Sunday, June 28th.

By making such an assertion, I am of the opinion that you are doing the Club considerable injustice, as the sport provided was most satisfactory.

The Committee who had charge of all arrangements most certainly deserve every congratulation.

The new electric traps for clay pigeons proved very popular, and in a very short time should supersede live bird shooting, as the members appear greatly to favor the traps, which form of shooting is popular in Europe and America.

The residents of Totsuka, and vicinity, in large numbers, visited the grounds and were abundantly provided with refreshments of all kinds.

The most popular win of the day was that of Mr. Cotto who was the winner of three of the first prizes, including the gold medal presented by the Jiji Shimpo.

Mr. D. Drummond, of Yokohama, and Mr. Yoshida, of Tokyo, also deserve every credit for their very successful shooting.

Thanking you for inserting this letter, which I trust has successfully corrected the assertion made by your paper on June 30th, and inclosing my card,

I remain, Yours respectfully, "JUSTICE."

NAVAL EXPANSION IN JAPAN.

(TO THE EDITOR OF THE "JAPAN MAIL.")

SIR,—Japan is to build two more great battleships and two more great cruisers. This is of much more importance than any step she has taken, and is likely to attract more attention abroad than any step she has taken in Naval development.

Japan's home-built fleet is what foreign observers will watch.

What will America, do now? When these home built battleships and cruisers are commissioned, Japan's new fleet will equal if not out-class America's new fleet. It is greatly to be feared that America will begin to build just because Japan has begun to enlarge. This would be unfortunate for America and much more so for Japan.

Japan has all the ships she needs and why not be satisfied; rivalry will prove expensive.

Yours truly,

W. A.

MR. GUBBINS' DICTIONARY.

(TO THE EDITOR OF THE "JAPAN MAIL.")

SIR,—I have not noticed in your valuable paper any review of Mr. Gubbins' Dictionary of Chinese-Japanese Words. I make no claim to have examined it critically, but I have used it a good deal in actual work and it certainly is a grand work. No one but a student can have any idea of the difficulties experienced in getting exact equivalents, in English, for Chinese compounds; Mr. Gubbins' selection of compounds is very comprehensive. Every time but one on consulting his book in the course of ordinary reading, I have found the compound. I think no praise too great for the author of such a book, as it means real hard work and grit; I can only express a hope that he will complete the other two volumes.

The first volume of the second edition is thinner than the first volume of the first edition, but it really has two hundred more pages. I think it is a pity such thin paper has been used in this new edition.

I remain, Sir, Yours truly,

"K."

Tokyo, July 9th, 1908.

(NOTE.—Our review of this excellent Dictionary appeared in the Japan Mail of Friday, June 12th, and the Japan Weekly Mail of Saturday, June 13th.—Ed. J.M.]

WARNING TO HOTEL-KEEPERS.

(TO THE EDITOR OF THE "JAPAN MAIL.")

SIR,—There is no doubt that prices have risen all over Japan to a very great extent, but there is equally no doubt that hotel-keepers all over Japan have raised their prices out of all proportion to this rise. Now there is such a thing as "Killing the goose that lays the golden egg" and it is a pretty foolish action. It is the tourist and globe-trotter that keep most hotels going and they are being scared away from Japan owing to dearth of living, except the rich American, to whom money seems to be no object. Also people warn each other about certain hotels, and often a dollar or two extra squeezed out of a guest has far-reaching effects. Here is a case to the point:—When right up in the North I mentioned to a casual acquaintance that I was going to a place 150 miles or so South. The reply was at once, "Then avoid the Hotel, for it is horribly expensive." Two days later I met a family who told me exactly the same. I dare say I passed this on, and a snow-ball is started to boycott that Hotel.

Another thing is that all sorts of shanties seem to think they can charge the same prices as really good Hotels. I remember a tiny little semi-foreign place asking me a huge price and on my demurring, the reply was, "But you must have paid that at the Fuji-ya at Miyashita." The latter I consider the most charming place to stop at East of Suez, but why should one pay for really bad accommodation the same as at such a place as the Fuji-ya?

There is one class of people whom Japan should appeal to more and more as it gets better known as a summer resort, I mean British officers from India, the Straits, &c. I know of no more charming country in the world to spend two months' leave in, the climate and country being all that one could desire; but an officer's pay does not admit of him living at Carlton or Savoy prices—and that is practically what hotels in Japan are now charging.

In one or two hotels I must say British officers are taken in at a reduced rate, and this is only fair and wise if this class of guest is to be encouraged.

Perhaps if this catches the eye of some of the more rapacious hotel-keepers it may serve to stop foreign guests being scared away, as they now undoubtedly are, by high prices.

J. R. G.

PUBLIC NOTARIES LAW.

(TRANSLATED BY J. F. DE BECKER)

LAW No. 53. PROMULGATED 13TH APRIL, 1908.

CHAPTER I.

GENERAL PROVISIONS

Art. I.—Public Notaries possess authority to draw up notarial instruments (notariatsinstrument) concerning juristic acts and other facts relative to private rights and to certify privately signed documents (privatursku-de) in accordance with the request of the parties and other interested persons.

Art. II.—Documents drawn up by Public Notaries possess no notarial validity unless they fulfil the requisite conditions determined by this law and other laws.

Art. III.—Without just and proper reasons Public Notaries can not refuse requests (from clients).

Art. IV.—Except in cases specially determined by law, Public Notaries cannot disclose any matters transacted by them unless the consent of the client has been obtained.

Art. V.—Unless the permission of the Minister of Justice has been obtained, Public Notaries cannot at the same time hold any additional public office, engage in commerce, or become the representatives or employees of commercial companies or associations having as their object the making of profits.

Art. VI.—When Public Notaries have caused damage either to their clients or to other persons in the course of the execution of their official duties, they are only liable to make compensation for the same when such damage has arisen from malice (wilful intention) or gross negligence.

Art. VII.—Public Notaries receive fees (tesuryo) daily allowances (nittō) and travelling expenses (ryōhi) from clients.

With the exception of the items specified in the preceding paragraph, Public Notaries cannot, under any name or title whatsoever, receive remuneration in respect to matters transacted by them.

Rules concerning fees, daily allowances and travelling expenses, are determined by Imperial Ordinance.

Art. VIII.—When there is no Public Notary within the jurisdiction of a Local Court, or when a Public Notary is unable to perform his duties, the Minister of Justice may cause a Local Court to perform the duties of a Public Notary within its jurisdiction.

Under the circumstances of the preceding paragraph, when a Judge is prevented from acting, a Court clerk may be caused to transact the business of a Public Notary.

Art. IX.—The rules concerning the duties of Public Notaries provided in this law and in other laws and regulations apply correspondingly to Judges or Court clerks transacting the business of Public Notaries, but the fees, daily allowances and travelling expenses provided in Article seven (7) accrue to the National Treasury.

CHAPTER II.

APPOINTMENT, DISMISSAL, AND JURISDICTION.

Art. X.—Public Notaries are attached to District Courts.

The number of Public Notaries attached to each District Court is determined by the Minister of Justice for each and every jurisdiction of a Local Court.

Art. XI.—Public Notaries are appointed by the Minister of Justice who indicates the District Court to which they are to be attached.

Art. XII.—Persons not fulfilling the following conditions cannot be appointed Public Notaries:—

(1) (They must be) Japanese subjects of full age or upwards;

(2) (They must) have had upwards of six months practical training as apprentices subsequent to passing a standard examination;

Rules concerning examinations and practical training are determined by the Minister of Justice.

Art. XIII.—Persons possessing qualifications as Judges, Procurators and Advocates may be appointed Public Notaries without previous examination and practical training.

Art. XIV.—The following persons cannot be appointed Public Notaries:—

(1) Persons who have been punished by imprisonment or other severe punishment, except those who having been sentenced to imprisonment for less than two years have either undergone it or have not had the punishment inflicted upon them;

(2) Persons who have been judicially declared bankrupt (hasan) or insolvent (kashir-bunsan) and have not been rehabilitated;

(3) Incompetent and quasi-incompetent persons;

(4) Persons who have been dismissed or relieved from official positions by way of disciplinary punishment, or expelled (from an Advocates Association) in accordance with the Advocates Law, unless two years have elapsed since their dismissal or relief from office or expulsion.

Art. XV.—In the following cases the Minister of Justice may dismiss Public Notaries from office:—

(1) When Public Notaries make application to be relieved from office;

(2) When Public Notaries have failed to deposit caution-money or supplement the same within (appointed) period of time;

(3) When Public Notaries are unable to discharge the duties of their office owing to physical or mental infirmity.

In the case contemplated in clause three (3) of the preceding paragraph, the matter must be decided by a resolution of the Disciplinary Committee of the Court of Appeal having jurisdiction over the District Court to which the Public Notary is attached.

Art. XVI.—Public Notaries, as a matter of course, forfeit their office when they come under the purview of clauses one (1) to three (3) inclusive of Article fourteen (XIV).

CHAPTER III.

GENERAL PROVISIONS CONCERNING EXECUTION OF OFFICIAL DUTIES.

Art. XVII.—The extent of the jurisdiction of a Public Notary is the same as that of the District Court to which he is attached.

Art. XVIII.—Public Notaries shall establish their office in the place (locality) indicated by the Minister of Justice.

Public Notaries must attend to their duties at their offices except when the nature of the case does not permit of their doing so or when otherwise determined by laws and regulations.

Unless permitted to do otherwise by the Minister of Justice, Public Notaries must reside in their offices.

Art. XIX.—Within fifteen days from the day of receipt of his order of appointment a Public Notary must deposit caution-money with the District Court to which he is attached.

The amount of caution-money is determined by the Minister of Justice according to the circumstances of the locality at from three hundred to one thousand yen.

When a deficiency has arisen in the amount of the caution-money the deficiency must be made good within thirty days from the day of receipt of an order to that effect.

So long as caution-money is not deposited, Public Notaries cannot exercise their functions.

Art. XX.—When caution-money should be refunded a public notice shall be given calling upon those who possess rights against such caution-money to claim the same within a period of not less than six months.

Until the period mentioned in the preceding paragraph has elapsed, the caution-money will not be refunded.

The caution-money shall be first applied in payment of the costs of the public notice of paragraph one (1) in preference to other public imposts and obligations.

Art. XXI.—Each Public Notary shall deliver to the District Court to which he is attached a slip of paper bearing an impression of his official seal (shoku-in no in-kan) and signed by himself.

So long as a Notary fails to deliver the impression of his seal mentioned in the preceding paragraph, he cannot exercise his functions.

Art. XXII.—In the following cases a Public Notary cannot exercise his functions:—

- (1) When he is the husband or a relative within the fourth degree of the client, of the client's representative, or of a person who possesses an interest in respect to the matter entrusted to him, or when he is the head of the family or a member of the family of such client relative or persons living together with him. This is the same even when the relationship has terminated;
- (2) When he is the legal representative or curator (保佐人) of the client or the client's representative;
- (3) When he is interested in the matter entrusted to him;
- (4) When he is the representative or helper (輔佐人) in respect to the matter entrusted to him, or when he is a representative or helper.

Art. XXIII.—When a Public Notary signs his name officially he must state his official designation, the jurisdiction to which he is attached, and the location of his office.

Art. XXIV.—Upon receiving permission from the President of the District Court to which he is attached, a Notary may employ scribes to assist him in his duties.

The permission mentioned in the preceding paragraph may be cancelled whenever necessary.

Art. XXV.—The originals of documents drawn up by a Public Notary, accessory documents, and books kept by him in accordance with laws and ordinances cannot be taken out of his office unless for the purpose of avoiding accident and danger in case of emergency, except when ordered or requested by a Court or by a judge of preliminary examination.

The Minister of Justice determines rules concerning the preservation and destruction of the documents mentioned in the preceding paragraph.

CHAPTER IV.

THE DRAWING UP OF DOCUMENTS.

Art. XXVI.—A Public Notary cannot draw up documents concerning matters contravening laws and ordinances, invalid legal acts, and legal acts which may be rescinded on account of incapacity.

Art. XXVII.—A Public Notary cannot draw up a document unless the Japanese language is employed therein.

Art. XXVIII.—In drawing up documents it is essential that the Public Notary should have knowledge of the surname and personal name of the client and be cognizant of his personality.

When a Public Notary does not know the name or person of a client, he must require such client to produce a certificate of his seal from the Mayor of the city, district, town, or village where he is permanently registered or where he is temporarily residing; or cause him to provide two witnesses well acquainted with the client in order to testify to his identity. Provided that when the client is a foreigner, the certificate of a police official or a Consul of the client's native country residing in the Empire may be substituted for a certificate of a seal.

When in cases of emergency Public Notaries drawing instruments in connection with facts which are not juristic acts, the procedure of the preceding paragraph may be performed within three days after the drawing up of such instruments in accordance with the rules concerning the drawing up of instruments.

When the procedure of the preceding paragraph has been completed the instruments are not invalidated on account of the fact that they were not made under circumstances of emergency.

The provisions of paragraph three (3) of Article thirty-four (34) apply correspondingly to the witnesses of paragraph two (2).

Art. XXIX.—When a client does not understand the Japanese language, or when he is deaf or dumb or is otherwise a person who can neither articulate speech nor understand written characters, the Public Notary is required to cause an interpreter to be present when he draws up an instrument.

Art. XXX.—When a client is blind or does not understand written characters the Public Notary is required to cause a witness to be present when he draws up an instrument.

The provision of the above paragraph applies correspondingly when a client demands that a witness be caused to be present.

Art. XXXI.—The provisions preceding three Articles apply correspondingly when a client's request is made by a representative.

Art. XXXII.—When a Public Notary draws up an instrument at the request of a client received through a representative, he is required to cause the production of a document proving the authority of the latter.

When the document of the preceding paragraph is a privately signed and not officially certified writing, the genuineness thereof must be proved by additionally causing the production of a certificate of the impression of the seal prepared by the mayor of the City, District, Town or Village where the signatory is permanently registered or where he temporarily resides. In case the signatory is a foreigner the provision of the provisory clause of paragraph two (2) of Article twenty-eight (28) apply correspondingly.

When any defect of representation (agency) or form has been subsequently corrected in accordance with the provisions concerning the drawing up of instruments the instruments are not invalidated on account of having been defective.

Art. XXXIII.—When a Public Notary draws up an instrument in connection with a juristic act for which the permission or consent of a third person is necessary, it is required that proof of such permission or consent be given by causing the production of a document proving that the permission or consent has been obtained.

The provisions of paragraphs two (2) and three (3) of the preceding Article apply correspondingly in the case of the preceding Article.

Art. XXXIV.—The interpreter or witness must be selected by the client or his representative.

A witness may also act as an interpreter.

The undesignated persons cannot act as witnesses:—

- (1) Minors;
- (2) Persons specified in Article fourteen (14);
- (3) Persons who cannot sign their own names;
- (4) Persons interested in the matter in hand;
- (5) Persons who are representatives or helpers (Hosa-nin 輔佐人) in connection with the matter in hand, or who are representatives or helpers;
- (6) Spouses, relations within the fourth degree, heads of houses or members of a family living together, legal representatives, curators, employees and inmates (zusammenwohnen) of the Public Notary, of the client, or of the client's representative.

(7) Scribes employed by the Notary.

Art. XXXV.—In drawing up an instrument a Public Notary is required to record therein the statements he has heard, the circumstances (condition of things) he has witnessed, and other facts he has himself verified as well as the manner of such verification.

Art. XXXVI.—In drawing up an instrument a Public Notary is required to note therein the following matters in addition to the main purport thereof:

- (1) The number of the instrument;
- (2) The address, domicile, profession, surname and personal name, and the age of the client. If the client is a juridical person, then its title (name) and (the place of its) office;
- (3) When the request is made through a representative, that fact, and the fact that the production of a document proving the authority of the representative has been caused; also the domicile, profession, surname and personal name and age of the representative;
- (4) The fact that surname and personal name and the personality of the client or his representative is known;
- (5) The fact that proof of the permission or consent of a third party was procured by causing the production of a document proving that the permission or consent was obtained, the reason for same, and such third party's domicile, profession, surname and personal name, and his age. If the client is a juridical person, then its title (name) and (the place of its) office;
- (6) When a certificate of the impression of a seal prepared by the Mayor of a City, District, Town or Village, or a certificate of a Police official or Consul has been caused to be produced to prove the identity of a person or the genuineness of a document, that fact, as well as the reason therefor;

(7) When identity has been caused to be proved by means of witnesses acquainted with the surname, personal name, and person of a client, that fact, and the reason therefor, as well as the domiciles, professions, surnames and personal names and ages of the witnesses;

(8) In cases of emergency, when identity has not been caused to be proved, that fact;

(9) When an interpreter or witness has been caused to be present, that fact, the reason therefor, as well as the domicile, profession, surname and personal name, and age of such interpreter or witness.

(10) Year, month, and day on which, and the place where, the instrument was drawn.

Art. XXXVII.—In drawing instruments Public Notaries must employ usual and easy language and write clearly and distinctly.

When there are any blank spaces in lines which ought to be connected, they must be connected by black lines.

In writing down figures quantities dates and numbers the difficult forms of characters for one (壹) two (貳) three (參) and ten (拾) must be employed.*

Art. XXXVIII.—No character in an instrument can be altered.

When characters are inserted in an instrument, such characters and their place must be written on the margin or on the blank at the end and must be sealed by the Public Notary and the client, or the clients' representative, and by the witness present.

When characters are erased they must be struck out as to leave them still plainly readable, and the number of the characters so struck out and their place must be written on the margin or on the blank at the end and must be sealed by the Public Notary and the client, or the client's representative, and by the witness present.

Corrections made in contravention of the provisions of the preceding paragraphs possess no validity.

Art. XXXIX.—The Public Notary must read over the instrument drawn up by him to the persons present, or let them read it, and obtain the approval of the client or of his representative. Moreover he must note that fact in the instrument.

When an interpreter has been present, in addition to the preceding paragraph such interpreter must be caused to interpret the purport of the instrument, and that fact must be noted therein.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

TELEGRAMS.

(REUTER'S SERVICE.)

THE PERSIAN TROUBLES.

London, July 2.

A German telegram from Teheran says that the Shah has complained to King Edward that the British Legation is granting asylum to refugees. The King replied, defending the legation and pointing out the numerous executions that have taken place without trial.

The Foreign Office says it is quite correct that the King and the Shah should have exchanged telegrams but it is unable to give the text.

London, July 3.

Replying to questions in the House of Commons, Sir Edward Grey, the Secretary for Foreign Affairs, stated that Persian affairs were very little touched upon at Reval. What mention was made related to frontier disputes and the commercial frontier. The troops surrounding the Legation had been withdrawn. Great Britain would require a guarantee of the safety of the refugees before they were allowed to leave the Legation. If they were accused of crime distinct from political offences an assurance would be required of a fair trial at which the Legation would be represented.

ENGLISH PATENT LAWS.

London, July 3.

Speaking in the House of Commons, Mr. Winston Churchill, President of the Local Government Board, announced that Germany and the United States had made representations against the new patent act, but the Government were not prepared to modify it.

* The ordinary forms — 二 三 and 十 are very easily altered.

ORDER RESTORED IN TEHERAN.

Later.

Reuter's agent at St. Petersburg wires that in Teheran order is being restored everywhere. The people are organizing a demonstration in honour of the Shah. Russia and Great Britain are supporting the request that Prince Zilles be accorded permission to leave Persia.

Reuter's correspondent at Teheran reports that looting and robbery ceased since the establishment of martial law on the 24th of June. General Liakhoff is doing excellent work.

THE BRITISH NAVAL MANŒUVRES.

The British Admiralty have ordered all civilian guests invited to witness the naval manœuvres to disembark. The exclusion of the Press and outside observers accentuates the importance of the manœuvres. An enormous naval force has collected under command of Lord Charles Beresford. MR. LLOYD GEORGE PESSIMISTIC.

London, July 4.

Mr. Lloyd George, speaking at a bankers' dinner at the Mansion House, dwelt on the difficulties by which the Chancellor of the Exchequer was confronted by reason of the falling revenue, the diminishing trade and the constantly increasing expenditure. He said he doubted whether the nation was getting real value for its gigantic expenditure. The country must realize that only in economy was real efficiency to be found.

OPIUM IN CANADA.

It is reported from Ottawa that the Government is introducing a bill prohibiting the importation, manufacture and sale of opium except for medical purposes.

ZEPPELIN'S FEAT.

Later.

Count Zeppelin's airship accomplished a twelve hours flight over the Alps, returning safely to Lake Constance. The Kaiser sent an enthusiastic telegram to the Count saying that his feat marks the beginning of a new national achievement.

TO SAVE DAYLIGHT.

London, July 5.

A parliamentary committee has pronounced strongly in favour of the daylight saving bill. It recommends that clocks be advanced sixty minutes in April and turned back in September.

FREE TRADE FOR MANILA.

At Manila a mass meeting has adopted a petition to the American people asking for the grant to the Philippines of free-trade with America.

DEATH OF M. IGNATIEFF.

London, July 6

The death is announced of M. Ignatieff, Russian Ambassador at Constantinople.

ITALY AND ABYSSINIA.

Sr. Tittoni has announced that an expedition will be immediately despatched to occupy the territory ended to Italy by the recent delimitation convention with Abyssinia.

MOROCCO.

The Sultan Abdul Aziz has appointed Ab-del-Sadek Governor of Tangier.

TSAR TO VISIT ENGLAND.

Later.

The Chronicle says it has been practically arranged that the Tsar and the Tsaritsa will visit Cowes during the regatta week, afterwards returning to Reval.

ABSINTHE IN SWITZERLAND.

The referendum in Switzerland has decided overwhelmingly in favour of prohibiting the manufacture, importation and sale of absinthe.

RUSSIAN CONSULATES.

The Duma approves of the Government's proposals to establish consulates at Harbin, Mukden, Kirin, Dalny and other places.

RUSSIAN NAVAL EXPANSION.

A joint committee of the Council of the Empire and the Duma having failed to reach an agreement as to the voting of battleships, the Government has applied the law and the constitution and will repeat the estimates of last year, which made provision for battleships.

THE REVOLUTION IN PARAGUAY.

London, July 7.

As a result of the revolution in Paraguay the Government has been overthrown after severe fighting. The Ministers have taken refuge in the Argentine Legation.

JAPANESE LITERATURE AT OXFORD.

The trustees of the Oxford Endowment Fund have approved the inauguration of a lectureship for the Japanese language and Japanese literature.

LORD CHARLES BERESFORD AND HIS OFFICERS.

London, July 7.

Mr. A. H. Lee, Conservative member for Fareham (formerly a Civil Lord of the Admiralty in the last Balfour Administration), writes to The Times drawing attention to the national danger, if true—and he fears that the fact is undeniable—that the Commander-in-Chief of the Channel Fleet, Lord Charles Beresford, is not on speaking terms with either the Commander of his cruiser squadron or with the First Sea Lord (Sir John Fisher). He asks what the British Admiralty proposes to do to end a grave scandal which is sapping the foundations of discipline.

Later.

There are rumours in the lobby of the House of Commons that the British Admiralty contemplates a decisive step regarding the strained relations existing between Lord Charles Beresford and the naval authorities.

THE CONQUEST OF THE AIR.

The aeroplanists, Farman and Clercot, have competed at Paris for a prize of ten thousand francs for the first aeroplane flying for a quarter of an hour. Farman flew for twenty minutes, covering eleven miles.

THE NAVAL DISSENSIONS.

Later.

The naval dissensions are the general theme of the papers, who comment on them most freely. Some urge the supersession of Lord Charles Beresford, failing his resignation, while others denounce the anti-Beresford intrigue carried on by the "little Navyites."

PARAGUAY.

Dr. Naveiro has been proclaimed President of Paraguay, and is practically dictator. The causes and details of the revolution are obscure.

PERSIA.

The Times correspondent at Teheran says that Russia strongly supports the British demand for reparation on account of disrespect to the British legation, until the Shah shall have made a substantial apology.

Sir Edward Grey, replying to Mr. Dillon, said the Government had protested against troops flocking round the Legation at Teheran. He said it was hoped the matter would be satisfactorily adjusted but negotiations were not yet concluded.

THE AMERICAN FLEET.

Later.

The American fleet has sailed from San Francisco for New Zealand.

THE BRITISH NAVAL MANŒUVRES.

In connexion with the naval manœuvres seventeen submarines steaming due south made a record run.

THE SAIGON POISONING CASE.

Three natives have been sentenced to death at Saigon for poisoning.

BRITISH TRADE.

The imports and exports for June have decreased by £1,667,263 and £4,150,790 respectively. The latter included iron and steel one million, yarns and textiles £1,281,781.

FIRE AT PORT-AU-PRINCE.

A fire has been raging for two days at Port-au-Prince. A thousand buildings have been destroyed and thousands are homeless and foodless.

THE CHINA ASSOCIATION.

Later.

At the China Association banquet Sir Robert Hart, the Chinese Minister in London, and Lord Edward Fitzmaurice were among the guests. Mr. Scott in toasting the guests said that the Association had never before been honoured by such distinguished guests. Sir Robert Hart said he was confident that the coming years would show that China had been quietly storing energy for ages to meet her new environment. China was prepared to face the problems of the future, would ultimately show herself amongst the foremost Powers of the world and would prove a great factor in history. He begged for the continued sympathy and moral support of China. He said that if the Customs Department had achieved any good for China and the world, much was due to the harmony and loyalty of the Chinese. Lord Fitzmaurice also responding, said it was not the fault of the Foreign Office in 1885 that Sir Robert Hart had not ranked as a diplomatist. Lord Granville offered him the post of British Minister in Peking, which he accepted but ultimately declined from a high and honourable sense of duty.

THE NAVAL SCANDAL.

London, July 9.

Mr. Asquith, replying to Mr. Bellairs, said the Government had no knowledge, apart from unverified rumours, of dissensions in the Navy. If it should be found that there was reason to believe a state of affairs exists which will in any wise be detrimental to the discipline and smooth working of the fleet the Government will not hesitate to take prompt and effective action. The direction of naval policy lies with the Government, and it is the business of officers not to discuss or criticise that policy but to carry it out with loyalty to superiors, in harmony with one another, and with a single eye to the efficiency of the great service to which they belong. (Loud and general cheers.)

RUSSIAN LOAN.

The Russian 5 per cent. loan has been issued at 95.

THE FRENCH BUDGET.

Later.

The French Budget Committee advise not to vote any supplementary credits for any purpose until the end of the year.

LORD CHARLES BERESFORD.

It is asserted at Devonport that Lord Charles Beresford will ask the Admiralty to make a full enquiry into alleged grievances otherwise he will resign at the end of the manoeuvres and enter Parliament.

(By SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH THE "TOKYO ASAHI SHIMBUN.")

PERSIA.

London, July 2.

The Foreign Office in St. Petersburg absolutely opposes the re-establishment of absolutism in Persia. Russia's policy continues entirely faithful to the agreement with England.

RUSSIAN FINANCES.

The Duma by careful cutting down has reduced the deficit of 205,000,000 roubles to 185,000,000. The labours of the finance committee show that the financial situation is good. The ordinary revenue exceeds the expenditure by 87,000,000 roubles.

FRENCH INDO-CHINA.

Various newspapers in Paris regret the reduction in the military forces of Indo-China. The budget has been reduced to 600,000 pounds. One of the Indo-China mandarins now visiting France has informed M. Klobukowski, the new Governor, that peace can be restored by the exercise of justice and kindness. M. Klobukowski gave a reassuring reply.

THE PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION.

New York, July 2.

The Democratic Convention has met at Denver. The leader of Tammany has five hundred followers. Mr. Bryan is popular, but some of the party favour Mr. Gray or Mr. Johnson. The Tammany ring is opposing Mr. Bryan.

THE PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION.

San Francisco, July 4.

Mr. Bryan stated to the Bryan Club in Nebraska that he would not accept nomination even if selected at the Democratic convention to be held on July 7th at Denver, unless a proposal for a law ordering the presidential candidates to publish their expenses in connexion with the election was included in the party's platform.

The platform of the Democrats is generally similar to that of the Republicans excepting the item now described by Mr. Bryan.

With regard to the tariff, the Democrats intend to make a revision earlier than proposed by the Republicans. The Democrats are willing to abolish duties on foreign goods which at present support the Trusts. Some of the party do not desire to prohibit the Injunction Law but this view is not favoured by the party in general.

The State of New York is being taken as an important electoral division, having great influence over the whole election, and as Mr. Bryan is unable to command it some of his supporters have advised him to abandon his candidature and to recommend a substitute who is able to control the elections in New York. Mr. Bryan declined the advice.

In the meanwhile Mr. Parker of New York, who was a candidate at the last election, is opposing the policy of the Republicans.

There is doubt that Mr. Bryan will be nominated by the Democrats by a two-third majority at the forthcoming convention.

The representatives from California and other States on the Pacific are trying to induce the Democrats to include the exclusion of Japanese in their platform. The attempt will probably be unsuccessful.

REAR ADMIRAL THOMAS.

Rear-Admiral Thomas, formerly commanding officer of the Second Squadron of the American Fleet, and later temporary commander-in-chief of the whole fleet after the resignation of Rear-Admiral Evans, died on the night of July 3rd at Monterey from apoplexy.

THE AMERICAN FLEET.

The repairs to the American Fleet have been finished. The squadron celebrated the fourth of July at San Francisco. On the morning of July 7th, the battleships will leave for Honolulu. Seven hundred men have been engaged to take the positions of the various sailors who have either resigned in consequence of illness or deserted. The new crews have been trained for three months only.

PORTUGAL.

London, July 6.

It is reported from Lisbon that the Premier was questioned in the Chamber why those who fired on the King were not arrested. The conduct of the officers was described as disgraceful. The Premier defended the responsible magistrates and declared that the story of the assassins' accomplices was unconfirmed.

GERMANY AND MACEDONIA.

The German Chancellor through the newspapers denies that Germany proposes to take the initiative in the Macedonian question. Since Britain and Russia have drawn up schemes further meetings are unnecessary.

PERSIA.

A telegram from Tiflis describes the atrocities committed on Armenians by the Turkish troops concentrated on the Persian border. Four villages were destroyed, numbers were killed; women and children were outraged.

London, July 7.

St. Petersburg.—The Government strongly supports the British demand upon the Shah for reparation in consequence of the disrespect shown to the Legation at Teheran. M. Iswolsky is confident that the Shah will accept Anglo-Russian advice, and will reassemble Parliament and observe the Constitution.

FRANCE AND THE OPIUM TRADE.

Paris.—The temperance party in the Senate has decided to introduce a bill prohibiting the opium trade.

AMERICAN POLITICS.

New York.—The socialist labour party have nominated as candidate for the Presidency a convict who has been imprisoned in Nevada for murder.

CANADA AND IMMIGRATION.

Ottawa.—In the lower house Colonel Hughes referred to the large influx of Chinese and Japanese into British Columbia and urged the Government to be careful whom they naturalized. They must be loyal to the empire and he doubted whether Japanese or Chinese in the event of trouble would be ready to serve the empire. Ministers preserved silence.

THE PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION.

San Francisco, July 6.

Mr. Tom Johnson, Governor of Minnesota, has declined to be a candidate of the Democrats. The supporters of Judge Gray are endeavouring to push him forward as a candidate. Probably he will resign when the election is about to take place.

Mr. Bryan is still the most popular among the Democrats. The platform of the party will be drafted in accordance with his request.

JAPANESE FISHERMEN IN CANADA.

As a result of the new fishing law promulgated by the British Columbia Government, all white fishermen receive permission to fish the Fraser river, but only three Japanese were granted licenses. The other Japanese are waiting for permission, but it is hopeless as the Japanese Fishery in the Fraser River is practically prohibited.

GERMAN NAVAL MATTERS.

London, July 8.

Berlin.—Though the German navy has always been represented as solely for home defence, it is understood that the naval authorities have been impressed by the educative value of the voyage of the American fleet and have determined to follow the example by sending seventeen battleships and ten cruisers shortly to the Azores and the Canaries.

THE DUMA AND EXILES.

St. Petersburg.—The Duma has voted nearly a million roubles in connexion with the relief of 12,000 persons in administrative exile.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

On the Stock Exchange Russian stocks were in good demand and Japanese supported them.

AFGHANISTAN.

Simla.—The Amir of Afghanistan is punishing the tribesmen who participated in the recent Indian frontier fighting.

CANADA AND IMMIGRATION.

A complaint has been made in the lower House with regard to the large influx of American labourers and it has been urged that the alien labour law should be made more drastic. The Minister for Labour said he believed retaliation promised to settle whether the Canadian working man could be his own protector.

THE PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION.

San Francisco, July 7.

The Democratic Convention was opened at noon on July 7th at Denver. There was an attendance of about 12,000, including some 1,000 representatives from various states. Mr. Taggart, chief of the whole committee, gave an opening address and the Rev. Mr. King offered prayer. Mr. Bulkeley (?) a representative from California, presided and delivered a speech on the policy adopted by the Democrats. In the course of the address, the Chairman said that the Pacific will become the commercial stage of international competition in the future. There was a necessity to provide a naval force so powerful that the coast of the Pacific would not be menaced by any foreign country and thus the peace of the world would be maintained. The source of wealth in the states on the Pacific belonged to the whites and no yellow race should be admitted there. The law excluding Chinese could not be taken as satisfactory while Japanese, Koreans, Indians and other Asiatics were entering the districts. The entry of these people meant a menace to the social and industrial welfare of the whites. He repeated that the Asiatics must be excluded. After his speech, the elections of several committees were held. At 2 30 p.m., the proceedings were adjourned till noon the following day.

The Tammany ring, it is said, intends to introduce a radical platform such as has never yet been proposed, even in the eastern states. The party is trying to admit all the proposals of various labour unions, including the exclusion of Japanese and other Asiatics.

THE AMERICAN FLEET.

The American Fleet, consisting of sixteen battleships, left San Francisco at 3 p.m. on July 7th for Honolulu.

"GOLD" MARK.
Inches	4 1/2 me.	5 me.	5 1/2 me.	6 me.
	Yen.	Yen.	Yen.	Yen.
19 1/2	8.40	8.00	8.00	—
22 1/2	9.00	8.50	8.30	—
27	8.65	8.10	8.10	—

KAWANATA.
Inches	3 me.	3 1/2 me.	4 me.	4 1/2 me.
	Yen.	Yen.	Yen.	Yen.
19 1/2	8.80	9.20	10.20	10.90
22 1/2	9.10	10.00	11.80	11.50
27	10.30	11.20	12.80	13.80
36	13.50	15.00	16.50	17.80

SILK HANDKERCHIEFS.

Being affected by the habutae market, which continues firm, the quotations for handkerchiefs went up a little. There was no special business done.

Plain Habutae (Hem stitched.)
Inches	3 me.	3 1/2 me.	4 me.	4 1/2 me.
	Yen.	Yen.	Yen.	Yen.
20" x 1 1/2"	6	n/m	doz.	3.25-3.37
22" x 1 1/2"	7	"	"	4.25-4.52
24" x 1 1/2"	7 1/2	"	"	5.10-5.40
Figured Habutae (Hem stitched)
20" x 1 1/2"	9	"	"	4.50-4.60
22" x 1 1/2"	10	"	"	5.50-5.75
24" x 1 1/2"	12	"	"	7.50-7.75
Figured Habutae (scalloped):—
10" x 1 corner embroidered	"	"	"	0.95-1.00
12" x 4 "	"	"	"	1.15-1.20

COPPER.

The market is still lifeless. Prices are nominal.
Refined per 100 kin. ... Yen 45-49
Dresser per 100 kin. ... " 52-50
Electric refined per 100 kin. ... " 53-57

TEA.

A moderate business has been transacted during the interval and prices remained a little weak.
From the first offering of new tea in Yokohama up to July 7th, 5,821,100 kin were sold and the stock on Thursday aggregated 179,700 kin.

QUOTATIONS.
Choice	...	Y.	65	upward
Choice	...	...	60 to 65
Fine	...	...	55 to 60
Good Medium	...	...	50 to 55
Medium	...	...	45 to 50
Good Common	...	...	35 to 40
Common	...	...	30 to 35

RICE.

Tokyo. - A special rise has taken place.
Osaka and Kobe. - The markets remain steady.
Domestic rice in Fukuoka
Foreign rice in Fukuoka	...	...	466.305
Delivery.	...	Closing Price.	184.221
June	...	Yen.	17.25
August	...	...	17.15
September	...	...	17.68
RICE AT WHOLESALE: STANDARD PRICE.
(Tokyo)
Superior	...	Yen	18.00
Medium	...	...	17.30
Common	...	...	16.60
Average	...	...	17.30
(Osaka.)
July	...	...	16.78
August	...	...	16.96
September	...	...	17.03
(Kobe.)
July	...	...	16.73
August	...	...	16.87
September	...	...	16.96

EXCHANGE.

Yokohama July 9
London silver 1/4 lower and China sterling quotations 1/4 @ 1/4 lower have caused a corresponding advance in local rates on China.
London - Bank "T" .....	2/0 3/4
— Bills on demand .....	2/0 1/4
— Private 4 months' sight .....	2/0 1/4
— Private 6 months' sight .....	2/0 1/4
Paris & Lyons - Bank sight .....	2/0 3/4
— Private 4 months' sight .....	2/0 1/4
— Private 6 months' sight .....	2/0 1/4
Hongkong - Bank sight .....	per 100	90
— Private 10 days' sight .....	do	88
Shanghai - Bank sight .....	83 1/2
— Private 10 days' sight .....	85
India - Bank sight .....	153
— Private 30 days' sight .....	155
America - Bank sight .....	49 1/2
— Private 30 days' sight .....	50 1/2
— Private 4 months' sight .....	51 1/2
Germany - Bank sight .....	207
— Private 4 months' sight .....	211 1/2
Bar Silver (London) .....	24 1/2

* Nominal.

FUKUSHIMA &amp; Co., BROKERS &amp; DEALERS IN BONDS &amp; SHARES, FINANCIAL AGENTS, &amp;c.

Tokyo, July 9th, 1908.

BONDS AND STOCKS.		Face Value.	Paid Up	Dividend Per Annum	Dividend Payable.	Average Quotations	Remarks.
Bonds and Debentures.		Yen	Yen	Per cent.		Yen.
EXCHEQUER BONDS 1st	100	100	5	June to December	99.80
EXCHEQUER BONDS 2d	100	100	5	March to September	95.30
EXCHEQUER BONDS 3rd	100	100	5	March to September	94.20
NEW IMPERIAL BONDS ISSUED 1906	100	100	5	June to December	81.30
Tobacco Monopoly Bonds (Mark 3=H)	100	100	5	June to December	92.50
Tobacco Monopoly Bonds (Mark 12=E)	100	100	5	June to December	91.50
Tobacco Monopoly Bonds (Mark 5=H)	100	100	5	June to December	81.30
CONSOLIDATION LOAN BONDS (SEIRI)	100	100	5	June to December	80.65
WAR LOAN BONDS (GUNJI)	100	100	5	June to December	80.65
5% IMPERIAL LOAN BONDS (GOBURI)	100	100	5	March to September	81.00
Yokohama Water Works Bonds	100	100	6	June to December	92.50
Yokohama City Works Bonds	100	100	6	June to December	90.50
Osaka Harbour Construction Bonds	100	100	6	June to December	87.50
Kobe Water Works Bonds	100	100	6	June to December	94.00
Kawasaki Shipbuilding Yard's Debentures	100	100	6	June to December	87.00
Osaka Steam Ship Co.'s Debentures	100	100	6	June to December	90.00
Banks.		Yen	Yen	Per cent.		Yen.
Nippon Ginko (Bank of Japan)	200	200	12	February to August	527.00
Kogyo Ginko (First class)	50	50	7 1/2	June to December	55.30
(Second class)	50	37.50	7 1/2	June to December	41.20
YOKOHAMA SPECIE BANK	100	100	12	February to August	199.00
Taiwan Ginko (Bank of Formosa)	100	100	10	February to August	133.00
Railway & Electric Tramway Co.'s		Yen	Yen	Per cent.		Yen.
Nippon Railway Co.	50	50	11 1/2	June to December	86.50		E.D.
3rd Issue New	50	35	11 1/2	June to December	62.30
Sanyo Railway Co.	50	50	14.7	March to September	74.40
Kwansai Railway Co.	50	50	5.9	March to September	43.00
Kyushu Railway Co.	50	50	9.7	March to September	69.70
Hokkaido Tanko Steamship Co.	50	50	14	June to December	84.20		E.D.
(New Issue)	50	12.5	14	June to December	22.30
Tokio Railway Co.	50	50	7	May to November	57.00
New	50	25	7	May to November	27.10
KEIHIN ELECTRIC TRAMWAY CO.	50	50	10	May to November	66.00
YOKOHAMA ELECTRIC TRAMWAY CO.	50	50	6	May to November	40.00
Hanshin Electric Tramway Co.	50	50	12	April to October	91.00
Electric Light and Gas Co.'s.		Yen	Yen	Per cent.		Yen.
TOKYO ELECTRIC LIGHT CO.	50	50	10	May to November	66.00
New	50	25	10	May to November	32.80
YOKOHAMA ELECTRIC LIGHT CO.	50	50	14	May to November	68.00
New	50	20	14	May to November	28.50
Osaka Electric Light Co.	50	50	15	June to December	103.50
Kobe Electric Light Co.	50	50	14	June to December	68.50		E.D.
Uji-gawa Electric Co.	50	12 1/2	10	March to September	6.00
TOKYO GAS CO.	50	50	15	June to December	20.80		E.D.
New, 2nd Issue	50	12.5	15	June to December	27.30		E.D.
Osaka Gas Co.	50	50	8	June to December	72.00		E.D.
Steamship and Dockyard Co.'s.		Yen	Yen	Per cent.		Yen.
Japan Mail Steam Ship Co. (N.Y.K.K.)	50	50	12	April to October	82.90
Oriental Steam Ship Co. (T.K.K.K.)	50	50	12	February to August	32.70
Osaka Steamship Co. (Osaka Shosen K.K.)	25	25	6	June to December	14.90		E.D.
YOKOHAMA DOCK CO.	50	33	12	May to November	47.50
Uraga Dock Co.	50	50	10	June to December	12.50
Kawasaki Ship Building Yard	50	50	12 1/2	May to November	52.50
Spinning and Weaving Co.'s.		Yen	Yen	Per cent.		Yen.
KANEGAFUCHI COTTON SPINNING CO.	50	50	22	June to December	86.50		E.D.
New	50	12 1/2	22	June to December	25.80
Tokyo Cotton Spinning Co.	50	50	18	June to December	40.80
FUJI GASIAN COTTON SPINNING CO.	50	50	25	June to December	83.50
Imperial Hemp Weaving Co.	50	50	12	June to December	53.80
New	50	25	12	June to December	27.20
Nisshin Spinning Co.	50	12.50	10	May to November	8.80
Exchange.		Yen	Yen	Per cent.		Yen.
TOKYO STOCK EXCHANGE	50	50	10	May to November	112.50
Tokyo Rice Exchange	50	50	15	May to November	91.50
Osaka Stock Exchange	50	50	9	May to November	104.50
Osaka Rice Exchange	50	50	13.6	June to December	62.00		E.D.
Brewery Co.'s.		Yen	Yen	Per cent.		Yen.
DAI NIPPON BEER BREWERY CO.	50	50	15	June to December	77.80		E.D.
Japan Beer Brewery Co. (Kirin)	50	50	8	June to December	63.00
Godown Companies.		Yen	Yen	Per cent.		Yen.
YOKOHAMA CHUO GODOWN CO., LTD.	50	50	12	June to December	51.00
Yokohama Bueki Godown Co., Ltd.	20	20	16	June to December	30.00
Fire Insurance Co.'s.		Yen	Yen	Per cent.		Yen.
Tokyo Fire Insurance Co., Ltd.	50	12	10	June	11.20
YOKOHAMA FIRE & TRANS. INS. CO. LTD.	50	12	16	May	16.10
Meiji Fire Insurance Co., Ltd.	50	50	20	March	220.00
Oil Co.'s.		Yen	Yen	Per cent.		Yen.
Hoden Oil Co.	50	50	36	March to September	105.00
Nippon Oil Co.	50	50	24	June to December	88.80
Nanboku Oil Co.	50	37.50	10	June to December	27.00
Sugar Manufacturing Co.'s.		Yen	Yen	Per cent.		Yen.
*Dai-Nippon Sugar Refinery Co.	50	50	15	April to October	69.50
New	50	12 1/2	15	April to October	20.20
Taiwan Sugar Manufacturing Co.	50	50	10	June	56.00		E.D.
New	50	25	10	June	27.00
Ensui-kow Sugar Manufacturing Co.	50	12 1/2	20	June	16.50

S. Sellers, B. Buyers, St. Steady, N. Nominal, E.D. Ex dividend. † Ex New ‡ Cannot be held by foreigners in their own names.

NO REST FROM BURNING HUMOUR

Painful Swellings Formed in Armpits and on Back—Itching Prevented Rest—Suffered Six Weeks and Became Run Down from Want of Sleep—Three Full Sets of

CUTICURA REMEDIES ENTIRELY CURED HIM

"I had been troubled with swellings under the armpits and on the small of the back accompanied by a burning itch to such an extent that I got very little rest, day or night. This had been going on for six weeks or more and I had tried various soothing ointments, these, however, gave only temporary relief, and as I was getting run down from the want of rest, I decided to consult a doctor, but on noticing the Cuticura Remedies advertised in the paper, I thought I would give them a trial. I used Cuticura Soap first, but this did not give the desired relief, then I tried Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment, and Cuticura Resolvent Pills for three successive times. I am thankful to say that, though my trouble was painful and severe, my cure was complete within a month, and I in the future shall urge any one whom I come across afflicted with skin troubles to use Cuticura Remedies, knowing as I do the great good they have done me. I am never without a box of Cuticura Ointment in my home. Robert Beatson, 81, High St., Fort William, Dec. 6 and 12, 1906."

CUTICURA

The Great Skin Cure and Purest and Sweetest of Emollients.

Cuticura Ointment is, beyond question, the most successful curative for torturing, disfiguring humours of the skin and scalp, including loss of hair, yet compounded, in proof of which a single anointing with Cuticura Ointment, preceded by a hot bath with Cuticura Soap, and followed in the severer cases by a dose of Cuticura Pills, is often sufficient to afford immediate relief in the most distressing forms of itching, burning, and scaly humours, eczemas, rashes, and irritations, permit rest and sleep, and point to a speedy cure in the majority of cases, when all else fails.

A Single Set often Cures. Sold throughout the world. Depots: London, 27, Charterhouse Sq.; R. Towns & Co., Sydney; Lennan (Ltd.), Cape Town, etc.; B. K. Paul, Calcutta; Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Agents. See Post-free, Cuticura Booklet.

LATEST SHIPPING.

ARRIVALS

Nippon Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,437, W. W. Greene, 3rd July.—San Francisco via Honolulu, Mails and General.—Toyo Kisen Kaisha.
Suzerite, British steamer, 4,011, Shotton, 3rd July.—Victoria and Tacoma, Mails and General.—Doddwell & Co., Ltd.
Tenshin Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,580, G. C. Hurry, 3rd July.—Otaru via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Yechigo Maru, Japanese steamer, 712, T. Terada, 3rd July.—Yokkaichi, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Hakoni Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,419, T. Sekine, 3rd July.—Shanghai via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Arabia, German steamer, 2,368, Neumann, 4th July.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—P. & A. S.S. Co.
Koshin Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,657, Ichiji, 4th July.—General.—Osaka Shosen Kaisha.
Kirin Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,689, Yamamoto, 4th July.—Kobe, General.—Osaka Shosen Kaisha.
Kichin Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,408, K. Watanabe, 4th July.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Renten Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,668, M. Deguchi, 4th July.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Tenkaiki, British steamer, 3,016, A. R. Stewart, 5th July.—Glasgow and Liverpool via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.

SHARE REPORT.

Yokohama, July 8, 1908.

LOCAL STOCKS.—During the week Engine and Iron Works changed hands at Y.80 for Cash. Langfeldts changed hands at Y.55. Helms are offering at Y.80. Club Hotels have buyers at Y.60; sellers asking Y.70. Grand Hotels remain at Y.100 nominal. Nickels sellers at Y.42. Offers wanted for Union Estate and Investment Company shares.

STOCKS.	Capital.	No. of Shares.	Issue Value.	Amount Paid Up.	Reserve Fund.	At Working A'nt or Carried Forward.	Date.	Last Dividend.	For Term.	Closing Quotations.
	Y.		Y.	Y.					Year.
Brett & Co. Ltd.	28,000	2800	10	10			31.12.07	10%	for 1	10 N.
Club Hotel, Ltd.	185,000	1850	100	100	3,000 Y.	768.96	31.3.08	7%	" 1	70 S.
Grand Hotel, Ltd.	500,000	5000	100	100	10,000 Y.	8,762.67	31.12.07	5%	" 1/2	100 N.
Helms Bros., Ltd.	186,000	3720	50	50	25,000 Y.	1,682.93	31.12.07	20%	" 1	80 S.
Langfeldt & Co. Ltd.	150,000	1500	100	100	Dr.	14,115.95	31.12.07		" 1/2	55 H.
C. Nickel & Co. Ltd.	500,000	20000	25	25		1,729.20	31.10.07	20%	" 1	12 S.
Y. E. & Iron Works.	500,000	10000	50	50	50,000 Y.	12,477.04	31.5.07	10%	" 1/2	80 S.
Oriental H'l, Ltd. ord.		3400	50	50			31.8.06	15%	" 1	50 N.
" " pref.	250,000				62,285.42
The Union Estate & Investment Co., Ltd. ...	1,000,000	10000	100	100	3,259.65	1,774.45	30.9.07	7%	9 mos.	100 N.

† 285,000 unissued.

* Y.390,000 issued.

† 110,000 unissued.

‡ 475,000 unissued.

Debenture Loans.	Amount of Loan.	Rate of Interest.	Interest Payable.	Closing Quotation.
Brett and Company, Ltd.	11,500.00	100.00	7 per cent.	1 June and 1 Dec. 95 Sa.
Yokohama United Club	250,000.00	100.00	7 per cent.	30 June and 31 Dec. 100 Sa.
C. Nickel and Company, Ltd.	50,000.00	100.00	8 per cent.	1 May and 1 Nov. 110 S.
Oriental Hotel, Limited	250,000.00	100.00	8 per cent.	1 April and 1 Oct. 100 S.
Union Estate & Investment Co., Ltd.	250,000.00	100.00	6 per cent.	30 June and 31 Dec. 100 S.

A. C. HUTTON POTTS,

Share and General Broker.

Sardinia, British steamer, 4,126, Talbot, 5th July.—London via ports, General.—P. & O. S.N. Co.

Peshawar, British steamer, 4,885, Lockstone, 5th July.—London via ports, General.—P. & O. S.N. Co.

Kaga Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,907, G. S. Lapraik, 6th July.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Benledi, British steamer, 2,503, J. Potter, 7th July.—London via ports, General.—Cornes & Co.

Semineye Maru, Japanese steamer, 884, S. Nishio, 7th July.—Hakodate, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

America Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,405, W. F. Filmer, 7th July.—San Francisco via Honolulu, Mails and General.—Toyo Kisen Kaisha.

Kabunga, British steamer, 2,925, Smith, 7th July.—New York via ports, General.—Sale & Frazer.

Chikugo Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,458, W. A. Evans, 7th July.—Shanghai via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Mishima, British steamer, 2,665, H. D. Tarver, 8th July.—Kobe for Munoran, put to Yokohama for repairs.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Bingo Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,873, A. Christensen, 8th July.—Kure, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Yechigo Maru, Japanese steamer, 712, T. Terada, 8th July.—Yokkaichi, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Kazeuchi Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,782, H. Peterson, 8th July.—London and Antwerp via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Tango Maru, Japanese steamer, 4,627, R. Swain, 8th July.—Seattle via Victoria, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Indrapura, British steamer, 3,152, W. T. Kelway, 9th July.—New York via ports, General.—Jardine, Matheson & Co.

Chenan, British steamer, 1,350, H. E. Laver, 9th July.—Shanghai via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.

Hiroshima Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,935, J. C. Richards, 9th July.—Otaru via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Euplectra, British steamer, 2,507, T. Powell, 9th July.—Cebu, Kerosene Oil.—Samuel, Samuel & Co.

DEPARTURES.

Saishin Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,334, I. Noina, 3rd July.—Hakodate, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Beuvrich, British steamer, 2,164, Alex. Webster, 3rd July.—Kohsi ching, Ballast.—Cornes & Co.

Tjibodas, Dutch steamer, 2,960, P. Zwart, 3rd July.—Macassar via ports, General.—Ed. L. Van Nierop & Co.

Suzerite, British steamer, 4,011, Shotton, 3rd July.—Hongkong via ports, General.—Doddwell & Co., Ltd.

Yechigo Maru, Japanese steamer, 712, T. Terada, 4th July.—Yokkaichi, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Anhui, British steamer, 1,350, A. H. Harris, 4th July.—Shanghai via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.

Koppa Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,080, T. Tibbals, 4th July.—Otaru via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Gochon, German steamer, 3,181, F. Wilhelm, 4th July.—Bremen and Hamburg via ports, Mails and General.—H. Ahrens & Co.

Isbra, German steamer, 2,684, Luening, 4th July.—Havre and Hamburg via ports, General.—C. Hies & Co.

Yechigo Maru, Japanese steamer, 712, T. Terada, 5th July.—Yokkaichi, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Tenshin Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,580, G. C. Hurry, 5th July.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Chikuzen Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,458, N. Shimizu, 5th July.—Shanghai via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Nippon Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,437, Green, 5th July.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—Toyo Kisen Kaisha.

Amiral Miron, French steamer, 3,581, Salau, 5th July.—Vancouver via Shimizu and Honolulu, General.—Chargem's Remis.

Sacra, British steamer, 3,896, W. R. Hickey, 5th July.—Marseilles, London and Antwerp via ports, General.—P. & O. S.N. Co.

Atyama, British steamer, 3,021, McLean, 7th July.—Batavia, General.—Butterfield & Swire.

Renton Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,668, M. Deguchi, 7th July.—Otaru via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Kishin Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,657, Ichiji, 7th July.—Katsunura, General.—Osaka Shosen Kaisha.

Mike Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,060, R. Smith, 7th July.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Matsuyama Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,959, K. Iwanaga, 7th June.—Otaru via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Arado, German steamer, 2,868, Newmann, 7th July.—Portland, Or., Mails and General.—P. & A. S.S. Co.

Tenkaiki, British steamer, 3,016, A. R. Stewart, 8th July.—Sourabaya.—Butterfield & Swire.

Kaga Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,907, G. S. Lapraik, 8th July.—Seattle, Wash., Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Sado Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,860, Geo. Anderson, 8th July.—London and Antwerp via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Tategami Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,574, Y. Nomura, 8th July.—Hakodate, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Koko Head, American Barkentine, 1,011, C. G. Larsen, 8th July.—Astoria, Ballast.—Jardine, Matheson & Co.
Hakui Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,434, T. Sekine, 9th July.—Shanghai via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Peshawar, British steamer, 4,885, C. F. Lockstone, 9th July.—London via ports, General.—P. & O. S.N. Co.
Mike Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,060, Smith, 9th July.—Otaru via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Matsuyama Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,959, K. Iwanaga, 9th July.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Buho Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,044, Filmer, 9th July.—Uraga.—Tōyō Kisen Kaisha.
Kichirin Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,492, R. Watanabe, 9th July.—Wakamatsu, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Kabinga, British steamer, 2,925, Smith, 9th July.—Mauroran, General.—Sale & Frazar.

PASSENGERS.

ARRIVED.

Per Japanese steamer Nippon Maru from San Francisco via Honolulu:—Mr. W. R. Bagnall, Mrs. A. D. Bagnall, Gen. E. H. Ripley, Mrs. E. H. Ripley, Miss A. S. H. Ripley, Miss A. V. D. Ripley, Mr. John J. Brown, Mr. Hiro Kakiuchi, Mr. J. C. Cochran, Mrs. J. C. Cochran, Miss Helen McIvor, Miss H. McIvor and Dr. H. Tsurusaki. For Shanghai:—Lieut. F. C. McConnell. For Hongkong:—Mr. Michael Bossert, Mr. Benj. T. Brooks, Mr. C. H. Buskey, Mr. Walter Elwood, Miss Bertha Fish, Mr. Allen Hamilton, Mr. Noble Hamilton, Mr. D. W. Longfellow, Mr. Emil L. Lundgren, Mrs. Emil L. Lundgren, Mr. Thos. H. McConnell, Mr. Jas. J. McQuinn, Miss Virginia Newcomb, Mr. A. G. Spiller, Mr. C. M. Thomas, Mrs. C. M. Thomas and Mr. L. H. Thibault in cabin.

DEPARTED.

Per German steamer Goeben for Bremen and Hamburg via ports:—Mr. F. E. Barto, Mr. J. G. N. Bell, Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Huygon, Mr. S. Sibbermann, Mr. Arther Siebner, Dr. and Mrs. Robert V. Fleischhaeker, Miss A. Watson Duff, Mr. S. N. Roberts, Miss Marcelle Gaillard, Mr. C. N. Smith, Capt. Gausson D.S.O., Mr. H. P. Lyons, Miss Hedwig Zyplinski, Mr. C. Partatimbene, Mrs. Rol, Miss M. C. Lochlan, Mr. S. Okano, Mr. Ng Kam, Mr. S. K. Ba, Mr. Y. W. Ba, Mr. Yok Fu Chiang, Mr. W. W. Cheung, Mr. Y. Y. Fong, Mr. S. Y. Fong, Mr. F. Lee, Mr. S. Chow, Mr. K. M. Chow, Mr. C. W. Tow, Mr. G. Woo, Mr. S. L. Fong, Mr. T. Ki Fa, Mr. Yook Shi, Mr. H. Chan, Mr. Tong, Mr. Shung, Mr. Kin, Mr. Deng, Mr. Shung, Mr. Ree, Mr. Woo, Mr. Ting Hea Pang, Mr. Joy Gon Lun and Mr. Y. Uchimatsu in cabin.

Per Japanese steamer America Maru for San Francisco via Honolulu:—Mr. K. Albertz, Mr. R. I. Brimer, Mr. W. B. Campbell, Rev. J. Carrington, Mr. N. W. Chivers, Mr. A. Crosby, Mr. A. R. Dickenson, Mrs. W. E. Dunn and daughter, Mr. J. Foster, Mrs. J. Foster, Mr. R. W. Gunson, Mr. J. B. Hackett, Mr. G. Hirose, Mr. A. B. Howitt, Miss E. Jones, Mr. B. Kellenmann, Mr. W. Kupfenden, Mr. S. McDougall, Mr. H. M. S. Northcote, Mr. J. Quinn, Mr. G. L. A. Smith, Mr. Dudley Warner, Mr. W. M. Wheeler and Mr. K. Yamasaki in cabin.

CARGO.

Per British steamer Sacotra for Marseilles, London and Antwerp via ports:—Raw silk, 49 bales, waste silk, 480 bales.

SILK SHIPPERS.

Per German steamer Goeben for Europe via ports:—

	RAW.				WASTE.
	Genoa.	Option.	Lyon.	Milan.	Moscow.	Italy.	Marseilles.	Trieste.
Sulzer Rudolph & Co.	121	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
Silber Wolf & Co.	67	—	20	—	—	—	—	—
Otto Streuli	30	20	—	—	—	—	—	—
Silber Wolf & Co.	30	29	—	—	—	—	11	—
Nabholz & Co.	20	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
Dell'Oro & Co.	—	—	—	—	215	6	—	—
C. Eymard & Co.	—	—	—	—	—	69	—	—
Jewett, Bent & Co.	—	1	—	—	—	—	—	—

Total ..... 268 50 20 — 215 86 —

Silk shippers by America Maru for San Francisco via Honolulu, on July 7th:—

	Bales.
Siber, Wolff & Co.	67
Nabholz & Co.	48
Jardine, Matheson & Co.	25
Jewett and Bent	10
Kiito Gomei Kaisha	257
Mitsui Bussan Kaisha	151
Hara Yushutsuten	65

Total ..... 623

LEA and PERRINS' SAUCE

Assists digestion and gives a delightful piquancy and flavour to all

MEAT DISHES, SOUPS, FISH, CHEESE, CURRIES, GAME, POULTRY & SALADS.

The Original & Genuine Worcestershire.

Silk shippers by Kaga Maru for Seattle, Wash. via Victoria, on July 8th:—

	Bales.
Vivanti Bros.	123
F. Strahler & Co.	80
Sulzer Rudolph & Co.	50
China & Japan Trading Co. Ltd.	35
Varene & Co.	20
Mitsui Bussan Kaisha	377
Kiito Gomei Kaisha	117
Doshin Kaisha	45

Total ..... 847

MAIL STRAMERS.

NEXT MAIL IS DUE

From	Line	Steamer	Date.
Europe	N. D. L.	Prinz Ludwig I	Sa. July 11
Portland	P. & A.	Numa-tia	Sa. July 11
Hongkong	C. P. R.	Em. of Japan	M. July 13
Hongkong	B. T.	Tremont	M. July 13
Europe	M. M.	Tourane	W. July 15
Hongkong	P. M.	Siberia 2	W. July 15
America	P. M.	Mongolia 3	F. July 17
Vancouver	C. P. R.	Em. of China 4	Fr. July 17
Yokohama	B. T.	Kumeric	M. July 20
Vancouver	C. P. R.	Glenfarg 5	Tu. July 21
Hongkong	P. M.	Monteagle	Tu. July 21
Hongkong	P. M.	China	Tu. July 21
Seattle	N. Y. K.	Aki Maru 6	Th. July 23
Hongkong	G. N.	Minnesota	Sa. July 25
America	I. K. K.	Tenyo Maru	Th. July 29
Hongkong	P. M.	Manchuia	W. July 29
Vancouver	C. P. R.	Em. of India	W. July 29

- 1 Left Shanghai on the 6th inst.
- 2 Left Hongkong on the 4th inst.
- 3 Left San Francisco on the 30th ult.
- 4 Left Vancouver on the 6th inst.
- 5 Left Vancouver on the 9th inst.
- 6 Left Seattle on the 7th inst.

NEXT MAIL LEAVES

For	Line	Steamer	Date.
Europe	M. M.	Caledonian	Sa. July 11
Hongkong	O. & O.	Asia	Su. July 12
Hongkong	P. & A.	Num-tia	Su. July 12
Shanghai	Y. I.	Chukugo Maru	Su. July 12
Hongkong	N. Y. K.	Tango Maru	M. July 13
Vancouver	C. P. R.	Em. of Japan	M. July 13
Yokohama	B. T.	Tremont	Tu. July 14
Portland	P. & A.	Alesia	W. July 15
Hongkong	C. P. R.	Em. of China	F. July 17
America	P. M.	Siberia	F. July 17
Europe	N. D. L.	Prinz Ludwig	Sa. July 18
Hongkong	P. M.	Mongolia	Sa. July 18
Hongkong	B. T.	Kumeric	Tu. July 21
Hongkong	C. P. R.	Glenfarg	Tu. July 21
Vancouver	C. P. R.	Monteagle	Tu. July 21
America	P. M.	China	W. July 22
Seattle	N. Y. K.	Tosa Maru	W. July 22
Europe	N. Y. K.	Bingo Maru	W. July 22
Australia	N. Y. K.	Nikko Maru	Sa. July 25
Seattle	G. N.	Minnesota	W. July 29
Hongkong	C. P. R.	Em. of India	W. July 29
Hongkong	T. K. K.	Tenyo Maru	Th. July 30

Taking

BOVRIL

means fortifying yourself against disease.

(毎土曜日一發行)

編輯人 エフ アインジャー
 發行所 横濱市山下町五十五番
 電話 九百九十九番

The Japan Weekly Mail.

毎土曜 日 A REVIEW OF JAPANESE COMMERCE, POLITICS, LITERATURE, AND ART. 一週刊行

No. 31

REGISTERED AT THE G.P.O.
AS A NEWSPAPER.

YOKOHAMA, JULY 18TH, 1908.

明治卅五年三月廿日
第三千四百四十四號

VOL. L.

CONTENTS.

Summary of News	57
The Cabinet Crisis	58
Colmel Hobson	59
The Tokyo Railway	61
Formosa	62
Korea	63
China	64
The "Unagi Kai"	64
The Socialist Question	64
Professor Ichiki	64
Prince Ito	64
Artificial Silk	61
Business Notes	65
Manchuria	65
Railroads of the World	67
The Tokyo Stock Exchange	67
Nippon Race Club	67
Notes on Current Events	68
Crickets	68
The 14th of July	68
Leading Articles:
Sentiment in Japan	69
The Fukuoka Railway	69
Putting at Risk Meetings	70
Hongkong and Shanghai Bank	70
Lodging-Houses for Female Operatives	70
The Law General Election and Political Parties in Japan	71
Professor I. Abe on the Yokohama Cricket Ground Question	72
Customs Practises	72
The Law Courts	72
Yokohama Literary Society	73
Yachting	74
Yokohama	75
Baseball	76
Shipping Accidents	76
News of the Week	76
Public Notaries Law	76
The Projected Fukuoka Railway	76
Judgment in the "Leutonia" Case	79
The Seoul Trial	80
Tokyo Jockey Club	81
Telegrams	81
Latest Commercial	84
Latest Shipping	86

"FAIS CE QUE DOIS: ADVIENNE QUE POURRA!"

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

No notice will be taken of anonymous correspondence. What is intended for insertion in the "JAPAN WEEKLY MAIL," must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer, not for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

It is particularly requested that all letters on business be addressed to the MANAGER, and Cheques be made payable to name; and that literary contributions be addressed to the EDITOR.

YOKOHAMA: SATURDAY, JULY 18TH, 1908.

BIRTH.

On the 13th July, at 118 A Bluff, MRS DUNDAS OF DUNDAS, wife of British Naval Attaché, of a Son.

SUMMARY OF NEWS.

TYPHUS is prevalent in Odawara. In the past few days, about 200 cases have been reported.

FROM June 10th to the present time, drought has continued in Sapporo. The arable land is almost waste.

THE Russian Minister and Madame Bakmetieff left Tsuruga on July 12th by the cruiser Zemichug for Vladivostok on their way home.

ABOUT 1 p.m. on July 10th, fire broke out in Kuchian, Otaru, destroying ninety-seven houses including the Asahi Hotel, and a theatre.

ON the afternoon of July 12th hail fell in the district of East Ibaraki. Damage was sustained over an extensive area of cultivated land.

THE graduation ceremony of the Nobles' School was held on July 9th, the Prince Imperial being present in company with the Crown Prince of Korea.

JUDGE Smith, an American jurist who has just returned to Manila from a holiday spent on the China coast, praises the American diplomats in China. He is reported to have said, "We have there a fine set of officials, men jealous of their country's standing in the eyes of foreigners, ever anxious to promote America's interests, and particularly well adapted to the requirements of their office."

FOR the information of several readers we beg to state that the Romaji Magazine can be obtained from the publishing office, Shinkōron-sha, 111 East-Kata-Machi, Hongo, Tokyo.

THE death is reported at Kobe of Capt. Murray, a retired pilot residing there, who is alleged to have shot himself with a revolver. The deceased gentleman was 63 years of age.

THE Tokyo Municipality held a meeting on July 10th and considered the proposed reception of the American Fleet. They decided to welcome the American officers and bluejackets on a grand scale.

THE total cholera cases and deaths in the Philippines since 1st January are given in a Manila paper as 4,285 cases and 2,942 deaths. The latest returns show that the epidemic is "yielding slowly."

THE Fiji Shimpō hears from Vladivostok that the Russian Government has rejected a proposal by the Duma to establish a subsidized shipping service between Vladivostok, China, Japan and Nicholasvsk.

DURING the six months ended June 30th, there were 154,395 pieces of habutaye manufactured in Fukushima prefecture. The figures show an increase 20,000 in round numbers on the manufacture in the corresponding period of the previous year.

THE summer vacation of the Government departments on commencing July 11th, lasting till Sept. 10th. The Law Courts will be closed during the holidays. Civil cases regarding drafts or other urgent petitions, and criminal cases only will be dealt with.

A MANILA paper says that Captain Emil Francke, who was master of the Hill liner Dakota when she was lost on the Japanese coast, has gone to sea again but in a minor capacity. He shipped recently at Seattle as supercargo on a coast freighter and hopes to work his way back to a command.

TOKYO papers report that Mr. Edward Noble, formerly chief engineer of the Kanagawa Maru who left Yokohama on June 7th by the Hilachi Maru for home on account of illness, and whose death we recently reported, committed suicide by throwing himself into the sea between Penang and Colombo.

A BASE-BALL match between the Keio Gijiku College and the Guasan team was played July 12th at Honolulu which was won by Keio by 3 runs to nil, in a nine inning match. A match between the Keio Gijiku and the St. Louis College was played on July 12th at Honolulu, being won by St. Louis by 5 runs to one.

THE Emperor has presented Dr. R. Koch with a silver vase—2 feet in height, and 2 feet 6 inches in diameter—with three chrysanthemum ornaments. The vase is on an ebony stand in a case lined with velvet. Dr. and Mrs. Koch are now in Kamakura, where they will stay till the end of August.

It is reported from Taichou, one of the prefectural cities of Chekiang, that a soldier has severely wounded a student of the Nanchien school there, and that, as a protest, the whole school have gone on "strike." The students held a meeting, and it was decided to demand the punishment of the soldier. Efforts, says the Hankow Mail, are being made by the faculty of the school and the authorities to persuade the students to resume work, but, so far, without school and the avail.

THE Kobe Herald regrets to learn that Mrs. A. W. Wilson, wife of Bishop Wilson, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, died at Baltimore last month at the age of 75. Both Mrs. Wilson and her husband were well-known in Japan, as they often came to the Far East in connection with the work of the Church.

IN the Kobe Chihō Saibansho on July 13th judgment was delivered in the action instituted by Messrs. Hutchison and Co. against Mr. Tada Chushichi, of Osaka, claiming payment of damages amounting to yen 2,190.40 in connection with certain transactions in calico prints. The judgment was for the plaintiff with costs.

THE Hongkong Daily Press records the death of Mr. H. von Varelmin, German Consul for Pakhoi and Hoihow, which occurred on July 8th at the Peak Hospital. The Consul came to Hongkong only a few days ago suffering acutely from dysentery, and entered the Peak Hospital. He received there the unremitting attention of Dr. Mueller, but all efforts unhappily proved unavailing.

M. MALEVSKY MALEVITCH, the first Russian Ambassador to the Imperial Japanese Court, proceeded to the Palace at 10.30 a.m. on July 15th, being escorted by a troop of cavalry of the Imperial Body Guards. His Excellency was received by the Emperor in audience, when he presented his credentials. Later the Ambassador and Madame Malevitch were also received by the Empress in audience.

A CURIOUS incident took place in Changsha the other day, said the Hongkong Daily Press. All the foreigners in the City received a communication from the Taotai requesting them to remain within their own doors for a period of four days as a religious festival was in progress, and the Taotai could not hold himself responsible for the safety of foreigners who would venture among the crowds in the streets.

A LITTLE girl, aged six, whilst playing with her brother near a pond at Urakami, on Friday evening, said the Nagasaki Press of July 14th, fell into the water and was in danger of being drowned. Hearing the alarm raised by the boy, a man who was working in the vicinity immediately plunged into the water and rescued the child. Unfortunately the meritorious deed cost the humble hero his life; being a sufferer from heart disease he died almost immediately from the excitement of the event.

CAPTAIN MARTIN FRANCIS PATTERSON, who was with the British forces at the capture of Shanghai in 1842 and served for over half a century as master of vessels in Oriental waters, has died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. William Latham, 1270 St. Charles Street, Alameda. He took the steamer Warrior from New York to China in 1867. In 1875 he entered the employ of the China Merchants' Steam Navigation Company and had command of different steamers of that corporation. During his long career in the Orient he carried on board his vessels practically all the great Chinese dignitaries and officers of state. He never lost a ship or had a serious accident at sea. He retired in 1903 to make his home with his family in Alameda.

THE CABINET CRISIS.

Friday, July 10.

Of course until the actual official announcement of the personnel of the new Cabinet is made nothing can be confidently asserted. The Jiji Shimpō, however, supplements its list by saying that in all probability Viscount Kiyoura will be Minister of Agriculture and Commerce; Mr. Seki Seikei, Minister of Justice, and Lieut.-General Usagawa, Minister of War.

It is a very curious fact that Seoul should be the centre of information about this important question. In fact Tokyo has been quite supplanted, and the plain inference is that the situation centres upon Prince Ito.

It is alleged in some quarters that the resignation of Marquis Saionji would have taken place much sooner had there not been concluded between him and Marquis Katsura an agreement in the sense that the Cabinet should accept the responsibility of putting into force the increased taxes in consideration of remaining in office until the general elections were concluded.

Meanwhile Tokyo is by no means so certain as Seoul with regard to the formation of the Cabinet. It is observed that the Emperor has not yet summoned any Palace Council and that His Majesty's commands to form a new Cabinet have not yet been conveyed to Marquis Katsura. The Mai-nichi Dempo notes that the Sovereign's usual habit is to summon Prince Yamagata when military subjects have to be discussed, Marquises Inouye and Matsukata when there is question of finance, and Prince Ito with reference to foreign affairs or domestic politics in general. On this occasion His Majesty has had recourse to Prince Ito only and is apparently awaiting the return to Tokyo of Mr. Hitaka who left the Korean capital on the morning of the 9th and can not therefore reach Tokyo before the 11th at soonest. Pending some clear official announcements only three names seem to be regarded as quite certain to be found on the new slate: they are those of Count Komura, Baron Oura and Viscount Kiyoura. If Mr. Hitaka's return is not to be awaited, the Imperial command will doubtless be given to Marquis Katsura during the 10th inst. and we shall probably have some news before going to press.

Prince Ito is to leave Seoul on the 12th inst. and will embark on the Chikaya at Chemulpo. The Prince denies that his return has anything to do with the Cabinet crisis and says that it is in strict accordance with a previously arranged programme. His Highness is further quoted as alleging that there was nothing unexpected in the Cabinet's resignation, the matter having been practically settled some months ago.

Saturday, July 11.

It is now denied that Prince Ito's reply to the Emperor's message carried by Mr. Hitaka was sent to Tokyo by telegram. Mr. Hitaka himself carried it to the Japanese capital, which he reached on the morning of the 11th. In these circumstances the reasonable calculation is that the Emperor will not summon Marquis Katsura to the Palace until the 13th inst. and that the formation of the new Cabinet will not be officially announced until the 14th or 15th. Prince Ito himself will not leave Seoul until the 14th inst., but it is generally believed that he has advised the formation of a Katsura Cabinet and that his arrival in Tokyo will not be awaited for the inauguration of the new Ministry.

There is evidently a pretty general desire that the new Cabinet should not be formed exactly on the lines of its Katsura predecessor but that some fresh blood should be imported. From the latter point of view Baron Goto's inclusion would certainly be very popular, but the Baron himself denies that he has been approached at all on the subject. The persistent rumour that Baron Hirata is to have the portfolio of Finance has given a shock to the Stock Exchange. This official presided at the Department of Agriculture and Commerce when, some years ago, Mr. Kiuchi, then Head of the Bureau of Commerce and Manufactures, introduced his celebrated scheme for putting an end to time bargains on the Exchange. The scheme produced a veritable debacle in shares at the time, and ultimately it had to be abandoned. Probably the Minister himself had very little to say to it from the outset, but it naturally made him an object of suspicion in financial circles.

As to the portfolios of War and the Navy, it is generally believed that the latter will remain in the hands of Admiral Baron Saito and that the former will be given to Lieut.-General Usagawa.

We may mention with regard to Baron Hirata that his appointment is regarded in many quarters as an evidence that Marquis Katsura himself intends to direct the Cabinet's finance policy.

The Asahi predicts that there is little chance of any serious collision between a Katsura Cabinet and the Seiyū-kai during the next session of the Diet, but that the session at the end of 1909 will see a fight à l'outrance. This forecast is founded on the hypothesis that the Katsura Cabinet will agree to follow the financial lines mapped out by the Saionji Ministry, in which event the latter can not consistently raise any objection. But it appears to us that this view is somewhat defective. So far as abstention from increased taxes or additional loans is concerned, the Katsura Cabinet will certainly be bound to adopt the policy of its predecessor, and to that extent it may count on the support of the Seiyū-kai. But suppose that the Katsura Cabinet goes one better. Suppose that it manages to reduce administrative expenditures or to effect in other directions economies justifying increased appropriations to the amortization fund of the national debt, will the Seiyū-kai venture to go into the opposition lobby? If they did they would greatly discredit themselves in the eyes of the nation. It appears, therefore, that the Katsura Cabinet will have a good deal of latitude along one route though on the other its steps will be restricted.

Most unfortunately at this juncture Marchioness Katsura has been taken seriously ill and the doctors diagnose her trouble to be appendicitis. The Marchioness had been ailing for some time, but her health was believed to be comparatively restored until this last seizure.

Sunday, July 12.

Mr. Hitaka returned to Tokyo on the 11th inst. and proceeded at once to the Palace where he handed to Marquis Tokudaiji Prince Ito's answer to the Emperor's questions. This answer is said to have contained three important suggestions, but nothing is publicly known as to their nature. Subsequently Prince Iwakura paid a visit to Prince Yamagata and to Marquises Inouye and Matsukata. Some authorities suppose that these visits prelude a conference of Elder Statesmen at the Palace on Monday forenoon, but others think that no such conference will be necessary. The Jiji Shimpō holds the latter view, and in its issue of the 12th inst. predicted that Marquis Katsura would be summoned to the Palace either on that day or on Monday and entrusted with the duty of forming a Ministry.

The Asahi Shimbun thinks that the following will be the Cabinet:—Agriculture and Commerce, Viscount Kiyoura; Foreign Affairs, Count Komura; Home Affairs, Baron Hadano; Finance, Baron Hirata; Communications, Mr. Katsu Inouye or Baron Tsudzuki; Education, Mr. Komatsubara; Navy, Baron Saito; and Army, Baron Usagawa. Of course this list is more or less conjectural. We ourselves believe that Baron Oura will have the portfolio of Home Affairs.

It is alleged that Prince Ito's return to Japan has no political significance whatever, but that His Highness merely avails himself of the Emperor's suggestion that he should spend the hot weather in this country.

Conjectures are rife as to the policy of the new Cabinet, but the majority of onlookers seem to think that the Katsura Ministry will devote its attention mainly to foreign affairs and to finance. In foreign affairs its leading principle will be the cementing of close relations with China, and in finance it will follow the advice of Marquises Inouye and Matsukata. The Hochi Shimbun quotes an anonymous person, who is said to be in a position to acquire special information, as alleging that by postponements and economies the Cabinet hopes to be able to obtain a sum of from 50 to 60 million yen yearly which will be devoted to redeeming the national debt.

It will have been observed that complete silence has replaced the somewhat clamorous mood into which a section of the Seiyū-kai seemed to have fallen on the announcement of the Cabinet's resignation. Nothing more is heard of a general meeting of the Party nor are sounds of dissatisfaction any longer audible. The Asahi Shimbun infers that the efforts of the leaders to placate their followers have been entirely successful. The Jiji Shimpō writes a great deal on this subject but adds very little to our previous knowledge. Its conclusion is that Marquis Katsura must rely upon the Seiyū-kai, because any attempt to break up that Party or to form a coalition against it would involve a collision with Prince Ito and Marquis Saionji. No one will be disposed to doubt this conclusion.

THE NEW MINISTRY.

Monday, July 13.

Marquis Katsura was summoned to the Palace on the 12th inst. shortly after noon and received the Imperial command to form a Ministry. It is worth while to note how prominently the Elder Statesmen figure in this affair. In the first place, we have the Emperor sending Mr. Hitaka to Seoul for the purpose of consulting Prince Ito. From this mission Mr. Hitaka returned on the 11th inst. and immediately presented his report to the Throne. Thereupon Prince Iwakura was despatched by the Emperor to confer with Prince Yamagata and Marquises Inouye and Matsukata. Prince Iwakura proceeded first to call up Prince Yamagata, and then went on to Marquis Inouye's house, but finding him absent, arranged by telephone for a meeting on the following day. The same afternoon (11th) Prince Iwakura went to Kamakura where Marquis Matsukata is sojourning, and, returning to Tokyo on the 12th, visited Marquis Inouye and reached the Palace at half past eleven. The next step was to summon Marquis Katsura, and he too had no sooner received the Imperial Mandate than he proceeded to interview Prince Yamagata and Marquis Inouye, Marquis Matsukata, as we have said, being absent at Kamakura. It is very plain that the Emperor is sufficiently wise to utilize his trusted Statesmen so long as their lives are spared to work in their country's interests.

It is expected that the names of the new Ministry will be published in the course of to-day, 14th, the Emperor's approval having been obtained yesterday. There is a persistent rumour that Marquis Katsura has asked Marquis Saionji's consent to including in the new Cabinet, the names of Viscount Terauchi, Baron Saito, Baron Senge and Viscount Hotta.

As to the policy of the new Cabinet, the Asahi Shimbun quotes views which it ascribes to a leading member of the Progressist Party. As it is evident that the Progressists show an inclination to support the Katsura Ministry, considerable interest attaches to this statement. The gist of it is, first, that the expenditures on the Army and Navy will be reduced by from 40 to 50 million yen during the next few years; secondly, that a clear distinction will be drawn between debts contracted for productive and unproductive purposes and that the latter will be redeemed in the first place; thirdly, that in accordance with necessity and with the state of the market further loans may be contracted, provided always that they are for productive purposes; fourthly, that with the object of reducing administrative expenditures, reforms will be undertaken in one section of the administration; and, fifthly, that Japan shall adopt, especially with regard to Oriental affairs, a policy identical with that of Western nations.

If the above be a correct analysis of Marquis Katsura's programme, it may well be supposed that he will command the support not only of the Progressists but of all Parties in the State. Mr. Kato Masayoshi, one of the Progressist leaders, is quoted as saying that the Saionji Cabinet was bound to be shipwrecked on the rock of finance. Its management of the country's finances showed not only marked want of experience but also greatly defective judgment. It may be doubted, however, Mr. Kato non obstante, whether any Ministry could have discharged in a manner completely satisfactory the difficult task that fell to the lot of the Saionji Cabinet. Of course if Marquis Katsura and his colleagues can carry the above programme into operation, we may look for a marked improvement in the financial tone and for the re-opening of access to foreign capital as well for the removal of much of the suspicion now animating the Occident in its estimate of Japan.

The Liberal News Agency publishes what professes to be a detailed statement of the out-going Cabinet's Budgetary programme for next year. As these figures are not official we need not reproduce them in detail. The gist of the matter is this:—During the fiscal year 1907-8 a sum of 42 million yen in round numbers should have been raised by domestic loans, mainly for productive purposes but partly for unproductive. Out of that total 5 millions were not spent, and the remaining 37 millions were more than covered by surplus revenue from the year 1906-7. Passing now to the fiscal year 1908-9 the quantity of bonds floated should have been 71 millions. To meet this, however, the Cabinet decided to effect the following postponements of expenditures, namely, Army 15 millions, Navy 10 millions, Communications 8 millions, and others 5 millions, making a total of 38 millions. When to this is added the surplus from the year 1907-8 and the anticipated surplus from the year 1908-9, no difficulty is experienced in dispensing altogether with further domestic loans.

Tuesday, July 14.

The Asahi Shimbun and the Fiji Shimpō publish identical lists of the Cabinet which will doubtless be announced officially to-day or to-morrow. Other papers virtually agree with this forecast and we may therefore assume that it is correct. Some delay appears to have been entailed at the eleventh hour by a slight change in the original programme—probably the non-inclusion of Viscount Kiyoura—and it is therefore thought that the ceremony of installation may not take place immediately. The list given is as follows:—

Premier.....	Marquis Katsura.
Finance.....	Marquis Katsura.
Foreign Affairs.....	Viscount Terauchi,
	locum tenens for
	Count Komura.
Army.....	Viscount Terauchi.
Navy.....	Baron Saito.
Home Affairs.....	Baron Hirata.
Communications.....	Baron Goto.
Agriculture and Commerce.....	Baron Oura.
Education.....	Mr. Komatsubara.
Justice.....	Viscount Okabe.

As for the inclusion of Baron Goto, it is attributed primarily to the great administrative abilities he has shown, and secondly to Marquis Katsura's wish to have some new blood in the Cabinet.

There are as yet no conjectures as to Baron Goto's successor in the presidency of the South Manchuria Railway, but the impression seems to be that he will continue to hold that post with the assistance of Mr. Nakamura Zeko, the Vice-President.

Another interesting question is the occupancy of the Japanese Embassy in London. It is thought not improbable that Count Hayashi may return to a position where he proved a signal success, but the name of Mr. Inouye Katsunosuke is spoken of with assurance in some quarters.

The Asahi Shimbun publishes an interesting, if credible, item of news. It is that before forming his Cabinet finally, Marquis Katsura has taken steps to prepare an exact statement of the policy to be pursued by the new Ministry. In compiling this document his Excellency has not only taken counsel with his proposed colleagues but has also sought the advice of the Elder Statesmen so as to secure the confidence and co-operation of the latter. Our contemporary adds that this statement will be submitted for the approval of the Emperor, but that it will not be made public.

Wednesday, July 15.

The official installation of the new Cabinet took place at 3 p.m. on the 14th inst. The distribution of portfolios was as stated above. Viscount Okabe and Baron Goto were unable to attend owing to illness. It is understood that the original intention was to give the portfolio of Finance to Baron Hirata and that of Home Affairs to Baron Oura, but ultimately Baron Hirata was transferred to the Home Department by the advice of Marquis Inouye, it is said. Doubtless the reason for this change was that Baron Hirata is not popular with the business classes owing to his record in connexion with the Exchanges. Of course the assignment of the portfolio of Foreign Affairs to Viscount Terauchi is only temporary, pending the arrival of Count Komura from England. Baron Okabe's inclusion is evidently for the sake of placating the House of Peers, and Baron Goto's inclusion is due to the high reputation he has obtained as a business administrator. He ought to prove a success at the Department of Communications. The greatest interest of all attaches to Marquis Katsura's assumption of the portfolio of Finance. This is not gazetted as a temporary measure. So far as present appearances go, the Marquis intends to take upon his own shoulders full responsibility for the management of the Empire's monetary affairs, and the reasonable inference, we think, is that he has formed some working plan which he regards as applicable to the situation, and which his colleagues have pledged themselves to support. With regard to the unexpected fact that Viscount Kiyoura's name does not appear upon the slate, he himself explains that one of the principal desiderata in organising the Cabinet was to bring in some new blood, and he consequently did not desire to be included and is perfectly content to see his place occupied by a new man. The Hochi Shimbun says that Baron Tsudzuki would have been included if he had consented to take the portfolio of Justice or Education, but he wanted the Foreign Department or the Home Department, and could not reconcile himself to any comparatively inactive post.

Viscount Terauchi is quoted by the Asahi Shimbun as declaring very emphatically that there will be no reduction of armaments or postponement of expenditures further than that which has been already effected. He denounces as unpatriotic and obedient to their own selfish interest only all persons who would denude the country of proper means of defence. But we do not observe that his Excellency says any thing about financial strength as an essential element of a nation's armaments.

Very different are the utterances attributed to Baron Shibusawa by the same journal. This veteran financier, whose record places him on one of the highest pedestals in Japan's economic history, says that the inevitable tendency of human beings is to pay excessive attention to the things in which they think they excel and to neglect other matters though these are not less essential to real success. So it is that after a victorious war a nation is tempted to expand its armaments before everything else. Against such one-sided action every thoughtful person must protest. The Baron has presented this view of the case in strong terms to Marquis Inouye and Marquis Matsukata and has received from them assurances of support. He therefore places great hopes in the new Cabinet, and is persuaded that it will carry out the wishes of the business world, namely, by taking measures to increase from 37 million yen to 60 or 70 millions the sum now annually appropriated for the National Debt Sinking Fund, and that it will refrain from issuing any fresh loans even for productive purposes.

Mr. Nakano Buye, President of the Tokyo Chamber of Commerce, goes still further than Baron Shibusawa. He expects that in addition to increasing the amortization fund and refraining from fresh loans, the new Cabinet will find means to abolish the taxes on salt and on communications and will also contrive to materially reduce the income tax and the business tax. He considers that short of these measures nothing can restore the country to a state of prosperity and financial soundness.

Mr. Sonoda Kokichi, speaking through the columns of the Nichi Nichi Shimbun, is equally emphatic. He says that business circles in Japan unanimously look to the new Cabinet to deal prudently with the financial situation. The enormous increase of Japan's national expenditures in the sequel of the war with Russia is out of all reasonable proportion to her economic capacity. Her outlays have trebled since she drew the sword four and a half years ago. It is true that they trebled at the time of the war with China also, but the signal difference was that on the latter occasion she received a substantial indemnity and did not contract any foreign debt, whereas on the former occasion she did not receive one sen of indemnity and emerged from the war with a foreign debt of many hundreds of millions. The cry is that she has entered the ranks of first-class Powers and that she must live in accordance with her new station. It is like the case of a poor man mortgaging his property in order to go into fashionable society. Such imprudence can have only one end, and the business men of the country earnestly look to the new Cabinet to grapple the problem boldly and treat it so as to restore the nation to a state of financial health.

Mr. Ozaki Yukio urges the Cabinet to depart from its traditional policy of "deeds not words." He considers it unconstitutional that a Ministry should not take a nation into its confidence.

Other business men are quoted but their sentiments do not differ from the above.

Of course the Tokyo press has a great deal to say on the subject. The Asahi Shinbun gives prominence to two points, both of which it strongly applauds, namely, that the new Cabinet comes into office unshackled by any prejudice to its predecessor, and that the old Cabinet went out of office without securing so much as one nomination for its supporters to the House of Peers.

The Fiji Shimpō also attaches importance to the former feature, and notes that whereas the Saionji Cabinet had to take office on the very eve of the Diet's session, which fact obliged it to adopt the budgetary lines of its predecessor, the Katsura Cabinet succeeds to power without any such embarrassment. The Nichi Nichi Shinbun takes the ground that upon the shoulders of Marquis Katsura and his followers rests the prime responsibility for the present financial trouble, and that upon them consequently devolves the obligation to retrieve the situation. They have had their period of repentance and if, on resuming the reins of power, they set themselves earnestly to retrieve past errors, they may count on the nation's forgiveness. Other important journals, as the Nippon, the Mainichi Denpo and the Hochi, fix their eyes with great satisfaction and hope on the fact that the Prime Minister has himself assumed the portfolio of Finance, thus practically admitting that economics constitute the most important feature of the new Ministry.

Rumours continue to prevail that a large section of the Progressist Party under the leadership of Mr. Oishi Masami is desirous of openly joining hands with the Daido Club and the Katsura Cabinet. On the other hand, the section led by Mr. Inukai Ki is opposed to this course and advocates adherence to the old groove of liberal independence. In some quarters it is thought that this difference of views will lead to a final split in the ranks of the Progressists, but in truth there have been so many imminent ruptures within that Party during the last few years without any ultimate disaster that we are justified in expecting the discovery of some via media on this occasion also. It is scarcely conceivable that any considerable number of the Progressists should turn their backs so completely upon their own record as to become the supporters of a non-party Cabinet. Any of them who adopted such a course would probably find that they had succeeded in discrediting themselves much more than in weakening their old comrades or strengthening their new allies. We may take this occasion to offer a tribute of admiration to Mr. Inukai Ki who for steadfastness and patience sets an example to all politicians.

Several publicists continue to busy themselves with conjectures about the attitude of the Seiyun-kai, but the fact of paramount importance is that the great Party has abandoned the somewhat truculent mood which it displayed at the outset and that it is evidently prepared to support the Katsura Cabinet within certain limits.

Of course the press has much to say about the change of Cabinets but we do not find in these utterances anything particularly novel or instructive. The most curious feature is the attitude of the Nippon, which persists in thinking and in saying that the Saionji Cabinet was overthrown by a mean and treacherous device, and that consequently the anger of the Seiyun-kai, though temporarily allayed, is likely to flame out at any moment. The Chuo Shinbun, whose articles possess special value since the paper is regarded as a Seiyun-kai organ, offers a tribute to the dexterity and tact of Marquis Katsura. Prince Ito has hitherto been celebrated for turning a captivating countenance in 8 directions simultaneously, but his pupil Marquis Katsura excels him so greatly that the eight may be multiplied into sixteen. The great merit shown by Katsura Cabinets is their power of cohesion, and it is evident that the Marquis is determined to secure that feature before all others on the present occasion. Hence his care in selecting portfolio holders. He has two great difficulties to overcome: one that he will have to administer affairs without a majority in the Lower House; the other that foreign States will inevitably associate him with a military policy. The Chuo evidently thinks that the Marquis will be able to overcome both these difficulties for a time anyway.

The Nichi Nichi Shinbun takes in our humble opinion a most intelligent position. It argues that the Government has now a unique opportunity to take the nation fully into its confidence on the subject of finance. It can not be denied that with all the will in the world to understand the exact position of affairs, the best authorities are more or less bewildered, and bewilderment in such matters is synonymous with distrust. The Katsura Cabinet has it in its power to reassure its own countrymen and foreigners also by placing before them an unequivocal and exhaustive statement.

We gather, however, from the Kokumin, which now reverts to its old status of Government organ, that the Katsura Cabinet will take for motto "deeds not words." Its main attention will be directed to finance and foreign affairs, but it will not make any statement to-day at all events of the policy it intends to pursue. We do not read this as conflicting with the Nichi Nichi's advice, for an exposé of financial conditions and a declaration of policy are two very different things.

Thursday, July 16.

The Asahi Shinbun publishes a statement for which it does not profess to be responsible, to the effect that Baron Oura's transfer to the Department of Agriculture and Commerce from the Home Department, over which he was expected to preside in the new Ministry, was due to agitation fomented by the Seiyun-kai. The Daido Club was most anxious to see the portfolio of Home Affairs allotted to Baron Oura, who is a staunch opponent of party Government and who was expected to use his influence in the direction of effecting extensive changes in the personnel of the local Governors so as to substitute supporters of the Daido Club for Seiyun-kai nominees. It was this prospect that alarmed the Seiyun-kai and induced them to assume a menacing attitude, and they became correspondingly calm when the Baron was transferred to the Department of Agriculture and Commerce where his power to influence the political situation will be very small.

It is expected that two almost unknown men will be appointed to the important positions of Chief of Police in Tokyo and Chief of the Criminal Law Bureau in the Home Department. For the former position Mr. Kame Eizaburo, now Prefect of Miyagi, is confidently spoken of, and for the latter Mr. Arimatsu Eigi, now Prefect of Miye. This forecast is based upon the idea that Marquis Katsura wishes to give as little prominence as possible to non-party politicians.

It will readily be conceived that rumour continues to be very busy about the attitude of the political parties. Various newspapers publish various forecasts, but as these forecasts, in accordance with a custom peculiar to Japanese journalism, are attributed to anonymous politicians, it is impossible to tell what measure of trust, if any, should be placed in them. Opinions concur in saying that the most favourable attitude which can be expected from the Seiyun-kai is one of armed neutrality. They will not be guided by sentiment, but will treat each of the Cabinet's measures on the basis of its merits or demerits. They profess not to believe in the possibility of any considerable section of the Progressists joining hands with the Katsura Cabinet, and they think that an essentially military Ministry will be compelled to have recourse to essentially military methods, namely dissolution of the Diet. On the other hand, another set of anonymous prophets declare that relations have already been established between Baron Goto and the Oishi section of the Progressist Party, so that nothing now remains except to watch whether this movement secures the adhesion of the Inukai section. It would probably occur to our readers that inasmuch as by coquetting with party politicians who could only bring him a slight access of parliamentary strength, Marquis Katsura would effectually forego all chance of Seiyun-kai support, such a step would hardly be consistent with the tact and dexterity he has hitherto displayed.

Moreover, Count Okuma is quoted by the Hochi Shinbun as saying the very hardest possible things about the Katsura Cabinet, and as scathingly ridiculing any people who are silly enough to place confidence in its administration. In fact, unless Count Okuma is altogether wrongly reported—which is not probable, seeing that the Hochi Shinbun is the Progressists' organ—it would be virtually impossible for any section of his Party to join hands with the Katsura Cabinet.

The continuance in office of Viscount Terauchi and Baron Saito seems to be universally regarded as a clear proof that the Cabinet will not undertake any postponement of military and naval expenditures in addition to those already effected. We may point out, however, in this context that as Viscount Terauchi and Baron Saito endorsed a large reduction of armaments' expenditures when the Saionji Cabinet was in power, it is not impossible that, yielding to financial exigencies, they may endorse another reduction under the Katsura Cabinet. The only question is whether any substantial economies are possible without changing the military establishment itself; in other words, without reducing the number of Divisions. It is doubtful whether any Cabinet would consent to that measure at the present moment.

COLONEL HOBSON.

Saturday, July 11.

It begins to be very doubtful whether Colonel Hobson of Santiago fame has not fallen into a condition calling for restraint at the hands of the law. The statements made by him at the Democratic meeting in Denver show either an almost inconceivable degree of imagination or a plainly disordered mind. He declared that a war with Japan was inevitable; that President Roosevelt had avowed the fact to him, Colonel Hobson, himself two or three weeks ago; that Japan was awaiting a good opportunity to begin the campaign; that she had twenty millions of troops ready; that she was buying from Brazil all the new war-ships ordered by the latter in England, and that if a Democratic President were elected, he must be prepared for war at short notice. Such talk is not that of a responsible man. If Colonel Hobson believes it, he must be demented; if he does not believe it, he is criminal. One is not surprised to learn that his remarks elicited expressions of extreme impatience from his audience. Cries of "no, no!" "fool!" "Its a pity you were not lost at Santiago" and so forth, were heard on all sides, and ultimately the audience attempted to drag the insane speaker from the platform. Probably such men are to be reckoned with as inevitable products of the age. Were their audiences fully discriminating, the danger of their madly bellicose harangues would be small. But the telegrams say that the New York Herald reproduces Hobson's wild remarks and makes them the text of a veiled prediction that war between the United States and Japan is inevitable. What is to be said of a great journal which lends its influence to foment such an agitation? It would be an appropriate step to open an inquiry whether a man so obviously ignorant of the very alphabet of belligerent operations as Colonel Hobson is should be retained in his country's service, and it would be still more appropriate to consider seriously whether a journal undertaking to propagate his insanity should be suffered to live. Of course we all know that Colonel Hobson is not America and that he does not begin to represent the opinion of the people of the United States. But what if a Japanese Army officer of even remotely commensurate renown were to engage in such a campaign? Would the West agree to differentiate his utterances from the sentiment of the nation?

Besides the matter did not end with Colonel Hobson's dementia. It is true that the audience tried to pull him off the platform, but observe the resolutions which this same audience subsequently adopted:—"Our Party shall fully fortify the coasts of the United States and shall create a Navy competent to afford full protection to citizens of the United States in any and every part of the latter's territory. We further support the principle that complete protection shall be given to all aliens residing in our midst under the provisions of treaties or conventions. But we oppose the admission of Asiatics who are not competent to become naturalized citizens of the Republic, and whose presence in our midst is calculated to give rise to racial competition." Read in the context of Colonel Hobson's wild utterances, these resolutions have an ugly sound, nor is their effect materially lessened by the thought that they are inspired mainly by a desire to bid for the support of the Labour Party. When a country's political leaders find that any party in the State is sufficiently powerful to be worth courting, the programme they adopt to win support at the hustings is destined to be their ultimate creed sooner or later.

Sunday, July 12.

The President has officially denied the statement attributed to him by Colonel Hobson in the latter's speech at Denver. President Roosevelt did not say that war was inevitable between Japan and the United States. What he said was that if the United States Fleet was sufficiently strong, there need not be any fear of a breach of the peace on the Pacific coasts.

The Jiji Shimpō has a leading article on this subject. The gist of what it says is that Colonel Hobson's violence and exaggerations tend merely to discredit him, as was shown by the demeanour of the meeting towards his speech. On the other hand, the fact remains that an anti-Asiatic plank was included in the platform of the Democratic Party, and that in order to curry favour with the labouring classes, the Democrat leaders have committed their Party to a policy entirely unworthy of the principles of liberty which have hitherto been the boast of that great Party.

What we can not choose but wonder is whether men like Colonel Hobson and Mr. Millard really believe what they say. Millard's book on the Far East is chiefly remarkable for the stupendous misstatements it contains, and his latter assertion, according to the telegraph, is that the Japanese Government assembled the principal business men of the nation and proposed to return to China the Tatsu-Maru indemnity in order to check the growth of the boycott. Now what is to be said about such a story? Nobody endowed with the smallest measure of political sagacity could believe it for a moment. Millard, then, has the choice of figuring as a man devoid of intelligence or indifferent to truth.

Monday, July 13.

According to telegrams from London, British publicists agree in condemning Colonel Hobson as being incapable of extending his vision beyond the horizon of party interests, and as having no sense of the interests of the country at large. The Times says that persons who desire to stir up trouble between Japan and America will probably utilize his utterances as a weapon for creating dissension, but the great London journal is confident that the Japanese nation will not mistake the statements of this officer for the sentiments of the American nation at large.

It is well that there is no Colonel Hobson in Japan. We have seen what an immense smoke was generated by the petty spark of Count Okuma's Kobe utterances. The Count denied on that occasion that he had been accurately reported, and it was palpable that the newspaper accounts of his speech were glaringly inconsistent with previous utterances of his. Nevertheless certain newspapers insisted on falling into a state of mental ferment and tried to work up their readers to a similar frenzy.

What would happen to these newspapers and their mischief-making comrades if a Japanese Colonel Hobson were to appear upon the scene, and if the Progressist Party, for example, were openly to adopt as a plank in its platform the cry of Occidental exclusion?

THE TOKYO RAILWAY.

We stated in our last issue that a meeting of the Directors of the Tokyo Railway was to be held on the 9th inst. for the purpose of considering a proposal received from the City Council in the sense that the application for municipalization should be presented again as the new Cabinet might regard the question with more favour than the former Cabinet had done. After careful consideration the Directors unanimously decided that this proposal could not be entertained. Mr. Inouye was instructed to convey to the Mayor of Tokyo a copy of the Directors' resolution. His Honour is said to have urged reconsideration, but Mr. Inouye said that the case was hopeless as the Directors had been absolutely unanimous.

In these circumstances the question of the resignation of the Mayor and the Aldermen has again been brought upon the tapis and there appears to be a good deal of agitation in favour of it.

The Mainichi Shimbun insists strongly that the Directors also must resign. Everybody now sees that the present system of fares must be amended, but if that is to be done quietly and satisfactorily, the Directorate of the Company must be changed as the present Directors have forfeited public confidence. Our contemporary alleges that whereas the Directors have men like Mr. Kondo Rempai and Baron Shibusawa to refer to for advice, they do not take advantage of the counsels of these eminent men of business, and they thus fail to obtain the trust of the public.

It is to be hoped that the affairs of this important enterprise are not to be carried into the realm of sentiment and politics.

FORMOSA.

Telegrams from Formosa state that the most obdurate of the aborigines, namely the inhabitants of the South Nanwo district, have tendered their submission and handed over their arms and ammunition. Steps are now being taken to construct a road from Gilan to Taito on the east coast, which latter place has hitherto been accessible from the sea only. Judging by the success which has attended all the recent operations of the Aiyu line, we may conclude that the complete subjugation of the aborigines is almost accomplished. The task seems to have proved easier than was originally anticipated, but before forming a final opinion upon that point it is essential to know the nature of the organisation employed by the Japanese. They have proved themselves so thorough and far-seeing in military matters that their successes seem to be achieved with the facility which marks all the results of complete competence. We see nothing of the "extermination" which elicited a plaintive note from a recent correspondent of an English journal. There has in fact been very little bloodshed. The aborigines seem to have recognised the futility of resistance, and the only question is whether in making act of submission they intend to remain subdued.

KOREA.

Friday, July 10.

The Kokumin Shinbun has an interesting paragraph which professes to quote a statement made by Prince Ito with regard to Korean affairs. The Prince says that he has regarded the solution of the Korean problem as the main business of his life for some years, and that ever since the conclusion of the Convention in 1906 he has laboured to obtain international recognition of the fact that Korea is a Japanese protectorate. The secret mission sent by the Emperor to the Hague last year was rather fortunate than otherwise, since it precipitated events and thus helped to clear the situation. Thereafter it had been possible to inaugurate and enforce reforms with greater vigour and thoroughness. Lately important steps had been taken in two directions. One was the quelling of the insurrection. This had been entirely successful so far as the political elements of the disturbance were concerned, but there remained still the bandits who had played into the hands of the insurgents. These were difficult to deal with in a drastic manner, but in time they would be thoroughly eradicated. The second step was the re-organisation of the local administrative system, which measure had now been effected and would probably lead to satisfactory results. New codes had also been enacted, the judiciary had been re-modelled, the currency system had been reformed, the finances had been put in order and various minor improvements had been effected. Finally the Korean officials had been again and again urged to divest themselves of personal ambition in the interest of the country at large and to remember before everything that they are Koreans. On the whole therefore it might be said that the first stage of the regeneration of Korea had been successfully accomplished.

Sunday, July 12.

The Emperor of Korea is sending Mr. Chamberlain Kim to Japan to visit the Crown Prince. This official is to accompany Prince Ito.

There is to be a Japanese-Korean exhibition in Seoul in 1910. According to rumour the articles exhibited will ultimately be brought to Tokyo for the purposes of the great Exhibition, but it is not easy to see how such an arrangement can be conveniently made.

A telegram to the Kokumin from Seoul says that Prince Ito contemplates a large reduction of the staff of the Residency-General, and that this will involve the resignation of Mr. Tsurubara.

It is officially reported that between the 7th and the 9th inst. there were 26 collisions between the insurgents and the Japanese troops. Of the former 106 were killed and 51 taken prisoners.

Monday, July 13.

A telegram from Seoul to the Asahi Shinbun describes a curious development of the insurrection. It is that on the 10th inst. a body of 200 Koreans, under the leadership of Yi Pongyun, crossed the Tumen from Russian territory and surrounded the camp of a Japanese detachment stationed at Sin Asan. The Japanese resisted for some time, but their ammunition having become exhausted, they finally retired with the loss of one killed. The Jiji Shimpō, which has a similar but more detailed telegram, states that these men were originally bandits and that they have been outlawed alike by Russia and by China. After their success at Sin Asan the insurgents pushed on to Kyong-heun, where they met with even greater success and inflicted somewhat heavy loss on the Japanese detachment. Two companies have moved to attack them, and in the meantime the Japanese residing at Unkwai Bay have withdrawn.

We may note here that the Seoul Press of the 10th inst. warns the public against drawing too large deductions from the fact that several of the insurgent leaders were recently captured. If the insurgents were duly organised and were acting in pursuance of an intelligent and concerted plan, the loss of prominent leaders would doubtless be serious. But although the captured men are not without reputation, they can not be regarded as anything better than the heads of small semi-isolated bands, and thus their removal from the scene of action does not greatly affect the issue. Our Seoul contemporary further states that the apparent break-up of the insurgents into small bands does not necessarily suggest the approaching collapse of the movement. The dimensions of each body of men may be purely a matter depending upon commissariat convenience, and the Seoul Press concludes by saying:—"As a matter of fact, many thousands of people are still under arms, and although the disturbance is certainly not extending, we cannot help recognizing that the suppression of the trouble requires at least several months more of hard and persevering work on the part of our military and police."

On the 12th inst. a farewell entertainment was given in Prince Ito's honour by the official and non-official Japanese in Seoul. In replying to the toast of his health, the Prince is said to have denied the truth of certain rumours recently circulated in the sense that Japan's policy towards Korea had undergone a change. There had been no change. Japan was irrevocably determined to pursue the programme mapped out after the war, and she would not depart from it unless the Koreans by their conduct compelled her to do so. This significant utterance can not be mistaken. It evidently means that Japan will limit herself to a protectorate of Korea unless the Koreans by their own acts compel her to reduce the Peninsula to the status of a dependency.

The Jiji Shimpō and the Mainichi Dempo agree in stating that Prince Ito has definitely resigned his post in Korea, that on his return to Tokyo he will be appointed President of the Privy Council, and that Prince Yamagata who now holds that office will devote himself solely to military matters. It goes without saying that if this forecast be correct, Viscount Sone will be appointed Resident-General in Seoul. That would account for the fact that the Viscount is not expected to receive a portfolio in the new Cabinet.

Wednesday, July 15.

The Korean Throne has granted a sum of 100,000 yen for the relief of sufferers, foreign and native, at the hands of the insurgents, and the duty of apportioning the money has been assigned to the Minister of the Interior.

The work of organising the assistant gendarmerie in Korea is said to be progressing very favourably. Applications for enrollment have been so numerous that it is probable that the originally contemplated establishment will be somewhat enlarged.

Prince Ito's departure from Seoul, which was to have taken place on the 15th inst., was hastened by one day, and in consequence the meeting of statesmen and senior officials which had been fixed for the 14th inst. was exchanged for a large dinner at the Residency-General on the evening of the 13th. There were about 500 persons present and the Prince is said to have spoken for about an hour. He discussed the whole course of events since the establishment of a Japanese protectorate over the Peninsula, but the details of this part of the speech have not been telegraphed. With regard to his own return to Korea after a short interval, he said that nothing had yet been fixed and that he would be guided by the instructions of his Sovereign. Alluding to the rumours which had been current at the time of the appointment of a Vice-Resident-General, the Prince said that the office had been created at his suggestion as a matter of administrative necessity and that no deep significance was to be attached to it.

The Prince left Seoul at 5.10 p.m. on the 14th inst. and it need hardly be said that his departure was signalised by the assembly of a very large number of leading Korean and Japanese officials and prominent Japanese residents.

We observe that some of our local contemporaries have reproduced an article from the Japan Chronicle which, it need hardly be said, is emphatically anti-Japanese. The article is founded on statements made to its writer by a casual Korean acquaintance whom he met in a Korean theatre. With reference to the article the Seoul Press makes the following remarks:—

The casual reader will probably carry away the impression that the Japanese officials are accused of dumping "Japanese coolies without a sen of their own" "into the Korean villages, completely disorganising rural life and practically living on the all too poverty-stricken natives." Is that the impression intended to convey? If so, we have no hesitation in saying that the allegation is entirely without foundation. If the charge be that inpecunious Japanese immigrants are invading the rural districts of Korea, we feel scarcely less confidence in characterising it as a gross exaggeration. It is quite conceivable that here and there there might be found black sheep among the Japanese settlers in the interior, as black sheep are invariably present in any community. But nothing could be more unjust and cruel than to describe the simple and kindly Japanese farmers who are beginning to settle in Korean villages as "coolies without a sen of their own" and as living upon the poverty-stricken Koreans. These agricultural settlers who constitute the great bulk of the Japanese moving to country districts, come with money which they invest in the soil and, moreover, generally give employment to natives at rates never before even dreamed of by them. As to the complaint that "the Japanese police invariably favour their nationals" against the Koreans, this is not the first time we hear of it, but thus far we have not had any occasion to deal with any specific instance, for no such instance has ever come to our personal notice or been reported to us. Concerning the alleged delay in issuing passports to Koreans intending to go abroad, we can safely say in general that no unnecessary delay has ever taken place, and that where a delay has occurred there has always been some good cause for it. If Mr. Douglas Young will disclose the identity of his Korean informant, we promise him to find out and publish all that is ascertainable in the matter. There are in the article other injurious accusations against the Japanese in Korea, which, being unsupported by any specific evidence, defy any attempt at refutation, and which, consequently, it is useless to notice.

Thursday, July 16.

With regard to the sum of 100,000 yen which has been allotted by the Imperial Household in Korea for the relief of sufferers at the hands of the insurgents, the telegraph says that these sufferers number 76 killed, and 74 wounded, and that 5,998 houses were destroyed in addition to 11 houses which were in foreign occupation. How many of these outrages have been wrongfully attributed to the Japanese, we wonder.

The record continues to show that the campaign against the insurgents is being vigorously carried on. Between the 10th and 13th inst. there were 29 fights which resulted in the death of 115 of the insurgents and the capture of 76.

On the 8th inst. the insurgents attacked four tax collectors, of whom two were Japanese, in the province of Hwanghaido and literally cut them to pieces. The bodies are said to have been shockingly mutilated.

Two Korean Envoys are accompanying Prince Ito to Japan. One of them, Mr. Om, a Court Councillor, is coming to visit the Korean Prince Imperial, but the object of the other—Mr. Kim, a member of the Privy Council—is not stated.

An important piece of news is telegraphed. The Emperor of Korea has two had teeth extracted by a Japanese dentist. This is the first surgical operation ever performed on the person of a Korean potentate and it is said to have caused something like a panic in the Palace. But peace of mind has been happily restored.

During the war, rails were laid between Chiyongjin and Hoiryong in the north of Korea for purposes of transporting goods. It was a very rough line, the waggons being man-pull. This little railway, which measures 52 miles, subsequently came into the possession of Mr. Amenomiya and other enterprising Japanese and has been carried on successfully ever since. The gradual development of the region now calls for some improvement of the road, and an application in that sense was recently presented by the holders of the line. But Tokyo papers state that the War Department, while recognising the necessity for improvement, questions the expediency of leaving the line in private hands, especially when the Colonization Company is on the eve of being formed. It is therefore expected that the application will be refused. We wonder whether this is to be read as an intimation that the Government intends to protect the Colonization Company and to reserve to it all the plums ripening in Korea. Japan ought to have learned by this time the unwisdom of such a policy.

CHINA.

Friday, July 10.

The latest about the Fakuken Railway is a telegram from Peking saying that the Chunwai Jipao of Shanghai announces the withdrawal of Japan's objections. We do not think that any credence attaches to this statement. The truth is that the representatives of the British Syndicate have succeeded in cleverly thrusting out of sight the facts of the case and serving up for public observation its sentimental side only.

It would seem that judicial horrors are as prevalent as ever in China. The South-west Chilli correspondent of the N.-C. Daily News writes as follows, under date of June 18th:—

Much has been written about the new code of laws in China and the ameliorated form of punishments introduced by recent edicts. As is so often the case with edicts, this one is a dead letter in this part of the metropolitan province, judging by what occurred in the adjoining city not long since. A man from Kansu had returned home with some silver, and the villagers were proud of having a wealthy man as a neighbour. But he had poor relatives, and they asked for loans, which were refused. Then a sudden descent was made one midnight, and about two thousand ounces of silver were stolen by a gang of about a dozen men. The official, a new arrival, who succeeded a man notorious for incompetence in keeping the country free from robbers and salt smugglers, was in luck's way, for he determined to settle this case in a speedy and effective manner. It happened that some of the silver, bearing a Kansu chop, was sold to a bank near the city, so the bankers were arrested. Then, one of the yamen runners was found dead one morning, having been put out of the way by accomplices, for dead men tell no tales. Soon about two dozen men were under arrest, innocent and guilty. But to arrive at the true state of affairs, as he thought, the official made eight men kneel on the chains, then inserted burning incense between their nostrils till the skin and muscle fell or shrivelled away. Other tortures were inflicted, too, such as burning incense on the bare back of the men while their bodies dangled from a beam. Confession was easy under these afflictions, and some innocent people were dragged into it when the official insisted on the sufferers saying who their accomplices were, for, in their agony, they named men who were not friendly with themselves, and these were arrested. The end has now come, for eight men were beheaded, others are to be kept in durance for a term of years, but the general belief is that several innocent ones have been sacrificed. One man has had to die because his brother, probably a guilty party, ran away. And that is the new China, for the official is a comparatively young man, who professes to be a man of progressive ideas and some Western training.

The treatment of lunatics is also another horror, as witness the following from the same journal:—

I have lived in this market town of Lieuo for about six years, and during that time about a dozen cases of insanity in this vicinity have come under my notice and some of them under my treatment.

I have seen three cases chained to trees and exposed to the weather; one of them in the dead of winter and left to starve. Not because of cruelty particularly, but because the houses of the poor are so small and so rickety that a crazy man would tear one down if confined in it. So they can do no better and in many cases cannot provide the food for one upon whom they have, perhaps, previously depended for food themselves.

The Chinese know nothing of the proper treatment for the insane, and it seems as if all the treatment they get can act only as a preventative to recovery.

Saturday, July 11.

In addition to the Kwangtung and Kwangsi inundations the Yangtze valley appears to be threatened. The water has risen to an exceptional height in the great river and several villages along the banks have been more or less invaded. Unless the weather changes a serious calamity is apprehended.

It is stated that preparations for opening the new service of steamers between Dairen and Shanghai have progressed so far as to render it certain that the service will commence from the fixed time, namely the month of August. It is fully expected that the steamers will have to be run at a loss in the early days, but Dairen promises to be an important business centre in the near future. Meanwhile the new line will certainly afford great facilities for passengers and mails.

There are vague telegrams from Mukden which appear to indicate that the negotiations between China and Japan are not making particularly satisfactory progress. We presume that the negotiations referred to are those connected with the framing of regulations for the operation of the Yalu Timber Felling Convention, and perhaps with the question of Kwantung salt. At all events, the news is that while the demeanour of the Chinese delegates is quite friendly, their proceedings are evidently dictated by the rights-recovery mood.

Sunday, July 12.

It is reported that the Emperor of China is very ill, but this may probably prove an exaggeration as usual. His Majesty was too unwell, however, to give audience to General Count Fukushima, who has arrived in Peking.

Rumour has it that a strong party is developing in Peking against the establishment of constitutional government. The leaders of this opposition are said to point to Persia and Russia as illustrations of the danger of that system.

It is reported that the Chinese Government has refused its consent to Germany's proposal for building a dock at a suitable place on the coast of Shantung.

Monday, July 13.

The Chinese ladies of Hongkong, matrons and maidens alike, have opened a large bazaar the proceeds of which are to be devoted to aiding the sufferers by the inundations. The Governor was present at the opening ceremony as were also the Consuls of the United States and Germany. This, so far as we know, is the first instance of anything of the kind in China.

The Viceroy of Yun-kwei, Mr. Shih Liang, has resigned his position and is said to be determined on going out of office. No reason is assigned by the telegraph, but it may be assumed that the incident is connected with the recent frontier troubles.

It will be remembered that Baron Goto recently spoke of an Intelligence Bureau at Tairen, the object of which was to collect information about all matters connected with trade, industry and agriculture, and to place the results of these researches at the disposal of all nationalities. It was to be inferred from Baron Goto's statement that such a bureau had already come into existence, but we gather from a telegram published yesterday in Tokyo that the bureau is only now in process of formation.

Wednesday, July 15.

There are telegrams from Peking this morning showing that a portion of the project for the establishment of a national assembly has been promulgated. Evidently this work is not making such rapid progress as was hoped at one time.

News from Kilin shows that a strong opposition is gradually growing up to the construction of the Changchun-Kilin Railway as a joint enterprise. A number of the leading Chinese residents of Kilin are said to have addressed to Peking emphatic memorials on the subject. This seems likely to raise another question between Peking and Tokyo. The Chinese are distinctly pledged by treaty to make the enterprise a joint affair, and as the line will be virtually a branch of the South Manchuria Railway, Japan is most unlikely to allow it to be constructed and owned entirely by the Chinese.

News has been received of a riot at Ying-shan in the province of Anhui. There was the usual feature of such affairs in China, namely, the wrecking of the Christian place of worship.

A Japanese traveller who has just returned from Mongolia to Tieling is quoted by the Mainichi Dempo as saying that many people in Mongolia believe in a Russo-Chinese alliance to fight Japan; others believe in a China-Japan alliance to fight Russia, but the great majority place credit in a Russo-Japanese combination for the partition of Mongolia. It appears from this traveller's account that there is a feeling of great uneasiness and that the Dalai Lama is doing his best to allay it.

Thursday, July 16.

Mr. Shih Liang, Viceroy of Yun-Kwei, who tendered his resignation some days ago and was refused permission to retire by the Throne, has again asked to be relieved of office. The reason he assigns is that France is largely increasing her military force in the border regions, and that a corresponding step should be taken on China's part, but the Viceroy has no funds for the purpose and cannot see any way of obtaining money. He therefore urges that an official of greater administrative and financial ability should be appointed to the Viceroyalty.

It seems to be true that the Governor-General of Indo China has forwarded to the Government in Paris an application for two more brigades of troops, the three brigades now stationed in that region being insufficient to deal with the turbulent conditions that exist along the border. Not only do numbers of freebooters frequent the district but the revolutionists also make it a convenient rendezvous. It is not unnatural that the Viceroy of Yun-Kwei should feel uneasy in the circumstances, however convinced he may be of the bona fides of France's intention.

News from Kilin indicates that the movement to exclude Japan from partnership in the Kilin-Changchun Railway enterprise is developing large proportions. The Manchus of the Eight Banner Corps are said to have formed a committee of 300 persons whose business it will be to carry on a propaganda in favour of this new access of the rights-recovery mania. It appears that there exist in various places throughout the Three Provinces organised bodies calling themselves associations for the promotion of self-government. The Kilin branch of this movement is said to be closely connected with the railroad propaganda, and Mr. Hayashi, the Japanese Consul in Kilin, has sent to the office of this branch a warning that Japan will not agree to any change of programme in the matter of the Railway.

The negotiations for drawing up detailed regulations connected with the Yalu Timber Felling Industry are said to be progressing favourably in Mukden. A necessity having arisen to procure some local information, Major-General Kojima proceeded to Antung for that purpose, and on his return to Mukden, which was expected to take place on the 15th inst., the last stages of the negotiations were to be entered and the draft is expected to be finished by the 20th inst.

THE "UNAGI KAI"

The leading bankers of Tokyo, whose meetings have now come to be called by the above name in consideration of the place where they were first held, came together on the 8th inst. in the Mitsui Club. The proceedings opened with a speech from Marquis Matsukata, who, after alluding to the history of the adoption of the gold standard by Japan and to the great advantages which had accrued from the taking of that step, said that one of the most important questions now calling for solution was tariff revision, and that financiers and business men should devote close attention to it. Baron Shibusawa and Messrs. Sonoda and Toyokawa then spoke, and it was ultimately decided that the Government should be invited to take various steps for the improvement of the financial situation. The first of these relates to the payment of the national debt. According to the present system, the scheme of amortization is based upon a total debt of 1700 million yen, and after the payment of interest there remains a sum of only 37 million yen for purposes of annual redemption. The bankers think that this sum should be increased by from 25 to 40 millions, so as to raise the yearly redemptions to from 60 to 75 millions. They would obtain money for this purpose not by issuing bonds or increasing the taxes but by administrative economies. As to the method of redemption, the bankers are said to have stated that they do not insist upon lot drawing as preferable to discounting, but that whichever plan seemed advantageous at the time might be adopted. In the second place, they urged that the extension of the railway system should be carried out slowly and that the Government should adopt the policy of improving the lines already built rather than that of adding to their length. The bankers think that it is better to perfect what one has got than to make imperfect additions to it. With regard to tariff revision, the bankers decided that, apart from the investigations now officially carried on, business men should examine the problem from their own point of view and report upon it.

THE SOCIALIST QUESTION.

As is usually the case with disquieting rumours, full investigation shows that there is no direct basis whatever for the story which attributed the resignation of the Saionji Cabinet to a charge preferred by Prince Yamagata about undue leniency towards socialism. The facts are simply these. Some time ago certain Japanese subjects residing in the United States enrolled themselves as members of a party of Americans professing extreme socialistic doctrines. About the same period somewhat similar doctrines found vogue among the teachers of a private school in Japan and were embodied in a circular distributed among the troops of a certain regiment. This latter fact having come to the knowledge of Prince Yamagata, he naturally conveyed information to Marquis Saionji, but it appeared that the Cabinet had already taken appropriate steps with regard not only to the school in question but also to the Japanese socialists in America. These are the sparks which some imaginative folks endeavoured to fan into a conflagration in connexion with the resignation of the Ministry. The Jiji Shimpō, we observe, writes an illuminating article on the subject. It altogether ridicules the apprehensions which a few people seem to entertain about the growth of socialism in Japan. Socialism has no footing in this country as yet, nor is there any indication that it will gain a footing, in the near future at all events. Prior to the war with Russia, a small coterie of men calling themselves socialists argued vehemently against the opening of hostilities and published a newspaper organ to propagate their creed. But they soon dwindled into insignificance, and although a periodical of so-called socialist views continues to be published, it has no influence, nor does it serve any purpose apparently except to furnish material for occasional comment on the part of amused readers. As for the Army, the Jiji ridicules the idea that socialism has the least chance of spreading in its ranks. What is wanted is the adoption of more strenuous measures, not against socialism, but against abuse of power on the part of non-commissioned and commissioned officers.

PROFESSOR ICHIKI.

Through the columns of the Nichi Nichi Shimbun Dr. Ichiki emphatically denies the rumour which attributes to him a leading part in the agitation fomented by some newsmongers against the Saionji Cabinet. The learned jurist, as our readers will remember, was reported to have propounded the doctrine that the large latitude given to the Bench by the new penal code, especially with regard to forgeries of Imperial rescripts and of the Imperial Seal, is calculated to encourage the growth of republicanism and even socialism. He points out that he himself was one of the committee for the revision of the code, that its provisions may be said to be in part his own work, and that he has never raised in the remotest degree such a question as that now attributed to him. We strongly suspect that this absurd agitation has a dishonest origin, though what object its promoters hope to accomplish we can not attempt to conjecture.

We may add that Prince Yamagata also wholly denies having had anything to do with the Cabinet crisis and says that, whatever rumours may be circulated, Marquis Saionji will surely not attach any importance to them.

PRINCE ITO.

It would seem that there is no truth in the rumour published on the 13th inst. in Tokyo to the effect that Prince Ito is about to resign his appointment in Korea. At a banquet given to him by the Japanese residents of Seoul on the evening of the 12th inst., the Prince emphatically denied the truth of the report, and added that the change of Cabinet in Japan would not in any way affect the policy of this State towards Korea. In that respect things would remain entirely unaltered, and Japanese who had settled in Korea might rest assured that they would continue to enjoy efficient protection. Nevertheless the Jiji Shimpō insists on crediting the original statement that Prince Ito on his return to Japan will be named President of the Privy Council and that the present Vice-President, Count Higashikaze, will be replaced by Viscount Kiyoura. The Jiji Shimpō is seldom mistaken in such matters, and we are almost inclined to think that the telegraphic report of Prince Ito's speech on the 12th inst. is more or less misleading.

ARTIFICIAL SILK.

The ex-president of the Amiens Chamber of Commerce recently delivered a lecture on the development of artificial silk making, from which Mr. William H. Hunt, American Consul at St. Etienne, furnishes the following extracts:—"The three processes for the manufacture of artificial silk are the nitrocellulose, the cupro-ammoniacal and the viscose. I have seen various samples of the fibres obtained by the nitrocellulose process, either bleached or dyed. Their brilliancy is perfect, but their resistance, especially when wet, leaves much to be desired. The principles of the cupro-ammoniacal process produce silk that is radiant and holds together easily. Its cost of production is less than by the nitrocellulose process. The silk produced by the viscose process has the same qualities and defects as the other, but it is more economical. To remedy the lack of resistance of artificial silk, especially when wet, hundreds of processes have been proposed, but no one of them has given satisfaction. For certain use artificial silk may be substituted for the real silk; it has more brilliancy, but less suppleness and a different touch; its greatest defect, however, is that of being less resistant, especially when wet. Another difficulty is its specific weight, which is 10 per cent. greater than the real silk and gives for the same weight a very important diminution of returns. They hope one day, however, to remedy these defects, and that the consumption of the product will become much greater. The present annual production of artificial silk is as follows: Nitrocellulose silk, 2,645,000 to 3,300,000 pounds; cupro-ammoniacal silk, 2,200,000 to 2,645,000 pounds; viscose silk, 880,000 to 1,000,000 pounds. France produces between 1,100,000 to 1,240,000 pounds of the three kinds. The cost of production varies, according to the process employed, from $1.93 to $2.90 per kilo (2.2 pounds)."

BUSINESS NOTES.

Friday, July 10.

The question of finding funds for the great Exhibition presses constantly for solution at the hands of the Tokyo Municipality. It is reported that the Aldermen have formulated a plan for imposing a temporary tax upon the Electric Light Company, the Gas Company and the three Exchanges. These concerns have asked to have voluntary contributions substituted for taxes, but the Aldermen are said to be of opinion that the taxes ought to be imposed at any rate and the voluntary contributions treated as a matter apart.

We read in the Asahi Shinbun that the journey of Messrs. Asano and Shiraishi to the United States has been partly successful and partly unsuccessful. They accomplished two of their purposes, namely, first, a renewal of the agreement under which the California Oil Company has hitherto furnished crude oil to the refineries with which Mr. Asano is connected; and, secondly, the placing of the Toyo Kisen Kaisha's new vessels Teuyo Maru and Chiyo Maru on the San Francisco schedule. The third object of the visit was to raise a loan of 20 million yen for the purposes of the Toyo S. S. Company, of some cement works and of certain mining enterprises. This money could not be obtained in America and the English market is now to be tried.

The Asahi Shinbun seems to be throwing its influence into the scale against the Anglo-Japanese Water Power Electric Company, but we trust that this is only a momentary aberration on our contemporary's part. The economic future of Japan depends largely upon the success of these joint enterprises and every patriotic Japanese should welcome them so long as they are sound operations, which description unquestionably applies to the Water Power Electric Company. The Shogyo Shimpo takes what we venture to think is a wiser view. It urges that such an enterprise ought to receive a large measure of public support and that its failure would mean not only the disappointment of foreign capitalists but also an exhibition of inability to help herself on Japan's part.

It appears to be generally believed that the change of Cabinet, when finally arranged, will exercise a wholesome effect upon the share market, especially if the weather grows somewhat warmer. There is only a very vague notion as to what the Cabinet can do to improve the financial situation, but that it will do everything in its power is taken for granted.

Saturday, July 11.

The Shogyo Shimpo publishes detailed statements of the estimated expenditures and profits of the Anglo-Japanese Water-power Electric Company. It will be enough to say that the net profits are calculated to be 13 per cent.

The Directors of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha are said to have strenuously objected to the proposal put forward by the Morimura Company and other Japanese firms, namely, that the projected increase of railway rates should be limited in the case of eight articles of Japanese manufacture, but that there should be no limitation in the case of other articles. The Directors of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha insist that the project of an increase should be altogether abandoned, since if it is carried into effect, the trade now crossing the Pacific will be diverted to the Suez Canal and the Atlantic, and will further be seriously crippled.

The failure is reported of Mr. Maki, a large silk manufacturer of Susaka in Shinshu. His embarrassments are due to the heavy depreciation which overtook the silk market in the sequel of the American panic. The liabilities of the estate are put at 900,000 yen but nothing definite is yet stated as to the assets. Mr. Maki was President of the Susaka Bank, a small concern with a capital of 150,000 yen. He seems to have obtained extensive accommodation from this bank and it will probably be dragged down by his fall. He has placed the whole of his estate in the hands of liquidators.

It is stated that the City Aldermen of Tokyo have decided to resign in consequence of the Government's refusal to municipalize the Railway. They will probably be re-elected.

Sunday, July 12.

The exports for the first ten days of July totalled 10,132,000 yen and the imports 12,481,000 yen, the excess of imports being thus 2,349,000 yen. From the commencement of the year to the 10th inst. exports totalled 180,106,000 yen and imports 263,039,000 yen, the aggregate excess of imports being thus 82,933,000 yen. The whole trade for that interval showed a diminution of 39,768,000 yen, as compared with the corresponding period of last year, and of that total reduction 26,244,000 yen stood to the credit of exports and 13,524,000 yen to that of imports. The excess of imports in the ten days under review was due to a reduction of 16 per cent in raw silk, hemp, habutae, silk handkerchiefs, copper and tea, and to an increase of 27 per cent in the import of raw cotton, rice, sugar and wool. It had been fully expected that the balance would swing in the right direction during these ten days and the disappointment has been correspondingly great.

The failure of Mr. Maki will evidently pull down the Susaka Bank of Nagano prefecture, and threatens to be disastrous to the Shinano Bank also, but it is thought probable that the latter institution will receive aid from the Yasuda Bank. The fall of the Shinano Bank would have a somewhat serious effect locally, as its deposits amount to about 13¼ million yen and its capital is 1,300,000 yen, of which 780,000 is paid up.

The scheme of harnessing the Kinugawa to provide Tokyo with water-power electricity is not to be abandoned, it would seem, although it has long hung fire owing to the financial depression of the time. A syndicate has been formed for the purpose of securing a charter, and among the promoters we find the names of Messrs. Den, Fukuhara, Yoshida, Toyama, Toshimitsu and other well known men. The programme contemplates an expenditure of 8½ million yen, which it is proposed to obtain entirely from the shareholders, and of 6 million yen, which would be procured by floating debentures either abroad or at home. The promoters calculate that fully 18 per cent. would be the profit.

The Treasury on the 9th inst. granted permission to the Nagoya Municipality to raise a loan of 7,140,000 yen. Nagoya has been in the market seeking accommodation for nearly three years. There was a rumour that a foreign syndicate represented by Mr.

Findlay had undertaken to float the loan, but Japanese newspapers state that this report had its origin in a visit paid by that gentleman to Nagoya in company with Mr. Yokoyama Magoichiro to inspect the site of a hotel, which it is proposed to erect at a cost of 700,000 yen.

The Colonization Bank (Takushoku Ginko) has obtained from the Treasury assistance to the extent of half a million yen. The Treasury in this matter seems to have followed the precedent set by itself in granting 2 millions to the Agricultural and Industrial Banks. The money for the Takushoku Ginko will be taken, it is said, from the deposits in the Postal Savings Bank.

It is stated that the Naruwo region recently annexed by the advance of the Aiyu line is rich in gold and copper. The Fujita Company has applied for a copper-mining concession covering 3,000 acres. On the whole, mining seems to be very prosperous in Formosa. The areas of the mines now worked are as follow:—

	Tsubo.
Gold .....	4,390,000
Copper .....	2,600,000
Gold dust .....	2,900,000
Coal .....	14,290,000
Kerosene .....	14,510,000
Sulphur .....	590,000
Phosphorus .....	240,000

The above figures show that during the year ended June, 1907, the mining area increased by 3,900,000 tsubo.

The Imperial Commercial Bank, which has long been watched keenly by financiers, has announced the intention of holding a general meeting on the 25th inst. for the purpose of reducing its capital by 1,400,000 yen. This Bank has been carrying for the last 18 months a large block of greatly depreciated shares, and the directors deem it wiser to write these off at once as a loss. The total involved is 1,387,539 yen, so that by reducing the capital to the extent of 1,400,000 the situation will be fully met. Each holder of four old shares will receive in exchange three new ones.

The Towa Dobun Kai and the Toho Kyokai are advertising for subscriptions to relieve the sufferers by the floods in South China. The original idea was to buy rice and send it to the distressed regions, but on reference to the Viceroy it has been ascertained that relief will be more welcome in the form of money. The Asahi, in publishing this advertisement, says that it would not become Japan as a great nation to allow her charitable intentions to be chilled by the boycott.

Tuesday July 14.

It is stated on apparently good authority that the Kanegafuchi Spinning Company has at length succeeded in obtaining the foreign loan for which it had so long been negotiating. The amount is comparatively small—only 2 million yen—and the rate of interest is 6½ per cent., which will amount to about 7 per cent. when commissions have been paid to the guarantor banks and to the French Agent by whom the loan has been obtained. The transaction, thus stated, does not appear very attractive, but it deserves attention as the first instance of a loan made by French capitalists direct to a Japanese manufacturing company. We must say that when two banks like the Mitsu Bishi and the Mitsui guarantee a loan, and when the borrower whose property is hypothecated is a firm of such importance as the Kanega-fuchi Spinning Company, it seems pretty stiff that nearly 7 per cent. should have to be paid.

Even more strongly illustrating the dearth of money in Japan for investment purposes is the case of the Nagoya Municipality. Nagoya is the fourth city in Japan in point of magnitude and it unquestionably has a great manufacturing future. It wants a petty sum of 7,160,000 yen, and, after long delay, it has succeeded in obtaining official permission to raise a loan of that amount. But no one can be found to lend the money. The purposes for which funds are required are drainage, sewerage, road-making and office-building, and the Municipality, never doubting its ability to obtain the money, attempted to borrow from several leading Japanese banks a sum of 1,100,000 yen, that being the amount required for the first year's operations. But half a million alone could be obtained and interest at the rate of 10 per cent. had to be paid. Meanwhile several appeals were made to the London money market. All were without success. London's ignorance about Japan is quite interesting. Only half a dozen people ever heard of such a place as Nagoya, and it is felt that if the British public were asked to put up money for works at such a place they would regard it as a loan to Timbuctoo or some equally unknown district. Consequently London has definitely declined, and the Nagoya Municipality is unable to raise even the 600,000 yen needed to pay for its initial undertakings. The probability now is that the money will be put up by the Red Cross Society on terms which will certainly not be charitable.

We read in the Shogyo Shimpō that the Rising Sun Petroleum Company has obtained official permission to establish a refinery in the Nishitozaki district of Hakata in Chikuzen. The project is to import crude oil from Borneo and Sumatra and to refine it in Japan. A plot of land measuring about 5 acres has been obtained and tanks are to be put up capable of holding 4000 gallons. The money sunk is estimated at 1½ million yen and it is expected that the work will be complete in 6 months. After completion the staff employed will be three foreign engineers and about 200 Japanese hands.

It appears that the strenuous exertions made by the Nippon Yusen Kaisha and others to induce the American Railway Companies to reconsider the proposed schedule of rates have been attended with some measure of success. The Railway Companies are now said to have telegraphed to the directors of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha in the sense that rates will be kept down to the San Francisco level. The Japanese Boyeki Kyokai also has received from the Railway Control Bureau at Chicago an assurance that as this question of rates closely concerns the trade between the two countries, every effort will be made to arrange a mutually satisfactory schedule. Nagoya and Seto have also telegraphed to the same Bureau in Chicago and have urged that the projected increase of rates would be fatal. These two places are the great centre of Japan's porcelain manufacture. They export 5 million yen worth of ceramic ware annually to America, and they have hitherto paid 20 yen a ton for transport. Under the new schedule, however, they would have to pay 30 yen, and this would mean that the Suez route must be chosen in preference to the American.

From the 10th of next month the South Manchuria Railway Company intends to open its new service of steamers between Tairen and Shanghai and has chartered the Nippon Yusen Kaisha's S. S. Kobe Maru (2,800 tons) for the purpose. The steamer will leave Shanghai every Friday and will reach Dairen on Sunday. Adding to this the railway journey, it appears that a passenger from Shanghai will be carried to Harbin in 5 days, whereas the sea voyage alone from Shanghai to Vladivostok takes 6 days at present. Altogether it is calculated that by the opening of this Shanghai route three days will be saved from the journey between China and Europe. It is not expected, however, that the service will pay at first. The working will certainly show a loss for some time.

On the afternoon of the 13th inst. the Tokyo City Council held a meeting and, after some discussion, adopted a resolution that with the exception of the operative officers the whole Council should resign. In taking this step they declined to recognise any responsibility on account of the failure of the municipalization scheme, but they considered it necessary to bow to the hostile criticism of the newspapers and to the opinions of a section of the citizens. The Aldermen attempted to induce the Mayor to withhold his resignation, but Mr. Ozaki declined to dissociate himself from his colleagues. The general opinion seems to be that the retiring officers will be re-elected but it is possible that an attempt may be made to secure the post of Mayor for Baron Senge or Mr. Ooka Ikuzo. Tokyo will be unfortunate if it loses the services of Mr. Ozaki Yukio.

As for the Tokyo Railway Company, the present impression is that its Directors will not resign, and that an application will soon be made either to raise the fare, preserving the uniform rate, or to substitute sectional fares. If the Municipality agrees to this change, it is not thought probable that the new Cabinet will offer any opposition. Marquis Katsura is understood to have been always opposed to the unpractical and unjust system of a uniform fare in a city covering such an area as Tokyo does.

Wednesday, July 15.

A banquet was given at the Bankers' Club in Tokyo on the 14th inst. in honour of Baron Motono, who has just returned from St. Petersburg, and Mr. Yoshida, the new Minister to Siam. In replying to his health Baron Motono said that there had been much doubt in Russia as to the probable attitude of Japan after the conclusion of the Portsmouth Treaty, but happily by strenuous efforts this doubt had been dispelled and St. Petersburg now had confidence in the sincerity of Japan's friendly intentions. This fortunate result had been assisted by the visits of Mr. Soyeda and Baron Goto to the Russian capital.

The Asahi Shimbun is disposed to think that there will be no special movement one way or the other in the stock market in consequence of the change of Cabinet. Speculators who bought for a rise have now realized or are in process of realizing, and this will probably produce a depressing effect on the market.

It is thought that a new president of the South Manchuria Railway will not be appointed, and that Baron Goto will continue to discharge the duties of that post.

The general impression appears to be that Mr. Ozaki Yukio will be re-elected as Mayor of Tokyo, though several competitors have entered the field. The retiring aldermen also are thought likely to recover their positions with two or three exceptions.

Thursday, July 16.

We observe with much regret that the Asahi Shimbun lends its influential columns to a long statement obviously emanating from persons who, owing to interested reasons, are hostile to the Anglo-Japanese Water-power Electric Company. It is quite plain that the writer in the Asahi is an engineer who possesses technical knowledge and who has access to many sources of information. The gist of his long indictment amounts to denouncing as wholly incompetent the first class American and English engineers who have fully surveyed the work and who have reported that the Oigawa is not only a feasible, but also an exceptionally fine, source of water power for electric purposes. We have full respect for the competence and ability of Japanese engineers, but we can not forget that they are comparatively new to this kind of work, nor can we think that they are acting either professionally or prudently when they compile a statement which amounts to declaring that the best of their British and American confreres are ignorant of the very elements of their profession. That is not the mood which we have been accustomed to find among Japanese experts, and though private interests are proverbially liable to betray men into critical excesses, we should have hoped that a newspaper like the Asahi, which deservedly ranks amongst the leaders of Japanese journalism, would not have made its columns a medium of such unprofessional utterances. The Yomiuri Shimbun without directly referring to the Asahi, publishes a statement which refutes point by point the latter journal's informant. We need not enter into details as they would be comprehensible by specialists only.

The Japan-Korea Gas Company, projected by Baron Shibusawa and others, has announced that the first call on its shares must be paid up by the 10th of August. The site of the Company's operations will be Seoul. It has obtained a 25 years' monopoly of gas supply for the Korean capital, and the Korean Government has promised to admit all its plant and other materials free. Land has also been obtained on exceptionally easy terms and the Korean Household Department has purchased a block of the Company's shares. The Company has to give 5 per cent. of its net profits to the Municipality and one per cent. of everything over a dividend of 15 per cent to the Household Department.

It is now said to be virtually certain that Mr. Ozaki will be re-elected to the position of Mayor of Tokyo and that the members of the City Council also will be re-elected.

MANCHURIA.

Mr. Suttor, Commissioner for New South Wales in the East, says, in his interesting Report on Manchuria, that the Three Provinces have a total area of 380,000 square miles and a population of about 20 millions. Nothing is said as to how this last figure is obtained, but our readers will observe that it differs greatly from two recently published estimates of 6 millions and 12 millions respectively. The report enters into the salient details of agriculture in the region, and we have already quoted what Mr. Suttor has to say about flour. His remarks about coal are as follow:—

Coal, although of great importance to New South Wales, has been placed last for description in connection with Manchurian mineral products. I have done so from a desire to call special attention to the coal-mining interests of Manchuria, and also to state my opinions as to the extent of future operations and probable competition. Coal has been found at several places in Manchuria, viz., at Feng-t'ien, in the province of Liao-yang (known by the Japanese as Endai), also north and north-east of Mukden, the principal deposit being at Mu-tsi (Japanese name, Budzun). As regards the deposits in the district of Mu-tsi, the following will convey a rough idea of the coal available:—

Senkinsai .....	Seam 3,960 feet wide.*
Hakuhō .....	" 4,800 "
Rokodai .....	" 3,300 "

The most important deposit is at Senkinsai, the total estimate of available coal at the three places being about 300,000,000 tons. Other deposits exist close by at a place known as Kodoshō, on which an estimate has been formed that 140,000,000 tons are available for recovery, thus giving a grand total of 440,000,000 tons for the Mu-tsi district, near the ancient capital of Mukden, a branch line of railway having already been constructed from Ekokaton on the Manchurian Railway, 34 miles easterly to the district of Mu-tsi. A much inferior coal has been found near the city of Kirin, in the province of that name. The deposits so found are distant as follows from the nearest ports of shipment, viz.:—

Seaport

Yingkow (also known as Newchwang) to Endai	86 miles.
Port Arthur to Endai .....	241 "
Dairen (also known as Tairen) to Endai .....	220 "
Yingkow to Mu-tsi .....	136 "
Port Arthur to Mu-tsi .....	291 "
Dairen to Mu-tsi .....	271 "

The coal at Endai is a surface coal of a very inferior quality, and is not likely ever to appear to any extent on the market. The coal at Mu-tsi (Japanese name, Budzun) is of apparently good quality for steaming purposes. The coal is not mined in what is known as large lump coal; it comes out in small particles, and is now used by the Japanese for railway purposes. In the event of the coal being shipped from Dairen, Port Arthur, or Yingkow, a large expenditure would be necessary, owing to the fact that the railway terminus is fully 1 mile distant from the harbour of Port Arthur, and fully 2 miles from the steamer anchorages on the Liao River at Yingkow. Dairen is the only port where the railway terminus is available as to cost of mini g, enabling me to give cost delivered at seaport; but, in view of the difficulties that would have to be surmounted, I question if (under existing conditions) the coal could be placed f.o.b. for export at less than 20s. per ton—probably 22s. per ton—the market price for coal at Dairen to-day being £1 os. 10d. per ton delivered. Even if the conditions at seaports were more favourable, I have reason to believe that the capacity of the mine will, later on, be fully taxed to meet local requirements in Manchuria, where timber—especially in the southern portion—is so markedly absent.

RAILROADS OF THE WORLD.

The mileage of railroads in all the different countries of the world at the end of 1906, on the nearest date reported, are given in the Archiv für Eisenbahnwesen as follows:—

	Miles.
Europe .....	196,414
Asia .....	54,655
Africa .....	17,519

The old world .....	268,588
North America .....	260,386
South America .....	33,586
Australasia .....	17,716

The new world .....

Thus the total mileage of the world is

* Could not obtain any reliable information as to thickness or depth.

580,276, a little more than half of which is in America, and 43,100 miles more in the new world than in the old. The increase in mileage for 1906 was 17,376 miles, which is greater than in any other year, at least since 1895, the nearest approach to it having been 15,903 miles in 1904. The addition in 1905 was 13,036 miles, so that one-third more was built in 1906. Nearly half of the mileage opened in 1906 was in America, and of the new mileage in America 7,285 miles were in North America and 727 miles in South America. The Railroad Age-Gazette, in commenting on the foregoing figures, notes that "for the first time in history more railroad was built in Asia (4,063 miles) than in Europe (3,907 miles); China led with an addition of 1,452 miles, against 1,150 in Russia, 709 miles in Turkey, and 371 miles in British India. India still has, however, more than half the railroads of Asia. The 1,118 miles opened in Africa in 1906 form a small extent for so great a continent, but is more than was ever built there before in a single year, and makes an addition of more than 6 per cent. to its total mileage. Both on the east and west coasts railroads are penetrating from numerous points across the sickly low country to the higher interior, several of them toward navigable streams or lakes. In our division we have included the Central American states with North America, and the West Indies with South America. Of the 727 miles opened in the latter division in 1906, 366 miles were in Argentine, 158 in Brazil and fifty-four in Chile. In Europe, Russia opened 1,234 miles, Austria-Hungary 814, Germany 558, France 420, Sweden 299. Asia is the great field for railroad building and now that the Chinese themselves want railroads, we may expect a very great increase within the next twenty years. The statistics of capital invested in railroads are less complete, though for Europe substantially so. They indicate a total investment for the whole world of about $47,400,000,000, very nearly half of which is in the railroads of Europe, which have but little more than a third of the total mileage. The average per mile is $115,283 in Europe and $60,131 in the rest of the world. The total increase in this investment in the year was $2,380,000,000. Per inhabitant the total investment is about $31. Although the United States still leads in railroad construction, counting by mileage alone, the time has come when improvements and additions to the capacity of old railroads require more capital than the construction of new ones."

THE TOKYO STOCK EXCHANGE.

Saturday, July 11.

The forenoon session on the 10th instant was marked by dullness, partly because of the continued cool weather, but mainly because of the rumour that Baron Hirata is to have the portfolio of Finance, whereas the public had hoped for Viscount Sone or Baron Goto. In the afternoon, however, there was a slight recovery, and the closing quotations showed only fractional decreases or increases as compared with the figures for the 9th instant.

Monday, July 13.

On Saturday morning the market opened brisk, uneasiness as to the Cabinet having been renewed and the weather having hindered. There was every sign of a marked upward movement. But in the afternoon, news was received that the foreign trade for the first ten days of July showed an unfavourable balance of over two million yen, and the market immediately responded, so that closing prices were in most cases only a fraction higher than those of Friday, and in some cases lower.

Tuesday, July 14.

Cottons alone showed any vitality on the Tokyo Stock Exchange yesterday. All other shares suffered from the fact that speculators who had bought in anticipation of a rise on account of the change of Cabinet, hastened to unload when they learned that their forecast was not likely to be realized. There is now no apparent reason to anticipate any upward movement for some time.

Wednesday, July 15.

With insignificant exceptions the quotations on the Stock Exchange on Tuesday showed a marked downward tendency. The expectations formed with regard to financial reforms under the new Cabinet have been abandoned, for the most part, on calm reflection; or, at least, have been successfully discredited by the bears, who are now having an innings. Quite signal has been the depreciation of the Takarada scrip: it fell no less than 10 points in two days. This is attributed to a rumour, industriously circulated, that the Company's recent purchases of rival concerns will injuriously affect its dividends. Altogether present appearances suggest another debacle, though possibly it may prove to be nothing more serious than a receding wave of the rising tide.

Thursday, July 16.

The tone of the market was slightly better on Wednesday. Cottons suffered a small decline owing to profit-taking sales in the sequel of the recent appreciation but other shares were well maintained, especially in the afternoon.

Friday, July 17.

The Tokyo Stock Exchange was very dull on Thursday. With the exception of Sugars and Takaradas everything moved downwards. There was no special reason. The explanation seems to be that in the absence of determining cause, buyers and sellers held their hands and were content to watch each other. At the same time, profit-taking sales appear to have temporarily ceased, and there is no ostensible cause for the dullness. We give the quotations for September delivery:—

	July 15th.	July 16th.
Tanko Kisen .....	85.35	85.05
Tokyo Railway .....	58.00	57.65
Kei-Hin Railway .....	66.60	66.60
Yusen Kaisha .....	82.70	82.15
Toyo Kisen .....	—	—
Tokyo Gas .....	82.00	—
Tokyo Dento .....	66.50	—
Fuji Gas Spinning .....	87.10	85.95
Tokyo Spinning .....	39.95	39.40
Kanegafuchi Spinning .....	90.60	89.50
Beer .....	78.30	78.20
Sugar .....	70.25	71.50
Takarada (Hoden) Oil .....	100.00	102.05
Nippon Oil .....	—	—
Namboku .....	—	—
Stock Exchange .....	114.40	114.00

NIPPON RACE CLUB.

The following is the result of the drawing for 22 Subscription Country Bred Horses:—

No. Messrs.	No. Messrs.
1. Snipe.	12. J. C. Fletcher.
2. Geegee.	13. Jarvis.
3. Cotton.	14. K. Ikeda.
4. News.	15. Iatham.
5. Dr. Ishiura.	16. R. Loonen.
6. M. Saito.	17. Shigi.
7. N. Kawakita.	18. K. Matsuyama.
8. Norfolk.	19. Rafale.
9. Tandem.	20. Nemo.
10. States.	21. Nanchō.
11. Lieut. Minoda.	22. Tatsuta.

NOTES ON CURRENT EVENTS.

On July 11th this journal loses the services of Mr. A. B. Brown, who for the past 14 years has ably discharged the duties of manager, and has interested himself largely and usefully in the literary affairs of Yokohama. Mr. Brown goes to assume editorial control of the China Mail, a post for which he is eminently fitted. We wish him a full measure of success, and we congratulate Hongkong on acquiring such an important accession to the ranks of its journalists.

On the 11th instant the Emperor was present at the graduation ceremony of the Imperial University. The number of certificates of graduation granted was 769, namely, 254 in Law, 114 in Medicine, 165 in Engineering, 124 in Literature, 30 in Natural Philosophy and 82 in Agriculture. There were 14 prizemen, among whom the most distinguished were Watanabe Shin, Hatoyama Hideo and Hozumi Shigeto. A great deal of interest had been attracted by this question of prizemen. The contest for the first place was supposed to lie between Hatoyama and Hozumi, and the curious thing was that the fathers of these two students had in their day been rivals for the senior wranglership, on which occasion Mr. Hatoyama had vanquished Mr. Hozumi. At the recent examination Mr. Hatoyama's son followed his father's example by defeating Mr. Hozumi's, but both had to yield the pride of place to Watanabe Shin, who, as not infrequently happens, had been a dark horse.

In the year 770 (A.D.) the Emperor Koken caused a million pagodas to be made. They were little objects of wood, only 4 1/2 inches high. Into each was inserted a tiny scroll with a verse of the Sutras inscribed thereon, and the whole number were then handed over to the temple Horyu-ji at Nara. In the course of centuries these relics gradually became dispersed or were destroyed by fire, until only 3,000 remained, and the ancient temple, being now in financial straits, offers one of these pagodas with its enclosure to any person sufficiently charitable to subscribe 35 yen. We understand that a specimen may be seen in the office of the Japan Gazette, and we have been asked to invite our readers' attention to the fact.

The Russian Minister and Madame Bakhmeteff left Tokyo by the 7.30 p.m. train on the 11th inst. His Excellency is quoted by Tokyo journals as having declared that he carries away with him from Japan most favourable impressions. During his sojourn in Tokyo he learned to respect the Japanese nation, first for its great loyalty to the Throne, and secondly for its love of peace. It would have been natural that after such a war feelings of hostility should have continued for some time to divide the peoples of Japan and Russia, but all evidences of that nature had quickly disappeared, and Mr. and Mrs. Bakhmeteff were able to look back upon their sojourn in Japan with feelings of unalloyed satisfaction. When received in farewell audience by the Emperor, His Majesty had graciously stated that the departing Minister's efforts while in Tokyo had contributed materially to establish closer relations between Russia and Japan. M. Bakhmeteff felt profoundly honoured to have been the recipient of such an assurance.

Our readers will remember that a meeting of the French Educational Society was recently held at the palace of Prince Kanin, when a mixed committee was appointed including Messrs. Tsuji, Tomii, Furuichi, etc., on the Japanese side and Messrs. Martinie, André, Francois and Pere Everard on the French. This committee came together at the Fujimi-ken on the 10th inst. when a sub-committee was elected. It consisted of Messrs. Tomii, Okoshi, Adachi, Kurizuka, Miyabara, Martinie and Francois. The function of this committee will be to adopt all possible means of spreading a knowledge of the French language in Japan, and of bringing French and Japanese nationalities into closer contact. Apparently steps will be taken to establish a middle school where the French language will be a principal subject of study. Already France possesses some admirable institutions which tend to familiarize the Japanese with her refined customs and beautiful language. It would be difficult to over-estimate the work that has been done in this direction by the School of the Morning Star and its various branches.

In the Hochi Shimbun we find a paragraph suggesting that the question of hotel accommodation in view of the Great Exhibition is again attracting attention. There is talk of a Japanese syndicate obtaining a grant of 10,000 tsubo of land in the vicinity of the Maple Club from the Tokyo Municipality, and there is also talk of a foreign syndicate erecting a hotel at Mukojima in conjunction with an American Hotel Company at a cost of 6 million yen. But as yet these and other projects do not seem likely to be carried out. The fact is that a hotel is not like a tent which can be set up and taken down at will. The Exhibition of 1912 is an exceptional event. It will certainly attract an unusual number of visitors, but when these have taken their departure, things will return to their normal condition and there will be little more need of hotel accommodation than there is to-day. That consideration probably deters capitalists from permanently sinking a large sum to meet an ephemeral demand.

There was a centre of depression in the Sea of Japan on the 11th inst., and as it was advancing in an easterly direction, the return of overcast skies and sudden showers is accounted for. Meanwhile the temperature has gone up and that is the great desideratum in the interest of the rice crop.

Rumours continue to be current that the Mayor of Tokyo and the members of the Municipal Council will resign on account of the Government's refusal to sanction the municipalization of the Tokyo Railway.

CRICKET.

The cricket match last Saturday was played between men who had played in an interport match and those who had not yet been picked, their titles being "Hope to Be" and "Have Been." The "Have Beens" won the toss sending in Foster and Buckle to face the bowling of Wheeler and Scott. Buckle was soon disposed of being bowled by Scott after scoring one. On Bousfield joining Foster a good stand was made carrying the score from 7 to 59 when Foster was bowled by Squire. Mollison going in next was caught by Squire off Hayward after making 3 runs. Kilby was then disposed of after compiling 11, being neatly caught by Spencer Smith. Von Fallot quickly followed, out leg before.

A few moments later Bousfield was caught by Wheeler after making 90 runs. Cheetham was caught by Whyte soon afterwards, after a carefully played 24. Here the wickets began to fall rapidly. Strome was bowled by Wheeler and Hearne was caught by Wheeler. Cox went in but did not have a chance to bat as Graham was caught and bowled by Scott.

"HAVE BEENS"

B. C. Foster, bowled E. L. Squire	25
N. Buckle, bowled A. P. Scott	1
P. E. Bousfield, c. Wheeler, b. Scott	90
Mollison J. M. c. Squire, b. Hayward	3
H. W. Kilby, c. Spencer-Smith, b. Hayward	11
Von Fallot, l.b.w., b. Bell	0
W. B. Cheetham, c. Whyte, b. Scott	24
Hearne Alg. c. Wheeler, b. Scott	5
P. A. Cox, c. not out	0
O. Strome, bowled Wheeler	4
W. Graham, c. & b. Scott	0
Extras	8

171

BOWLING AVERAGE.

	B.	R.	M.	W.
Wheeler	60	41	0	1
Scott	99	44	3	5
Hayward	60	47	0	2
Squire	25	16	0	1
Bell	36	15	2	1

"Hope to Be," sent Hume and Bell in first to take the bowling of Mollison and Foster. Foster took Hume's wicket with his first ball. Wheeler started hitting as soon as he went in but was caught by Von Fallot on the boundary at 16. Bell was then out by Foster at 7. Spencer Smith was soon disposed of, being bowled by Foster for 0. Ward then tipping the ball into the air was caught by Strome in slips. Hayward was bowled by Mollison's first ball for 0. Sharman after making 11 runs was missed by Graham and a moment later was again missed by Hearne, but was bowled by Foster a few seconds after. Squire quickly followed being caught out by Bousfield for a duck. Sharman was the next victim being bowled by Foster after making 12 runs.

On Whyte joining Scott a long stand was made. Scott by clever playing managed to get a single run at the end of each over so as to get the bowling. In this way, practically by his own efforts he brought the match successfully to a draw, the stumps being drawn at 6.30 p.m.

"HOPE TO BE."

Hume, H. T., played on. b. Foster	1
Bell, G. H., c. and b. Foster	7
Wheeler, G. C., c. von Fallot, b. Foster	16
Scott, A. P., not out	86
Spencer Smith, M., bowled Foster	0
Ward, F., c. Strome, b. Foster	0
Hayward, W., bowled Mollison	0
Sharman, L. C., bowled Foster	12
Squire, E. L., c. Bousfield, b. Foster	0
Whyte, L. M., not out	6
Bateman, A. E. did not bat	—

128

BOWLING AVERAGE.

	B.	R.	M.	W.
Mollison	36	20	—	1
Foster	78	49	—	7
Von Fallot	30	31	—	—
Cox	36	18	—	—
Bousfield	12	8	—	—
Kilby	18	1	2	—
Buckle	6	1	—	—

THE 14TH OF JULY.

The French National Holiday was duly observed by the French community in Yokohama, upon whose business premises and residences flags were displayed, and many other residents of various nationalities evinced their sympathy by exhibiting the colours of their respective countries. The weather was fine during the day, the rain holding up till night, and promenaders on the Bund were regaled by the music of a special band at the Oriental Palace Hotel. French residents as usual made calls upon their Consul.

Tuesday being the French Holiday the Larks started on a race in a light breeze at 4.30 p.m. for a prize presented by Mr. Weil.

The course was round the Light-ship (S) and then finish across the starting line, i.e. between the large and Snowflake. No. 3, sailed by Mr. Mason came in first, with No. 11 (Mr. Charlesworth) second and No. 8 (Mr. Smith) third. No. 16 (Mr. Salinger) capsized on getting outside the breakwater.

SENTIMENT IN JAPAN.

IT is not to be denied that sentiment still exercises in Japan a degree of influence not possessed by it in Western countries amid similar surroundings. We say "still exercises," because it will be admitted by every student of old Japan's history that when the elite of the nation obeyed the precepts of bushido, they were guided by a code which might justly be called a collection of sentimental canons rather than a schedule of regulations for the conduct of every-day affairs. Bushido had nothing to do with commerce or industry in any form. It did not meddle even with politics further than to inculcate the doctrine of unswerving loyalty, which lies at the root of all stable government. The samurai who trod the "warrior's way" had his mind stored with a thesaurus of sentimental principles, which he lived up to the more scrupulously inasmuch as their limits were not defined. He strove always to reach ideals and the thoroughness of his effort was estimated by his own conception rather than by any fixed standards. It was out of bushido that there grew the word giri, whose meaning embraces justice, right, duty to one's neighbour and responsibility towards one's own conscience. When the obligations of giri are imposed in the realm of business affairs, very curious results are reached. Thus there are on record cases of men who abandoned lucrative pursuits of their own devising when it was proved that such pursuits encroached upon the prescriptive rights of others, though no law could be evoked in assertion of the latter. Imagine a shrewd trader stepping into an arena where some clever invention of his own gave him a marked advantage over his conservative contemporaries, and imagine him subsequently penalizing his invention lest it should compete too harshly with his old-fashioned rivals. Such sensitive altruism would raise a smile in the West, but in Japan it is regarded as merely a display of becoming deference to the code of giri. We are confronted just now by a state of affairs which in another but not less obvious sphere illustrates the reign of sentiment. In England the life of a Ministry is measured by its hold upon the country's confidence. If the results of by-elections indicate that a Cabinet has begun to grow unpopular, political honour requires it to resign and carry to the national appeal-court the verdict suggested by these by-elections. In such matters nothing is further from thoughts of the "outs" and the "Ins" than to consult one another's convenience. Indeed if there be visible any procedure specially calculated to embarrass one party, that is precisely the procedure which the other is careful to adopt. But it is not the procedure adopted in Japan. In the first place, were the rule of electoral mandates obeyed, the SAIONJI Cabinet is fully entitled to another lease of life. From that point of view no previous Cabinet ever acquired such a title, for no previous Cabinet did the country entrust the control of a working majority in the Lower House. But, at the same time, the SAIONJI Cabinet is certainly unpopular outside political circles. The business-men are against it and so are many of the leading journalists. Hence the Cabinet has decided to resign, a decision constituting in itself a concession to sentiment. In the second place, the SAIONJI Cabinet, though it steps out of office, remains virtually master of the situation since it possesses a majority in the Lower House. Thus it has competence to create an intolerable impasse for its successor. But instead of utilizing that opportunity, it agrees to support the KATSURA Ministry. Why? For two reasons, according to our analysis. One is that to surrender the reins and immediately to take steps for rendering them untenable would be unmanly; the other that the SAIONJI Ministry recognises its own responsibility for having forfeited popularity, and is therefore willing to expiate that fault by a season of quiet self-effacement instead of seeking to retrieve its fortunes by obstructing the administration of State affairs. Sentiment again, but a kind of sentiment which does some honour to those it sways.

THE FAKUMEN RAILWAY.

WE publish elsewhere an interesting document which has been handed to us for that purpose, and we welcome it as a clear exposé of the views held by the British and Chinese Corporation on the subject of the proposed Fakumen Railway. The Corporation is to be congratulated on possessing such an able advocate as the writer of the memorandum. Nevertheless some of his arguments seem untenable, and we shall devote a little space to their examination. At the outset it may be well to lay down a general proposition, namely, that the open-door policy cannot be properly interpreted as conferring on the Powers a title to mutually injure one another's enterprises in China. There are natural and just limits to equality of opportunity. If A obtains a concession enabling him to utilize an opportunity, B is not entitled to demand a similar concession such as would vitiate A's. Absolute equality of opportunity can exist only where the conditions sanction free competition. Railway-building does not belong to that class of enterprises. A railway can not be taken up and carried away at pleasure. It represents so much capital irrevocably fixed, and from that point of view its right to a reasonable measure of protection does not at all conflict with the policy of the open door and equality of opportunity. All the Western Powers practically recognize that a railway possesses that special character, for they have stipulated that Chinese railways in which they are financially interested shall not be exposed to injurious competition. Japan adopted the same course with regard to the South Manchuria line. She obtained China's explicit promise to protect it, and she now requires that the promise shall not be violated. That is the story in plain English. In December, 1905, China pledged herself "not to construct any main line in the neighbourhood of and parallel to the South Manchurian Railway." In November, 1907, she signed with a British Corporation a contract in distinct conflict with that pledge, since it contemplated the building of a road where the point of departure would be 32 miles from the Japanese line, the point of destination 27 miles, and the nearest point 25 miles. More exact parallelism could scarcely be contrived, and as to the question of "neighbourhood," both lines would serve the same Valley of the Liao River. We can not think that any Western State holding in Manchuria the concession which Japan holds, would consent to forego the protection guaranteed to it by treaty against competition so obvious as the above.

We proceed now to discuss the main features of the new memorandum in which the case for the British and Chinese Corporation is set forth.

The writer devotes himself to traversing the document published in Tokyo on the 11th of June, and regarded by the public as a statement of Japan's contention. He alleges that "its most significant feature lies in the fact that the position assumed by the Japanese Government is based frankly on ante-bellum precedents, implying recognition of that very sphere-of-influence policy which it was the avowed object of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance to replace by the independence and territorial integrity of the Empire of China and equal opportunities therein for the commerce and industry of all nations!" Now the second Anglo-Japanese Alliance was signed on August 12th, 1905, and in March, 1907, the Canton-Kowloon Railway Agreement was concluded. It contained the following clause:—"It is further understood that the Chinese Government will not build another line competing with the railway to its detriment." One of the parties to that Agreement was the British and Chinese Corporation, the very Corporation which now charges Japan with reverting to ante-bellum precedents because in 1905 she sought and obtained from China a promise precisely analogous to one sought and obtained from China by the same Corporation two years later.

The next point made is that the British Ambassador at Tokyo "has been instructed to lay friendly representations before the Japanese Government on behalf of the British capitalists and contractors interested in the Fakumen Railway." This statement is surprising. When last the British Government dealt with the question of the Fakumen Railway in the House of Commons, it declared that it recognised Japan's treaty rights in the matter, and that the parties interested had no recourse except to convince Japan that the interests of the South Manchuria Railway would not be injuriously affected by the Fakumen road.

In these circumstances we do not understand how any such instructions can have been sent to the British Ambassador in Tokyo.

Great importance is evidently attached by the writer of the memorandum to a despatch said to have been addressed by the Chinese Government to the Japanese Minister at Peking on the 6th of May last. This despatch has not been published, and the writer of the Memorandum does not explain how he obtained access to it. The document sets forth a Chinese account of what passed at the Peking negotiations when the railway clause was drafted. The main points are these:—The Chinese plenipotentiaries did not question Japan's right to claim protection for the South Manchuria Railway, but they objected to the term "parallel line," deeming it too comprehensive and desiring to have it defined in miles. The Japanese Plenipotentiaries declined to give an arithmetical definition, but "declared that under no circumstances would Japan do anything to restrict China in future from any steps she might desire to take for the extension of means of communications in Manchuria." This declaration does not exist in the official minutes of the conference. It is a Chinese reminiscence made 2½ years subsequent to the event it describes. Yet Chinese diplomatists contend that on the strength of this reminiscence of Japan's benevolent intentions, their country is justified in deliberately violating the terms of the written agreement, and in this unique contention the writer of the Memorandum supports them.

We may mention en passant that the writer appears to attach much importance to Professor ARAKAWA's book. He speaks of it as "authoritative" and quotes copiously from its appreciations of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance. Mr. ARAKAWA's work, though very able, is by no means authoritative. It has never received any official imprimatur and its author is resident in the United States. Moreover, it was published in 1904, and the second alliance which the writer of the Memorandum construes it as interpreting, was not concluded until 1905. The alliance to which Professor ARAKAWA refers is that of 1902, which was made for the purpose of maintaining the status quo; that is to say, for the very purpose which the writer of the Memorandum denounces.

With regard to the writer's admission that "railways may be, and are, built on Chinese territory as financial and industrial enterprises in which foreign Powers are interested, and that without violation of the open door, so long as the enterprises in question are for the benefit, and under the direction, of the Imperial Chinese Government, affording equal commercial opportunities to all-comers," it may be pointed out that China was invited to become part owner of the South Manchuria Railway, but she declined to subscribe a cash to the capital; it may also be inquired in all calmness how much thought is taken for "the benefit of the Chinese Government" by the foreign syndicates and corporations which vie with one another to obtain contracts for financing and building railways in China; and it may further be asked how the principle of "equal opportunities for all-comers" is respected by corporations and syndicates which insist that in consideration of negotiating profitable financial transactions, they alone shall be entitled to supply materials and rolling stock for the lines.

This brings us to the last contention which seems to call for special notice. It is such an interesting contention that we quote it in full. Referring to the numerous recorded cases of protection demanded by foreign syndicates and conceded by China for railways built within her territories, the writer says:—"The lines being mortgaged as first security for the repayment of the necessary loans, the inclusion of the restrictive condition in regard to parallel lines was obviously beneficial to all concerned since it facilitated the raising of capital abroad. Nevertheless . . . this condition was never intended to be (nor could it be), arbitrarily interpreted by the representatives of the foreign bond-holders to restrict the Chinese Government from constructing other railways parallel to those lines, the evident and only intention of the condition being to reassure investors that the Chinese Government would not (presumably at the instance of another Power) do anything to injure property which is mortgaged for security of foreign loans." In other words, the restriction as to parallel lines, when imposed by foreign syndicates and granted by China, being a mere device to inspire foreign capitalists with confidence that nothing should be done to injure the mortgaged property, was never intended to prevent the very contingency which it verbally interdicted, namely, the building of parallel lines. If engagements are to be construed in that fashion, then undoubtedly China is entitled to tear up the Peking Treaty of 1905, or any other treaty for the matter of that.

There is, however, another parallel which the writer of the memorandum himself formulates, though he apparently fails to detect its application. He speaks of the sanctity of property hypothecated to Western capitalists and of the necessity of safeguarding it against injury at the instance of a foreign Power. Six millions sterling of foreign money are invested in the South Manchuria Railway, and it is at the instance of a British Corporation that China is now seeking to take a step which would materially impair the value of the security.

BETTING AT RACE MEETINGS.

The Yorodzu Choho states that Government is investigating the nature of the betting at the various race meetings and that if it is found to injure social order in any way it will be strictly prohibited. Our Tokyo contemporary adds that Baron K. Oura, the new Minister for Agriculture and Commerce, was always against betting the nature of which was gambling and should be dealt with under the Penal Code. Viscount Sone, President of the Horse Breeding Office—also Vice-Resident-General in Korea—is also reported to have said when he was recently in Tokyo that betting should be prohibited, and that the Pari Mutuel was also injurious to social order.

HONGKONG AND SHANGHAI BANK.

The Local Manager of the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation has received the following telegram from his Head Office:—

Subject to audit the Bank dividend for the Half Year ending 30th June, 1908, will probably be .....40s.
$ 5 lacs to be added to Reserve Fund.
$ 2½ lacs to be written off Property Account.
$ 20 lacs to be carried forward to the next Half Year.

LODGING-HOUSES FOR FEMALE OPERATIVES.

Writing in the Taiyā, Dr. S. Yokote maintains that there is an urgent need for legislation bearing on the housing of the thousands of women now employed in factories and workshops. The way in which these poor creatures are huddled together in miserable lodging-houses is a disgrace to a civilised country, says Dr. Yokote. Should an epidemic begin among these operatives there are no means of dealing with it effectually without depriving the factories of hundreds of hands at a stroke. Certain industries are almost wholly dependent on female operatives, and as things are now situated a factory might be deprived of a large number of women on account of the outbreak of infectious or contagious diseases in a lodging-house.

Dr. Yokote, after making special investigations on this subject, has come to the conclusion that the most elementary sanitary principles require that all lodging-houses for female operatives should fulfil the following conditions:—(1) Lodging-houses should be located in healthy spots, if possible on high ground and should have no objectionable surroundings. (2) Each person should have a proper-sized sleeping room, instead of having one mat only, as is now often the case. This room should be supplied with light and fresh air. (3) Each house should have baths and lavatories where there is a good supply of water, and arrangements should be made so that a large number of women can wash at one time. Other arrangements connected with lavatories need serious attention. They are at present filthy beyond all description. (4) Kitchens arranged in a new way with a view to cleanliness should be furnished. These kitchens should have plenty of light and air. (5) Rooms set aside for study should be light and airy, instead of the dungeons now employed for this purpose. (6) A building quite separate from the lodging-house should be provided for the accommodation of suspicious cases of sickness. (7) The food supplied by purveyors should be inspected by officials and the prices paid should be kept within reasonable bounds. (8) Hospitals, or if not these, then dispensaries, disinfecting rooms, rooms for the treatment of contagious or infectious diseases and rooms for convalescents should be provided. (9) Each lodging-house should have a manager or superintendent whose duty it should be to see that the place is kept in order. (10) Each lodging-house should be placed under the charge of a medical man who should have power to insist on the observance of sanitary rules in the establishment. The factories would have no cause to complain were they required to take these ordinary precautions against the spread of disease, for even from their point of view prevention is better than cure. The outbreak of cholera or pest among their operatives would cost the owners of factories much more than the observance of the laws of health in their lodging-houses would involve. Then, what the nation has to consider is the inhuman manner in which thousands of poor women are treated by capitalists who are making big profits out of their labour. The women themselves are not likely to complain of improper treatment, but it is the plain duty of legislators to see that the money-grubbers observe the laws of health and the laws of morality.

W. D.

THE LAST GENERAL ELECTION AND POLITICAL PARTIES IN JAPAN.

It seems to me that in Japan almost all the best writers on politics are utterly dissatisfied with the progress the nation is making in the development of constitutional government, if, indeed, it can be said to be making any progress at all. The Asahi Shimbun, the Fiji Shimpō, the Nichi Nichi Shimbun, the Kokumin Shimbun and all the leading magazines perpetually dwell on the extremely backward state of general political opinion throughout the country. Stolid indifference to politics is the attitude of the bulk of the nation. This accounts for the continuance of abuses that would never be tolerated in a country permeated with the democratic spirit. No magazine has more steadily held before the public eye a high political ideal than the Tuiyō. The political comments with which each number opens are well worthy of the attention of such foreigners as wish to obtain something more than a superficial acquaintance with the working of Western political institutions in this country. They furnish a kind of inner history of political events which is absolutely necessary to any one who attempts to interpret their significance. The manner in which a General Election is conducted and the preparations made for it constitute a very good criterion of the amount of progress a nation has made in the development of democratic government. Here are the comments of the Tuiyō on one aspect only of the Election, namely, the manner in which it revealed the present state of political parties in this country:—The General Election made clear the great lack of interest in politics throughout the country, the backward state of constitutional government here and many other things, but above all it showed the utter inefficiency, and powerlessness of our political parties. It is on this that we purpose dwelling in this article.

I. Our Political Parties lack Organization and are without Corporate Strength.—This was very plainly shown at the last General Election. Now the influence of a political party depends entirely on the closeness of the bonds which unite its members. It must act as one man. Our parties have no corporate existence whatever. In England they would not be regarded as parties at all. Take the Seiyū kai as an illustration of what I mean. The headquarters of the Party are in Tōkyō, but the candidates for election are chosen by the provincial branches of the Association. The right to veto nominations does not exist. The candidates who are put up for election in connection with the Party do not as in England occupy one status. They are divided into "openly acknowledged" Party candidates and "not openly acknowledged" Party candidates (公認と非公認, konin to hikōnin). The whole power of choosing candidates rests with the local Party Committees. No matter how unsuitable may be the choice made by these Committees, the heads of the Party in Tōkyō are powerless to do anything. This makes for individual liberty, but it is fatal to Party efficiency. Corporate strength there can be none as long as the Seiyū kai consists of a number of independent disjointed units. The Seiyū kai has no properly organized central Government at all. A local nominee may be quite unsuitable, his election may bring disgrace on the Party, but the President of the Party can not veto the nomination. Nor can the central authorities replace with nominees of their own the unsuitable men selected by provincial committees. The action of all political parties at elections is provincial and divided. There is nothing national or comprehensive about it. This is the case with the Seiyū kai. This is also the case with the Shimpotō. The chief reason of this is looseness of organization and a readiness to yield to temporary and local expediency everywhere. (Yō suru ni, sōsenkyō ni tai suru seiō no undō wa chihō-teki, bunritsu-teki ni shite, kokumin-teki, hōkatsu-teki no nōryoku wo kaku. Seiyū kai shikari. Shimpotō shikari, kore shu to shate gensai no soshiki ni samman ni shite, kosoku naru ni yoru.)

II. Our Politicians depend on the adoption of a suppliant and beseeching attitude to the electors for success. It is of course expected that candidates for election should know more about politics than the electors, that they should come before the public with fixed principles and a settled programme of some sort or other, that is, that they should figure as leaders and guides in the political world. But instead of this, they are without any fixed opinions on any of the great questions of the day. They change from month to month to suit the part they have to play in obedience to their leaders. The Seiyū kai are obliged to support the Government policy of the hour, whatever it may be. The Shimpotō and a section of the Yūko Club members are always found in opposition. The Daidō Club members habitually vacillate between the Government and the Opposition, without influencing either side very much. Not having any principles to explain or any policy to recommend, candidates come before the electors as suplicants begging for support. Their servility is quite despicable. They differ little from the beggars that sit by the roadside except that they ask for votes instead of coppers (Taido no kojiki to nan'no yeramu tokoro zo! tada tōhyō to dōsen to na sa aru noni). The political meeting in England and America is utilized to the full by the candidate for election as an occasion for appealing to the feelings and to the reason of each person assembled, as an occasion for expounding the policy of the party to which the candidate belongs in a bold and aggressive manner. Between the fearless attitude of these men to their electors and the cringing, timid and suppliant demeanour of our politicians there is the greatest conceivable difference. The methods followed by our politicians are so effeminate that it might be better for them to retire from the scene and entrust their interests to the weaker sex. Women are greater experts in the use of the devices for obtaining votes resorted to by our politicians.

III. The Lack of Party newspaper agitation. In this country political parties have no literary organization worthy of the name. The sheets that are called Party organs, such as the magazine known as the Seiyū and the Kensei Honto's Tōhō, are no more than advertising media or means of circulating Party notices among members. They are not compiled so as to appeal to the general public. The central offices of the Parties have no newspapers that they can freely use for the exposition of principles and policies. It is true that in the provinces there are newspapers which invariably side with one or other of the Parties, but that is done through the influence of some local member of the House of Representatives or as a result of personal influence brought to bear on the paper. In Tōkyō there is not a single newspaper that can be regarded as a regularly constituted organ of any political party.

IV. In Ordinary times our politicians are unconcerned and inactive. It is only at election times that our politicians show any energy at all. They then fuss around a good deal, but even on such occasions nothing like personal influence is exercised. They mainly depend on money. The constituencies are corrupted. Large sums of money are paid out for votes. It is said that Party Election expenses range between fifty and eighty thousand yen. And when we consider how prices have gone up and how general bribery has become, we can well believe that such a huge sum as is given above is necessary to insure the return of the members of a Government Party. That many of the electors regard their votes as articles of merchandise is an open secret. The electors are not all like this by any means. Some are to be won over by coaxing. Many are impressed by the deference with which they are treated by the Candidates for election. But when the cringing, suppliant attitude fails to impress, money has to be employed. The expense of purchasing votes is greatly increased by the extortions of the vote-buying commission agents. (Tōhyō nakagaitin, who are a despicable set. (Korera no tohas mottomo nikunubeshi.)) The only way of putting a stop to all this or reducing it to a minimum is for our politicians to take steps for influencing their constituents in the same way as constituents are influenced in Western countries. Political seed-sowing has to go on all the year around. Members of the Diet should be constantly addressing their constituents on the great questions of the day. Support can be won without the use of money if politicians go the right way to work. A great many of the members of the Lower House are idle, spiritless and resourceless men, with nothing impressive or attractive about them. Hence it is that other means have to be used to secure their election. There are no such men to be found in the ranks of political parties in any other country. (Izure no kuni ni mo waga kuni seiō no gotoku raida iōan (倫安) kore koto to suru mu-i, nusan no seiō arau.)

V. The Speeches of our Politicians are insincere. All over the country Political meetings are held and party orators deliver long addresses to big audiences. But there is nothing instructive or valuable about these speeches. It is quite plain that their chief object is to hoodwink the electors. The Seiyū kai speakers do nothing but defend the Government policy and the Opposition politicians condemn that policy. Mutual recrimination and abuse, adverse criticism of the sayings and doings of rivals—this forms the subject-matter of most of the speeches. Both sets of speakers run to extremes. According to subjects both become ultra-pessimists or ultra-optimists. Neither side shows any signs of being guided by far-reaching principles or statesmanlike policy. The three subjects on which politicians are so fond of dwelling, finance, diplomacy and the increase of armaments, are topics which are only thoroughly understood by experts. Vague generalizations on such questions are of little use. Concrete subjects like our policy in Korea and Manchuria our politicians treat with indifference, whereas these are just the questions which call for discussion and on the settlement of which the country's future prosperity largely depends. But it is not difficult to see that their country's welfare is not the chief consideration with most of our politicians. They are self-interested men and their speeches are chiefly designed to persuade the electors to keep them in power.

VI. Our Political Parties are without pecuniary resources.—The Seiyū kai formerly had a good deal of money left to it by Hoshi Tōru, and the Shimpotō was favoured in the same way by the donations of Hiraoka Kichitarō. But there has been no second Hoshi Tōru and no one in the ranks of the Shimpotō to-day supplies the Party with funds in the way that Hiraoka was wont to do. Beyond the annual subscriptions of the members of the Party, amounting to about 50 yen per head, our Parties have no capital to fall back on. Had the public generally more confidence in our political parties, wealthy men here would be as ready to give financial aid to it as they are in England. The great political parties of England are never at a loss for funds. Promising candidates for Parliament are constantly helped to defray election expenses. There are numerous capitalists in England who subscribe to party funds though they themselves take no active part in politics. Some who do this are no doubt seeking for titles. But with whatever motive it be done, they open their purses liberally in support of political parties. Hence the stability of these parties. But here so faint is the general interest taken in our political parties that wealthy men subscribe nothing towards their maintenance. Recently business men here have begun to turn their attention to politics. These men have money at their back, and any political party that can come to terms with them will certainly secure pecuniary support. The Shimpotō, whose views accord with those of the most prominent business men, should take this into consideration. These business men have little corporate strength. They are in no sense a political party as yet. The probability is that they will join one of the existing parties, and from their point of view the Shimpotō offers more attractions than the Seiyū kai, for whose ways they have no admiration. Whatever happens no party can get on without adequate funds and the party that is the first to supply this deficiency, other things being equal, will stand the best chance of obtaining the confidence of the public.

There is much to be said about the inefficiency of the leadership of our parties, about the inferiority of the tactics and general methods employed for gaining public support and other subjects, but the foregoing review of the present state of party politics in this country will serve to show that our parties as now constituted and managed form no adequate basis for the development of a first-class type of constitutional government. The last General Election demonstrated most clearly that radical and extensive reform is an imperative necessity if political parties here are to fulfil the function they do in Europe and America.

W.D.

PROFESSOR I. ABE ON THE YOKOHAMA CRICKET GROUND QUESTION.

Professor Abe Isoo, of the Waseda University, is one of those practical-minded scholars who takes a keen interest in all social and municipal subjects and who is known in Japan as an authority on such topics. The present state of Tōkyō has been thoroughly discussed by him in a series of articles recently published. In the July number of the Teiyo he takes up the question of the lease of the Yokohama Recreation Grounds to foreigners. Here is the substance of his remarks on this topic. The Yokohama Cricket and Athletic Club is practically an Anglo-Saxon institution, for the simple reason that among the foreign residents of Yokohama Englishmen and Americans, with few exceptions, are the only people who take a very keen interest in outdoor games and athletic sports of all kinds. There is nothing in the rules of the Association to prevent Frenchmen, Germans, or other foreigners from joining the Club, but as a matter of fact they are not inclined to do so. Their tastes and habits stand in the way. But with Englishmen and Americans outdoor sports are an essential part of life. In all parts of the world where they have settled recreation grounds will be found, where their overflowing energy finds an outlet, where they train themselves to endure fatigue, where they fit themselves for bearing the strain of long hours of sedentary work. This Anglo-Saxon activity has for many years past been an object-lesson to us Japanese. Often have I been struck with admiration at the regularity with which middle-aged and even old men use their spare hours in playing some active game. Now there is one question that we Japanese ought to ask ourselves. Is it conceivable that athletic sports throughout the country would have reached the rank they now occupy without the example set us in Yokohama by the foreigners? Take the game in which we Japanese have must excelled—baseball. Has it not for years past always been the ambition of our best teams to be able to beat the Yokohama team? America heads the world at baseball playing, and so our First High School, the Keiō-gijuku and the Waseda Semmōgakkō students have all gone in for hard training with the object of defeating the Yokohama team of baseball players.*

Notwithstanding this and much more that could be said as to the benefits that the use made of the Cricket Ground by foreigners have conferred on us, the Yokohama Municipality have recently decided that they can not renew the lease of the ground. They say that the ground ought to be used by the whole community as a place for recreation. Now we can not but perceive that such a measure as this will be felt very keenly by the English and American residents of Yokohama. In their minds another piece of ground could never take the place of the lot they now use. No place so conveniently situated can possibly be found. Then the ground is full of associations connected with the life of the settlement which all foreigners will be loth to part with. We sympathize with the foreign residents very much in this affair. We can not, however, overlook the fact that a Municipality has to consult the interests of whole communities, and that when it comes to deciding between the claims of a small section of that community and the whole body, they may feel compelled to take the side of the many against the few. But in the present instance it seems to me to be important to know to what use the Municipality purpose putting the ground. It is said they may turn it into a public garden where people can stroll about. This would be a great mistake. The ground should certainly be employed by the Municipality for the purpose for which it is now used. One of the great defects of our modern towns is the lack of suitable places for games of all sorts. Students who have left school have no means of keeping up their tennis or baseball playing. The grounds attached to our higher schools are fairly good, though even these are gradually being entrenched on for building purposes. For students to spend years in learning how to play games well at school only to relapse into the old state of inactivity when they enter life, as they are now constantly doing owing to the lack of facilities for keeping up their play, is rightly regarded by thoughtful people as most undesirable. If the Yokohama Municipality are resolved to take possession of the Cricket Ground, let them keep up the fine traditions of that ground; let it still be devoted to tennis, to cricket, to baseball, and other athletic sports. This would do something towards lessening the regret felt by foreign residents for the loss of the place. If Anglo-Saxon activity is considered something that should be rendered national, instead of being confined to schools as it now is, it is absolutely necessary that every large town should have its Athletic Club and a big piece of well laid-out ground where games can go on week in and week out. Yokohama has it in her power to set an example to the whole country in this matter. Public Gardens in Japan, though pleasant enough in their way and suited for people who are disinclined to take vigorous exercise, tend to confirm our people in that inactivity which has proved the source of many evils. In all thriving Western cities there are more Recreation Grounds than Public Gardens. London has 384 Cricket Grounds, 334 separate Tennis Clubs, and 45 skating rinks, besides golf links and the like.

* There is much to be said on this subject. Our Yokohama baseball teams have often made a very poor show when playing against Japanese nines. Baseball is not an English game, and so most Englishmen keep out of it. There are not sufficient really good American players in Yokohama to give the Japanese an idea of how the game is played in the States. The Japanese team who went to America 2 years ago came back with the idea that no Japanese team could stand up against even second-class nines in the States. The notion that any Yokohama team of recent years has fairly represented high-class play in America is quite wrong. This Professor Abe seems to overlook.

Another reason for continuing to use the Yokohama Cricket Ground for games only is the wonderful state of perfection to which the ground has been brought by the successive Club Committees who have had charge of it. During my travels in America I inspected over twenty different lots of ground devoted to athletic sports on the Pacific Coast without coming across one that would bear comparison with the Yokohama Cricket Ground. A piece of ground like that is not to be made in a day. Money alone will not produce it. Its shape is ideal. The sod is not to be surpassed in this country. To turn a piece of ground which as a result of years of toil and care has been rendered one of the finest cricket grounds in the East into a mere Public Garden would not only seem to be sacrilegious, it would be most unbusiness-like on the part of the Municipality.

It must never be forgotten that with young men athletic sports of all kinds often act as a preventive of vice. Games in this country have done more to keep young men away from undesirable places than almost anything else. Public Gardens have never been regarded as conducive to morality. In many countries they are all the other way. The Public Gardens that now surround the Cricket Ground are certainly big enough for all ordinary purposes, but if their enlargement is considered necessary, this could perhaps be effected without destroying the Cricket Ground.

Objections to the above proposals on the grounds of the expense involved will sure to be forthcoming. People will say that for the Municipality to keep the present Cricket Ground in the condition in which they now find it would prove to be a very costly undertaking. But if properly managed, instead of losing by it, the Municipality could turn the ground into a source of revenue. Cricket Grounds in the West are kept up largely by gate-money, that is, money taken at matches. This money and the subscriptions of members of Clubs suffice to defray the working expenses. Huge sums of money are paid every year by lovers of games for the pleasure of witnessing first-class matches, and the day is not far distant when in this country too thousands of young men will pay to see a match as willingly as they now pay to attend a theatre or a wrestling match. The Yokohama Cricket Ground and all that goes on there afford an immense amount of pleasure to all our many foreign visitors. The Ground serves to show in some ways how far we have advanced as a nation. It is a place that we may justly be proud of. It helps greatly to attract foreigners to our chief port. That Yokohama has this place to show is certainly to her credit. It serves to make the time of the crews of numerous ships of war pass pleasantly. These and many other considerations should not be treated lightly by a nation which in so many respects is endeavouring to realise that henceforth it is on the world's great stage, with all its publicity, that it is destined to act.

W.D.

CUSTOMS PROTESTS.

Mr. S. Yamazaki, Director of the Yokohama Customs, passed a decision on July 8th on a protest filed by Messrs. Samuel Samuel and Co. No. 27 Yamashita-cho. The firm imported 2 cases of "gas mantles" on which the appraisers imposed 40 per cent ad val. duty in accordance with the second clause of No. 297 of the tariff. The importers contended that the article was a raw material manufactured from ramie and passed in a chemical fluid and that consequently the material should be dealt with under No. 537 of the tariff which provides 20 per cent ad val. duty. The protest was dismissed.

Another decision has been delivered by the Director of the Yokohama Customs on a protest by the Kintu Gomei Kaisha, who imported "object glass" and "deck glass." The Customs authorities imposed 40 per cent ad val. duty on the material under No. 418 of the tariff. The importers held that the goods were materials to make microscopes, and the duty should be ad val. 20 per cent in accordance with No. 432 of the tariff. The protest was rejected on the ground that the materials were not regarded as parts of microscopes, but should be taken as accessories of the optical instrument.

THE LAW COURTS.

THE "AGENOR" CASE.

A. Lewis and C. A. Hill have lodged an appeal in the Court of Cassation against the decision given on July 8th in the Tokyo Appeal Court confirming the judgment delivered in the Yokohama District Court.

The hearing in the present Court is expected to take place after the summer vacation.

CLAIM AGAINST THE KYOTO RACE CLUB.

It is reported by several Japanese journals that several horse owners have instituted claims in the Kyoto District Court against the Kyoto Race Club. It appears that at the first meeting of the Club these horse owners won several events but have not yet received the prizes specified on the programme, although they have repeatedly urged the Club for payment. The committee promised to pay on July 10th but did not fulfill their promise. The petitioners were represented by Mr. H. Anamori, a lawyer.

The Nippon Yusen Kaisha's new European liner Hirano Maru has been completed at the Mitsu Bishi Shipbuilding yard, in Nagasaki. She will be brought to Yokohama about the middle of September.

YOKOHAMA LITERARY SOCIETY.

FAREWELL PRESENTATION TO THE PRESIDENT.

At Van Schaick Hall on July 10th a social meeting was arranged by the Committee of the Yokohama Literary Society for the purpose of giving the members an opportunity of formally bidding au revoir to Mr. A. Bellamy Brown, who for six years has filled the post of President of the Society, and Mrs. Brown, who are leaving for Hongkong, where Mr. Brown goes to take up the editorship of the China Mail. Opportunity was also taken of presenting to Mr. Brown a silver tea service as a token of the members' esteem and appreciation of the services he has rendered to the Literary Society, the presentation being made, at the invitation of the Committee, by Mr. J. P. Mollison, one of the oldest residents of the port and one of the senior members of the institution. Although Mr. Brown had been warned that a farewell speech would be expected of him, he had no idea that a presentation was included in the evening's programme, and this interesting item in the proceedings came as a great surprise both to him and to Mrs. Brown.

Although a number are at present absent from town, there were about 150 members present last evening. For the occasion Van Schaick Hall had, by the willing offices of the ladies of the Committee—Miss Blundell, Miss Booth and Miss Hall—assisted by Mrs. Booth and Mrs. C. Ellis, been transformed into a drawing-room, decorated with bamboo and plants, the room presenting quite an attractive appearance. A choice musical programme, kindly arranged by Mr. W. Karl E. Vincent, was presented during the evening, and this, with the speeches and intervals for social intercourse, contributed to a very pleasant evening.

Shortly after half-past eight the proceedings opened with a pianoforte duet by Mrs. A. Bellamy Brown, who on many occasions has performed similar service for the Literary Society, and Mr. W. Karl E. Vincent. The piece,—"Mendelssohn's" "The Hebrides,"—was rendered with great skill and delicacy, and won the unstinted applause of the audience. Mrs. Thom, whom the members were glad to welcome back to their ranks after her brief holiday at home, delighted the audience with Crover's "My Ain Folk," sung with that sympathetic expression required of such a composition.

After a brief interval, the Vice-President of the Society (Mr. A. W. Sherriff,) escorting Mr. and Mrs. Brown to seats near the platform, proceeded to the main business of the evening.

Addressing the members, Mr. Sherriff remarked that as a rule speeches were banned at social functions, but he felt he could legitimately claim the indulgence of that audience for a few moments while he voiced the sentiments uppermost in the minds that evening of his colleagues on the Committee of the Yokohama Literary Society, and also, he ventured to think, of the whole of the members of the organisation. That gathering marked an important epoch in the history of the Literary Society, and in asking the members present to take with him a brief retrospective glance at the work of the Society he (the speaker) did so for the purpose of emphasizing the importance of the occasion which had brought them together that evening. The seeds from which the Yokohama Literary Society had grown to its present position were sown as far back as 1884, when a few residents joined themselves together for the purpose of social intercourse and the promotion of literary culture in the community. Unfortunately no record was kept of the earliest meetings held, but there were records showing that in the autumn of the following year—on November 24th, 1885, a meeting was held which resulted in the formation of the Yokohama Reading Circle. At that gathering, held at No. 221, Bluff, there were present six ladies and two gentlemen—among them being Mrs. Van Petten, whom he was pleased to see with them that evening—(applause); Miss Crosby, still another old resident of Yokohama; Mrs. Loomis, now in Europe on a holiday; and Mr. C. V. Sale, the first Honorary Secretary, who, as they knew, left the port only a few weeks ago. At the following meeting the membership increased to twenty five, and among the early workers were the Rev. E. S. Booth, the latter of whom was with them that night. (Applause.) From strength to strength the young Society advanced, and in 1887 Mr. J. T. Griffin, a very old and respected friend still residing in Yokohama, was elected President—a post he filled for several years. In 1889 the Yokohama Reading Circle, having at that time a membership of about 80, changed its name to the Yokohama Literary Society, the night of meeting was altered from Wednesday to Friday, while during the same session the newly-named organisation found a permanent home in Van Schaick Hall, where its meetings had been held continuously up to the present time. Such in brief was the history of the institution, and in looking back they could not refrain from admiring the indomitable pluck and energy of the early pioneers, as a result of whose careful nursing and administrative work the Society had grown, until to-day, with a membership of something like 350, it could justly claim rank among the foremost institutions of Yokohama. (Applause.) They could truly say that "others have laboured, and we to-day are reaping the fruits of their labours." Within the Literary Society acquaintances had been formed which had ripened into friendships—friendships which with many would last as long as life itself. But while they rightly paid their tribute of respect and gratitude to those who in the early history of the Society had borne the burden and heat of the day, their thoughts that evening turned to one who for six years had worthily filled the post of President, and who in consequence of approaching departure had laid aside his mantle of office, to be passed on in due time to another whom the members would be asked to call to their service. He (the speaker) referred to his friend, and their friend, Mr. Bellamy Brown. ("Hear, hear," and loud applause.) During his term of office Mr. Brown had, by marked ability in the conduct of the meetings, by constant attention to the minutest details, and by hard work and self sacrificing devotion to its best interests, been largely instrumental in bringing the Yokohama Literary Society to the proud position it occupied to day. ("Hear, hear.") And now the cords which had bound their late President and the members together in the work of the Society were to be severed, but it could be confidently predicted that the cords of mutual esteem and affection which had bound them in the past would be further strengthened by the kindly remembrance of work done by Mr. Brown on their behalf in the years gone by. While, however, they paid their tribute to Mr. Brown, they also wished to recognise the valuable work done for the Society by the lady at his side. Many men called to public service had often given—and lightly so—much of the credit for their success to their life-partners, and he (the speaker) felt he could say without fear of contradiction that the case of Mr. Brown had proved no exception to this excellent rule. Mrs. Brown had rendered much valuable aid to their President in his work, not only by placing her talents at the service of the Committee in connection with the musical programmes. When, through unforeseen and unavoidable circumstances, members and friends were at the last moment unable to fulfil their engagements, and when on Friday afternoons the programme arranged for the evening meetings had vanished like snow before the morning sun, and the Committee in consequence were compelled to requisition the help of old and well-tried friends, Mrs. Brown had ever been ready to come to the aid of the Society. (Loud applause.) In the presence of so many older friends, he (the speaker), as a comparatively young member, felt somewhat out of place in speaking on behalf of the Society that evening, and later, with the acquiescence of the Committee, he proposed asking Mr. J. P. Mollison, one of the oldest residents, and one who had ever evinced a warm interest in their work, to say a few words on behalf of the members generally. But on behalf of the Committee he had been requested to publicly express the thanks of the Executive and of the Society to their late President and to Mrs. Brown for services so willingly given at all times in their behalf. And now it remained for him to formally bid their friends adieu. He (the speaker) would not say "good-bye," for he hoped that after a few years' residence in Hongkong the members of the Literary Society would have the pleasure of welcoming Mr. and Mrs. Brown on a visit to Yokohama. In bidding their guests "adieu," Mr. Sherriff hoped their residence in Hongkong would be to them a very happy time; that Mr. Brown's health would benefit considerably by the change of climate; and that in their new surroundings Mr. and Mrs. Brown would gather around them as large a circle of warm-hearted and sincere friends as they left behind them in Yokohama, not the least among whom were the members of the Literary Society, on whose behalf they had rendered such valuable service, and in whose hearts would ever be cherished the most kindly recollections of work ungrudgingly undertaken and ably performed.—(Applause.)

Mr. J. P. MOLLISON, who was received with applause, said:—It is with feelings of no little gratification I find myself one of the spokesmen on this interesting occasion, and I desire to publicly thank the Committee of the Literary Society for the great honour they have done me in asking me to present to Mr. Bellamy Brown tonight the testimonial now before me. I feel I have no claim to this honour other than that I am an old resident of Yokohama, and as such naturally an old member of the Literary Society. I cannot even claim to be an active member, having only on rare occasions and at long intervals contributed towards the evening entertainments. At the same time I have always taken a lively interest in the Society's proceedings, and have been in close enough touch with them to know the enormous amount of work done by Mr. Brown as President, and to realise that to his ability, tact and urbanity is due the great popularity of the Literary Society, and the widespread influence for good which it exercises in the community. ("Hear, hear," and applause.) I feel that in Mr. Brown's departure the Society is losing its motive-power, and would like to take this opportunity of endorsing and emphasizing all that has fallen so ably from the lips of our esteemed Vice-President, Mr. Sherriff, than whom no one knows better what a loss we are sustaining. But there's an old Scotch saying that "needs must where the devil drives," and unfortunately for us, the printers' devils are calling from the torrid fires—I was almost going to say the Inferno—of Hongkong, and Mr. Brown feels that in the interests of his family he must obey the summons. We can only wish him God-speed, and say in the words of the old Scotch song:—

Better lo'ed ye canna be,
Will ye no come back again?

(Applause.) What is our loss is Hongkong's gain, and we envy them the bright and genial personality that will now be theirs.

But no words of mine in connection with Mr. Brown's work for the Literary Society would be complete without warm reference to the services of his wife in the same direction. Times without number has she given us pleasure by her great musical talents, not only when taking part in the pre-arranged programmes, but often unselfishly has she appeared, as no one knows better than Mr. Vincent, to fill a gap at the last moment. She has throughout her husband's long occupancy of the Presidentship at all times ably seconded his efforts for the welfare and best interests of the Society, and therefore I say that no thanks to Mr. Brown for his work would be complete without a warm appreciation of Mrs. Brown's services as well. ("Hear, hear.") And here I would like to introduce a personal note of gratitude to them both, not only on my own behalf, but also on behalf of Mrs. Mollison, who deeply regrets not being able to be present to-night, for the unflinching and absolutely reliable help they have given us at all times in connection with theatrical and musical productions, concerts and entertainments of whatever kind. (Applause.) On such occasions Mr. Brown's advice and assistance have been of the greatest value to us, and he was never so full of work, although, as you all know, a very busy man, that he could not find or make time to take an active and useful interest in whatever undertaking we had in hand. I am glad to have this opportunity of thanking him publicly on Mrs. Mollison's behalf, as well as my own, for all he has done for us, and of assuring him of our lasting gratitude and appreciation.

With these few, and I fear altogether inadequate, words I would now ask you, Mr. Brown, to accept this testimonial from the members of the Yokohama Literary Society as a token of the affectionate esteem in which you are held by us all, and with it the assurance of our warmest and most heartfelt wishes that you may have all the success you hope for in your new field of labour. We trust you may have a long life of usefulness before you, and that Mrs. Brown and the children may be spared to be the same comfort and happiness to you in the future that they have been in the past. It only remains for me to quote the old saying, "Happy to meet, sorry to part, and happy to meet again." (Loud applause.)

The testimonial took the form of a handsome lotus-pattern silver tea service comprising teapot, milk jug, sugarbasin and tongs, the same being accompanied by a tray of polished shitan-wood, with handles and mounts of silver. In the centre of the tray was a silver plate, bearing the following inscription:—"Presented to A. Bellamy Brown, Esq., President Yokohama Literary Society 1902 to 1908, by the Members, as a token of appreciation and esteem. July 10th, 1908."

The service, which was enclosed in a polished black case, lined with blue silk, was supplied by Messrs. Arthur and Bond, silversmiths of Yokohama.

Mr. A. Bellamy Brown, who at the outset spoke with considerable emotion, was received with loud cheers on rising to return thanks. He said:—"Mr. Vice-President, Mr. Mollison, and members of the Yokohama Literary Society,—my dear friends all,—I am at a loss to understand why you have done me and mine so much honour to-night. There runs an old Chinese proverb that when the heart is full the tongue fails to give utterance to all that the heart would desire to say. I am feeling the truth of that wise saying very keenly this evening. How can I thank the speakers of this evening for their all too flattering remarks? Would that I could honestly take to myself half or a quarter of their praise; but, believe me, I cannot. Any success which may have accrued to the Yokohama Literary Society during the six years I have been its President is wholly and solely due to the warm-hearted support accorded me by the different committees and the ready response of the community to all calls we have made upon their literary and musical talents. To them should be awarded the praise; not myself. I am deeply touched by the allusions which have been made to my dear wife and thorough help-meet. In all the years since I brought her as a bride to Yokohama she has been a tower of strength and rock of support in all my undertakings, public or otherwise. Her sympathy and sweet counsel have helped me over many a rough barrier, and if I may make bold to appropriate any of the kind things said this evening, may I take them as a tribute to my wife and lay them at her feet? (Loud applause.) The beautiful gift you have given us this evening we shall greatly treasure, and I thank you again most sincerely for it and the kindly thoughts which prompted the giving. We both hope that many years of usefulness lie before the Yokohama Literary Society. It has weathered the buffets and stress of twenty-three years, and is now going along strong and bravely, and I see no reason why it should not continue to occupy for long years its career of usefulness in this community. But it can only do so if every one of its members will contribute her or his little mite to the general fund. As I reminded the lads of the Boys' Brigade a few Sundays ago, quoting the words of Thackeray when he paid tribute to Parkman and Macaulay, "we cannot all wear the epaulets or carry the Field-marshal's baton, some of us must be privates in the ranks; but whatever our position we can one and all do our little best to keep the old flag flying and maintain its honour unstained." ("Hear, hear.") Some of you can contribute music and song; some can prepare addresses, while to others must be left the mere attendance at our meetings, attendance regular and punctual, which will show that you give your cordial approval to the work of your Committee. There must be many younger members of this community who could turn to the glorious pages of English literature and cull therefrom fresh facts and fancies wherewith to delight their fellow members during the long winter nights; other fields of exploration which I should like you to develop lie in the history, folklore, myths and legends of the happy island empire in which you live. Then some of you can try and get some of the few old pioneers still left in Yokohama to commit their reminiscences of the early days to paper. For remember our Society, like the great outside world, covers a great variety of interests, and welcomes all sorts of contributors. You need the Don Quixotes and the Sancho Panzas, the idealists with their heads in the clouds as well as the sober-minded individuals who are content with "the common round, the trivial tasks"; you need your Boswells and your Johnsons if you are to make the Literary Society all that it can be made to be. The social side of life is as important as its workaday. I suppose the first advance on the ladder of civilisation was made when some primeval caveman first realised that it was better to share a bone with his neighbour than to incontinently knock him on the head with a stone-hammer on sight. The Yokohama Literary Society is an organisation peculiarly suited to serve the social purposes of this big seaport. It brings us in touch with one another, affords us an opportunity, as it were, to come out of our caves and share our talents and our gifts with our neighbours. It prevents, in some degree, the development of selfish isolation which is the bane of life in the Far East.—("Hear, hear.") In my future home I shall look forward to hearing news of you all, and more particularly news of the successes and triumphs of the Literary Society. And finally, may I commend to the younger members to ever strive after some ideal? Can I leave behind me a message finer in every respect than that which poor Robert Louis Stevenson wrote in his Christmas Sermon many years ago:—"To be honest, to be kind. To earn a little, and spend a little less. To make at least one home the happier for his presence. To learn to renounce, when necessary, and that without bitterness. To keep a few friends, and those without capitulation; and by the same grim compact to keep friends with oneself. These are tasks demanding all that a man has of delicacy and fortitude." If the members can live up to that ideal of Stevenson they will find that their lives will be all the happier and sweeter, and all the more worth living. (Applause.) Ladies and Gentlemen, I have rather diverted from my path to-night, but I hope you will excuse me. Will you accept from Mrs. Brown and myself our sincere thanks for all the kind words that have been uttered from this platform to-night? If kind wishes and kind words uttered in all sincerity from loving hearts can smooth the rough paths of life, then the path of myself and family in Hongkong will be indeed a path of roses. (Loud applause.)

Following Mr. Brown's speech, Mr. W. Blundell, who made his debut before the Literary Society, gave as a violin solo a mazurka, the piano accompaniment being played by Miss Blundell. Mr. Blundell's playing was deservedly applauded, and the reception of his piece will we hope encourage him to place his abilities at the service of the Committee next year. The next item was a song by Mr. S. H. Somerton, who in view of his willing help in past sessions and the excellence of his singing, is always sure of a warm welcome at the hands of the Literary Society. Mr. Somerton sang two numbers by Woodford Finden—"Temple Bells" and "The Kashmiri Song." The numbers were of a somewhat different style to Mr. Somerton's usual songs, but that they were appreciated was shown by the applause with which they were received.

At this juncture refreshments were served, the ladies kindly assisting in this work being Mrs. C. Ellis and Mrs. E. S. Booth, the Misses Hall, Booth, Blundell (2), Cameron (2), Kenderdine (2), and Tripler (2), to whom, and to the other members of the Committee—Messrs. Gray (Hon.

Secretary), S. H. Somerton, W. M. Squire, and T. Gordon Kenderdine (Hon. Treasurer).—the success of the evening is due.

After the refreshments, Mrs. Thom gave another song, "Absent," and Mr. Somerton sang "Less than the Dust," another of Woodford Finden's compositions, and with "Auld Lang Syne" and "For they are Jolly Good People," sung in honour of the departing guests, a memorable evening in the history of the Yokohama Literary Society came to an end.

The accompaniments to the songs were kindly played by Mr. W. Karl E. Vincent.

FAREWELL DINNER.

On Saturday evening Mr. Bellamy Brown was entertained at a farewell dinner in the Yokohama United Club by the members of the staffs of the four Yokohama daily papers. A few friends were also invited to meet Mr. Bellamy Brown for the last time on a social occasion. Mr. A. M. Knapp presided and there were about a dozen present. An excellent repast was provided by Mr. Herlihy, Steward of the Club, and a very pleasant evening was spent. Speeches were made by the Chairman expressing the esteem in which the journalists of Yokohama held the guest of the evening and their regret at his departure, by Mr. Bellamy Brown in reply and acknowledgement, and by Mr. J. Plummer and others present. Songs were given in the course of the evening by Messrs. Lewis and Somerton.

PRESENTATION BY STAFF.

In connexion with Mr. Bellamy Brown's approaching departure the Japanese staff of the Japan Mail have presented to him a silver souvenir in the form of a handsome set of a dozen silver spoons in a neat case, with an address signed by all the native employees.

YACHTING.

Yachts had fine weather on Saturday afternoon, though the big boats and even the Mosquito Club craft could have stood more weight in the S. E. breeze that prevailed.

Only two started in the class for yachts above 22 rating. These were Mary (scratch) and Maid Marion (6½ min.) which raced round the Widow Buoy Course. Mary led by 45 secs. at the harbour entrance, and after passing out Maid Marion made the mistake of standing out into the Bay, where she had the tide against her, and so was five minutes behind at the first mark.

Mary increased her lead all the way round and won quite easily. The times were:

	Start.	Finish.	Corrected.
	h.m.s.	h.m.s.	h.m.s.
Mary .....	2.00.10	4.03.20	4.03.20
M. Marion .....	2.00.00	4.24.30	4.18.00

Five Mosquito club yachts, Winsome, Sunbeam, Pete, Edna and Elsa, raced round the Mandarin Bluff and Quarantine Ship course for the Commodore's Cup. Though Winsome finished first Sunbeam takes the cup on her allowance of two minutes. Times:

	Start.	Finish.	Corrected.
	h.m.s.	h.m.s.	h.m.s.
Edna .....	2.15.40	3.24.32	3.23.32
Pete .....	2.15.55	3.24.10	3.23.40
Winsome .....	2.15.20	3.22.16	3.22.16
Sunbeam .....	2.15.30	3.23.27	3.21.27
Elsa .....	2.16.45	3.26.00	3.23.30

The whole fleet of Larks, 16 in all, went out and chased one another round the Mandarin Bluff mark and Lightship course for the Charlesworth Cup, presenting, especially at the start, a pretty sight. No. 11 got home first at 3.57.00, No. 14 next at 3.59.00 and No. 2 third at 3.59.45. No. 9 did not finish.

The Hankow Daily News states that an Italian named Mori shot a compatriot named Bartolini, the other day. It appears that the attack was caused by jealousy. Mori fired two shots; one took effect on the forearm and the other grazed the body. He has not been arrested and it is suspected that he has made his escape from Hankow.

YOKOHAMA.

The Yokohama Chamber of Commerce held its ordinary annual meeting at 3 p.m. on July 9th. After the usual reports had been read the Chairman said that satisfactory results had been obtained in regard to the recent meeting in Tokyo of the various Chambers of Commerce throughout the empire. Finally the members considered a proposal to welcome the American Fleet in October.

Two armed men committed a robbery at the Yokosuka branch of the Tokyo Commercial Bank a little after noon on July 9th. They menaced the staff of the bank with a sword and a revolver and stole yen 70.

Our the evening of July 8th, S. Okamoto, aged 16, an employee of a coal and coke merchant living in Hinode-cho, Yokohama, attempted to commit suicide by hanging himself, but was immediately cut down by one of his comrades. It is reported that his employer sustained fatal injuries through the explosion of a kerosene oil can and died at the Nogi Hospital on July 5th. As the explosion resulted through carelessness on the part of Okamoto, regret caused him to attempt to put an end to his life.

According to a report received at the Yokohama Chief Police Office, two men armed with large knives broke into the house of a wealthy farmer living in Sakawa near Odawara, on the evening of July 9th, menacing the occupants and stealing a small sum of money. About three hours later, one was arrested at Oiso, and was found to be an ex-convict.

Owing to an expected scarcity of water after the termination of the rainy season, the Yokohama Water Works have stopped the supply to fountains, etc., and limited the supply of water to the public throughout the city. A similar limit will in the near future, be arranged for private houses.

Baron K. Sufu, Governor of Kanagawa prefecture, has been promoted from the Third Junior Rank to the Third Senior Rank.

N. Kojimaya, an employee of a dairy in West Tobe-machi, Yokohama, was attacked by a cow on July 10th while milking her. She injured him severely with her horns.

A youth was arrested by the Tobe police on July 10th on a charge of theft. Since the middle of June, he visited several foreign houses in Negishi and Kitagata, and stole a lot of articles valued at about yen 3,000 in all. He is stated to be an ex-convict named H. Akabane.

The Yokohama Reception Committee to welcome the American Fleet met at 4 p.m. on July 10th. They re-considered the proposed entertainment of the American officers and bluejackets which was investigated at the previous conference. The proposal was unanimously adopted. The reception committee decided to appoint a special committee consisting of fifteen members of the City Assembly, and the guests to be invited at the proposed garden party will be as follows: About 2,300 officers of 24 American warships and of 8 Japanese warships, which will be appointed by the Government to receive the Americans; the American Ambassador and his staff; American Consul-General and his staff; the Ministers of the various Departments; a number of Japanese high naval officers, foreign and Japanese journalists, etc.

The Toyo Bank, which was established with a capital of yen 1,000,000 in April this year, in Onoye-cho, Yokohama, will hold a general meeting on July 25th. The net profit for three months ended June 30th was yen 6,100. The sum will be carried forward to next account.

A horse attached to a wagon took fright about 5 p.m. on July 11th in Nagashima-cho, trampling down the betto and ran the wagon over a little child who died an hour later. In Suyeyoshi-cho, the horse collided with a cart and destroyed it. The same afternoon, another wagon drawn by a horse ran over a child in Nakamura-machi inflicting severe injuries, the betto at once being arrested by the Kotobuki-cho police.

The foreign trade of Yokohama during ten days ended July 10th was as follows: Exports, yen 5,163,418; and imports, yen 5,400,369.

The bankers of Yokohama held a conference on Saturday, July 11th, and decided to display a large number of fire-works when the American Fleet arrives in Yokohama harbour.

Five new cases of typhus were reported in Yokosuka on July 11th. One of the patients died the same day.

On July 11th, the Kaga-cho police arrested 13 lads living in Moto-machi, Kitagata, or Negishi and removed three of them to the Kun-iku-in, a kind of penitentiary, for taking money from children by menacing them.

A telegram was received on the morning of July 13th at the Yokohama Chief Police Office to the effect that the two armed men who committed robbery on July 3th at the Yokosuka branch of the Commercial Bank were arrested early on Monday morning in Tokyo. On the same day they were removed to Yokosuka, where they underwent examination. To-day, July 14th, they will be brought to the Yokohama District Court.

About fifty men fought on the night of July 11th at the village of South Shimoura near Yokosuka, where a festival of the Shinto Temple Yakumo was held. One of them was killed and fourteen were injured.

The Nippon Union Transportation Company, Yokohama, held a general meeting on July 10th. The net profit during 6 months ended May 31st was yen 25,819.11. An interim dividend was declared at the rate of 10 per cent per annum.

A young man, aged 20, attired in female costume, was found on July 11th crushed to death on the railway at Tagoshi in the district of Miura.

In connexion with the rinderpest which is prevalent in western places, Baron Sufu, Governor of Kanagawa prefecture, has issued a notification prohibiting the transportation of beef, and other fresh meat, etc., from these districts, especially from Hyogo, Okayama, Hiroshima and Yamaguchi.

The Yokohama Municipality have appointed a special committee to make preparations to welcome the American Fleet. The committee consists of fifteen members of the City Assembly: Messrs. F. Nakamura, K. Doi, H. Minowa, K. Hiranuma, R. Yamada, Y. Tanaka, H. Akao, S. Yano, R. Tasawa, C. Saito, I. Mori, G. Tomita, M. Asada, M. Kaneko, and Dr. Y. Hyodo. They met on July 15th at the Social Club in the Public Garden, Mr. N. Mitsuhashi, Mayor, and his staff being present.

Bicycle races were held on July 15th at Ura-Takashima-cho, the programme being successfully carried out. Several cyclists from Tokyo were present.

The new billiard club under the appellation of the Kurawa-kwai will hold its first meeting on July 25th at the Choyo-ken, Minato-cho.

Count Okuma gave a garden party on July 15th at his new villa in Kodzu. About three hundred high officials and Progressists were present.

Murder took place about 10.10 am. on July 15th in Ogi-machi near the Ogi bridge. A coolie named T. Hayashi (26) murdered another coolie named B. Kobayashi (28) by stabbing him on the side of the abdomen with a short sword. While trying to escape, the murderer was arrested by a policeman of the Harbour Station, who happened to be passing the street. At the examination at the police office, the offender said that he and the victim were employed by T. Sakuma, a contractor, and that they had a dispute on a money matter. He added that he merely tried to menace his comrade with the weapon which he always kept in his possession. The murderer will be removed to-day, July 16th, to the Public Procurator's Office through the Kotobuki-cho Police Office.

A stone-cutter, S. Kobayashi (24) by name, committed suicide early on Tuesday morning by laying himself on the railway near West Tobe-machi where a freight train ran over him. Poverty is reported to have been the cause.

A child fell into the sea near Kaigan-dori, Gochome on July 13th while playing on a lighter, and was drowned. On the same day, another child was drowned by falling into a pond in Otori-yato, Honmoku.

G. Matsunaga, a photographer living in Noge-machi, and N. Ina, the chief priest of the Buddhist temple Seisho-ji, Choya-machi, were arrested on July 14th on a charge of infringing the Emigration Law. They were removed at once to the Yokohama District Court, their houses subsequently being searched.

An old woman committed suicide on the evening of July 14th by throwing herself into a well in the grounds of the Buddhist temple Honkaku-ji, Kanagawa. She was not identified.

The health returns of Kanagawa prefecture during the week ended July 12th are as follows:—

	Cholera.	Dysentery.	Typhus.	Diphtheria.	Scarlet fever.	Small pox.
Yokohama—
New cases ...	—	5	5	4	—	—
Died .....	—	—	1	1	—	—
Other Districts—
New cases.....	—	—	77	5	—	—
Died .....	—	—	5	2	—	—

The Yokohama City Assembly will consider, at their next meeting, a bill providing for payment of about yen 20,000 in connexion with the proposed reception of the American Fleet. The bill has already been submitted to the Assembly by the municipality.

The leading business men of Yokohama held a meeting on July 15th at the Social Club, and a consultation on the proposed reception of the officers and bluejackets of the American Fleet. They agreed to collect a sum of money from the public and also to subscribe themselves.

The surveying of Yokohama in connexion with the proposed city improvement is reported to be in progress. The work in South Ota-machi, West Tobe-machi, Kanagawa, and Sengen-machi has been completed. The surveying in Negishi and Honmoku, including the Bluff settlement, will shortly be commenced.

A youth fell into the creek and was drowned on the evening of July 14th while passing the Hiraoka bridge near Okano-cho, with a cart laden with sundry goods. His body was found on the following morning.

The Austria-Hungarian cruiser Leopard, which arrived at Yokohama on July 15th from Take-toyo, anchored in the harbour as she has to undergo repairs. She will stay at Yokohama about three weeks.

Typhus is now prevalent in Yokosuka. On July 15th, there were 45 cases undergoing treatment on the hospital ship Kwantu Maru, and 55 cases in several hospitals in the city.

A well-known grain merchant living in the district of Lower Ashigara committed suicide on July 13th by hanging himself in his warehouse. It is alleged that he has sustained heavy loss in speculative business.

At 11.11 p.m. on July 15th, a gentle shock of earthquake was felt in Yokohama. The duration was 35 seconds and the direction was between S. S. W. and N. N. E.

BASEBALL.

A very interesting baseball match was played on Saturday afternoon between the Y. C. & A. C. and the Keio University 2nd team resulting in a win for Yokohama by 5 to 2.

Both sides failed to score until the 2nd inning when Kellogg was given his base on a dead ball. Gibbs got to first on a hit and McChesney giving a hit which was missed by Keio, enabled Kellogg to get home, followed by Becker who stole in.

In the 3rd inning Nicholl was given his bag on balls and Lo-on making a fine hit advanced Nicholl to third. Kellogg hit a ball to third which was wildly thrown to first enabling Nicholl and Lo-on to get home.

Gibbs, hitting to left field, brought Kellogg home, Yokohama thus having a lead of 5 runs to nil.

No runs were scored by either team until the last inning when 2 runs were scored by Keio. Owing to the cricket match scheduled for 2 p.m. the ball game was closed at the seventh inning.

The line up was as follows:—

Y. C. & A. C.	Keio.
O'Connor .....	P. .... Katsu
Walker .....	C. .... Yokota
Becker .....	ab. .... Sawahara
Gibbs .....	1b. .... Iyoda
Lo-on .....	3b. .... Kubo
Nicholl .....	3. .... Narasaki
Kellogg .....	l.f. .... Ogawa
McChesney .....	c.f. .... Kakeyama
Mollison .....	c.f. .... Ninowa
Umpire, C. B. Stetson; Scorer, H. S. Stetson.
Score:—
Y. C. & A. C. ...	o 2 3 o o o 0=5
Keio .....	o o o o o o 2=3

SHIPPING ACCIDENTS.

It is reported by the Kokumin that the Satsuma Shokai's steamer Seiko Maru, 1513 tons, losing her bearings in a fog, went ashore on July 8th off Saddle Island near Shanghai, the first and second holds being filled with water. A steamer from Shanghai at once commenced operations to refloat her.

The Nippon Yusen Kaisha's steamer Suminoye Maru (1,425 tons) which left Yokohama on July 11th for Hakodate collided, at 10.50 p.m. on the following day off Todo-saki, near Miyako, Rikuchu province, with the steamer Nisshin Maru (2,725 tons) on the way from Hokkaido. The Suminoye sustained severe damage at the stern, and after a few moments she sank. The passengers, 2 in all, and the crew, 26, were saved by the Nisshin, and were landed at Miyako. They left there on July 13th by the Kyogun Maru and arrived at Yokohama on Wednesday.

The steamer Shinriki Maru, laden with coal, collided with a German steamer at 1 p.m. on July 13th while entering Moji Strait. The Japanese ship sustained damage at the stern and sank.

A telegram of July 14th from Shanghai reports that the steamer Seiko Maru has gone ashore in the neighbourhood of Saddle Island. The cruiser Nitaka of the South China Squadron went to the scene with a view to floating her. The steamer was then still in difficulties.

The sailing vessel Otaru Maru III, belonging to the Otaru Lumber Company, went ashore on July 12th owing to a dense fog in the neighbourhood of Soya point. The crew was landed safely. The ship was insured with the Nippon Marine Insurance Company for yen 170,000.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Two cases of cholera are reported in Fukuoka prefecture.

Telegrams report that rinderpest is prevalent in Shimonoseki and Matsuyama.

Heavy rain fell in Aomori prefecture on July 11th causing an inundation and flooding a large number of houses.

K. Yamazaki (55) attempted to murder N. Yada (62) with sword on the evening of July 14th at the office of the Hobun-Kan, a publishing company, in Honkoku-cho, Tokyo, but only succeeded in injuring him severely. The assailant gave himself up to a police office near by. Temporary insanity is reported to have been the cause.

Heavy rain fell in the district of Kawachi, not far from Utsunomiya, on July 14th, a large area of land being flooded.

Tokyo papers report that the Prince Imperial will visit north-eastern provinces, leaving Tokyo on July 16th by the cruiser Zemchug.

A hail and thunder storm was experienced at 4 p.m. on July 12th in the districts of Ashikaga near Utsunomiya in Shimotsuke province.

Mr. and Mrs. Bakmetieff arrived at Vladivostok on July 16th by the cruiser Zemchug. By the noon train they left for St. Petersburg.

S. Yamagata, an employee of the Military Arsenal, Tokyo, was drowned on the afternoon of July 12th while swimming in the River Sumida.

A San Francisco telegram to the Hochi states that some Chinese merchants in Canton intend to open a shipping service between China and San Francisco.

A Fukushima telegram states that on July 9th a large area of land in the village of Urahama was desolated by high waves which visited the village after a storm.

S. Sudzuki, director of a post office in Fukagawa, Tokyo, was found killed on the morning of July 9th in his own house. He was fatally injured in the throat.

The Training Squadron, consisting of the Hashidate and Isukushima, arrived at Ominato near Aomori on July 11th. The ships will cruise until July 28th off Mutsu Bay.

For practice, the Navy has laid mines in the sea near the second fort in Tokyo Bay leaving them there until August 31st. Vessels are warned not to pass the zone during that time.

H. Nomura and a few other business men of Aichi intend to promote a race club with a capital of yen 500,000 and to establish the course in the village of Tashiro near the city.

M. Tonosaki, a sub-sergeant belonging to the 31st regiment in Hirotsaki, committed suicide on the evening of July 12th at Aomori by shooting himself with a rifle. The cause is not yet reported.

A man was found on the evening of July 12th crushed to death on the railway near Shinagawa. He is believed to have purposely put an end to himself in this manner. The cause is not reported.

On the morning of July 8th, fire-broke out in the Giwake Coke Factory, belonging to the Hokkaido Colliery and Steamship Co., Sapporo. The building was destroyed, the damage being estimated at yen 20,000.

Mr. H. Adachi, new president of the Osaka-Kobe Tow-boat Company, has lodged a prosecution in the Osaka District Court against Mr. K. Kondo formerly president of the firm, stating that the latter misappropriated yen 30,000 belonging to the office.

I. Mori and D. Maruyama, employees of the Nagoya branch of the Bank of Japan, were drowned on July 12th in the sea near Tomita, while swimming in company with two of their comrades. The corpses were later found by fishermen who were employed to search for them.

The Ministry of Finance in Peking has memorialized the Throne with reference to the loss in revenue which must be produced by the carrying out of the anti-opium programme. It proposes, therefore, that the burden of the Boxer Indemnity should be borne by the Ministry of the Interior instead of by the Ministry of Finance; that beginning on the 1st day of the 7th moon (July 28) an additional tax of four cash should be levied upon each catty of salt throughout the Empire; that half of the money derived therefrom should be paid to the provinces where salt is produced; and that the other half should be handed over to the Ministry of Finance. It is stated that the sum of Tls. 5,000,000 can thus be obtained annually.

Owing, says the N. C. Daily News, to the fact that the recent loan, reported to have been arranged between the Ministry of Posts and Communications and the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, is understood to have been concluded before Imperial sanction had been given, an Imperial Rescript has been issued through the Grand Council to the effect that henceforth no Ministries or provincial governments shall be allowed to conclude foreign loans unless the sanction of the Throne has been obtained.

PUBLIC NOTARIES LAW.

(TRANSLATED BY J. F. DE BECKER.)

LAW No. 53, PROMULGATED 13TH APRIL, 1908.

(CONCLUDED FROM NEXT ISSUE.)

When the writing of the preceding two paragraphs is finished the Public Notary and all the persons present must each sign and seal the instrument.

When any of the persons present are unable to sign their names a note of the fact must be made in the instrument and sealed by the Public Notary and the witnesses present.

When an instrument extends over several sheets of paper, the Public Notary his client, or the client's representative, and the witnesses present, must seal the joints of each leaf.

When the fact of the continuation of the several sheets of paper forming the whole of an instrument is apparent from the two halves of the seals of the Public Notary, the client or his representative, or of the witnesses, such instrument is not invalid because of the paragraph having been contravened.

Art. XL.—When another document is quoted in an instrument drawn up by a Public Notary and is annexed thereto, the Public Notary, the client, or the client's representative, and the witnesses present must seal the place where such instrument and annexed document are joined together.

The provisions of the preceding three Articles apply correspondingly to the annexed document of the preceding paragraph.

Annexed documents according to the preceding two paragraphs are deemed to form an integral portion of the instruments drawn up by Public Notaries.

Art. XLI.—Documents proving the authority of representatives, certificates prepared by Mayors of Cities, Districts, Towns or Villages, or by Police officials or Consuls, documents providing the permission or consent of third parties, as well as other ancillary documents shall be bound up with instruments drawn up by Public Notaries.

The Public Notary, the client, or the client's representative, and the witnesses present shall seal the joints of the instrument and the annexed documents as well as the reciprocal joints of such annexed documents.

Art. XLII.—When the original instrument is lost the Notary Public is required to take back the already delivered exemplification or copy of the instrument and to preserve it in lieu of the lost instrument upon receiving permission from the President of the District Court to which he is attached.

The Public Notary is required to make a note on the instrument of the preceding paragraph to the effect that it is preserved in lieu of the lost instrument by permission of the President of the District Court to which he is attached, to write down the date of permission, and to sign and seal the entry.

Art. XLIII.—Public Notaries must cause clients to affix stamps to instruments in accordance with the Stamp Duty Law.

Art. XLIV.—Clients, their successors, or persons who have proved that they possess a legal connection with the purport of instruments, may demand (to be allowed to) peruse the originals of such instruments.

The provisions of paragraphs one (1) two (2) and five (5) of Article twenty-eight (XXVIII); Article thirty-one (XXXI); and paragraphs one (1) and two (2) of Article thirty-two (XXXII) apply correspondingly when Public Notaries allow perusal of an original instrument in accordance with the preceding paragraph.

When a Public Notary permits the successor of a client to peruse an original instrument he must cause the successor to prove that he is such by causing him to produce an instrument (to that effect).

The provisions of the second (2nd) paragraph of Article thirty-two (XXXII) apply correspondingly to the document to be caused to be produced in accordance with the preceding paragraph.

* In such a way as to leave the impression of half of the seals on each page.

Public Procurators may at any time demand to (be allowed to) peruse originals of instruments.

Art. XLV.—Public Notaries must prepare a book (register) of original instruments and before making any entries therein request the President of the District Court to which they are attached to seal the same.

The President of the District Court must note on the inside of the cover the number of leaves, sign his official designation and surname and personal name and seal same. He must also seal the joints of each page with his official seal.

Art. XLVI.—The following matters must be entered in the register of original instruments each time an instrument is drawn up and in progressive order:—

1. The serial number of the instrument and the class of such instrument;
2. The domicile and surname and personal name of the client. If a juridical person its appellation and (the place of) its office;
3. Date of drawing up;

The provisions of Articles thirty-seven (XXXVII.) and thirty-eight (XXXVIII.) apply correspondingly to the case of the preceding paragraph.

The provisions of the two preceding paragraphs do not apply when there are special provisions of laws or ordinances relative to books in which the drawing up of instruments should be entered.

Art. XLVII.—Clients or their successors may demand the delivery of exemplifications of instruments.

When Public Notaries should draw up exemplifications of instruments in accordance with the preceding paragraph, the provisions of the first (1st) second (2nd) and fifth (5th) paragraphs of Article twenty-eight (XXVIII.); Article thirty-one (XXXI.); paragraphs one (1) and two (2) of Article thirty-two (XXXII.); and paragraphs three (3) and four (4) of Article forty-four (XLIV.) apply correspondingly.

Art. XLVIII.—In Exemplifications of instruments it is required that the following matters be set down and that such exemplifications be signed and sealed by the Public Notary:—

1. The full text of the instrument;
2. A statement that it is an exemplification;
3. Surname and personal name of the person demanding delivery;
4. The date on which, and the place where, it was drawn up.

Anything in contravention of the provisions of the preceding paragraph does not possess the validity of an exemplification of an instrument.

Art. XLIX.—With regard to instruments in which many matters are enumerated, or with regard to instruments where several persons are differently interested therein, exemplifications may be made by extracting the relevant parts and the entries relating to the formalities thereof.

In the exemplifications of the preceding paragraph must be noted the fact that they are abstract exemplifications (Sāroku sei-hon) and this statement shall take the place of the statement provided for in Number two (2) of paragraph one (1) of the preceding Article.

Art. I.—When a Public Notary has delivered an exemplification of an instrument he must note at the end of the document that it has been delivered for the client or the clients' successor, so and so, (name) as well as the date of delivery, and must sign and seal same.

Art. LI.—Clients and their successors, or persons who have proved that they possess a legal interest in connection with the contents of an instrument may demand delivery of a copy (ishon) of the said instrument or of the accessory documents thereto annexed.

When a Public Notary draws up a copy of an instrument in accordance with the provisions of the preceding paragraph, the first (1st) second (2nd) and fifth (5th) paragraphs of Article twenty-eight (XXVIII.), Article thirty-one (XXXI.), the first (1st) and second (2nd) paragraphs of Article thirty-two (XXXII.) and the third (3rd) and fourth (4th) paragraphs of Article forty-four (XLIV.) apply correspondingly.

Art. LII.—In copies of instruments the following matters must be noted and the Public Notary must sign and seal same:—

- (1) The full text of the instrument;
- (2) A statement that it is a copy;
- (3) The date on which, and the place where, it was drawn up.

Art. LIII.—Copies may be drawn up in respect to portions of instruments.

In the copies of the preceding paragraph must be noted the fact that they are abstract copies (Sāroku ishon).

Art. LIV.—In making copies of accessory documents attached to an instrument, the provisions of the two preceding Articles apply correspondingly.

Art. LV.—Persons demanding copies of instruments or of accessory documents may write down the necessary matters themselves and demand only the signature and seal of a Public Notary thereto.

When a Public Notary has signed and sealed copies as contemplated in the preceding paragraph such copies possess the same validity as if they had been prepared by the Public Notary himself.

Art. LVI.—When exemplifications or copies of instruments or copies of accessory documents extend over several leaves, the Public Notary must seal the joints of each and every leaf.*

The provisions of Articles thirty-seven (XXXVII.) and thirty-eight (XXXVIII.) apply correspondingly to the preparation of exemplifications and copies of instruments and copies of accessory documents.

Art. LVII.—The provisions of the second (2nd) paragraph of Article eighteen (XVIII.) do not apply when a Public Notary draws up a Will (igon sho), and those of Articles twenty-eight (XXVIII.) to thirty-two (XXXII.) inclusive do not apply when a Public Notary draws up a protest (Kyōsetsu shōsho).

CHAPTER V.

CERTIFICATION.

Art. LVIII.—In certifying to a privately signed writing, when the parties have signed or sealed or personally acknowledged the signature or seal of the document in the presence of the Public Notary, such certificate must be given by means of a written note to that effect.

In certifying to a copy of a privately signed writing, when it has been compared with such privately signed writing and found to conform thereto, such certificate must be given by means of a written note to that effect.

When characters have been interpolated (wanyū), struck out (sakujō) or altered (kaizan) in a privately signed writing, or when such document has writing in the margin or other corrections (teisei) or is damaged, or is conspicuously suspicious in appearance in certain points, the state condition and circumstances thereof must be noted in the certificate.

Art. LIX.—On documents to be certified must be noted the Record Book number, the date, and the place of certification: this must be signed and sealed by the Public Notary and the witness present who must also seal the document and the Certificates Record Book (Ainshō-do) so as to leave one part of the impression of their seals on the document and the other part on the Record Book.

Art. LX.—The provisions of Articles twenty-six (XXVI.) to thirty-four (XXXIV.) inclusive, Articles thirty-seven (XXXVII.) and thirty-eight (XXXVIII.), and the fifth (5th) and sixth (6th) paragraphs of Article thirty-nine (XXXIX.) apply correspondingly when privately signed writings are certified.

Art. LXI.—Public Notaries must prepare a certificates Record Book.

The provisions of Article forty-five (XLV.) apply correspondingly to the preparation of Certificates Record Books.

Art. LXII.—In Certificates Record Books the following matters must be entered in progressive sequence:—

- (1) Number of record;
- (2) Domicile and surname and personal name of the client. If the client is a juridical person, its appellation and (the place of) its office;
- (3) Class of document and the persons who have signed and sealed it;
- (4) Method of certification;
- (5) Domiciles and surnames and personal names of the witnesses present;
- (6) Date of certification.

In the case of the preceding paragraph, the provisions of Articles thirty-seven (XXXVII.) and thirty-eight (XXXVIII.) apply correspondingly.

CHAPTER VI.

REPRESENTATION, DISCHARGE OF THE DUTIES OF TWO OR MORE POSTS SIMULTANEOUSLY, AND SUCCESSION.

Art. LXIII.—When a Public Notary is unable to perform his official functions, owing to illness or some other unavoidable cause, he may entrust another Public Notary within the jurisdiction of the same Local Court, or that of an adjacent Local Court with the duty of acting for him.

When, in accordance with the above paragraph, a Public Notary has entrusted another to act as his deputy, he must, without delay, notify the President of the District Court to which he is attached to that effect, and this also applies when his substitute has been relieved from the duties of representation.

Art. LXIV.—When a Public Notary does not, or cannot, entrust another to act for him in accordance with the first paragraph of the preceding Article, the President of the District Court having jurisdiction may order another Public Notary in the jurisdiction of the same Local Court, or an adjacent Local Court, to act for him.

When the Public Notary is again able to resume his official duties, the President of the District Court must relieve the other of the duty of representation of the preceding paragraph.

Art. LXV.—The office where the substitute of a Public Notary performs his official duties in accordance with the two preceding Articles is the office of the Public Notary who he is charged with representing.

* Leaving half of the impression of his seal on each leaf so as to joint or "key" the pages together.

When the substitute of a Public Notary signs officially he must write down the official designation, surname, personal name, jurisdiction and locality of the office of the Public Notary he represents and the fact that he (the substitute) is the representative of such Public Notary.

In addition to applying to a Public Notary who is being represented, the provisions of Article twenty-two (XXII.) also apply to his representative.

Art. LXVI.—In the event of the death, dismissal from office, loss of office, or removal to another jurisdiction of a Public Notary, the President of the District Court to which such Public Notary is attached shall, should he deem it necessary, cause an official designated by him to seal up the documents in the office of the said Public Notary without delay.

Art. LXVII.—When a Public Notary dies, is dismissed from office, loses his office, or removes to another jurisdiction, and a successor is not appointed forthwith, the President of the District Court having jurisdiction may order another Public Notary within the jurisdiction of the same Local Court, or of an adjacent Local Court, to undertake the duties (of the vacant office) in addition to his own.

When the successor has become able to perform his duties, the President of the District Court having jurisdiction must relieve (the temporary substitute) of the additional duties of the preceding paragraph.

Art. LXVIII.—When a Public Notary is dismissed, loses his office, or removes to another jurisdiction, his successor, or the person who is to undertake his duties in addition to his own, must take delivery of the documents, in the presence of the predecessor without delay.

When owing to death or other reasons the documents cannot be transferred over, his successor, or the person who is to undertake his duties in addition to his own, must take possession thereof in the presence of an official designated by the President of the District Court having jurisdiction.

When the successor, or the person who is to undertake the additional duties, is appointed subsequent to the documents having been sealed up in accordance with Article fifty-six (LXVI.) he should break the seals and take delivery of the documents in the presence of an official designated by the President of the District Court having jurisdiction.

Art. LXIX.—The provisions of the preceding Article apply correspondingly when the Public Notary who has undertaken the additional duties again delivers the documents to another Public Notary.

Art. LXX.—When a Public Notary who has undertaken another's duties in addition to his own signs officially, the fact that he is acting in a dual capacity must be mentioned.

When a successor prepares an exemplification or copy of an instrument drawn up by his predecessor or by one who has undertaken the additional duties, when he signs the same the fact of his being a successor must be mentioned.

Art. LXXI.—When a Public Notary dies, is dismissed, loses office, or removes to another jurisdiction, and no successor is required owing to a change of the full personnel, the Minister of Justice must order one of the Public Notaries in the jurisdiction of the same Local Court to take charge of the documents.

The provisions of Article sixty-eight (LXVIII.), and the second (2nd) paragraph of the preceding Article, apply correspondingly to a Public Notary who is ordered to take charge of the documents in accordance with the preceding paragraph.

Art. LXXII.—The provisions of Articles sixty-six (LXVI.) and sixty-seven (LXVII.) and the third (3rd) paragraph of Article sixty-eight (LXVIII.) and the first (1st) paragraph of Article seventy (LXX.) apply correspondingly when a Public Notary is suspended from office (tei-shoku).

When a Public Notary undertakes the additional duties of another who is suspended from office in accordance with the preceding paragraph, the former must attend to his additional duties at the office of the person suspended.

Art. LXXIII.—The provisions of Articles Sixty-eight (LXVIII.) and sixty-nine (LXIX.) apply correspondingly when a Local Court acts as a Public Notary in accordance with Article eight (VIII.).

CHAPTER VII.

SUPERVISION AND DISCIPLINE.

Art. LXXIV.—Public Notaries shall be supervised by the President of the District Court to which they are attached.

The President of the District Court may cause one of the Judges of a Local Court, or the Superintending Judge thereof, to deal with the business of supervising Public Notaries within the jurisdiction of such Court.

Art. LXXV.—The Minister of Justice and the President of the Court of Appeal shall supervise Public Notaries in accordance with the provisions concerning the supervision of judicial administration.

Art. LXXVI.—The right of supervision mentioned in the two preceding Articles includes the following items:—

1. To warn Public Notaries in respect to official duties improperly dealt with and to order them to carry out the duties of their office in a proper manner;
2. To admonish Public Notaries when they have conducted themselves in a manner unbecoming their position either in or out of office; but before being admonished Public Notaries must be given an opportunity of explaining and vindicating their conduct.

Art. LXXVII.—Supervising officials may inspect documents kept by Public Notaries or may cause them (the documents) to be examined by officials designated by them (the supervising officials).

Art. LXXVIII.—Clients or interested persons may make a protest against the manner in which Public Notaries conduct their duties.

Protests of the preceding paragraph shall be dealt with according to the right of supervision mentioned in this Chapter.

Art. LXXIX.—When a Public Notary has acted in a manner contrary to his official duties, or when he is guilty of conduct derogatory to the dignity of his office, he shall be subjected to disciplinary punishment.

Art. LXXX.—Disciplinary punishments shall consist of the following five classes:—

- (1) Reprimand (kenshiki);
- (2) Minor fine (kenryo) of not exceeding one thousand (1,000) yen;
- (3) Suspension from office (teishoku) not exceeding one year;
- (4) Removal to another jurisdiction (ten-zoku);
- (5) Dismissal from office (men-shoku).

Art. LXXXI.—Fines, suspensions, removals and dismissals shall be carried into effect by the Minister of Justice in accordance with decisions of a Committee of Disciplinary Punishment.

Reprimands shall be made by the Minister of Justice.

Art. LXXXII.—Each Court of Appeal shall have a Committee of Disciplinary Punishment.

Committee of Disciplinary Punishment shall render disciplinary decisions against Public Notaries attached to District Courts within the jurisdiction of the Court of Appeal in which such committee is established.

Rules concerning Committees of Disciplinary Punishment shall be determined by Imperial Ordinance.

Art. LXXXIII.—The provisions of the Law of Disciplinary Punishment for Judges apply correspondingly to the relations of disciplinary procedure and criminal trial procedure for Public Notaries, and to cases of interruption of their official duties (Shokumuteishoku).

The provisions concerning suspension of a Public Notary from office (teishoku) apply correspondingly to cases of interruption of their official duties (shokumuteishoku).

Art. LXXXIV.—When a fine is not full paid, it shall be enforced by a Public Procurator's order.

The provisions of Article two hundred and eight (CCVIII) of the Law of Procedure in Non-contentious Matters apply correspondingly to the enforcement of the preceding paragraph.

The caution-money deposited by Public Notaries shall be first applied in payment of fines in preference to other public imposts and obligations except in the case of paragraph three (3) of Article twenty-two (XXII).

SUPPLEMENT PROVISIONS.

Art. LXXXV.—When the words Mayor of a City, District, Town or Village are used in this land, in places where there are no "Mayors," they refer to the officials performing the duty of Mayors.

Art. LXXXVI.—The date of enforcement of this land shall be determined by Imperial Ordinance.

Art. LXXXVII.—The "Regulation re Public Notaries" (Kashō nin kisoku) are abolished.

Art. LXXXVIII.—A person who is a Public Notary when this law becomes operative shall, without a fresh order of appointment, be considered as one according to this law, and shall be attached to the District Court within the jurisdiction of which his office is situated.

Art. LXXXIX.—The office of a Public Notary established in accordance with the Regulations re Public Notaries shall be considered one according to this law.

Art. XC.—The caution-money deposited by a Public Notary in accordance with the Regulations re Public Notaries shall be considered as caution money deposited under this law.

Art. XCI.—Any representative who has been entrusted in accordance with the Regulations re Public * Shokumuteishi (職務停止) is used when an official's powers are automatically suspended for some legal cause and not necessarily by way of punishment. Ten-shoku (轉職) is used when an official is suspended from office by way of disciplinary punishment.

Notaries, or any person who has been ordered to undertake an additional office in accordance with those Regulations, shall be considered as a representative or plural office-holder according to this law.

Art. XCII.—Any official act commenced prior to this law coming into operation shall be completed in accordance with this law.

Art. XCIII.—Any procedure of Articles fifty-eight (LVIII) fifty-nine (LIX) and sixty-one (LXI) of the Regulation re Public Notaries commenced prior to this law coming into operation shall be completed in accordance with this law.

Art. XCIV.—Any protest made against a Public Notary's official dealings prior to this law coming into operation, shall be settled in accordance with the Regulations re Public Notaries.

Art. XCV.—Any acts of a Public Notary contrary to the Regulations re Public Notaries, and done before this law becomes operative, shall be subjected to disciplinary punishment according to this law; but any disciplinary procedure commenced before this law becomes operative shall be settled according to the Regulations re Public Notaries.

THE PROJECTED FAKUMEN RAILWAY.

On the 10th of June* it was announced by the Press Bureau in Tokyo that an "authoritative statement" had been issued stating the Japanese case against the construction of the proposed railway from Hsinmintun to Fakumen, and a summary of its arguments was telegraphed abroad. Whether an anonymous statement can properly be described as authoritative is open to question; nevertheless, the document having been officially communicated to His Majesty's Ambassador in Tokyo, we may reasonably presume that the Japanese Government subscribes to the statements and arguments therein contained. Many of these are disingenuous to the verge of puerility and the author assumes in the general reader an ignorance of Far Eastern events and politics, unjustifiable at any time, but particularly so when the Fakumen railway question is being carefully studied all over the world.

The present statement does not profess to be authoritative. It claims, however, to be truthful; to examine impartially the facts, without suppression or special pleading, from the standpoint of a student of the situation and one who sees in the undisturbed maintenance of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance the best guarantee for China's territorial integrity and peaceful development.

To deal with this lengthy document in full detail would be tedious and serve no good purpose. The important questions raised in the Resolutions adopted by the Newchwang Chamber of Commerce on 13th March, are herein so confused by side-issues and the recital of irrelevant facts, that it becomes most necessary to confine the controversy within the limits of essentials. Nevertheless, certain statements require attention.

Its most significant feature lies in the fact that the position herein assumed by the Japanese Government is frankly based on an ante-bellum precedent, implying recognition of that very "sphere of influence" policy which it was the avowed object of the Anglo-Japanese alliance to replace by "the independence and territorial integrity of the Empire of China and equal opportunities therein for the commerce and industry of all nations." That the Japanese Government, in the face of the unmistakable declaration contained in the preamble to the Treaty of Alliance, should now permit the justification of the position assumed in regard to the Fakumen line by reference to the position occupied by Germany in Shantung, is somewhat disturbing.

The Japanese Government, however, goes further, and, claiming the reversion of all the "rights and privileges" heretofore owned by Russia in the South Manchurian Railway, proceeds to quote the Russian Manchurian Convention of April, 1902, whereby Russia extracted from China an undertaking that any extension of the Chinese Railway System from Hsinmintun northwards should be a matter for arrangement between the Russian and Chinese Governments. Ignoring the important fact that Russian diplomacy was herein chiefly concerned with the restriction of British influence in general and the extension of an important British enterprise in particular, the Tokyo Memorandum proceeds to the astonishing statement that "this measure of reasonable precaution did not provoke any hostile criticism: the silence on the part of British subjects may, however, be explained by the fact that they were at the time practically excluded from railway exploitation, in regions north of the Great Wall, by the Anglo-Russian understanding of April 28th, 1899." Here we have the mis-statement of one important fact, followed by the suppression of another. The Japanese Government is well aware, in the first place, that the self-denying undertaking imposed upon British subjects in regard to railway exploitation in regions beyond the Great Wall was a direct consequence of the "spheres of influence" régime at that time predominant; and, in the second place that Russia on her side undertook (which Japan has never done or been asked to do) to abstain from all competition with British railway enterprises in the Yangtze valley. Furthermore, as disproving the statement that Russia's Convention with China in regard to Manchuria produced no hostile criticism, the following quotation from an authoritative Japanese writer (1) is sufficiently convincing.

"Thus the explicit terms of the Convention were constructed so as to be greatly neutralised, as it would seem, by what was implied, and could only be inferred by analysis. In the same light, also, one may read the statement made by Sir Ernest Satow to Prince Ch'ing, that the Convention did not appear to His Majesty's Government to be entirely satisfactory, and also the pungent remark of Lord Lansdowne to Mr. de Sial, that there were several points in the agreement which had caused much criticism in England, particularly those provisions which limited China's right to dispose of her own military forces, and to construct railway extensions within her own territory."

L'historie se répète. In 1902, Lord Lansdowne did not wish (2) "to examine the provisions of the Manchurian Convention too microscopically, sharing the Russian Ambassador's hope that the agreement would be loyally and considerably interpreted on both sides." A similar hope no doubt inspires the friendly representations which His Majesty's Ambassador at Tokyo has been instructed to lay before the Japanese Government on behalf of the British capitalists and contractors interested in the Fakumen Railway and of the British traders interested in the opening up of Manchuria.

Nevertheless the Japanese Government is unable specifically to deny that the supplementary clause of the Peking agreement of December 1905, (upon which rests the veto which restricts China from extending her railway system into North-western Manchuria) does in fact violate a plain declaration of the Treaty of Portsmouth. On this important point the argument adduced in the Memorandum under review is illuminating. It reads as follows:—"If Japan has concluded arrangements with other Powers inconsistent with that Act, it is for Russia to call her to account." Moreover, it continues: "The Peking Agreement was concluded with China, and the Chinese plenipotentiaries had the Treaty of Portsmouth before them when negotiating that Agreement," from which premisses is deduced the ingenious but entirely gratuitous conclusion that "China no less than Japan, considered that Agreement as entirely reconcilable with the Portsmouth compact." Here we come to the crux of the matter. It is precisely because the Chinese Plenipotentiaries were assured during these negotiations that the supplementary clause upon which Baron Komura insisted would naturally and necessarily be interpreted in the light of the Portsmouth Treaty (which guarantees to China the unrestricted development of her Manchurian territories) that they now take exception to the restrictive interpretation which the Japanese Government is placing upon that clause. This point is made unmistakably clear in the despatch which the Chinese Government addressed to the Japanese Minister at Peking on the 6th May last, from which the following extract is translated:—

"In referring to the Conference negotiations and stating that China is now disregarding her Treaty engagements by taking action prejudicial to the interests of the South Manchurian Railway, Your Excellency is apparently unaware of the fact that at the time this Agreement was concluded between the Japanese and Chinese Plenipotentiaries, the latter maintained that the word 'parallel' was too comprehensive and that the agreement should state definitely in miles the distance within which no parallel line should be built. To this request the Japanese Plenipotentiaries replied that if the number of miles were fixed, it might create the impression in other countries that Japan intended to restrict Chinese railway enterprise. They were subsequently asked to agree that the distance should be understood to be such as would be usual in England or America, but objected to this proposal on the ground that no general rule exists on the subject. Moreover the Japanese Plenipotentiaries declared that under no circumstances would Japan do anything to restrict China in future from any steps she might desire to take for the extension of means of communications in

(1). "Russo-Japanese Conflict" by K. Arakawa, page 229.

(2). British Blue-Book No. 2 of 1904, despatch No. 52.

Manchuria. These declarations were made in all sincerity and at a time when the most friendly relations existed between the two countries, and should therefore be observed by both parties."

We are therefore not concerned with the actual wording of the clause attached to the Peking Agreement, but rather with its present interpretation which the Japanese Government apparently desires to extend to arbitrary prohibition of all Chinese (and British) railway enterprises over an undefined region. Reserving for further consideration the technical grounds upon which the Japanese Government bases its objections to the Fakuken line as a competitor with the S. M. Railway, it is present here to recapitulate the avowed objects of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance. They are thus fittingly described by the Japanese author above quoted (Professor Arakawa):—

"The alliance exists solely for the purpose of safeguarding effectively the interests already acquired by the two Powers on the common ground, and it is implied in an unmistakable manner, that those interests may best be maintained by the total abstention, in any event, from all aggressive or exclusive tendencies in China and Korea, and, what is equally important, that the observation of these principles would forcibly tend to preserve the general peace in the Far East. Owing to the covert violation of these principles by another Power, however, peace has been broken, but the Anglo-Japanese agreement has not expired. The latter would, however, fall to the ground, the moment one of the parties, either as a result of a war otherwise, should attempt to depart from the principles of the open door and the territorial integrity of the neighbouring Empires."

It can scarcely be seriously believed in Tokyo that the veto imposed by the Japanese Government in regard to the Fakuken railway is regarded by any intelligent person as consistent with a policy "intended to safeguard effectively the interests already acquired by the two Powers on the common ground."

Equally inadmissible is the Japanese Government's contention that "the policy of the open door does not prevent Railway exploitation." Here, again, everything depends on the meaning of the terms used; but there can be no question that the exclusive privileges claimed by Japan in connection with her ownership of the S. M. Railway are a complete repudiation of the open door policy. Railways may be, and are, built on Chinese territory as financial and industrial enterprises in which foreign Powers are interested, and this without violation of the open door, so long as the enterprises in question are for the benefit of, and under the direction of, the Imperial Chinese Government, affording equal commercial opportunities to all-comers; but it were futile to assert that the doctrine of opportunities is compatible with such privileges and such control as Japan is now endeavouring to exercise over Manchuria by virtue of her acquisition of the S. M. Railway. If proof of this statement be needed, by those unacquainted with the situation, it is to be found in the fact that the Municipal Regulations recently promulgated in the name of the Russian Railway authorities at Harbin, regulations which ignored the Treaty rights of the subjects of all other Powers, received the diplomatic approval and support of the Japanese Government on the understanding that similar conditions would be recognised by Russia as applicable to the Japanese Railway Settlements in Southern Manchuria! It is useless to deny the fact that the South Manchuria Railway, won by Japan's victorious arms, is an instrument in the hands of the Japanese Government for the promotion of exclusive Japanese interests; the situation is sufficiently recognised, diplomatic conventions notwithstanding, by the Powers, and the forces of "geographical gravitation" which must inevitably tend to the advancement of Japan's interests to the east of the Liao river are generally understood. But the question which is raised by the Fakuken railway scheme is whether, and how far, those forces of "geographical gravitation" are to be extended westwards, to the serious prejudice of vested British interests in that region, the detriment of international commerce and the limitation of China's sovereignty? In the Hsinmintun-Moukden Railway Agreement (May 1907) Japan herself recognises the Liao River as the natural limit, beyond which her claims to special and exclusive privileges cannot properly be advanced.

In view of the essential and wider aspects of this question, it is almost superfluous to examine the technical reasons and economic precedents whereby the Japanese Government seeks to justify its veto of a "parallel" line. Nevertheless, as great stress has been laid upon the existence of a similar restrictive clause in the railway agreements made with China by other nationalities, and as the argument may appear forcible to the uninitiated, it is expedient to explain its inapplicability. The agreements to which the Japanese Government particularly refers, viz: the American contract for the Hankow-Canton Railway, and the British contract for the line from Canton to Kowloon, were purely financial and industrial agreements made between the Chinese Government and private Companies, for the construction of Chinese Government railways under Chinese control; and the lines being mortgaged as first security for the repayment of the necessary loans, the inclusion of the restrictive condition in regard to parallel lines was obviously beneficial to all concerned since it facilitated the raising of capital abroad. Nevertheless, as the history of railway construction in China clearly proves, this condition was never intended to be, (nor could it be) arbitrarily interpreted by the representatives of the foreign bondholders to restrict the Chinese Government from constructing other railways parallel to these lines, the evident and only intention of the condition being to reassure investors that the Chinese Government would not (presumably at the instance of another Power) do anything to injure property which is mortgaged for security of foreign loans. No such argument can, however, be applicable in the case of the South Manchuria Railway, which is not a Chinese railway, for which China has incurred no liabilities and in which she is not even financially interested.

Finally, referring to the Newchwang Chamber's contention that "in no country" in the world could the vested interests of a railway preclude the construction of "another line within a distance of 35 miles," the Japanese Government cites what it alleges to be "at least one instance in direct contradiction of the statement," and thereupon proceeds to quote the engagement given in the Peking Syndicate's Shansi agreement whereby, to avoid undesirable competition with the Chengting-Taiyuen railway, the syndicate undertook not to construct any railway within 100 li on either side of it. We can only presume that the Tokyo authorities are unaware that 100 li is, for practical purposes, the equivalent of 35 miles; it is inconceivable that, if they were informed of the fact, they should cite, as argument on the Japanese side of the case, a precedent which completely justifies the construction of the Fakuken railway. The proceeding is disingenuous; but hardly less so the citation of the Russian Bank's agreement (Art. V. Chengting-Taiyuen Railway contract) whereby China was bound not to permit the construction of two parallel railways between the same two terminal points.

These, however, are side-issues, which serve merely to distract attention from essentials. If the question be considered simply in the light of Japan's definite and undeniable obligation to recognise and maintain China's unimpaired sovereignty in Manchuria, and to promote the development of China's commerce and industries in that region, then assuredly (and because the greater includes the less) the Peking agreement of 1905 and its supplementary clauses must be interpreted in the light of the declared principles and objects of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance. For, if otherwise interpreted it is evident that the Japanese Government has failed to observe that clause of the Treaty of Alliance which, having for its object the mutual protection of the established interests of both Powers, provides that "neither of the contracting Parties will without consultation with the other, enter into separate arrangements with another Power to the prejudice of the interests described in the agreement."

Peking, 29th June, 1908.

JUDGMENT IN THE "TEUTONIA" CASE.

A translation of the judgment in the Teutonia case given by the Yokohama District Court, which has not yet been published will be of interest to merchants generally. It may be noted that the period of appeal is limited to 30 days from the date on which the defendants received a certified copy of the judgment, but in this case where the domicile of the defendants is at Hamburg there are days of grace according to the distance between the Court and the domicile, calculated at the rate of 8 ri (about 18 miles) per day.

JUDGMENT.

(Received by Counsel from Court on 19th May, 1908). Plaintiffs:—

The MITSUI BUSSAN KAISHA,
No. 1, Suigacho Nihon Bashi-Ku, Tokyo.

The partner representing the above Co.:—

HACHIROJIRO MITSUI.

Counsel:—

TERUHIKO OKAMURA.

HACHIRO SUZUKI.

SEITARO HINO.

Defendants:—

HAMBURG AMERIKANISCHE PAKETFAHRT
AKTIEB. GOSSELSCHAFT, MARINE TRANSIT
TRADING CO., F. REIGN CO., c/o C. ILLIES & CO.,
(Agent), No. 54, Yamashitacho, Yokohama,
Japan, and Hamburg, Germany.

Legal Representatives:—

WILHELM JULIUS THOMAN JOHANNES EDWARD NAGARD.

Counsel:—

WASHITARO NAGASHIMA.

In this action ("7" 84th 1906) brought by plaintiffs against the defendants for claim for damage, this Court finds as follows:—

JUDGMENT.

The defendants shall pay to the plaintiffs an indemnity of yen 7,629.31 with interest thereon at the rate of five per cent. per annum, from 21st February 1906, until judgment is carried out. The costs of litigation shall be borne by the defendants.

MATERIAL FACTS.

Plaintiffs' counsel sued for a similar judgment to the above and the main facts stated by them as their cause of claim are as follows:—The defendants entered into a contract with the plaintiffs to transport from Hamburg, Germany, to Yokohama, Japan, 3,000 bags of refined Sugar marked—8793 M in Diamond,—per their steamer Teutonia and the said steamer, Captain Oestereich, took on board the above cargo and left Hamburg on the 23rd December, 1905.

After she had called at various ports en route, she loaded improperly at Hongkong, British Territory, 131 casks of Linsed Oil destined for Yokohama and Kobe, whereby out of the above 3,000 bags of refined Sugar Oil damage was done to 256 bags badly and to 2659 bags more or less, resulting in a loss amounting to yen 7,629.37. This damage was caused by the fact that the Linsed Oil was stowed in the 'tween deck just above the lower hold where the sugar was stowed, without providing tarpaulins over the 'tween deck hatch, and the defendants should be held responsible for the damage, because the method of stowage was an improper one and they did not perfectly carry out the contract.

The plaintiffs requested the dismissal of the defendants' contention that the Court has no jurisdiction and alleged that there is no ground for such a contention when the defendants have already orally discussed the action and that the Court has jurisdiction over this action in accordance with Art. 17 and 18 of the Japanese Civil Procedure Code, because the defendants' Company has right of property at Yokohama and furthermore Yokohama is the place for fulfilment of obligation of contract.

In support of their case, the plaintiffs presented documents marked (a) No. 1—No. 6; asked for leave to summon witnesses to call for the production of papers bearing on the case; acknowledged the existence of documents marked (b) Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, but disputed the weight of the evidence and ignored (b) No. 2 document.

The defendants' Counsel contended that jurisdiction of the Court is unfounded and requested the dismissal of the plaintiffs' action. He stated as a fact, that as the defendants possess neither residence nor business office, nor any property in Japan, Art. 17 and Art. 18 of the Japanese Civil Procedure Code do not apply and therefore the Yokohama District Court is not the Court of jurisdiction in the case. He proceeded to add that although the plaintiffs insist that such a contention should not be allowed the case having already been discussed, the said discussion took place before he had full powers and this point could not be raised at the time. He declared his desire to have judgment dismissing the claim of the plaintiffs and in support, he made the following statement:—

I acknowledge that the Teutonia took in cargo of 3,000 bags of refined sugar at Hamburg, Germany, and left there on the 23rd Dec. '05 and that after calling at various ports en route, she took on board Linsed Oil at Hongkong, British Territory, but the calling of the steamer at intermediate ports and the loading of Linsed Oil, are, as a matter of course, in the line of the defendants' business.

The Bill of Lading provides in Art. 7 that the carriers are responsible to the other party for any fault or negligence on the part of the carriers or their employees as to the proper stowage, care, handling and delivery of the goods. Therefore the vital point in this case rests on whether or not the method of stowage of the goods was a proper one.

The sugar in question and other ordinary cargo were stowed in the lower hold according to the order of loading and the Linsed Oil shipped at an intermediate port was in the 'tween deck of the same hold. From the 14th February 1906, the steamer continually experienced heavy N. E. gales which changed their direction to N.W. and increased in force on the 18th idem causing the steamer to labour heavily and in consequence, the casks of Oil in the 'tween deck got adrift and broke, and the contents leaked down through the hatchway and caused the oil damage to the cargo in the lower hold. That the force of wind was then violent and the sea rough is obvious from the damage to the boats, bagging of steam pipe, and the skylight sustained at that time.

It can be known from the survey report of John Carst dated the 20th February, 1906 that the stowage was a proper one and there was no fault or negligence in the process of stowing. Mr. J. Carst was of opinion that if the weather had not been so severe, the cargo could have been discharged in good order and condition. The defendants' counsel stated in conclusion that as the stowage was proper, it is impossible to bring this action as to the non-performance of the contract of carriage on the part of the defendants and he also disputed the figures of the plaintiffs.

As evidence, the defendants' counsel presented (b) No. 1—No. 5 documents; acknowledged the existence of documents marked (A) No. 1 and No. 5 but denied the force of their contents; ignored other documents marked (A) and cited the report of Nobuyoshi Yoshizawa, expert and (A) No. 3 documents.

REASONS.

Considering the point made by defendants of "Out of the jurisdiction of the Court," such a contention should always be made before entering into an oral discussion except in cases where the defendants prove that they could not do so by reason of no fault of theirs. However, it is evident from the records that this stand was first taken by the defendants after the 4th February, 1908, when they had already discussed the matter. Although the defendants' counsel alleged that he followed the right method as to the time of his presentation, because when the case was discussed before he had not full powers, it can be recognised from the records of the case that the defendants' counsel said in his pleadings on the 12th September 1907 that the matter was placed in his hands by the defendants, but, as there was an error in respect of the date of the Power of Attorney in his possession, would obtain a supplementary power of attorney, but meanwhile he hoped the case would be allowed to proceed, which the Court permitted on condition that the above defect should be made good. This was done at a subsequent sitting whereby the procedure up to that point was made effective and therefore it is evident that such pleadings were in continuance of the case from its first steps. Furthermore although the defendants' counsel alleges that he could not raise the question before entering his defence, he could have done so, because it is quite clear from the records that the defendants accepted their position, having duly received, prior to the opening of the case, the amended cause of action and the summons. As the defendants give no other explanation than the above as to the cause of impossibility of the presentation of this point earlier in the proceedings, the Court can not admit the allegation of the defendants. On this point therefore the defendants fall. Now, turning to the main subject, there is no dispute between the parties on the facts that the defendants entered into a contract with the plaintiffs to load the Sugar in question at Hamburg on board the Teutonia owned by the defendants and to carry the Sugar to Yokohama, that the Teutonia, Captain Oestereich, after having taken in the said Sugar, left Hamburg on the 23rd December 1905 called en route at Hongkong where she took in the cargo of Linseed oil, that the said sugar was stowed in the lower hold while the Linseed oil was in the 'tween deck in the same hold and that the said sugar was damaged by the Linseed Oil. Therefore the main point in dispute is whether or not the stowage of the Sugar in question was proper. Summarising the contents of (A) Nos. 2, & 3 documents, the evidence of the witness Rennie Tipple and the evidence of the expert Tsunayuki Migi, it is admissible that each method of stowage in the lower part of the same hold of dry and perishable cargo like sugar, is improper stowage, contrary to the fundamental principles of stowage. Although it can be admitted from the contents of (A) Nos. 2 and 3 (b) No. 5 documents and the evidence of the witness Rennie Tipple that the aforesaid steamer experienced heavy weather during the passage from Hongkong to Yokohama and owing to her labouring, the oil casks were broken and by the leakage of the contents, the cargo in the lower hold was damaged, such weather as aforesaid must be expected by a master and adequate precautions taken but according to the evidence of the witness Rennie Tipple, the means adopted were insufficient for such weather. The witness Tsunayuki Migi, stated that with such a method of stowage as aforesaid the shipowner or the steamer should be held responsible for damage done to the cargo in the lower hold by the leaking of the liquid in the 'tween deck caused by the labouring of the vessel through stress of weather even if tarpaulins were employed. Considering the points, it must be admitted that the method of stowage, as to the facts of which the parties agree, was improper and contrary to the fundamental principles of stowage, and that the shipowners or master should indemnify the loss which was caused primarily by wrongful stowage even if the damage was attributable to the heavy weather or tarpaulins were used to prevent damage as is stated by the defendants. It also must be admitted from (A) No. 1 document that the shipowners must be held responsible for the negligence of their employees as to the stowage of cargo. Therefore we are of opinion that the defendants are answerable to the plaintiffs for the loss in question. The defendants' pleadings and evidence, contrary to the aforesaid conclusions and admissions are not convincing and therefore we have rejected them. Regarding the amount of loss, we admit from the intention of the contract involved in Art. 14 of (A) No. 1 document that the sound market value at Yokohama on the day of the vessel's arrival there should be taken as the basis of calculation in respect of any claim arising from bill of Lading. As the sound market value of the Sugar at Yokohama at that time was yen 7.927 per picul (100) kin as per No. 2 (A) document and the evidence of the witness Rennie Tipple, each bag weighing 84 kin, which weight is admitted in No. 5 document, in sound condition would be worth yen 6.65868. That the plaintiffs first refused to take delivery of the Sugar in question, but subsequently after negotiation took delivery of same reserving their right of claim for loss thereon, and this is proved by (A) No. 2 documents and the evidence of the witness, Rennie Tipple. That the damaged sugar was sold privately instead of by public auction for the benefit of concerned and that the private sale was the most preferable at that time are admitted from (A) No. 2, 4 and 5 documents and the statements of the witness Rennie Tipple.

That out of 3,000 bags (as to the quantity the parties agree) of the sugar, 85 bags were found perfectly sound, and of the rest damaged, 256 bags were sold for yen 612.86 (at yen 2.394 per bags) and 2,659 bags for yen 11,167.80 (at yen 4.20 per bag), are admitted by summarising (A) No. 2 and 5 documents and the evidence of the witness, Rennie Tipple.

To find out the value in sound condition of the 2915 bags damaged, i.e., the total of 256 bags and 2659 bags at yen 6.6868 gives yen 49,410.0522, and therefore yen 799.3922 which is the balance after deducting the aforesaid amount of proceeds of sale yen 11,780.66, i.e. the total of yen 612.86 and yen 11,167.80 from yen 19,410.0522 is the amount of net loss sustained through oil damage. The import duty was included both in the sound market value and the proceeds of sale above referred to (which fact we admit from the proofs above cited), but as the result of the above calculation, it is clear that the duty is not included in the net loss. Therefore the plaintiffs succeeded in their claim against the defendants for the sum of yen 7,629.37 with interest thereon at five per cent. per annum from the 21st February, 1906 i.e. the day following the vessel's arrival (evident from "A" No. 2 document) until compliance with this judgment. As to the costs of litigation our decision is as per judgment aforesaid in accordance with Art. 72 (1) of Civil Procedure Code.

9th April, 1908.

YOKOHAMA DISTRICT COURT. (Second Civil Division.)

WASAJI GOTO, } Judges.
AIMEI UWEDZUR, }

Presiding Judge:—
YOTOKU NAKANISHI (did not sign here because of removal.)
WASAJI GOTO, for the presiding judge.

Prepared from and compared with the original judgment.
YUJIRO KANEKO, Chief Clerk,
Yokohama District Court.

THE SEOUL TRIAL.

The trial and condemnation in Seoul, by a British Judge, of a British journalist who has undoubtedly been doing his utmost to make the Japanese administration of Korea as difficult as possible, says the Hongkong Daily Press has provoked a very acrimonious discussion in the foreign newspapers of Japan, which, to anyone unfamiliar with the queer habit of those journals, would seem extraordinarily intemperate. The Japan Chronicle approvingly quotes the Japan Herald as saying that certain comments in the Japan Mail are "a disgrace to journalism." We have grounds for stating that when a new recruit to Yokohama journalism arrives, it is not unusual for him to receive advice somewhat as follows, "When you are hard up for something to write about, abuse Capt. Brinkley of the Mail. We all do it." As those who seem so much concerned about that eminent authority's "disgraceful" lapses from journalistic morality will be sure to say that this disclosure is still more heinous, it is perhaps advisable to confess that the present writer received and acted on precisely the same hint some years ago. Certainly no one who sees all the foreign papers in Japan will regard as too greatly exaggerated the statement that they "all do it." Fortunately for the editor of the Japan Mail, he is in a position to bear a good deal of that without feeling hurt. If it amuses the mosquitoes to attack the elephant, the latter beast can afford to let them. As we have taken a similar view of Mr. Bethell's conduct in Seoul to that taken by Capt. Brinkley, we presume that we also have in the eyes of some of our Japan contemporaries, been disgracing journalism. Much depends upon the standard involved, and if the state of grace we have fallen from be that recognised in the sanctuaries of the Japan settlements, we shall be in no hurry to repent. The Japan Herald, which, with some others, is always ready to condemn the Japan Mail without a trial, thus virtuously complains:

"The Japan Mail this morning takes upon itself to decide a case which is now in course of hearing at Seoul, and to do so in terms which appear to us to be a disgrace to journalism. The Editor of the Mail must be aware that in his own country such action would lead to very serious consequences, and yet he does not hesitate in regard to an action being tried before a British Court in a foreign country to publish statements markedly detrimental to the defendant. A sense of fair play alone might have been expected to render such action impossible for a self-respecting person."

This is theoretically a correct line to take, and it might be unanswerable if the Japan Herald and others had not been so busily anticipating the same trial, and themselves publishing "statements markedly detrimental to the complainant." It is true that we should never assume the guilt of an accused, but it is humbling to pretend that in the Seoul case there was ever any need to assume anything. Certain things were published from time to time the purport and effect of which no sane person could doubt. Mr. Bethell was confessedly against the Japanese authorities in Korea, and he was doing all he could to hurt them, and incidentally to make himself a force to be reckoned with. He was no Garibaldi, no Hampden, but a smart man of business who thought he saw money in a certain line, and that line he took. The delivered judgment of the British Judge, whose fairness surely will not be doubted, coincides in every way with our own views and the views of the Japan Mail. The carping of the others, with their extraordinary bias, is the disgraceful feature, and their humbugging references to "fair play." A newspaper condemnation of an unconvicted accused person may be bad for the newspaper, if it leads to its punishment for contempt of court, but it is unlikely to prejudice the accused's case, certainly if he be coming before a British Judge. If he be immoral, and a disgrace to journalism, it is at least on all fours with a newspaper acquittal of an untried accused, especially when that accused is himself a journalist who has added to the disrepute of his profession.

TOKYO JOCKEY CLUB.

The Tokyo Jockey Club held a meeting on July 11th, there being a large attendance, including a number of foreigners. The result of the day's programme was as follows:—

1st RACE.—1, Saw VI; 2, Subashiri; 3, Kocho.
2nd RACE.—1, Naruto; 2, Shusui; 3, Matsusaki.
3rd RACE.—1, Mitake; 2, Tsuifu; 3, Hiyeu.
4th RACE.—1, Mukogawa; 2, Shooting Star; 3, Suma II.
5th RACE.—1, Katsuhira; 2, Tamano-o; 3, Fuku-zono. Pari Mutuel paid yen 438.
6th RACE.—1, Seitsu; 2, Hatsune; 3, Kobe.
7th RACE.—1, Hayase; 2, Wakana; 3, Gyoten.
8th RACE.—1, Katsuike; 2, Komagata; 3, Tenshin.
9th RACE.—1, Yankee Lass; 2, Kikusui; 3, Kozakura.
10th RACE.—1, Hanazono; 2, Kiyo; 3, Seiten.
11th RACE.—1, Marubaka; 2, Smith; 3, Otohime.
The second day's races of the Tokyo Jockey Club were held on July 12th at Itabashi, near Tokyo. The result of the programme was as follows:

1st RACE.—1, Subashiri; 2, Mikage; 3, Kocho.
2nd RACE.—1, Shusui; 2, Tone; 3, Matsusaki.
3rd RACE.—1, Tsuifu; 2, Hiyeu.
4th RACE.—1, Suma II; 2, Otohime; 3, Smith.
5th RACE.—1, Tamano-o; 2, Fuku-zono; 3, Hoku-kai.
6th RACE.—1, Hanayama; 2, Takashino; 3, Hatsu-zaki. Pari Mutuel paid yen 148.
7th RACE.—1, Wagatomo; 2, Gyoten; 3, Kikugawa II.
8th RACE.—1, Shooting Star; 2, Countess; 3, Asagiri.
9th RACE.—1, Tancho; 2, Tenshin.
10th RACE.—1, Seitsu; 2, Amoureux; 3, Yankee Rush.
11th RACE.—1, Oyama; 2, Wakana; 3, Chidoi. Pari Mutuel paid yen 461.

TELEGRAMS.

(REUTER'S SPECIAL TO THE "JAPAN MAIL.")

BRYAN NOMINATED.

New York, July 11.

Mr. Bryan was nominated at the first ballot in the Denver Democratic Convention.

(REUTER'S SERVICE.)

LORD CHARLES BERESFORD AND THE NAVAL SCANDAL.

London, July 9.

The Daily News states that Lord Charles Beresford has addressed to the British Admiralty a strongly worded memorandum stating that with the inadequate fleet at his command he is unable to guarantee the security of the United Kingdom against foreign attack.

THE COSTLY MOROCCO CAMPAIGN.

The Budget Committee of the French Chamber states that the expenditure on the Morocco expedition threatens to entail a deficit of ninety-six millions of francs.

PERSIA.

Later.

Sir Edward Grey, replying to Mr. J. B. Lonsdale, said an apology for the disrespect shown to the British Legation had been demanded from the Persian Government. It was understood that it would be forthcoming, but till it was satisfactorily made the incident could not be regarded as closed.

From St. Petersburg it is reported that the situation at Tabriz has become worse. Owing to the scarcity of bread the bazaars are closed and crowds are thronging the mosques agitating against the Government.

THE LABOUR PARTY AND THE COURT.

London, July 9.

Owing to the omission of the name of Mr. Keir Hardie from the list of invitations issued for the garden party at Windsor on June 21st, the Labour Party has asked the Lord Chamberlain to remove the whole of the party invitations from all court functions until the name of Mr. Keir Hardie is restored.

OLD AGE PENSIONS.

The House of Commons has read the Old Age Pensions Bill a third time by a vote of 315 to 10. Many Unionists voted with the majority, but Mr. Balfour and Sir A. F. Acland Hood abstained.

THE PRESIDENTIAL CAMPAIGN.

London, July 10.

Mr. Bryan was overwhelmingly nominated for the presidency by the Democratic Convention at Denver. The platform of the party favours the reduction of import duties and the placing on the free list of articles competing with trust controlled products; and a material reduction of duties on the necessities of life. It provides full protection for all foreigners resident in America under treaty rights, but opposes the admission of Asiatics, whose presence will raise a race issue and entail controversies with Oriental Powers.

THE ALL-RED ROUTE.

The Canadian House of Commons has carried by 109 to 47 votes Sir Wilfrid Laurier's (Premier) motion in favour of the all-red route.

THE KEIR HARDIE INCIDENT.

London, July 11.

It is clearly understood that Mr. Keir Hardie was not invited to the garden party of June 21st because of his action in opposing the King's visit to Reval. The members of the Labour party maintain that an attempt has been made to influence members of the House of Commons from expressing honest political opinions.

THE VICE-PRESIDENCY.

Mr. Kern, a lawyer of Indianapolis, has been nominated to the Vice-Presidency.

OPIUM IN CANADA.

Mr. Lemieux has introduced in the House of Commons at Ottawa a bill prohibiting the importation, manufacture, or sale of opium.

MOROCCO.

The Sultan Abdul Aziz is leaving Rabat for Marrakeshi at the head of a force of 6,000.

BRITISH NAVAL MANOEUVRES.

Later.

In connexion with the naval manoeuvres a flotilla of nineteen torpedoers (destroyers) steamed up the Thames yesterday and anchored at various points, eight at London Bridge, where the unprecedented sight attracted crowds. It is stated that the principal objective of the manoeuvres will be the capture of the Thames.

THE KAISER AND THE BRITISH FLEET.

The Kaiser, who had been cruising in Scandinavian waters, unexpectedly appeared on Tuesday on board the Hohenzollern at Aalbeck-bight (Denmark) where Lord Charles Beresford's fleet was at anchor. He passed up and down the British lines. Beresford manned his ships and saluted the Kaiser, who was standing on the bridge, and the Hohenzollern departed as mysteriously as she had arrived.

PERSIA.

London, July 13.

Reuter's correspondent at Teheran states that the Persian Foreign Minister has formally expressed to the British representative his regrets for placing the Legation under military surveillance.

PORTE TAKES AGGRESSIVE.

The Porte has ordered the mobilization of 28 battalions of redifs in Asia Minor in view of the military disaffection in Macedonia, and has simultaneously sent a note to the Powers, requesting them to make urgent representations to Athens, Belgrade and Sofia with the view of stopping armed bands from entering Turkey.

TROUBLE IN ANNAM.

An inspector of Annamite militia, named Dubarry, has been killed in an engagement with pirates in the province of Bacninh. An Annamite professor and an interpreter have been arrested on a charge of inciting revolt and the assassination of Europeans. A report from Paris says that the despatch of ordinary reliefs to the garrison in Indo-China will be hastened.

MACEDONIA.

Later.

There is unrest among the Turkish troops in Macedonia, of which the assassination of Shameshi Pasha, commanding at Monastir, by a Turkish officer is an outcome. The symptoms are creating some uneasiness at Constantinople. The movement is believed to be fomented by the Young Turkish party.

DOCK STRIKE IN SWEDEN.

There is a prolonged general dock strike in Sweden. The importation of Englishmen to replace the strikers has already led to riots. At Gothenburg a bomb was exploded. The house of a ship called the Malmo is being utilised as quarters for the Englishmen, of whom one was killed and seven were injured. King Gustaf is staying in the vicinity, and has visited the wounded in hospital.

TURKISH SUBJECTS IN CHINA.

London, July 13.

Considerable irritation appears to have been caused in Paris by the news that Germany has notified China that she has assumed the protection of Turkish subjects in China, replacing France.

A semi-official statement is published in Paris to the effect that France has protected the Turks since the eighteenth century, and that the French Government is wholly uninformed of this change.

THE BRITISH AND GERMAN NAVIES.

In the House of Commons Mr. A. H. Lee criticised the naval building programme, pointing out that by 1912 Germany will have a superiority in ships of the Dreadnought and Invincible type.

The First Lord of the Admiralty, Mr. McKenna, in reply, said: By 1911 we will still have a superiority of three (?) these vessels and a great superiority in the older types. The position in 1912 is at present irrelevant, but it will be considered in the framing of next year's programme, which will take account of all foreign increases and provide whatever may be necessary to give security till 1912.

London, July 14.

In the course of the naval debate already reported Mr. McKenna, alluding to the frequent references to Germany, said he wished to state that such comparisons were not made with the idea of hostility to Germany or any anticipation of hostilities occurring during this or future programmes. The Government only took the German programme as a standard of comparison with regard to the progress of shipbuilding.

PORTUGUESE ROYAL SALARIES.

London, July 14.

The Chamber of Deputies at Lisbon has voted the King's civil list at £220 sterling per day, and the allowance of the heir presumptive, the Infante Alfonso, at £3,550 a year.

MOROCCO.

The Morning Post's correspondent at Fez says that the starting of Abdul Aziz for Fez has caused consternation and is regarded as a breach of the French declaration of neutrality. Mulai Hafid is leaving shortly, it is believed, for Tangier to negotiate for his recognition by the Powers. He is able to put 50,000 men in the field. The Post's correspondent has been the first European to reach Fez this year.

THE MACEDONIAN QUESTION.

London, July 15.

Great Britain and Russia have agreed to divide their Macedonian proposals. The former has presented to the Powers a note urging explicitly the creation of a mobile force under Turkish officers to suppress the bands in Macedonia. Russia will shortly present a note embodying financial and judicial reforms.

OPIUM IN CANADA.

The Opium Bill has passed the Commons at Ottawa.

ADMIRAL PERCY SCOTT.

It is stated at Plymouth that Admiral Percy Scott is mentioned for the command of the East Indies station, which will be vacant in March.

THE TEA DUTY.

London, July 15.

In the House of Commons, sitting in Committee on the Finance Bill, Mr. P.

Snowden (Labour) moved the taking off of twopence on the tea duty. Mr. Hobhouse, for the Treasury, said the reduction would convert the estimated budget surplus of £245,000 into a deficit of over two millions, and in consequence the Government was unable to accept the proposal with which, however, it sympathised. The motion was rejected by 230 to 91. Mr. A. Fell then moved to take off a penny from the duty on tea produced in the Empire, but this was rejected by 251 to 34. The clause fixing the tea duty at fivepence was adopted.

A SUBMARINE ACCIDENT.

Later.

The crew of a submarine were over-powered by petrol fumes while on the way from Devonport to Dover in connexion with the manoeuvres. Some are in a critical condition. The officers in the conning-tower, finding that the crew had been rendered insensible, succeeded, in the most heroic manner, in turning off the petrol, but themselves succumbed.

THE TROUBLE AT MONASTIR.

Later.

The officers of disaffected regiments in the Monastir district are making the round of the villages with the view of inciting a rising.

THE PERSIAN FRONTIER.

The British and Russian Embassies continue to make repeated representations to the Porte with regard to the encroachments of troops on the Persian frontier. The Porte gives evasive and dilatory replies.

NATAL AND THE INDIANS.

Later.

The Assembly at Pietermaritzburg has passed the reading, without division, of a bill providing that no new trading licenses shall be issued to Indians after the 31st of next December, and no licenses shall be held by Indians after that date.

THE SUBMARINE ACCIDENT.

The crew of the submarine have recovered. The accident was caused by the leakage of a tank due to rolling in rough seas.

(BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH THE "TOKYO ASAHI SHIMBUN.")

THE NORTH GERMAN LLOYD.

London, July 10.

Berlin.—It is stated that in consequence of increased working expenses the North German Lloyd American line is seeking Government assistance in the form of a loan at low interest. The Emperor is agreeable.

PERSIA.

Teheran.—The revolutionary party is endeavouring to incite the populace against the constitution. Arrests, prescriptions and looting are frequent. Jaricevin, national leader, has died in chains from exhaustion caused by a festering sore.

St. Petersburg.—There is the best authority for stating that throughout the Persian crisis the British and Russian Governments acted with mutual confidence and in complete harmony.

PACIFIC COAST NEWS.

A special from Vancouver says that the Pacific Coast is much interested in the proposed international conference to be held at Seattle in 1909 to discuss the question of Oriental immigration to Western countries. It is reported that Director Read advocates a Yukon exhibition and that he is corresponding with Consul-General Miller at Yokohama. Wu Ting-fang, the Chinese Minister at Washington, strongly favours the proposal.

GERMANY AND FRANCE.

Berlin.—An irritable newspaper campaign has been started against French policy in Morocco. It imputes sinister duplicity to the French Government's course.

THE BRITISH NAVY.

Some anxiety has been caused by alleged dissensions amongst several senior naval officers, including Beresford. The Premier announces that the Government is only aware of unverified rumours. If it discovers that the situation is detrimental to the discipline of the fleet it will take prompt and effective action.

PERSIA.

London, July 11.

Teheran.—The Shah's Government has apologized for the disrespect shown to the British Legation. The Shah in a fresh rescript promises to rule justly and to establish courts of justice.

THE DEMOCRATIC NOMINATIONS.

Denver.—In addition to securing his own nomination Mr. Bryan has obtained for his own candidate, Kern of Indiana, unanimous nomination for the Vice-Presidency.

THE IMMIGRATION PLANK.

The Pacific Coast delegates are jubilant regarding the declaration against Oriental immigration in the platform. This, the correspondent adds, is most unwise and must harm the relations between America and Japan, for the Japanese cannot be expected to understand that it has been inserted in the platform simply for electioneering purposes and that it probably does not reflect the feelings of even the majority of Democrats.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

The Stock Exchange is steady and there is an investment demand for Chinese stocks.

ARTISTS COMBINE.

Paris.—A strong committee of leading artists has been formed to secure for painters, sculptors, designers, legal rights equivalent to those of authors and dramatists.

MACEDONIAN SITUATION UNSATISFACTORY.

Vienna.—The military situation in Macedonia is decidedly unsatisfactory. There are reports from various quarters of insubordination and disorder on the part of the Turkish troops. The Young Turkey party is appealing to all patriots to terminate the present government otherwise the provinces will be lost.

AMERICAN FREIGHTS.

London, July 13.

New York manufacturers are alarmed at the threatened general increase of freight on railways east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio and Potomac rivers. The increase is declared to be the only alternative to an increase of wages. The railways complain bitterly of their impaired credit and vast losses in earnings in consequence of oppressive laws.

BRITISH POLITICS.

It is rumoured that certain members of the Cabinet desire further to reduce the army and provide old age pensions. The Times strongly condemns such a perilous and short-sighted policy and urges the Government to resist subversive schemes.

DUMA PROROGUED.

Later.

The Duma has been prorogued. It sat almost uninterruptedly for seven months. The leaders, except the extreme left, are satisfied with the results, 300 out of 600 minor bills, an accumulation of two years, being passed. The House approved an estimated expenditure of 2,732 million roubles, about 170 millions above revenue.

THE FRENCH PARLIAMENT.

London, July 14.

Paris.—The French Parliament has adjourned. Only one important bill passed both Houses, that for the purchase of the Western Railway.

MACEDONIA.

The French Government is inclined to leave the initiative in the Macedonian Question to the Powers more directly concerned. The Temps warmly approves of the British proposal to create a mobile force, commanded by a Turk, to co-operate with the gendarmerie in the protection of life and property.

M. STOLYPIN ON HOLIDAY.

Later.

St. Petersburg.—The Premier has started on a holiday, his first in two years. This is taken to indicate that the internal conditions of Russia are re-assuring, that the Government considers the Persian situation less acute, and that the Shah has the upper hand.

SEINE STEAMBOAT CREWS STRIKE.

Paris.—The Seine steamboat crews have struck, seriously inconveniencing the public. There are 105 steamers moored, protected by the police and the municipal guards.

SUBMARINES FOR JAPAN.

London, July 15.

A steamer has been launched at Barrow, built by Vickers, to convey two submarines ordered by Japan. Their main details are the same as those of the British class C, but with two torpedo tubes forward.

BISHOP AWDRY.

Bishop Awdry, of South Tokyo, writes to The Times denying that Japan contemplates war with America or covets Australia. He says her only desire is not to be differentiated against by America, but if Australians wish to keep Australia to themselves they should be quick to make it useful to the world, for such lands can not remain unoccupied forever. Finally he warns the nations against a policy of exclusion.

FIGHTING AT TABRIZ.

A special telegram from Tabriz says that street fighting continues between the Government troops and 400 revolutionary devotees. The commandant is endeavouring to disarm the population.

GERMANY AND MACEDONIA.

London, July 16.

Berlin.—The Chancellor's newspaper explains that the Government desires to maintain an attitude of reserve with regard to the Anglo-Russian proposals for reform in Macedonia. It points out the cost of the British military scheme, which must be considered, while announcing that Germany has private reasons to maintain her reserve. The Reichs-correspondenz says that Germany has never renounced her right to record her vote.

PERSIA.

Tabriz.—Artillery is being employed to subdue the revolt.

(RECEIVED AT THE FOREIGN OFFICE.)

THE DUMA.

The Russian Parliament closed on the 11th inst. and is to open again on the 28th of October. The Bill for closing the free ports in the Far East, though it passed the Committee, did not come up for discussion in the House.

TRADAL DEPRESSION IN AMERICA.

In consequence of tradal depression in the United States the number of persons immigrating from Europe has greatly diminished. From the 1st of January this year up to the 30th of June, the third class passengers from Europe totalled 186,586, whereas the number that returned to Europe was 377,664.

ASIATIC EXCLUSION.

The Asiatic Exclusion League of San Francisco held a general meeting in the middle of June, and decided to establish a lecture hall; to open branches in the localities where addresses can be delivered in favour of the movement; to send delegates from the head office for the purpose of promoting the campaign and to canvass members of Congress in the same sense.

JAPANESE FISHERMEN IN CANADA.

The result of the unanimous petition addressed by Japanese fishermen to the Canadian Government with regard to the Fraser River Veto, is that the latter will not be strictly enforced. The Canadian officials have explained that the orders issued by them were dictated solely by the purpose of conserving the fishery.

(RECEIVED IN TOKYO.)

COUNT KOMURA.

It is expected that Count Komura will leave London on the 20th instant, and, travelling by way of Siberia, will reach Tokyo on the 25th or 26th of August.

(FROM THE "ASAHI SHIMBUN.")

THE DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION.

San Francisco, July 8.

The Democratic Convention was resumed at noon on July 8th. A few statements were made by the committee after which Mr. Hoar, a blind politician, and a Senator from Oklahoma spoke, in the course of which he stated that Mr. Bryan was the most prominent supporter of liberty at the present time. The speech was welcomed with fanatic applause and with loud cries of "Bryan! Bryan!" The enthusiastic uproar lasted for one hour and twenty-seven minutes. Such a demonstration has not been seen at a Democratic convention for many years. There is no doubt that Mr. Bryan will be nominated as the majority are against Messrs. Johnson and Gray who will not have over 120 votes in all. No candidate has yet been announced for Vice-President but perhaps the candidate will be appointed by Mr. Bryan.

Mr. Emmany, a representative from Oregon, has asked a special committee to include in the platform the proposed exclusion of Asiatics. He said that there was a large number of Asiatic labourers in America, especially in the various states on the Pacific, and that they would endanger the living of the American workmen. He added that a strict law prohibiting the entry of Asiatics into America must be established. The speaker also insisted that there was a necessity to keep a cruising fleet on the Pacific for the defence of the eastern coast.

THE SOUTH MANCHURIAN RAILWAY.

The American merchants in Mukden have presented to their Consul-General in that district a petition saying that the management by the authorities of the South Manchurian Railway is too partial. They also sent a petition to the Secretary of State.

THE DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION.

San Francisco, July 9.

Captain Hobson, well-known for his exploits at Santiago, a representative from North Alabama, made a remarkable fanatical speech yesterday at the Democratic Convention and a tumult occurred there. At first he said that Japan had prepared twenty million soldiers and was waiting for an opportunity to open war with America. Referring to the San Francisco and Vancouver affairs, in which Japanese were concerned, he said that President Roosevelt had told him that war is unavoidable with Japan. He further went on to say that if the Democrats are successful at the forthcoming election, they will experience a great war with a foreign country. The expulsion of Japanese and the expansion of the Navy, therefore, must be included in the platform of the party. During his speech, there were cries of "No! No!" and "foolish!" etc. Some cried "why did you not sink with the Merrimac at Santiago?" and others tried to pull the speaker from the platform. After an effort by the Chairman, Mr. Bell, a representative from California, the trouble, in which 12,000 persons were included, was settled. The address of Captain Hobson was regarded as the most unpopular delivered at a convention since the Civil War.

VENEZUELA AND AMERICA.

The Venezuela Charge d'Affaires in Washington paid a visit to Mr. Bacon, the American acting Secretary of State, on the afternoon of 9th and showed him a letter from President Castro ordering him to return home. The departure of the Venezuela official is attributed to the retirement of the American Charge d'Affaires from Caracas, and meant that the friendly relations between the countries came to an end.

ALLEGED JAPANESE POACHERS.

Japanese poachers, are stated to be active in the neighbourhood of St. Paul. An urgent telegram states that there is anxiety lest a collision should take place between Japanese and American fishermen.

THE DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION.

New York, July 10.

The result of the selection of the candidates at the Democratic Convention is as follows: Mr. Bryan, 892 votes; Mr. Johnson, 41; and Mr. Gray, 59. It is generally believed that Mr. Kemmel (?) will be nominated for Vice-President. Mr. Kemmel is a Judge belonging to the Tammany ring which opposes Mr. Bryan.

President Roosevelt has received some enquiries on the recent speech by Captain Hobson at the Democratic Convention that war would occur between Japan and America in the near future, which information he insisted to have had from the President. The confidential secretary of President Roosevelt has published an article on behalf of the President stating that the statement delivered by the Captain was groundless.

THE PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION.

New York, July 11.

Mr. John W. Kern of Indiana has been nominated as the candidate for the Vice-Presidency. He was twice candidate for Governor of New York but failed at the elections. Formerly Mr. Gaenove(?) was popular, many newspapers of New York publishing his portrait. After 10 a.m. on July 10th, a change took place, as many of the electors in the rural districts in New York were opposing him. Mr. Gaenove therefore refused to be the candidate.

RAILWAY FREIGHT QUESTION.

The enforcement of the new freight rates of the Great Northern and South Pacific Railway Companies has been postponed till October 1st. It is impossible to stop the enforcement of the new tariff though Japanese traders in America are endeavouring to do so, since the freight rates first proposed were lowered by a grade.

JAPANESE LABOURERS IN AMERICA.

San Francisco, July 14.

Washington.—The American immigration authorities have discovered that some exceptional Japanese—most of them being students—were taking up very humble positions such as labourers, etc. In consequence of the fact negotiations are being conducted between the American and Japanese Governments. The Japanese Government had been deemed to have admitted the proposal of the American Government with regard to Japanese immigrants, yet Japanese merchants and students who were excepted from exclusion became labourers after entering. No arrangements had been made by the Japanese Government for taking back such immigrants, so the American Government asked Japan to carry out a strict examination of each person before giving them passports. The American Government has appointed twenty inspectors to watch the doings of Japanese after entry into America.

During five months, ended May 31st, 2,699 Japanese arrived in America and in the corresponding period last year 4,875 arrived.

PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION.

New York, July 14.

The Republicans and Democrats are busily making preparations for the election. The electoral headquarters of the Republicans have been established in New York, the offices being opened to-day, July 14th, under the presidency of Mr. Peacock.

Mr. Bryan declared to-day that he would not receive a donation of over $10,000 each from any one individual or society for assisting his election expenses and that he would not receive a present from Trusts.

The Republicans, it seems, are endeavouring to establish their influence in the central and western states.

(FROM THE "MAINICHI DENPO.")

THE EDUCATIONAL BILL.

London, July 15.

The British Government has abandoned the Educational Bill.

BRITISH TERRITORIAL ARMY.

The Times states that the Radicals in the House of Commons have adopted socialistic views and are trying to destroy the military arrangements planned by Mr. Haldane, Minister for War. The journal adds that a further reduction in the number of the regular army will be made.

BRAZILIAN NAVY.

A British naval expert states that the Brazilian Government is building battleships of the Dreadnought type for a speculative purpose. He expresses doubt as to which of the Powers will purchase the warships.

MR. HALDANE.

Mr. R. B. Haldane, British Minister for War, ridicules the report that foreign military spies have photographed the country on the eastern coast of England.

(FROM THE "NICHU NICHU SHIMBUN.")

THE "DREADNOUGHT" TYPE.

London, July 14.

During a debate on naval questions in the British House of Commons, many of the members agreed in saying that big battleships of the Dreadnought type were necessary in accordance with the lessons learned on the Russo-Japanese war.

On the occasion of Russian military manoeuvres which will take place in September, the Tsar will meet the Kaiser.

A GERMAN NAVAL STATION.

The German Naval office is investigating the question of establishing a station for torpedo-boats on an island in the North Frisian Group.

BABY RAW WITH AWFUL ECZEMA

Running Humour from Birth—Face a Sickening Sight—Worn to a Shadow—People Said, "How Can You Wish Him to Live?"

USE OF CUTICURA HAS A MARVELOUS RESULT

"My husband and I thought you would like to know what the Cuticura Remedies have done for our baby boy. He had running eczema from birth. It developed itself after the first month. The poor little fellow's head was quite raw, his face was a sickening sight and the dreadful humour would soak his pillow through in a single night. It wore him to a shadow. People who saw him said, 'How can you wish him to live?' Two doctors saw him; one recommended Cuticura Remedies, but could do little else for him, for it was so obstinate. We tried several remedies, in fact everything we could think of and were told of. At last we got Cuticura Ointment, and together with the Cuticura Soap the result was marvelous, for I have not finished one box and the skin is now perfectly clear. It has all dried up and his hair is growing wonderfully, and instead of sleepless nights he has the proper sound sleep. Mrs. C. Baker, 28, Victoria Road, Blandford, Dorset, March 12, 1906."

WOMEN ONLY

Are Most Competent to Appreciate the Purity, Delicacy, and Efficacy of Cuticura Soap

And to discover new uses for it daily. It combines delicate, medicinal, emollient, sanative, and antiseptic properties derived from Cuticura Ointment, the great Skin Cure, with the purest of saponaceous ingredients and most refreshing of flower odours. For preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, scalp, hair, and hands, for itching, irritations, and inflammations, for sanative, antiseptic cleansing, as well as for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery, Cuticura Soap, assisted by Cuticura Ointment, is priceless.

Complete External and Internal Treatment for Every Humour of Infants, Children, and Adults consists of Cuticura Soap to Cleanse the Skin, Cuticura Ointment to Heal the Skin, and Cuticura Resolvent Pills (Chocolate Coated) to Purify the Blood. A single set often cures. Sold throughout the world. Depots: London, 27, Charterhouse Sq.; R. Towns & Co., Sydney; Lennon, Cape Town, etc.; B. K. Paul, Calcutta; Potter Drug and Chem. Corp., Sole Props. Port-Free, Cuticura Soap on Skin Diseases.

TRADE OF JAPAN.

Summary of the foreign trade of Japan for June, 1908, and comparison with the corresponding month of the previous year:—

EXPORTS.
I. FOOD, DRINK AND TOBACCO:
A. IN A NATURAL STATE.
	1908. Yen.	1907. Yen.
Rice .....	183,588	398,297
Sea-weeds .....	56,743	33,930
Cattle-fish .....	46,040	121,802
Others .....	370,156	621,960
Total .....	656,527	1,175,959
B. PARTLY OR WHOLLY PREPARED.
Tea .....	2,266,601	2,907,544
Sugar, refined .....	443,334	219,461
Sake .....	184,254	189,457
Beer .....	263,267	208,907
Cigarettes .....	144,009	142,378
Others .....	436,661	486,762
Total .....	3,738,126	4,154,504
Total Class I. ....	4,394,653	5,330,463
II. RAW MATERIALS.
Coal .....	1,850,009	1,661,637
Wood .....	1,032,854	1,421,735
Waste silk .....	556,832	256,535
Others .....	355,440	344,233
Total Class II. ....	3,795,135	3,684,140

III. MANUFACTURES FOR FURTHER USE IN MANUFACTURING.

Camphor .....	64,668	302,438
Fish oil .....	187,718	311,746
Raw silk .....	7,176,756	5,492,953
Cotton yarn .....	1,677,010	3,437,566
Copper, pigs, & slab .....	3,089,432	2,659,127
Straw-plaits & chip-brails ..	293,013	379,220
Others .....	1,230,809	684,007
Total Class III. ....	13,718,806	13,267,657
IV. ARTICLES WHOLLY MANUFACTURED.
Silk habutae .....	2,523,521	1,811,866
Silk handkerchiefs .....	459,001	746,403
Cotton tissues .....	1,381,847	1,406,133
Cotton towels .....	87,103	160,245
Cotton under-shirts-drawers ..	258,829	322,923
Porcelain and earthenware ..	466,588	769,527
Lacquered ware .....	124,957	197,866
Looking glass .....	27,541	47,634
Umbrellas, European .....	128,820	136,660
Mats and matting .....	225,010	431,182
Matches .....	711,717	796,534
Others .....	5,568,258	4,530,678
Total .....	11,963,191	11,350,631
V. Miscellaneous .....	408,916	235,435
Total exports .....	34,280,701	33,867,726

IMPORTS.

I. FOOD, DRINK & TOBACCO:
A. IN A NATURAL STATE.
	1908. Yen.	1907. Yen.
Rice .....	1,469,238	1,938,159
Wheat .....	441,129	140,975
Beans, peas and pulse .....	649,834	854,306
Others .....	713,537	111,853
Total A .....	2,973,738	3,045,292
B. PARTLY OR WHOLLY PREPARED.
Flour, wheat .....	244,517	536,564
Sugar .....	569,454	2,022,750
Liquors .....	69,888	113,398
Others .....	257,099	223,000
Total B .....	1,140,978	2,895,712
Total A. B. ....	4,114,716	5,951,004
II. RAW MATERIALS.
Cotton, raw .....	4,258,660	10,143,957
Wool .....	452,432	985,336
Flax, hemp, jute, &c. ....	331,457	145,503
Phosphorites .....	109,000	319,678
Oil-take .....	2,988,468	2,258,334
Others .....	2,227,704	1,910,924
Total Class II. ....	10,417,721	15,763,732
III. MANUFACTURES FOR FURTHER USE IN MANUFACTURING.
Leathers .....	227,404	286,536
Indigo, dried .....	567,825	424,118
Cotton yarn .....	49,832	175,225
Iron, pig & ingot .....	399,230	293,947
Iron, bar, rod, plate & sheet ..	2,283,790	2,225,678
Iron rail .....	399,710	198,506
Iron pipes and tubes .....	451,828	175,448
Others .....	3,238,970	3,603,352
Total .....	7,618,679	7,381,910
IV. ARTICLES WHOLLY MANUFACTURED.
Shirtings and cotton prints ..	1,783,318	1,485,139
Cotton satins and umbrella cloths .....	304,487	100,568
Woollen cloths & serges .....	86,800	289,904
Mousseline de laine .....	252,064	211,527
Papers .....	506,493	725,767
Oil, petroleum .....	1,218,821	1,153,065
Iron nails .....	291,400	333,433
Locomotives, railway cars & wagons .....	79,461	146,145
Steam vessels .....	—	143,934
Machinery .....	3,177,115	2,752,075
Others .....	3,995,413	4,587,721
Total Class IV. ....	11,696,372	11,929,278
V. Miscellaneous .....	156,057	161,282
Total imports .....	34,003,545	41,177,206
Total of exports & imports ..	68,284,246	73,044,932
Excess of exports .....	277,156	—
Excess of imports .....	—	7,369,408

Summary of total value of Specie and bullion exported from and imported into Japan for the same period.
EXPORTS.
	1908. Yen.	1907. Yen.
Gold .....	15,000	2,337,810
Silver .....	11,821	23,123
Total .....	26,821	2,360,933

IMPORTS.
Gold .....	2,689,379	450,538
Silver .....	5,262	18,721
Total .....	2,694,641	469,260
Excess of exports .....	—	1,891,613
Excess of imports .....	2,667,820	—

Summary of the Shipping (foreign trade) for the same period.

	ENTERED.	Tons.	Tons.
Japanese .....	763,605	715,616
Foreign .....	1,014,684	933,798
Total .....	1,778,289	1,649,414

Summary of the foreign trade and shipping of Taiwan (Formosa) for the same period.

	1908. Yen.	1907. Yen.
Exports .....	1,156,423	1,523,555
Imports .....	1,220,781	989,150
Total .....	2,377,204	2,512,705
Excess of exports .....	64,358	534,405
Excess of imports .....	9,590	7,195
Imports, specie & bullion ..	2,015	604
Excess of exports .....	7,775	6,591
Excess of imports .....	—	—

Summary of the shipping (foreign trade) of Taiwan for the same period.

	ENTERED.	Tons.	Tons.
Japanese .....	23,772	19,870
Foreign .....	33,431	32,396
Total .....	57,203	52,266

MAIL STEAMERS.

NEXT MAIL IS DUE
From	Line	Steamer	Date.
Tacoma .....	H. T.	Kumeric	M. July 20
Vancouver .....	C. P. R.	Glenfarg 1	Tu. July 21
Hongkong .....	P. M.	China 2	Tu. July 21
Hongkong .....	C. P. R.	Monteagle 3	Tu. July 21
Seattle .....	N. Y. K.	Aki Maru 4	Th. July 23
Hongkong .....	G. N.	Minnesota 5	Sa. July 25
Europe .....	M. M.	Armand Belic	Tu. July 28
America .....	T. K. K.	Tenyo Maru 6	Th. July 29
Hongkong .....	P. M.	Manchuria	W. July 29
Vancouver .....	C. P. R.	Em. of India	W. July 29
Hongkong .....	T. K. K.	Nippon Maru	Su. Aug. 2
Hongkong .....	C. P. R.	Em. of China	M. Aug. 3
Hongkong .....	H. T.	Suovic	Tu. Aug. 4
America .....	P. M.	Korea	Su. Aug. 9
Hongkong .....	O. & O.	Asia	Tu. Aug. 11
Hongkong .....	P. & A.	Numantia	Sa. Aug. 15
America .....	T. K. K.	America Maru	W. Aug. 19
Hongkong .....	P. M.	Mongolia	Th. Aug. 18
Portland .....	P. & A.	Nicomedia	Sa. Aug. 22
America .....	P. M.	Siberia	F. Aug. 28

- 1 Left Vancouver on the 9th inst.
- 2 Left Hongkong on the 11th inst.
- 3 Left Hongkong on the 11th inst.
- 4 Left Seattle on the 7th inst.
- 5 Left Hongkong on the 11th inst.
- 6 Left San Francisco on the 11th inst.

NEXT MAIL LEAVES
For	Line	Steamer	Date.
Europe .....	N. D. L.	Prinz Ludwig	Sa. July 18
Shanghai .....	N. Y. K.	Yamaguchi M.	Th. July 19
Hongkong .....	B. T.	Kumeric	Tu. July 21
Hongkong .....	C. P. R.	Glenfarg	Tu. July 21
Vancouver .....	C. P. R.	Monteagle	Tu. July 21
America .....	P. M.	China	W. July 22
Seattle .....	N. Y. K.	Tosa Maru	W. July 22
Europe .....	N. Y. K.	Ilingo Maru	W. July 22
Europe .....	M. M.	Tourane	Sa. July 25
Australia .....	N. Y. K.	Nikko Maru	Sa. July 25
Hongkong .....	N. Y. K.	Aki Maru	M. July 27
Seattle .....	G. N.	Minnesota	W. July 29
Hongkong .....	C. P. R.	Em. of India	W. July 29
Hongkong .....	T. K. K.	Tenyo Maru	Th. July 30
America .....	P. M.	Manchuria	F. July 31
Vancouver .....	C. P. R.	Em. of China	M. Aug. 3
America .....	T. K. K.	Nippon Maru	Tu. Aug. 4
Tacoma .....	H. T.	Suovic	Th. Aug. 5
Hongkong .....	P. M.	Korea	M. Aug. 10
America .....	O. & O.	Asia	Su. Aug. 13
Portland .....	P. & A.	Numantia	Su. Aug. 16
America .....	P. M.	Mongolia	W. Aug. 19
Hongkong .....	T. K. K.	America Maru	Th. Aug. 20
Hongkong .....	P. & A.	Nicomedia	Sa. Aug. 23
Hongkong .....	P. M.	Siberia	Sa. Aug. 29

FUKUSHIMA & Co., BROKERS & DEALERS IN BONDS & SHARES, FINANCIAL AGENTS, &c.
Tokyo, July 15th, 1908.

BONDS AND STOCKS.	Face Value.	Paid Up	Dividend Per Annum.	Dividend Payable.	Average Quotations	Remarks.
Bonds and Debentures.	Yen	Yen	Per cent.		Yen.
EXCHEQUER BONDS 1st .....	100	100	5	June to December	99.80
EXCHEQUER BONDS 2nd .....	100	100	5	March to September	95.60
EXCHEQUER BONDS 3rd .....	100	100	5	March to September	94.50
NEW IMPERIAL BONDS ISSUED 1906 .....	100	100	5	June to December	81.90
Tobacco Monopoly Bonds (Mark A=H) .....	100	100	5	June to December	95.00
Tobacco Monopoly Bonds (Mark B=E) .....	100	100	5	June to December	94.00
*Tobacco Monopoly Bonds (Mark C=H) .....	100	100	5	June to December	82.30
CONSOLIDATION LOAN BONDS (SEIRI) .....	100	100	5	June to December	80.65
WAR LOAN BONDS (GUNJI) .....	100	100	5	June to December	80.65
5% IMPERIAL LOAN BONDS (GOBURI) .....	100	100	5	March to September	81.30
Yokohama Water Works Bonds .....	100	100	6	June to December	91.50
Yokohama City Works Bonds .....	100	100	6	June to December	90.50
Osaka Harbour Construction Bonds .....	100	100	6	June to December	87.50
Kobe Water Works Bonds .....	100	100	6	June to December	94.00
Kawasaki Shipbuilding Yard's Debentures .....	100	100	6	June to December	87.00
Osaka Steam Ship Co.'s Debentures .....	100	100	6	June to December	90.00
Banks.
Nippon Ginko (Bank of Japan) .....	200	200	12	February to August	529.70
Kogyo Ginko (First class) .....	50	50	7½	June to December	54.80
" (Second class) .....	50	37.50	7½	June to December	41.00
YOKOHAMA SPECIE BANK .....	100	100	12	February to August	199.50
Taiwan Ginko (Bank of Formosa) .....	100	100	10	February to August	133.00
Railway &amp; Electric Tramway Co.'s
Nippon Railway Co. ....	50	50	11½	June to December	86.90	E.D.
3rd Issue New .....	50	35	11½	June to December	60.50	"
Sanyo Railway Co. ....	50	50	14.7	March to September	74.40
Kansai Railway Co. ....	50	50	5.9	March to September	43.00
Kyushu Railway Co. ....	50	50	9.7	March to September	69.60	E.D.
Hokkaido Tanko Steamship Co. ....	50	50	14	June to December	82.40	"
(New Issue) .....	50	12.50	14	June to December	22.20
Tokio Railway Co. ....	50	50	7	May to November	56.50
New .....	50	25	7	May to November	27.20
KEIHIN ELECTRIC TRAMWAY CO. ....	50	50	10	May to November	65.00
YOKOHAMA ELECTRIC TRAMWAY CO. ....	50	50	6	May to November	35.00
Hanshin Electric Tramway Co. ....	50	50	12	April to October	91.00
Electric Light and Gas Co.'s.
TOKYO ELECTRIC LIGHT CO. ....	50	50	10	May to November	66.00
New .....	50	25	10	May to November	32.70
YOKOHAMA ELECTRIC LIGHT CO. ....	50	50	14	May to November	69.50
New .....	50	20	14	May to November	28.50
Osaka Electric Light Co. ....	50	50	15	June to December	103.70	E.D.
Kobe Electric Light Co. ....	50	50	14	June to December	70.00	"
Uji-gawa Electric Co. ....	50	12½	no.	March to September	6.00
TOKYO GAS CO. ....	50	50	15	June to December	80.50	E.D.
New, 2nd Issue .....	50	12.50	15	June to December	27.30	E.D.
Osaka Gas Co. ....	50	50	8	June to December	72.00	E.D.
Steamship and Dockyard Co.'s.
Japan Mail Steam Ship Co. (N.Y.K.K.) .....	50	50	12	April to October	81.20
Oriental Steam Ship Co. (T.K.K.K.) .....	50	50	12	February to August	33.00	E.D.
Osaka Steamship Co. (Osaka Shosen K.K.) .....	25	25	6	June to December	14.80	"
YOKOHAMA DOCK CO. ....	50	37.50	12	May to November	50.00
Uraga Dock Co. ....	50	50	no.	June to December	10.00
Kawasaki Ship Building Yard .....	50	50	12½	May to November	53.50
Spinning and Weaving Co.'s.
KANEGAFUCHI COTTON SPINNING CO. ....	50	50	16	June to December	89.80	E.D.
News .....	50	12½	22	June to December	26.80	"
Tokyo Cotton Spinning Co. ....	50	50	18	June to December	39.50	"
FUJI GASIAN COTTON SPINNING CO. ....	50	50	25	June to December	85.80	"
Imperial Hemp Weaving Co. ....	50	50	12	June to December	53.50	"
New .....	50	25	12	June to December	25.30	"
Nissin Spinning Co. ....	50	12.50	no.	May to November	8.50
Exchange.
TOKYO STOCK EXCHANGE .....	50	50	10	May to November	110.50
Tokyo Rice Exchange .....	50	50	15	May to November	95.00
Osaka Stock Exchange .....	50	50	9	May to November	103.00
Osaka Rice Exchange .....	50	50	13.6	June to December	62.00	E.D.
Brewery Co.'s.
DAI NIPPON BEER BREWERY CO. ....	50	50	15	June to December	77.00	E.D.
Japan Beer Brewery Co. (Kirin) .....	50	50	8	June to December	60.00	"
Godown Companies.
YOKOHAMA CHIUO GODOWN CO., LTD. ....	50	50	12	June to December	50.00
Yokohama Boeki Godown Co., Ltd. ....	20	20	16	June to December	32.00
Fire Insurance Co.'s.
Tokyo Fire Insurance Co., Ltd. ....	50	12	10	June	11.00
YOKOHAMA FIRE & TRANS. INS. CO. LTD. ....	50	12	16	May	16.10
Meiji Fire Insurance Co., Ltd. ....	50	50	20	March	220.00
Oil Co.'s.
Hoden Oil Co. ....	50	50	36	March to September	96.00
Nippon Oil Co. ....	50	50	24	June to December	82.00
Nanboku Oil Co. ....	50	37.50	10	June to December	24.80
Sugar Manufacturing Co.'s.
*Dai-Nippon Sugar Refinery Co. ....	50	50	15	April to October	68.30
New .....	50	12½	15	April to October	19.80
Taiwan Sugar Manufacturing Co. ....	50	50	10	June	55.90	E.D.
New .....	50	25	10	June	27.00	"
Ensuikow Sugar Manufacturing Co. ....	50	12½	no.	June	16.20	"

S. Sellers, B. Buyers, St. Steady, N. Nominal, E.D., Ex dividend. † Ex New ‡ Cannot be held by foreigners in their own names.

LATEST SHIFTING.

ARRIVALS.

Asia, British steamer, 2,936, Harry Gaukroger, 10th July.—San Francisco via Honolulu, Mails and General.—O. & O. S.S. Co.
Telemachus, British steamer, 4,802, J. H. Goodwin, 10th July.—Glasgow and Liverpool via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.
Namantia, German steamer, 2,806, Feldmann, 10th July.—Portland, Mails and General.—P. & A. S.S. Co.
Kasuga Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,368, A. E. Moses, 10th July.—Shanghai via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Soyo Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,230, T. O. A., 10th July.—Uraga.—Toyo Kisen Kaisha.
Shiohaku Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,006, Yonetsu, 11th July.—Hakodate, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Manshu Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,284, 11th July.—Karatsu, Coal.—Toyo Kisen Kaisha.
Agamemnon, British steamer, 4,462, D. Robinson, 12th July.—Glasgow and Liverpool via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.
Empress of Japan, British steamer, 3,003, H. Pybus, 12th July.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—C. P. R. Co.
Mikawa Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,853, E. Combes, 12th July.—Otaru via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Prinz Ludwig, German steamer, 5,764, F. von Binzer, 12th July.—Hamburg and Bremen via ports, Mails and General.—H. Ahrens & Co., Nachf.	E.D.
Progress, Norwegian steamer, 1,611, 12th July.—Saigon.—Rice.
Ashtabula, British tank steamer, 4,527, G. Harding, 12th July.—San Francisco, Keioene Oil.—Standard Oil Co.	E.D.
Gregor Apar, British steamer, 2,960, G. H. Belson, 13th July.—Ca-cutta via ports, General.—Cornes & Co.
Tenshin Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,580, G. C. Hurry, 13th July.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Taihoku Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,796, I. Sato, 13th July.—Takao, General.—Osaka Shosen Kaisha.
Tremont, American steamer, 6,195, T. W. Garlick, 14th July.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—Dodwell & Co., Ltd.	E.D.
Yamaguchi Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,059, Y. Kamoshita, 14th June.—Shanghai via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.	E.D.
Lothian, British steamer, 3,223, Lockhart, 14th July.—Liverpool via ports, General.—Dodwell & Co., Ltd.	E.D.
Tourane, French steamer, 2,338, Lancelin, 15th July.—Marseilles via ports, Mails and General.—M.M. Co.	E.D.
Alesia, German steamer, 3,312, J. Ernst, 15th July.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—P. & A. S.S. Co.	"
Leopard, Austrian man-of-war, 1,500, Benigni, 15th July.—Wei-hai-wei.	E.D.
Glenstrae, British steamer, 3,054, J. McGillivray, 15th July.—London via ports, General.—Jardine, Matheson & Co.	"
Siberia, American steamer, 5,655, A. Zeeder, 16th July.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—P. M. S.S. Co.	"
Tjiltsoong, Dutch steamer, 3,052, N. V. W. Jurriense, 16th July.—Macassar via ports, General.—Ed. L. van Nierop & Co.	"
Chinua, British steamer, 1,349, J. B. Harris, 16th July.—Shanghai via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.	E.D.
Kumano Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,141, N. Mathieson, 16th July.—Melbourne via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.	E.D.
DEPARTURES.
Benedi, British steamer, 2,509, J. Potter, 10th July.—Bangkok, Ballast.—Comes & Co.
Hiogo Maru, Japanese steamer, 882, Asakawa, 10th July.—Bonin Island, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Chenan, British steamer, 1,350, H. E. Laver, 11th July.—Shanghai via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.
Asia, British steamer, 2,936, Harry Gaukroger, 11th July.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—O. & O. S.S. Co.
Caledonien, French steamer, 2,100, Lemonnier, 11th July.—Marseilles via ports, Mails and General.—M.M. Co.
Montrose, British steamer, 2,884, R. Glegg, 11th July.—New York via ports, General.—Dodwell & Co., Ltd.	E.D.
Namantia, German steamer, 2,806, Feldmann, 11th July.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—P. & A. S.S. Co.	"

Hiroshima Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,035, J. C. Richards, 11th July.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Suminoye Maru, Japanese steamer, 884, S. Nishio, 11th July.—Hakodate, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Euplectele, British steamer, 2,557, T. Powell, 11th July.—Balekappan via Karatsu Ballast.—Samuel Samuel & Co.

Mashona, British steamer, 2,665, H. D. Tarver, 12th July.—Otaru, General.—Sale & Frazar.

Chikugo Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,458, W. A. Evans, 12th July.—Shanghai via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Kagoshima Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,731, N. Teranaka, 13th July.—Otaru via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Shiohaku Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,350, O. Yamashita, 13th July.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Yechigo Maru, Japanese steamer, 712, T. Terada, 13th July.—Yokkaichi, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Empress of Japan, British steamer, 3,003, H. Pybus, 13th July.—Vancouver, B.C., Mails and General.—C. P. R. Co.

Tremont, American steamer, 6,195, T. W. Garlick, 14th July.—Victoria, B.C., via Tacoma, Wash., Mails and General.—Dodwell & Co., Ltd.

Akawa Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,853, E. Combes, 14th July.—Kobe and Yokkaichi, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Wakamatsu Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,566, T. Iriyama, 14th July.—Takao via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Agamemnon, British steamer, 4,462, D. Robinson, 14th July.—London, Amsterdam and Antwerp via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.

Gregory, British steamer, 2,060, G. H. Belsom, 14th July.—Calcutta via ports, General.—Carnegie & Co.

Hongkong Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,137, E. Bent, 14th July.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—Toyo Kisen Kaisha.

Glenstrae, British steamer, 3,054, J. McGillivray, 15th July.—London via ports, General.—Jardine, Matheson & Co.

Sardinia, British steamer, 4,126, C. C. Talbot, 15th July.—London and Antwerp via ports, General.—P. & O. S.N. Co.

Takasago Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,065, M. Machida, 15th July.—Newchwang via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Tenshin Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,580, G. C. Hurry, 15th July.—Otaru via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Katsuma Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,368, A. E. Moses, 16th July.—Shanghai via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Tsuhoku Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,796, Sato, 16th July.—Kobe, General.—Osaka Shosen Kaisha.

PASSENGERS.

ARRIVED.

Per British steamer Asia from San Francisco via Honolulu:—Mr. H. Everett and Mr. R. Oberwiner. For Hongkong:—Mr. T. C. Anderson, Mr. Clark James, Dr. D. L. Andrews, Mr. Chas. E. Ashbury, Mr. M. M. O'Malley, Mrs. M. M. O'Malley, Mr. Ervin J. Bobo, Mr. Harry D. Cooper, Mr. R. A. Rowley, Miss L. J. Cooper and Mr. H. A. Whitehorn in cabin.

Per British steamer Empress of Japan from Hongkong via ports:—Mrs. C. J. Arrow, Mrs. Ayscough, Miss Duncan, Mrs. and Master Gillard, Miss Astle, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Michael and 2 children, Mr. R. E. S. Grefson, Mr. A. W. Caman, Mr. J. W. Crouch and Mr. T. A. Ross. For Vancouver:—Bishop C. Brents, Miss Beory and Philipino maid, Mr. W. C. Gibson, Mr. P. E. Romero, Mr. H. Pinckney, Mrs. Basil Taylor, Mr. T. E. Wellford, Mr. J. P. Carter, Mr. Holmes, Captain C. Scheubner, Miss L. Scheubner, Mr. W. H. Saffoy, Mrs. C. Rayner, Mr. and Mrs. A. McLeod, Mr. W. A. Miles, Mr. King Miller, Mr. H. Schlee, Rev. and Mrs. O. T. Logan and 3 children, Miss E. L. Little, Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Gelwick and child, Dr. Sloan, Mrs. R. Goforth and 2 children, Misses H. and R. Goforth, Master Goforth (8), Lan Yee Wai, Ian Shee Kee, An Won Ko and Mr. Brgan in cabin; 46 Chinese in intermediate; 593 Chinese in steerage.

Per German steamer Prinz Ludwig from Europe via ports:—Mr. A. Kestner, Mr. E. Eichmann, Mr. H. Andres, Mr. and Mrs. Beddome and child, Mrs. Semblil, Mr. Hurmann, Miss Hurmann, Miss J. Cruisen, Mr. and Mrs. O. Moller and servant, Miss Rankin, Mr. M. O. Kaiser, Mr. Thomson, Mrs. Miller, child and servant, Mr. D. Elphinstone, Mrs. Lincoll, 2 children and servant, Mrs. Murray, child and servant, Mrs. A. Schroeder, child and servant, Capt. and Mrs. King, Mrs. Benjamin and servant, Miss Cohen, Miss G. Brown, Miss O. Benjamin, Miss P. Benjamin, Mr. Kadoorie, Mr. F. Popert, Mr. J. Kuhn, Mr. Parham, Mr. and Mrs. Isaakson, Miss H. E. Nottidge, Mr. G. Hard-manu, Mr. and Mrs. F. O. Leiser, Miss Reid, Mr. Arthur Mack, Mr. P. D. Woerner, Miss N. White, Miss E. Chlaiborne, Mrs. Harris, Mr. Franke, Mr. Komar, Mr. C. G. Holmes, Mr. C. Verneki, Mr. J. McFarlane, Mr. Chan Yok Dick, Mr. Hsia Hui and Mrs. Paovrellski in cabin.

Per American steamer Siberia, from Hongkong via ports:—Rev. A. V. Bryan, Mrs. A. V. Bryan, Miss Bryan, Mr. J. M. Davis and servant, Mrs. S. La Grave and servant, Mrs. J. M. Davis, infant and servant, Mr. I. L. Hopkins, Mr. E. Jewell, Mr. Luhman, Miss R. Martin, Mr. J. P. Carr, Mrs. M. Montrose, Mrs. S. Roberts, Miss M. Klein, Mrs. O. Mitchell and Mr. Y. Tomono, For Honolulu:—Mrs. M. Mitchell. For San Francisco:—Miss Hulda Bryan, Capt. J. D. Chase, Mister C. Clinton, Miss E. Clinton, Mr. P. W. Du Rose, Miss E. W. Graves, Mr. H. Heing, Major H. S. Howland, Miss M. L. Hood, Mrs. T. D. Holmes and infant, Miss Ellen Holmes, Mr. Pond Sze Chi, Mr. M. R. Foster, Miss Lois Holmes, Miss Mabel Holmes, Master Henry Holmes, Miss Frances Jernigan, Mr. W. C. King, Col. J. E. Mahoney, Kev. C. F. McKee, Mrs. C. F. McKee, Mr. J. E. Ward, Mr. Li Ching Tien, Mr. King Wo Hai and Hsu Shao Lsin in cabin.

EXPECTED.

Per German steamer Prinz Ludwig from Europe via ports:—Mr. Albert Kestner, Miss Erna Gottschalk, Mr. H. Y. Chai and Miss H. E. Nottidge in cabin.

Per German steamer Prinz Regent Luitpold from Europe via ports:—Mr. Neumann, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Zell and Mr. Hans Dezes in cabin.

DEPARTED.

Per French steamer Caledonien for Marseilles via ports:—Mr. H. Goldard, Mrs. Nigg, Mr. Tjia Mah Yan, Mr. Black Schlombach, Mrs. Kenel, Mr. Kenel and Mr. F. Fevier in cabin.

Per British steamer Empress of Japan for Vancouver, B.C.:—Miss Armstrong, Capt. E. L. D. Boyle, Mrs. Boyle and maid, the Misses Boyle (2), Mr. R. V. Bauer, Miss M. C. Berry and maid, Right Rev. Bishop A. C. Brent, Rev. A. C. Borden, Mrs. Borden, Mr. A. Butin, Mr. C. A. Chidell, Miss Craig, Mr. G. L. Gelwicks, Mrs. G. L. Gelwicks and child, Mr. W. E. C. Gibson, Mrs. R. Goforth, Miss Mary Goforth, Master Fred. Goforth, Miss H. Goforth, Miss R. Goforth, Master Wallace Goforth, Mrs. G. W. Hawkes, Mr. H. King Hiller, Miss M. Holmes, Mr. H. S. Irving, Mrs. E. C. Irwine, Miss I. Irwine, Mr. Au Win Ko Law, Mr. Yee Wai Law, Mr. Shee Kee Law, Miss E. L. Little, Rev. O. T. Logan, Mrs. O. T. Logan and child, Master V. Logan, Miss Elsa Logan, Mr. and Mrs. A. M. McLeod, Mr. A. M. Mieu, Mr. W. A. Mills, Mr. R. O. Kden, Mr. W. H. Organ, Mr. H. Pinckney, Mr. O. E. Pomeroy, Mr. Scott Powell, Mr. M. O. C. Raphael, Mrs. C. Rayner, Mr. M. C. Russell, Mr. W. H. Saffery, Capt. C. Scheubner, Miss L. Scheubner, Mr. H. Schlee, Dr. R. J. Sloan, Mr. F. H. Slove, Mr. F. C. Stern, Mrs. Basil Taylor, Miss Tweedie and Mr. T. E. Willford in cabin.

Per American steamer Tremont for Victoria, B.C. via Tacoma, Wash.:—Mr. and Mrs. O'Brien Butler, 3 children and governess, Mr. and Mrs. P. Foster, Rev. and Mrs. Matheson and family, Mrs. B. W. Caldwell and family, Mr. and Mrs. Hall and children, Miss C. Beaumont, Miss De Rackin, Mr. and Mrs. Basila and two children, Mr. Moore, Mr. Fuller, Rev. W. A. Shaw, Mr. Kaad, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde, Mr. Walhurn, Mr. Trowbridge, Mr. Wong and family, Mr. Kwong and Mr. T. Kondo in cabin; 26 Chinese and 21 Japanese in steerage.

Per British steamer Sardinia for London and Antwerp via ports:—Miss M. James, Mr. J. G. N. Bell, Mrs. Scott Young, infant and amah, Mr. and Mrs. Carter, Mr. Hugo, Miss Seyfer, Mr. Watson, Mr. Venham, Mr. Geo. Somerville, Mr. Alf Woolley, Mr. H. W. Lea, Mr. J. E. Harreav, Mr. J. T. Vouck Jr., Mr. and Mrs. W. Jordan, Mr. and Mrs. Kimball, Mrs. Kimball Sr., Miss Kimball, Mr. Kimball Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Brown and infant, Captain Jno. C. Dow, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Knowles, Mr. D. Guedall, Mr. L. D. Atkins, Mr. J. W. Chire, Mr. John I. Plummer and Mr. and Mrs. Bellamy Brown, 2 children and infant in cabin.

CARGO.

Per American steamer Tremont for Victoria and Tacoma:—

From.	Canada, & West.	Chicago & West.	New York & East.	Pacific Coast.	Other Cities.	Total.
Hongkong	1,611	—	—	458	—	2,069
Kobe	—	391	172	—	—	563
Yokohama	—	2,989	1,869	—	—	4,858
Keelung	—	—	9,131	—	—	9,131
Shimoda	—	2,248	—	—	—	2,248
Yokkaichi	—	600	—	—	—	600
Total	1,611	6,228	11,172	458	—	19,469

SILK.

From.	New York.	S. & A. anchester.	Eastern.	Total.
Yokohama	55	—	30	85
Total	55	—	30	85

Per British steamer Sardinia for London and Antwerp via ports:—Waste silk, 85 bales.

SILK SHIPPERS.

Raw & Waste Silk shipped per steamer Caledonien:—

	RAW.	WASTE.
	Marseilles Option.	Lyons.
Sulzer Rudolph & Co.	395	—
Sieler Wolf & Co.	99	10
Nabholz & Co.	60	—
Sieler Wolf & Co.	59	—
L. Mrttel	—	10
Varenne & Co.	—	St. Chamond
Carlowitz & Co.	—	10
Jardine, Matheson & Co.	—	100
Total	613	120

Per British steamer Empress of Japan for Vancouver:—

	Chicago & West.	New York & East.	Pacific Coast.	Other Cities.	Total.
Hongkong	—	—	—	91	93
Foochow	371	1,046	—	937	2,354
Shanghai	1,034	4,012	3,361	—	8,407
Kobe	30	820	—	—	850
Yokohama	769	419	723	—	1,911
Total	2,204	6,324	4,084	1,030	13,642

	From.	New York.	Eastern Pa.	South Pa.	York.	Mon.	Total.
H'kong & Canton	149	—	—	—	—	—	149
Shanghai	252	—	—	—	—	—	252
Yokohama	907	—	—	—	—	—	907
Total	1,308	—	—	—	—	—	1,308

Silk shippers by Empress of Japan, for Vancouver, 13th July:—

	Bales.
Vivanti Bros.	60
Jardine, Matheson & Co.	50
China and Japan Trading Co., Ltd.	40
Henri Bernardin & Co.	30
Siber, Wolff & Co.	25
F. Strahler & Co.	15
L. Mottet	10
Varenne & Co.	10
Jewett and Bent	5
Mitsui Russian Kaisha	330
Kiuto Gomei Kaisha	230
Hara Yushutsuten	85
Doshin Kaisha	17
Total	907

Silk shippers by Tremont, for Victoria and Tacoma, on 14th July:—

	Bales.
F. Strahler & Co.	70
Vivanti Bros.	15
Total	85

VESSLS TO ARRIVE.

STEAMERS.

NAME.	FROM.	REPORTED.
Armand Behic	Marseilles	Left S'pore	July 12
Ajax	Liverpool	Leaves	June 27
Aki Maru	Seattle	Left	July 7
Albenga	New York	Passed Canal	May 20
Antenor	Liverpool	Left S'hai	June 22
Atholl	New York	Left S'hai	June 4
Awa Maru	London	Left Colombo	July 9
Bencleuch	London	Passed Canal	June 22
Benlarig	London	Left S'pore	July 4
Bellerophon	Liverpool	Left	June 20
Colombo Maru	London	Left S'pore	July 2
Cyclops	Liverpool	Passed Canal	June 18
Devanha	London	Left H'kong	June 25
Indramayo	New York	Passed Canal	June 4
Indrani	New York	Left	June 15
Kageshima	Bombay	Left	June 28
Kumano Maru	Melbourne	Left H'kong	July 8
Menelaus	Liverpool	Left	May 30
Minnesota	Hongkong	Left	July 11
Mongolia	San F'cisco	Left Honolulu	June 6
M'gomeryshire	London	Left H'kong	July 2
Myrmidon	Liverpool	Left	July 27
Nubia	London	Left S'hai	July 11
Nyanza	Antwerp	Passed Canal	July 4
Oopack	Liverpool	At S'hai	May 29
Pakling	Liverpool	Passed Canal	July 4

Prinz Waldemar	Sydney	Left	June 2
Priam	Liverpool	Left S'hai	May 21
Sanuki Maru	London	Left H'kong	July 11
Saxonia	Hamburg	Left S'pore	June 22
Shimosa	New York	Passed Canal	July 6
Shinano Maru	Seattle	Left	June 9
Siberia	Hongkong	Left	July 4
Silvia	Hamburg	At S'pore	July 8
Slavonia	Hamburg	Passed Canal	June 29
St. George	New York	At Kobe	June 9
Syria	Antwerp	Left S'pore	July 11
Takasaki Maru	Bombay	At Kobe	June 9
Tamba Maru	London	Left	June 27
Tosa Maru	Hongkong	Left S'hai	July 12
Vandalina	New York	Passed Canal	June 17
Yawata Maru	Melbourne	Left	July 8

SAILING VESSELS.

Preussen	New York	Y'kohama	Left May 26
M'chal Suchet	New York	Loading	May 27
Beaumanori	New York	Loading	May 27

VESSELS ON THE BERTH.

For SHANGHAI, via Kobe, Moji, and Nagasaki, July 18th, at 4 p.m., the "CHINHUA."—Butterfield & Swire.

For BREMEN and Hamburg via ports, July 18th, at 9 a.m., the "PRINZ LUDWIG."—H. Ahrens & Co., Nachf.

For VICTORIA, Tacoma, Seattle and Vancouver, July 18th, at 5 p.m., the "OA FA."—Butterfield & Swire.

For HONGKONG, via Kobe, (Inland Sea), Nagasaki, and Shanghai, about July 18th, the "MONGOLIA."—P. & A. S.S. Co.

For SHANGHAI, via Kobe, Moji, and Nagasaki, July 19th, at 10 a.m., the "YAMAGUCHI MARU."—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

For BATAVIA, Cheribon, Samarang, Soerabaya, and Macassar, about July 20th, the "TJILIWONG."—Ed. L. van Nierop & Co.

For HONGKONG and Manila via ports, July 21st, the "KUMERIC."—Dodwell & Co., Ltd.

For CANADA, United States, and Europe, via Vancouver, B.C., July 21st, at Noon, the "MONTAGLE."—C. P. R. S.S. Co.

For MANILA and Hongkong, July 21st, the "KUMERIC."—Dodwell & Co., Ltd.

For LONDON, Antwerp and Middlesboro, via Kobe, Moji, Shanghai, Hongkong, Singapore, Penang, Colombo, Suez, Port Said and Marseilles, July 22nd, at 2 p.m., the "BINGO MARU."—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

For NEW YORK, via ports and Suez Canal, June 22nd, the "DACRE CASTLE."—Dodwell & Co., Ltd.

For SAN FRANCISCO, via Honolulu, July 22nd, at 3 p.m., the "CHINA."—P. & A. S.S. Co.

For SEATTLE, via Victoria, B.C., July 22nd, at 2 p.m., the "TOSA MARU."—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

For SYDNEY, and Melbourne, via Kobe, Moji, Nagasaki, Hongkong, Thursday Island, Townsville, and Brisbane, July 23th, at Noon, the "KUMANO MARU."—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

For MARSEILLES via ports, July 25th, at 9 a.m., the "TOURNAI."—M.M. Cie.

For SHANGHAI and Hongkong via ports, July 27th, at 10 a.m., the "AKI MARU."—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

For LONDON, Amsterdam and Antwerp, July 28th, at Daylight, the "MENELAUS."—Butterfield & Swire.

For MARSEILLES, London, and Antwerp, via Kobe, Shanghai, Hongkong, Straits, Colombo, and Port Said, July 29th, at Daylight, the "NUBIA."—P. & O. S.N. Co.

For HONGKONG, via Kobe, Inland Sea, N. asaki, and Shanghai, about July 29th, the "EMPERESS OF INDIA."—Canadian Pacific Railway Co.

For HONGKONG, via Kobe, (Inland Sea), Nagasaki, and Shanghai, about July 30th, the "TENYO MARU."—Toyo Kisen Kaisha.

For BRISBANE, Sydney and Melbourne, via Hongkong, Manila and New Guinea, July 31st, the "PRINZ SIGISMUND."—H. Ahrens & Co., Nachf.

For GENOA, Marseilles and Liverpool, Aug. 2nd, at Daylight, the "CYCLOPS."—Butterfield & Swire.

For CANADA, United States, and Europe, via Vancouver, B.C., Aug. 3rd, the "EMPERESS OF CHINA."—Canadian Pacific Railway Co.

For SAN FRANCISCO, via Honolulu, Aug. 4th, the "NIPPON MARU."—Toyo Kisen Kaisha.

For TRIESTE, via Kobe, Hongkong, Singapore, Penang, Colombo, Bombay, Calcutta, Aden, Suez, Port Said, and Fiume, about Aug. 4th, the "SILFISIA."—Heller Bros.

For TACOMA, via Victoria, Aug. 5th, the "SUVERIC."—Dodwell & Co., Ltd.

For SAN FRANCISCO, via Honolulu, Aug. 13th, the "ASIA."—O. & O. S.S. Co.

Lea and Perrins' Sauce.

By Royal Warrant
to
His Majesty the King.

THE ORIGINAL AND GENUINE WORCESTERSHIRE.

For CALCUTTA, and Penang, via Kobe, Moji, Hongkong, Singapore, Aug. 14th, the "A. APCAR."—Apcar & Co.

For PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 16th, the "NUMANTIA."—P. & A. S.S. Co.

SHIPPING IN YOKOHAMA.

STREAMERS.

Ashkubula, British Tank steamer, 4,527, G. Harding, 12th July.—San Francisco, Kerosene Oil.—Standard Oil Co.

Dacre Castle, British steamer, 2,655, Smith, 21st June.—New York via ports, General.—Dodwell & Co., Ltd.

Nirvana, French yacht, 900, Evrard, 7th June.—Kobe.

Lothian, British steamer, 3,223, Lockhart, 14th July.—Liverpool via ports, General.—Dodwell & Co., Ltd.

Canfa, British steamer, 5,876, W. C. Lyett, 17th July.—Glasgow and Liverpool via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.

Prinz Ludwig, German steamer, 5,704, F. von Binzer, 12th July.—Hamburg and Bremen via ports, Mails and General.—H. Ahrens & Co., Nachf.

Progress, Norwegian steamer, 1,611, 12th July.—Saigon.—Rice.

Tjilawong, Dutch steamer, 3,052, N. V. W. Juriaanse, 16th July.—Macassar via ports, General.—Ed. van Nierop & Co.

Touraine, French steamer, 2,338, Lancelin, 15th July.—Marseilles via ports, Mails and General.—M.M. Co.

"I tell you, ma
it's as good as gold!"

"THE JAPAN DAILY MAIL."

PUBLISHED EVERY MORNING,
SUNDAYS AND NATIONAL HOLIDAYS EXCEPTED.

Subscription, 2 yen per Month, 24 yen per Year.
Postage extra.
Single copies, 20 sen.

ADVERTISING RATES.

For 3 insertions, per inch 1 yen.

For 6 insertions, per inch 1.50 yen.

CONTRACT ADVERTISEMENTS.

A discount of 10 per cent. allowed on one months' contract.

A discount of 15 per cent. allowed on 3 months' contract.

A discount of 25 per cent. allowed on 6 months' contract.

A discount of 50 per cent. allowed on 12 months' contract.

Notices of Marriages, Births, Deaths and Paragraphs referring to Reception Days, one yen per insertion.

"The Japan Weekly Mail."

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY MORNING.

Subscription 2 yen per Month, 24 yen per Year,
half-price to Missionaries and School teachers.
Postage extra.
Single copies 50 sen.

ADVERTISING RATES.

1.50 yen per inch per month.

Half page, yen 25 per month.

Full page, yen 50 per month.

Telegrams: "Mail."

Telephone: { Yokohama—No. 144.

{ Tokyo—No. 176 (Shimbashi).

(毎土曜日一回發行)

編輯人兼發行人 エフ アインフリー
支那人兼印刷人 ロバート ヘー
發行所 横浜市山下町五十五番
ウツマンモール新聞社

The Japan Weekly Mail

毎土曜 日 A REVIEW OF JAPANESE COMMERCE, POLITICS, LITERATURE, AND ART. 一回刊行

No. 41

REGISTERED AT THE G.P.O.
AS A NEWSPAPER.

YOKOHAMA, JULY 25TH, 1908.

明治廿五年三月廿日
第三千四百四十四號

VOL. L.

CONTENTS.

Summary of News	89
China	90
American Merchandise in Manchuria	91
Korea	92
The Cabinet	93
Prince Ito	94
Manchuria	94
Finance	95
The Latest Seoul Correspondence	95
The Korean Delegate	95
Yongsoo Ports	95
The Tokyo Municipality	96
The Raising of Railway Freight in America	97
Marriage by Photograph	97
The Nagasaki Affair	97
Formosa	97
Railway Freight in America	97
Business Notes	98
Baseball	99
Notes on Current Events	100
The Tokyo Stock Exchange	100
Shipping Accidents	110
The Unrest in Tonkin	100
Leading Articles:
Bishop Avery	101
Libel Case in Shanghai	101
The Bookshelf	102
Evidence of Former Minister Dun	102
Alleged Treason	101
Water Polo	103
Heavy Rain	103
Doyo	103
Two Burglaries at Kobe	103
Tokyo Jockey Club	103
Yokohama	104
Literary Notes	105
News of the Week	105
Correspondence:
The Chojamachi Post Office	107
Postal Affairs	107
The Anglo-Japanese Bank, Limited	107
The Conditions of Peace Between the East and the West	110
"Strained Relations"	110
Telegrams	110
Latest Commercial	113
Latest Shipping	115

"FAIS CE QUE VOUS DEVEZ, ADVIENNE CE QUE VOUS VOULEZ"

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

No notice will be taken of anonymous correspondence. What is intended for insertion in the "JAPAN WEEKLY MAIL" must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer, not for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

It is particularly requested that all letters on business be addressed to the MANAGER, and Cheques be made payable to same; and that literary contributions be addressed to the EDITOR.

YOKOHAMA: SATURDAY, JULY 25TH, 1908.

BIRTHS.

Born to Rev. and Mrs. C. B. OLDS of Miyazaki, on the morning of the 18th at their residence in Karuizawa, a Son - EDWARD B. SWORTH OLDS.

READ - On July 14th, at 10, Seymour Road, Shanghai, to Mr. and Mrs. H. H. READ, a Son.

MARRIAGE.

On the 21st instant, at the British Consulate-General, Yokohama, before John Carey Hall Esq., I.S.O., Consul General, LIZZIE (MAY), daughter of Mr. J. L. Eytton of Yokohama, to Guy, son of Harry Stevenson, Esq., of Brighton, England.

SUMMARY OF NEWS.

DR. AND MRS. KOCH returned from Kaniakura to Tokyo on July 17th.

PRINCE ITO, Resident-General, arrived at his villa in Oiso from Seoul on the evening of July 21st.

SOME Japanese papers report that Dr. Baelz, who a few weeks ago left home, will again visit Japan next year.

COUNT GALLINA, Italian Ambassador, left Tokyo on the evening of July 17th for home. He will travel through Siberia.

THERE is a rumour afloat in Yokohama that Baron Sufi, Governor of Kanagawa prefecture, will be appointed Vice-Minister for Home Affairs. The Nichi Nichi says that Mr. Omori, Governor of Kyoto-Fu, and Professor Ichiki are also candidates for the office.

THE death was announced on July 21st of Viscount Matsudaira, descendant of the Lord of the former Kuwana clan.

FIRE broke out at 2 a.m. on July 17th in the Otaru Oil Factory, destroying the building, the damage being estimated at yen 150,000.

A HONOLULU telegram states that the Keio Gijiku beat the Kamelame Club by 4 runs to 3 on July 18th. Fukuda pitched for Keio.

OWING to a storm, which lasted three days, damage was sustained in Utsunomiya and the adjoining districts estimated at yen 750,000.

DURING ten days ended July 20th, the foreign trade in Yokohama was as follows: Exports, yen 8,813,000, and imports, yen 9,776,000. Excess of imports was yen 963,000.

A SAPPORO telegram reports that on July 17th, a storm was experienced in the district of Atsukishi. A house collapsed, and two persons were crushed to death, one being injured.

MR. M. SAWAYANAGI, Vice-Minister for Education, has resigned, and Mr. K. Okada, President of the Kyoto University, is appointed to take his place in addition to his present duty.

COUNT KOMURA, Ambassador to the British Court, and Mr. R. Wakatsuki, a special financial agent, who was recently appointed Vice-Minister for Finance, will leave London on July 27th for home.

ABOUT 20 leading sake manufacturers in Saga prefecture held a meeting on July 17th and decided not to manufacture next fiscal year. They are disheartened by the action of the Saga Tax Office.

A NAGANO report states that there are about five hundred visitors at Karuizawa, including the Belgian Minister, the daughters of Marquis Tokudaiji, and 45 students of the Nippon Female College.

MR. F. D. CHESHIRE, Inspector of U.S. Consulates in the Far East, was a passenger to Seattle by the G.N. steamer Minnesota. Baron de Sendal, Portuguese Minister at Tokyo, came to Yokohama by the same vessel.

A QUANTITY of the new crop of orikaishi was brought from Fukushima to Yokohama on July 20th. The quality is reported to be good. The first batch of new re-reels manufactured by the Minami Sansha was put on the Yokohama market on the same day.

THE Nichi Nichi states that the preliminary investigations with regard to the proposed revision of the Treaties at the Foreign Office are in good progress. The printing of the drafts was concluded on July 20th. The committee on Treaty revision will shortly hold their first conference.

THE construction of the Formosan Railway from north to south has been completed. The opening ceremony will be held towards the end of October and a large number of high officials and leading business men from Japan will be present. The expense of the entertainment is estimated at yen 160,000.

IT is reported, says a Kobe paper, that several horse owners have instituted claims in the Kioto District Court against the Kioto Race Club. It appears that at the first meeting of the Club these horse owners won several events but have not yet received the prizes specified on the programme, although they have repeatedly urged the Club for payment. The committee promised to pay on July 10th but did not fulfil their promise.

WE regret to announce the death of Capt. J. W. Wale, who was for some ten years in command in the Nippon Yusen Kaisha. Captain Wale who had previously been in the McIlraith line, joined the Tamba Maru in London and afterwards continued in the service of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha. He was unmarried.

THE Bazaar organised by the local Chinese to raise funds for the sufferers by the recent floods on the West and North Rivers was opened at Hongkong on July 10th under happy auspices by His Excellency the Governor and the first venture of the Chinese to raise money by this approved or disapproved method was successfully launched.

A FURTHER instance of the evils of betting is reported from Gumma prefecture, where a clerk of the Yoshino Bank in the district of Tano attempted to commit suicide in a forest near his house by severely injuring his throat with a short sword on July 14th. It appears that he sustained heavy loss at the horse races at Negishi and several other places, this spring.

By the steamer Saxonia there arrived on Tuesday 24 Australian mares consigned by the Kiss firm to the Tokyo Race Association, whose race-course is at Ikegami. These left Australia on the steamer Prince Waldmar, but on that vessel sustaining an accident were transferred to the Saxonia after a stay on shore at Hongkong of 16 days. One died during the voyage, but in view of the duration of the trip the others are in excellent condition. By the same steamer comes, consigned to private persons, the Australian racing stallion North Head.

In the Supreme Court at Shanghai on July 11th Ernest Thomas Bethell, late Editor of the Korea Daily News, who was recently sentenced by the Court to twenty-one days' imprisonment as a first class misdemeanant, was brought before his Lordship the Acting Judge, Mr. F. S. A. Bourne, to give security for his future good behavior. His Lordship said prisoner had been ordered to give security to be of good behavior for six months, and he would be satisfied with the sum of £200 in prisoner's own recognisances and one surety of £150. If prisoner would enter into the recognisance he would be discharged; if not he would have to be deported from China. His Lordship directed Mr. King (Registrar) to see to the recognisance, on the execution of which prisoner would be discharged. Prisoner entered into the necessary recognisance and was thereupon released.

THE Tor Hotel, at the foot of the hills which give Kobe its greatest charm, was opened to the public on July 18th. At the invitation of the Directors, over one hundred ladies and gentlemen sat down to an excellent tiffin, and most of them were present at the opening. The whole function was an unqualified success, and the opinion was heard, says the Kobe Herald, that the Hotel is "second to none East of Marseilles." It should be mentioned that among those present was Mr. G. Adam, Secretary and Director of the Oriental Hotel, and that Messrs. A. H. Groom and H. E. Reynell, who are also members of the Oriental's Board, were unable for unavoidable reasons to attend. Several members of the Consular Body were present. Speeches were made by Mr. Popert, Chairman of the Tor Hotel, Ltd., by Mr. H. Bonar, British Consul-General, and by Mr. J. S. Suttor, Commercial Agent of New South Wales in the Far East.

CHINA.

Friday, July 17.

General Baron Fukushima and his party seem to be very busy in China, but the intelligence of their movements suggests nothing as to the actual progress of their business. The Chinese Emperor has conferred on the General a First-class Order in consideration of his services as President of the Shimbu Gakko in Tokyo, where Chinese youths receive an education preparatory to entering the Military College.

Light does not appear to have yet been shed over the state of affairs in Tientsin. Our readers are aware that the Chinese merchants of that place are heavily indebted to foreign importers, from whom they have received large consignments of goods on credit. Some time ago it was reported that the Chinese debtors were assuming a nonchalant attitude and were disposed to defy their foreign creditors. The latest news is that the Haikwan Taotai has approached the Consular Body with a request that a period of grace should be granted to the Chinese. This request does not seem to have left the hands of the senior Consul, from which it may be inferred that the Consular Body is not disposed to interfere. It is thought that the debtors will approach the Central Government on the subject. Rumour says that the chief creditors are Germans, to whom the Chinese middlemen owe 25 million taels in all. The debts to Japanese importers aggregate 2 million taels. Supplementing the experiences recently garnered in Japan this story suggests that German merchants in the East have been carrying competition too far in the matter of credit. Nothing could be more illogical than the trade situation as between foreigners and Japanese in Japan. On the one side there is almost absolute combination, on the other the freest of free competition.

Altogether the condition of trade in North China appears to be about as bad as possible. At Newchwang the harbour is denuded of ships and the local merchants are said to be barely able to keep their heads above water, while at Tientsin business is almost at a standstill, and the Japanese community which in ordinary times numbers 4,000 has fallen to one half of that aggregate.

Major-General Kojima has returned to Mukden from Antung, whither he had gone to collect information bearing upon the question of the Yalu Timber-logging Enterprise. It is stated that three or four meetings of the commissioners will suffice to complete the draft of the regulations, and according to present appearances the formation of the Company will take place in the beginning of September.

Saturday, July 18.

General Baron Fukushima seems to be receiving quite exceptional treatment in Peking and Tientsin. The leading officials in the capital from Prince Ching downwards have gone out of their way to show him civility and recognise his services in connexion with the education of Chinese military students. The Baron was not received in audience by the Emperor, owing to the latter's illness, from which, however, his Majesty is rapidly recovering.

The recently reported intention of opening Changkiakow to foreign trade is said to have been abandoned as premature.

The Dalai Lama's presence at Wutaishan seems to be anything but a blessing to the people in the vicinity. His Holiness is levying religious contributions with a free hand and there is said to be much discontent.

Sunday, July 19.

The Asahi has a telegram from Peking which says that the origin of the crusade against Japan in connexion with the Faku-men Railway has been traced to the company which contracted for the building of the line, and it has been found that the Central News Agency is responsible for spreading the statements. We do not see anything remarkable in all this. It is natural to suppose that the people chiefly interested in the building of the line should be chiefly disposed to attack all those who oppose the project. As to the conclusion recorded by our contemporary's telegram, namely, that these hostile utterances do not represent the feeling of the British nation, that too may be taken for granted. Probably outside Downing Street there are not half a dozen Englishmen who know where Faku-men is, or who have given five minutes thought to this question. The effect of the crusade opened by the advocates of the line is simply to convey to a small section of the British nation a vague idea that Japan is doing something which she ought not to do or leaving something undone which she ought to have done.

It appears that China like Japan is confronted by disquieting climatic conditions. No special damage has been suffered as yet by the rice crop in the Yangtze valley, but cotton is reported to be in a bad condition, and the yield will not only be comparatively small but also late, even though favourable weather be experienced in the near future. Sunshine and warmth for the next few weeks are of vital importance to both countries.

Monday, July 20.

The Nippon has an interesting paragraph about Chientao but we do not know exactly what measure of truth attaches to it. Our contemporary alleges that although the force of gendarmes sent by Japan to the disputed region is now to be slightly increased, it remained from the beginning until a few days ago a paltry 80 men, and thus bore essentially the character of a police force. The Chinese, on the other hand, not content with the quite considerable body of troops which they assembled in the district at the outset, subsequently added 2000 men, and are now building barracks here and there, which suggests a large military programme. In these circumstances it would be eminently unsafe to leave the Chientao problem in an unsettled state, and an opinion begins to gain ground that a compromise will be found by, on the one hand, recognising Chinese sovereignty throughout the region, and, on the other, securing for Korean subjects the right of free trade, travel and residence anywhere throughout the district, while at the same time obtaining from China a concession for the construction of a railway from Chyongjin on the north-east coast of Korea to Kilin via Hoiryong. This would add greatly to the means of communication in North Manchuria and would satisfy the amour propre of the Chinese Government, which sets great store by the country of the Long White Mountain as the birth place of the Manchu Dynasty.

The Nippon says that the Fushun Coal Mine produces 1200 tons of mineral daily at present, half of which is used for the Railway's purposes and the remainder finds a local market. Preparations are being made, however, to exchange the present somewhat primitive system of excavation for thoroughly efficient modern machinery. When that is done the product of the mine is expected to find a ready market in Shantung,

South China and Korea. At present, however, the Fushun mineral can not be produced at a sufficiently cheap price to compete with its Kaiping rival. The latter costs only 7.60 yen f.o.b., whereas the cost of the Fushun coal is 7.85 yen. Already the Japanese coal from Kyushu can be placed on board ship at from 6.60 to 7.00 yen a ton, and it is thus steadily driving out the Kaiping product. But until the Fushun Mine is properly equipped it will not be able to compete in this arena. The Germans are exploiting coal mines at Weihien in Shantung, but the coal is of very inferior quality.

The Chinese Government is evidently seeking to evince its friendly gratitude for the services rendered by Japan in general and Baron Fukushima in particular in connexion with the education of Chinese military students. There have been repeated journalistic references to the warm and courteous reception which has been given to the Baron by the Peking authorities.

Tuesday, July 21.

It is stated that the Peking Government has decided to invest with Ambassadorial rank Mr. Tang Shaoi, Governor of Mukden, and to dispatch him to the United States for the purpose of returning China's thanks to America in connexion with the restoration of a part of the Boxer indemnity.

Terrible accounts continue to arrive of the ravages caused by the floods in South China. According to information collected by the Relief Commissioners sent from Hongkong, the number of persons rendered homeless by the inundations is 28,400, and the number of persons rendered destitute is 250,000. It is stated that 80 per cent of the crops in the inundated regions have been destroyed, that the losses of property aggregate 10 million taels, and that the repair of embankments will cost 5 millions more.

There are said to be some symptoms of an anti-German boycott being organised in connexion with the rights-recovery movement in the Shantung Province.

The Official Gazette contains an announcement that the final control of affairs relating to the South Manchuria Railway shall henceforth be transferred to the Department of Home Affairs, and that, similarly, affairs connected with the Railway which now fall under the purview of the Governor-General shall be subject to the final jurisdiction of the same Department. This does not mean of course that questions of an international character which may arise in connection with the Railway are to be dealt with by the Department of Home Affairs. Such questions will remain as before in the hands of the Foreign Office. Evidently this is a wise step from the point of view of keeping the South Manchuria Railway under the direct control of Baron Goto, the new Minister of Communications, who in a comparatively short time has done so much towards reorganising the Railway's affairs. But, as the Nippon rightly observes, Baron Goto's reign at the Department of Communications can not be considered as more than temporary, whereas the welfare of the South Manchuria Railway is a permanent desideratum, and unless another change of system be made at the next change of Cabinet, the independence of the South Manchuria Railway, which has hitherto been so much desired, will be compromised, and the Railway will remain a mere section of the Department of Home Affairs.

Wednesday, July 22.

It appears that the amount returned by America to China out of the Boxer indemnity is the difference between 24 million taels, at which sum the Washington Government originally assessed its claim, and 13,655,492 dollars, which represent the total of America's actual expenses. These figures are telegraphed from Peking, and we presume that Mexican dollars are intended, for if gold was in question, there would be nothing left to restore to China. Of course from one point of view this incident is highly creditable to the United States. But from another, an obvious criticism suggests itself, namely, that whereas each of the claimants in the Boxer affair pledged itself not to exact more than its actual outlays, it would now appear that America put in a demand for about twice what she had really spent. That is not a very creditable record in the matter of accounts, and it suggests that if America, whose sense of international honour is markedly high, could thus overestimate the cost of her operations, some other Powers probably erred still more flagrantly in the same direction. But we hear nothing of any restitution from other quarters.

The new Chinese Representative to Japan, Mr. Hu Weiteh, is to leave Shanghai for Tokyo on the 25th inst. An entertainment has been given in his honour by his Excellency Mr. Sheng, and the leading Japanese residents of Shanghai were amongst those invited.

Great success has attended the project of forming a Public Communications Bank in Peking. The original idea was that the capital should be 5 million taels in 50,000 shares of 100 taels each. But as that amount was subscribed several times over, it was decided to issue double the number of shares and to increase the capital correspondingly. Forty thousand of the shares have been taken up by the Department of Posts and Telegraphs, and the remaining 60,000 by the general public. This is an instructive incident, as showing how completely the Chinese are emerging from their old fashioned groove of reluctance to invest money in any official or semi-official undertaking.

The Lu-Han Railway has not yet been reopened to traffic. It is said that the inundations have more or less wrecked the line through a distance of some 43 miles.

We find the following in the editorial columns of the Hongkong Daily Press for the 11th instant:—

Following closely upon the terrible devastation caused by the floods in the Kwang-tung province comes the alarming news of a serious outbreak of cholera at Canton, the provincial capital. Our correspondent's information published yesterday is that it is spreading rapidly all over the city and that many deaths have occurred. That the state of affairs at Canton is recognised by the city authorities as extremely serious is clearly shown in the precautionary measures adopted to check the spread of the disease. No suggestion is contained in our correspondent's brief paragraph as to what the authorities deem to be the originating cause of the epidemic, but we do not suppose it would be very wide off the mark to connect it with the flood and the resulting contamination of the water supplies in the southern and eastern suburbs where the disease first made its appearance. If that be the origin it is greatly to be feared that the city, and perhaps the whole province, may suffer terribly from the scourge.

Thursday, July 23.

There have been rumours of the death of the Emperor of China. They reached the Asahi Shimbun on the 22nd inst. and Shanghai on the same day, but there has been nothing to confirm them, and according to present appearances the story is without foundation.

A big bazaar has been opened at Canton in aid of the sufferers by the inundations. According to official statements the persons rendered houseless number 30,000 and half a million are suffering severe privations.

Meanwhile reports of heavy rains continue to arrive from China. Disastrous inundations have taken place in the provinces of Hupeh and Hunan, and Peking telegraphs that the capital has not been visited by such a downpour for many years.

It appears that Viceroy Chang Chih-tung's project of forming a military school modelled on Japanese lines gave the first impulse to the movement for sending Chinese youths to study military science in Japan. This movement, in spite of the general impression as to its recent cessation, has been going on steadily. Thus in July and December of last year the number of Chinese students entered at the Officers College in Tokyo was 257, the number entered in the School of Survey was 52, and the number attached to the Divisions preparatory to entering the Schools was 77. These students were not required to pay any school fees, and thus their own maintenance was the limit of their expenses. But it seems that the accommodation available in Japanese military educational institutions is no longer sufficient for the needs of so many foreign students, and the inflow of Chinese youths is therefore likely to be checked.

The following two letters have appeared in the N.-C. Daily News:—

SIR,—It has been my lot on several occasions to witness severe treatment of mere children by Chinese workmen on buildings in this Settlement. Others have also from time to time noted instances of cruelty to children. Young children are employed by native contractors on work which at home we would only allow adults to undertake.

To see mere mites carrying loads of bricks or mortar on high rickety scaffolding is to have the pity aroused by the tender age of the children, intensified by our knowledge of the danger of the occupation, the hardness of the labour, and the absence of that recreation children at such an age and size should enjoy.

But while in occupations in the open such instances are forced on our notice there are many others kinds of labour here in which children are employed and often subjected to hard treatment.

In some cases the young victims are orphans, but anyhow the majority are "little tots" whose helplessness appeals urgently to all sensible "grown-ups."

There must be numbers of foreign residents who have during a long residence seen things that made their blood boil that perhaps compelled them to interfere forcibly, only afterwards to feel pitifully unable to remedy the evil for the many.

SIR—I have just read Mr. Herbert C. Hutchinson's letter about "Cruelty to Children" in the Correspondence column of the North-China Daily News. By a really curious coincidence I had been intending since last Sunday to write a similar letter to the paper myself.

Several times during the year I have been awakened in the early morning by the pitiful crying of small children, but before I could get out to ascertain what was happening the children had disappeared into Park Road.

Last Sunday morning I happened to be awake when the same thing occurred again. I rushed out into the road and saw a Chinese woman dragging a child of six to eight years of age by its hair along Bubbling Well Road. The child was crying in a most pitiful way. I stopped the woman and asked a native policeman who was on duty at the corner of Park Road, the reason of the child's crying. The woman released the child, and it ran away.

I had scarcely returned to my room when a second child was dragged in the same way into Park Road. I followed this time and ordered an Indian Policeman to take the whole party to the Sinza Police Station, at the same time writing the facts as I had seen them in the policeman's note book. It was then 4.30 a.m. Later on I was informed by telephone from the police station that the children were taken to a mill in Sinza Road and as it was a Chinese custom the police had no right to interfere.

I bring these facts to your notice, trusting that you may be better able to follow the matter up and do something in the interest of these poor children, who, living in the midst of foreigners, ought to have the benefit of our civilization, which prohibits the working of children in factories under an age of fourteen years and limits the time of work.

Thanking you in anticipation,

I am, etc, MAX ENGEL,
Shanghai, July 14.

AMERICAN MERCHANDISE IN MANCHURIA.

Journalistic telegrams received in Tokyo on the 17th inst. represented his Excellency Ambassador O'Brien, who is now on a visit to America, as saying that special discounts are granted to Japanese merchandise carried over the South Manchuria Railway. The Asahi Shimbun has sought information from the Foreign Office in Tokyo on this subject and has been assured that there is absolutely no foundation for such a statement. When the railway was in the hands of the Russians they adopted the policy of endeavouring to deflect the traffic to Tairen at the expense of Newchwang, and with that object they specially cheapened the charges on merchandise carried to and from the former place. So soon as the line was handed over to the Manchuria Railway Company, that policy was abandoned and ever since then, the rates of freight have been absolutely the same, distance alone being considered and not the nationality of the merchandise or the nature of its destination. As to the complaint that foreign ships coming to Tairen are specially discriminated against in the matter of wharf accommodation, this charge too is declared groundless. There has been no discrimination, but, as a matter of fact the accommodation is defective, and Japanese companies also have complained, especially the Osaka Shosen Kaisha. Referring to the complaint that Japan has monopolised the telegraph lines in South Manchuria and is granting special facilities in using them to her own nationals, we have again an emphatic denial. It is declared that absolute impartiality is observed in handling all mail and telegraphic matter. Again, with reference to the allegation that Japan is monopolising the import trade in Manchuria, the facts are that the total imports at Tairen during the second half of last year amounted to only 28 million yen, out of which total 25 millions were imported for the Governor-General and for the Railway Company, leaving only 3 millions in the schedule of general merchandise, and out of these 3 millions only 1½ represented Japanese goods. It is a little extravagant to allege that with an importation of 1½ million yen of merchandise Japanese manufactures and products are monopolising the trade of an immense place like Manchuria. An interesting statement is added about the complaint that Japanese dealers in cotton yarns obtain special financial facilities from the Government. The facts are that the Government has to transmit considerable sums of money every year for the maintenance of the troops in Manchuria. This money it entrusts to the Specie Bank, and the latter, instead of adopting the uneconomical course of transmitting the money in the form of specie, lends it to Japanese exporters who, selling their exports in Manchuria, pay the money into the hands of the Government General. That is a mere question of banking procedure and can not with any show of reason be interpreted in the sense attributed to it by certain foreign critics.

At 1.30 a.m. on July 19th, fire broke out in the factory of the Nippon Porcelain Company, Nagoya, destroying the building, one of the workmen being killed. Negligence was the cause. The damage is estimated at yen 33,000.

KOREA.

Friday, July 17.

Our readers have doubtless observed that two or three days ago a telegram from Seoul stated that the editor of the Dai Han Mai Il Shunpo had been arrested for embezzling public money. It will be remembered that about a year ago some of Korea's self-styled friends started the idea that she should pay off her national debt to Japan by means of subscriptions from men who were willing to forego the use of tobacco for their country's sake. The movement would have provoked ridicule had not its patriotism deserved respect. But some worldly-minded onlookers suggested that in all probability the outcome would be a lining for certain selfish pockets. The recent arrest seems to confirm this suspicion. What the latest telegrams say is that, of the 60,000 yen collected, one half was lodged with Messrs. Holme, Ringer and Co. in the name of Mr. Bethell and that this money was subsequently withdrawn and has disappeared. The telegram goes on to say that Mr. Bethell's return to Seoul will be rendered impossible by this incident. The correspondents of the Nichi Nichi Shimbun and the Nippon both telegraph in the same sense, and we refer to the matter because it seems to be true that the arrest of the editor at all events has taken place. But we need hardly say that we attach no credit to the story so far as Mr. Bethell is concerned, and the public will doubtless adopt an equally reserved attitude pending fuller investigation.

Saturday, July 18.

News comes from southern Chollado that a collision has taken place between six Japanese soldiers and fifty Korean insurgents who were attempting to make their escape. The insurgents were all killed or captured and 27 stand of rifles were taken from them. It is difficult to credit these numbers. South Hamyongdo also reports that in a fight with the insurgents 29 of the latter were killed and 20 stand of arms taken. It is evident that at the present rate of procedure the insurgents must soon be either exterminated or subdued. Apart from the above numbers, which, as they are not official, can not be entirely relied on, it is on record that between the 26th of June and the 13th of July 100 encounters took place between the insurgents and the Japanese troops, with the result that 542 of the former were killed and 218 taken prisoners.

It appears that the new system of laws in Korea does not include the distinct compilation of a civil code and a code of civil procedure as is the case in Japan. The two are combined in one body of law which has just been promulgated.

With regard to the Loan Redemption fund we take the following from the Seoul Press :—

On the 12th inst. Mr. Yang Kitaik, editor of the Tai Han Mai Il Shunpo, was detained by the police for examination in connection with the disposal of the funds of the Loan Redemption Association. It will be remembered that early last year a movement was started among the Koreans for raising by public subscription a fund for paying back Korea's national debts to Japan under the mistaken notion that, if only those debts were redeemed, the country would be able to get rid of the Japanese protectorate. It is believed that about 240,000 yen have thus far been collected, and about one-fourth of that sum passed through the office of the Korea Daily News and its Korean editions. Rumours of irregularities concerning the disposal of the funds have for some time been circulated with increasing insistency, and some of the subscribers have lately petitioned the authorities to investigate the matter. The result was the calling of the above mentioned publicist to the Police Office on Sunday. After a general examination, he was detained for further and more detailed examination. We are not yet in possession of later information, but an impression prevails that the present police investigation will lead to a disclosure of scandalous irregularities in Seoul and in the provinces in connection with the fund in question.

In this context we may mention that Mr. Bethell has returned to Seoul, which fact completely disposes of the rumour that his connexion with the above affair would preclude him from revisiting Korea.

Sunday, July 19.

A small additional force of gendarmes is said to have been sent to Chientao for the better preservation of order.

The Korean Government has issued an order prohibiting the export of rice from the province of Hamyongdo. As it is from this district that Chientao derives its stores of grain Colonel Saito is said to have forwarded a protest to Seoul.

It will be remembered that an eruption of insurgents and bandits into Korea from the trans-Tumen district was recently reported. Further particulars are now to hand. The raiders are said to number 600 or 700 and to include in their ranks several Cossacks. A telegram from Chyongjin says that the Japanese force in that district has assumed the offensive, surrounded the bandits and killed 22 of their number.

It appears that the telegrams about encounters between Japanese troops and insurgents and especially about the latter's losses since the closing part of last month have been greatly exaggerated. As there is much hysterical talk about secrecy in this matter, we publish the detailed record which appears in the columns of the Seoul Press :—

On the 25th ult. a detachment from Keum-syong, Kang-won-do, killed a leader of the insurgents and captured one fire-arm.

On the 27th ult. a detachment of the Eleventh Company of the Fiftieth Regiment of Infantry, while reconnoitring Woon-kio district, killed an insurgent at Pan-myong-chitong four miles north-east of Pan-myong-sa.

A detachment sent out from Kyong-song, Hamgyong-do, to the western part of Kilju killed four insurgents and took five fire-arms up to the 15th inst.

A detachment under the command of Lieutenant Minoshima killed a leader of the insurgents named Kim Chai-sang and seized two fire-arms.

On the 1st inst. a detachment consisting of a Sergeant-major and five soldiers, despatched from In-chei, Kang-kyong-do captured four insurgents and their fire-arms, in the vicinity of Won-tang-li about five miles south-east of Sa-pyong-li.

On the same day a body of eleven men belonging to the same detachment killed five insurgents in an encounter with about fifty, twenty eight miles south of In-chei, in the vicinity of Cho-chyak-dong, Kang-won-do.

On the 2nd inst. five men led by a sergeant belonging to a detachment from Chang-ho-woh captured two insurgents.

On the 25th ult. a detachment from Keum-syong, Kang-won-do, led by a lieutenant shot and killed a leader of the insurgents at Oo-li in the same district.

On the 28th ult. the same detachment killed three insurgents in an encounter with eight at Chol-mi.

A body of four men sent out from Chin-ju, South Kyong-sang-do, captured an insurgent at Chong-yong-ton, on the 4th inst.

On the 28th ult. nineteen soldiers including a non-commissioned officer despatched from Tan-yang killed five insurgents in the vicinity of Tai-pyong.

On the 4th inst. two soldiers attached to the garrison of Kan-tong, South Kyong-sang-do, were wounded, being shot at by fourteen or fifteen insurgents who were hiding in the thick woods south of Rong-kook. The insurgents were dispersed by the rest of the garrison.

On the 5th inst. a sergeant-major and five soldiers sent out from Yung-chon, North Kyong-sang captured an insurgent at South On-chon and four soldiers sent out from the same district captured an insurgent at Sin-ki on the night of the 6th inst. and also captured three at Ka-nam-tong.

On the 9th inst. six soldiers under the command of a sergeant despatched from the garrison of Tam-yang, Chon-la-do, attacked fifty insurgents at Chanchan-tong, killing twenty of them and seizing five fire-arms and other miscellaneous article.

On the 3rd inst. a body consisting of thirteen policemen under the command of a police-sergeant killed two insurgents in an encounter with a band of over twenty.

On the 5th inst. a detachment of ten soldiers including a sergeant-major killed four insurgents about two miles south of Ku-hang-chang in the same district.

On the 17th ult. the gendarmes despatched from Sam-su, South Hamkyong-do, seized one firearm, 26 bullets and a quantity of gun-powder in a village, about 10 miles north of Samsu as the result of a domiciliary search.

On the 7th inst. the gendarmes and policemen of the garrison in Pyongyang captured two insurgents in Whachon district after some hours' search for them.

From the 5th to the 8th inst. the gendarmes and auxiliary gendarmes of the detachment at Chang-howon, Kyonki-do, killed two insurgents in a fight in Lioju district.

The police in Haiju, Whanghai-do, captured on the 12th inst. 5 insurgents and seized two fire-arms. On the 3th inst. the police at Kopu, North Choulado, captured four insurgents at Changsu.

On the 5th and 6th inst. Japanese and native policemen at Kanglyunh, Kanwon-do, captured two insurgents in the district.

The police at Sinkai, Whanghai-do, in co-operation with the garrison of the same district captured seventeen insurgents and wounded three on the 8th inst.

On the 11th inst. the Tenth Company of the Fiftieth Regiment of Infantry killed fifteen insurgents on the height twelve miles from Tai-heung-li, wounding many others and gaining possession of some materials of war.

On the 27th ult. a detachment led by a sergeant-major, despatched from Tok-chon, Pyong-an-do, killed three insurgents four miles and a half south-west of the district.

Prince Ito was interviewed when passing through Moji but the only interesting statement elicited from him was that Japanese farmers settling in Korea should endeavour as far as possible to employ Korean labour so as to avert the idea that there is any desire to supplant the natives with aliens.

Monday, July 20.

It appears that the Seoul Government is perplexed to find funds for the assistant gendarmerie which is now in process of organisation. The amount required is 703,000 yen, and apparently the only exit from the dilemma is that the Japanese Treasury should advance the money. Tokyo papers say that this will bring to 5,960,000 yen the amount to be lent to Korea by Japan during the current fiscal year.

It is stated that the expenditures of the Ginseng Enterprise under the new system will be 206,669 yen and the income 266,095 yen. So much has been heard about this vegetable during recent years that such figures sound quite paltry.

The Asahi Shimbun quotes a Mr. Kasai as contending that traffic needs could not be satisfied by the laying of a light temporary railway between Chyongjin and Hoiryong. We alluded to this matter in a recent issue, and explained that an application for permission to build this temporary line had been made by Mr. Amenomiya and others, but that official permission was considered likely to be withheld in view of the pending formation of the Colonization Company. Mr. Kasai now says that the laying of a temporary line over the distance, which is 52 miles, would cost 2½ million yen, whereas a permanent route might be constructed for 5 millions, and he is strongly in favour of the latter course. He considers that efficient means of communication are just as essential as diplomacy for the solution of the Chientao question.

The Seoul Press supplements its previous list of encounters between the Japanese and the insurgents by seven entries. The incidents related are not in themselves of great importance but one or two of them invite attention. Thus we read that on the 9th inst. three gendarmes encountered some 40 insurgents and killed 14 of them, seizing at the same time 10 rifles and other war material. Again on the 13th inst. three gendarmes had a fight with about 30 insurgents, of whom they killed three, and on the same day three gendarmes at another place engaged 60 insurgents and killed 11 of them. These incidents, supposing the numbers to be correctly stated, are certainly very remarkable. The insurgents must be singularly helpless individuals.

Thursday, July 23.

Our readers may perhaps recall a somewhat unintelligible telegram recently published in these columns to the effect that the export of grain from Hamyongdo, the most northerly province of Korea, had been vetoed, and that the inhabitants of Chientao were consequently embarrassed. The perplexing feature of this news was that Hamyongdo draws its supplies of grain from Chientao not Chientao from Hamyongdo. The latest intelligence solves the problem, for it shows that the veto was imposed by the Kilin Government on exports from Chientao and that the Hamyongdo inhabitants are the folks injuriously affected. Urgent representations have been made to the Governor of Kilin on the subject and, according to present appearances, there will be no serious difficulty in obtaining a modification of the veto.

We read in the Nichi Nichi Shinbun that a communication has been received from the Chinese Government with regard to the Chientao question. The communication is a reply to a document submitted by Colonel Saito on the occasion of his recent visit to Peking. It is said that the Japanese Government is awaiting a conference with Prince Ito before drafting an answer, which will ultimately be entrusted to Mr. Ijuin when he goes to Peking to take charge of the Japanese Legation.

In Korea also there have been heavy inundations. All the railway communications have been interrupted, especially the line from Seoul to Wiju, and several days must elapse before traffic is resumed. The Han River has overflowed its banks, and many houses are said to be submerged up to the roof. Of course the loss of property is very heavy. On the whole Japan may count herself fortunate, for although the prospects of her rice crop are somewhat impaired by the inclement weather, she has hitherto escaped inundations such as those which are afflicting both of her neighbours.

It is stated that the estimate of expenditures for next fiscal year submitted by the Residency General is 1,200,000 yen, in round numbers, independently of any outlays on account of the Department of Communications.

It is confidently alleged that Prince Ito is to be appointed President of the Privy Council in succession to Prince Yamagata, but that he will still retain the office of Resident General in Korea. This arrangement, which is said to have been suggested by Prince Yamagata himself, is attributed primarily to the Emperor's desire to relieve Prince Ito of a part of his arduous duties. It appears to be thought that as Korea has now been placed fairly in the path of progress an occasional visit from Prince Ito will suffice, and thus not only will his Highness be enabled to spend the winter and the summer in Japan, but also he will be at hand to consult about matters of domestic politics.

An explosion occurred at 7 a.m. on July 19th in the Omine Coal Mine in Yamaguchi prefecture belonging to the Navy. Four men were injured,

THE CABINET.

Friday, July 17.

There continue to be innumerable conjectures about the financial policy of the new Ministry. It is pointed out by the Mainichi Dempo that if, on the one hand, the general revenue of the State is to be reduced by diverting the railway earnings to a special railway account, and if, on the other, the policy of refraining from any fresh loans is to be pursued at the expense of the development of productive enterprises, it will be practically impossible to appropriate any large sum for the annual redemption of the national debts. As a matter of fact the Government's annual budgets are always more or less misleading, for in no case have the figures set down in them really represented the outlays made. In every instance there have been adjustments and postponements, and this element of uncertainty has helped to inspire doubts as to the trustworthiness of the whole Budget. While deprecating such looseness the Mainichi Dempo arrives at the conclusion that unless the Katsura Cabinet materially alters the six-year programme which formed the basis of last year's Budget there will be no possibility of accomplishing any substantial financial improvement.

At all events speculators on 'Change evidently place some faith in the Cabinet's programme, for public loan bonds appreciated considerably on Thursday's market.

According to the Jiji Shimpō—speaking, however, not on its own direct responsibility—the problem facing the Government is this: The sum to be raised next year for railway purposes under the Railway Law is 30 million yen; the sum to be raised on account of extraordinary war outlays is 15 millions, and the sum to be raised on account of telegraphs and telephones is 3¼ millions. The first-named amount may be dispensed with, as the railways are to be placed in a special account, but the second and third items will have to be provided for out of general revenue, and the same is true of the loss of income due to transferring the railway finances to a special account. This last amount may be set down as six millions, and thus the result is reached that 24 millions in round numbers will have to be specially provided out of the ordinary revenue in order to obtain a balance between incomings and outgoings on the basis of the present Budgetary programme. It will sufficiently tax the Government's ingenuity to accomplish this alone. Where then can money be found for adding 30 or 40 million yen annually to the National Debts Amortization Fund? The only visible plan is to cut down the establishment of the Army and the Navy, and it is very problematical whether anything in that line can be attempted. Nevertheless that Marquis Katsura will do something the Jiji does not doubt, but it is inclined to think that the something will be of a cheese-paring nature rather than a heroic measure.

Mr. Haseba Junko, one of the most eminent Seiyū-kai leaders, is quoted by the Mainichi Dempo as saying in effect that if the Cabinet refrains from challenging the Seiyū-kai there need be no combat. Differences of opinion will inevitably develop themselves in the course of time, but for the present the Seiyū-kai has its own fixed policy, and within the latter's limits it will not oppose the Katsura Cabinet. That the Party will lose some of its members when the next session of the Diet opens, may be taken for granted. But it is quite prepared for that result and will not be in the least disturbed by it.

As for the Progressists, the course of events seems to justify our analysis that they are not in reality desirous of joining hands with the new Cabinet. One of their managers, Mr. Kinoshita, who was supposed to constitute a link between the Party and Baron Goto, is quoted by the Nippon and the Asahi Shinbun as speaking in a very pessimistic strain about the Cabinet's prospects and as describing the Ministry altogether in terms which suggest a potential enemy rather than a probable ally.

Saturday, July 18.

Mr. Wakatsuki, hitherto financial agent in London, has been appointed Vice-Minister of Finance, and his place in London will be filled by Mr. Mizumachi who recently resigned from the Finance Department. As for the Japanese Embassy in London, the present expectation is that it will be given to Mr. Katsunosuke Inouye. Mr. Oshikawa, hitherto Governor of Kumamoto Prefecture, has been appointed Vice-Minister of Agriculture and Commerce vice Mr. Kume who resigns.

There is a prospect of another political party being formed under the leadership of Messrs. Nakamura, Sengoku and Nakano. It will consist mainly of the Independent members of the Lower House and of the representatives of business circles. According to present estimates, the Party will muster from 60 to 70 strong, but the leaders are not yet very confident as to the possibility of bringing their followers into line with regard to great questions. They do not proclaim any high sounding policy, their platform being merely financial adjustment, foreign affairs and industrial and commercial development.

Some of the Seiyū-kai leaders are quoted by the Tokyo press as expressing belief in the recently rumoured theory that a section of the Progressists will enroll themselves under the banner of Baron Goto and thus be found voting with the Daido Club in support of the Cabinet. One way or another the Ministry will find itself supported by a numerous though somewhat heterogeneous collection of politicians.

The Seiyū kai held a social gathering on the 17th inst. by way of an in-memoriam-celebration on laying down the reins of power. They listened to a complimentary speech from Mr. Matsuda, and, for the rest they seem to have had quite a good time.

Tuesday, July 21.

Speaking of Japan's foreign policy, the Asahi Shinbun has a vague but not uninteresting paragraph. It says that one of the great faults chargeable against the Saionji Ministry is want of basic principles in dealing with foreign affairs. In the first place, although the country has obtained such invaluable instruments as the Alliance with England and the Ententes with France and Russia, no efficient steps have been taken to utilize these instruments. Nor does there exist, in the second place, any fundamental guiding principle in the Empire's relations with China. Each question is treated on its own merits and without reference to the broader issue of the two countries' intercourse. This state of affairs frequently evoked disapproval from Marquis Katsura during the existence of the Saionji Ministry, and his Excellency intends to remedy it. That is very interesting, but such a nebulous statement merely excites curiosity without appealing to intelligence.

PRINCE ITO.

Prince Ito arrived at Shimonoseki on the 17th inst. and was of course interviewed by representatives of the leading newspapers. His Highness is said to have expressed doubts as to the possibility of effecting any considerable reductions in the outlays on account of the Army and Navy. He said that doubtless all the details of these expenditures had been fully discussed by experts with a view to exercising the utmost economy. It was scarcely to be hoped therefore that less than 200 million yen would suffice for the two services every year. The life of a ship and of war material in general, like the life of a man, is of limited duration, and the work of making good the ravages of time is perpetual. Referring to the Seiyun-kai's future, the Prince declined to express any opinion. He declared that his original purpose in organising the party had nothing whatever to do with personal ambition. His sole purpose had been to achieve the ideal of representative government. From the moment when a country is endowed with a constitution, the influence of political parties becomes inevitable. Circumstances may temporarily alter cases, but the general principle holds always good, namely, that it is better to govern with the support of the majority than with the approval of the minority. Among all countries none has succeeded in carrying party government to a point of such perfection as England. But England has a special history and it is not easy for other countries to follow her example. Nevertheless Japan is progressing steadily, and as her experience matures, she will doubtless attain her object. Speaking of the expenses of the Residency-General, the Prince said that exaggerated statements had been published. The fact was that the total outlay did not exceed 1½ millions annually, out of which sum the expenditures of all the local Residencies had to be defrayed. It might be possible to make a small reduction in the establishment, but such an economy would be at the cost of efficiency. The maintenance of a force of 2,000 gendarmes was an inevitable measure for the purpose of checking brigandage. Finally, referring to the question of the office of Resident General, the Prince said that he could not consult his own inclinations alone.

Prince Ito, addressing newspaper reporters at Maiko, declared that Japan is engaged in solving the Korea problem under the close observation of the world. Upon her success or failure depends largely her international reputation. Whatever changes may take place in the personnel of the Resident General there will be no change of policy. Japan will make justice and equality the dominant ideas in her treatment of the Koreans, and will labour steadily to lead them into the paths of progress. The fate of Korea may be said to be in the hands of the Koreans themselves. If they give way to anti-Japanese feeling and attempt to run violently counter to the programme of reform and enlightenment prepared for them, they will certainly compel Japan to change her policy. Korea can not be suffered to be a scene of perpetual insurrection and disorder, and unless the Koreans awake to that fact, they will have to thank themselves for what ensues. On the other hand, it is much to be regretted that certain Japanese newspapers, ignorant of the real state of affairs in Korea, write in a manner calculated to throw doubts on the question whether the Resident General's policy is really the policy of the Japanese nation. Ill informed Koreans are naturally led to infer from these writings that the benevolent demeanour of the Residency General is not sincere, and thus a serious obstacle is placed in the way of inducing the Koreans to co-operate in the only course calculated to inure to their permanent advantage. This Korean problem, if it is to be solved satisfactorily, demands the hearty and joint efforts of the Japanese Government and the whole Japanese nation; the co-operation in short of the four estates, among which the press has an important place, Prince Ito earnestly bespoke the assistance of the newspapers in this matter.

Referring to foreign opinions, the Prince said that Europeans or Americans visiting Seoul view things with divers spectacles. The result is that their appreciations differ considerably. His Highness thought that amongst these commentators Professor Ladd had taken an eminently fair stand in his recently published book, and His Highness declared that so far as he himself and other Japanese officials in Korea are concerned, they are always ready to welcome fair criticisms and they seek neither favour nor affection.

Referring to the insurgents, Prince Ito said that they consist of two classes, namely, first the Wi-pyong, who, mistaking the object of Japan's policy, are genuinely though erringly anxious on behalf of their country; and, secondly, bandits and evil characters whom the Wi-pyong use as allies more or less under the pressure of necessity. But these insurgents, being broken up into a number of petty factions, it becomes necessary to divide the Japanese force into a correspondingly numerous congeries or small detachments, and as that is a most uneconomical way of utilizing troops, it has been determined to form a body of 4,000 auxiliary gendarmes recruited from the Korean people. More than 8,000 applications have already been received from men desiring to be enrolled in this force, and its organisation is thus a matter of no special difficulty. On the other hand it is plain that any mistake in the treatment of the force might convert it into the headquarters of the insurrection, and that danger has to be kept carefully in view. For the rest, it is believed that this auxiliary gendarmerie, the upkeep of which will demand an outlay of 2 million yen annually from the Korean Government, will, when co-operating with the 2000 Japanese gendarmes, prove sufficient to maintain order throughout the Peninsula.

It may here be mentioned that the Hochi Shinbun quotes a member of the Headquarters Staff in Korea as saying that the political elements of the insurrection have now been virtually disposed of, and that by the end of August it will be possible to recall the troops from their various excursions into the interior.

MANCHURIA.

Saturday, July 18.

The discussion of the detailed regulations for linking up the South Manchuria and the East China Railways are said to be progressing favourably in Harbin, but it is evident that the question proves somewhat complicated, for the present expectation is that three or four months longer will be required to complete the arrangement. It is said that both sides are animated by a desire to avert as far as possible all competition between the Vladivostok and Tairen routes. We read in the Asahi Shinbun that the reason of this delay of the negotiations at Harbin is not that any difficulties have been raised by either side, but that the Russian Government is anxious to extend the agreement so that it shall embrace the whole railway service of the two countries. In other words, the junction effected at Harbin shall be a junction not merely of the South Manchuria and the East China Railways, but of the former with the whole system of Russian lines; while, at the same time, the junction between the maritime service from Vladivostok and the Japanese Railway at Tsuruga shall be similarly a junction between the Vladivostok route and the whole of the lines in Japan. This programme was set on foot during Baron Goto's recent visit to St. Petersburg, and a conference is to be held in the autumn to arrange details. It is evident that Baron Goto's tenure of the portfolio of Communications will greatly facilitate these arrangements. Meanwhile the negotiation at Harbin, being merely a branch of the subject, is more or less held up pending the final discussion of the larger question.

Wednesday, July 22.

A voice of protest has been raised on the British side against the procedure of the Syndicate which is labouring to secure the construction of the Hsinmintun Fakumen Railway. The speaker is described as an English engineer on the staff of the Peking-Shanhaikwan line. He says that the Chinese Government have not shown any gratitude whatever to Japan for restoring to their possession the Hsinmintun-Mukden Railway, but, on the contrary, they have engaged in a competition injurious to the interests of the South Manchuria road. If a line was to be built from Hsinmintun to Fakumen, the work could have been done by the engineers of the Peking-Shanhaikwan road and by means of the latter's funds without any recourse to a foreign syndicate. The natural course then would have been to consult Mr. Kinder, Chief Engineer of the Government Railways. But Governor Tang Shaoi, offended at some action taken by Mr. Kinder, went behind the latter's back and had recourse to the British and Chinese Corporation. The latter in its own interests has been creating a commotion of almost international dimensions, but the Japanese Government is perfectly justified in resolutely opposing such an injuriously competitive enterprise as the Hsinmintun-Fakumen Railway would be, and it is absurd to suppose that such a paltry incident can be used to shake the Alliance between England and Japan.

It is stated that on the Japanese side all preparations have been completed for at once commencing the negotiations in connexion with the building of the Changchun-Kilin Railway, but on the Chinese side there is not equal readiness. The Chinese engineers have drawn up an estimate showing that the line can be built for 4 million yen whereas the Japanese figure is 5 millions.

Thursday, July 23.

Regulations relating to the control of foreign settlements have been issued by the Viceroy of Mukden. They are said to be very conservative, and it is predicted that many objections will certainly be made by the foreign Consulates.

The Asahi Shinbun has an article confirming the reports recently circulated about the artificial character of the agitation recently fomented in the interests of the Hsinmintun-Fakumen Railway. It appears to be thought that even the telegrams from London, quoting the alleged views of certain newspapers, were more or less faked, the names of some of the tabulated newspapers being unknown. It is difficult to credit the idea that the supporters of the project would descend to such a clumsy subterfuge, but it may justly be said that they have worked their project for something more than it is worth, and the volume of British public opinion for which they have undertaken to act as spokesmen is probably of much smaller dimensions than they would have us believe.

FINANCE.

On sitting down calmly to consider the possibility of retrenchment in unproductive expenditures Japanese publicists are beginning to realize that the matter is more difficult than the roughly judging man in the street originally supposed. Thus the Jiu Shimpō quotes an anonymous official in the following sense:—The total annual outlays of the State are 600 million yen, and out of this amount 200 millions are spent upon the Army and Navy. The Army alone absorbs 110 millions, and out of such an amount it seems not unreasonable to expect that large deductions should be possible. But in the first place the Army now consists of 19 divisions and of seven special brigades, so that the total establishment amounts in effect to 22½ divisions. Out of the appropriations on account of this large force it was decided by the Saionji Cabinet that postponements amounting to 60 million yen should be made, in the 6 year military programme, during the course of the next three years. To give an idea of the nature of these postponements, it may be mentioned that out of the expenditures on account of arms and ammunition, namely 6¼ million yen, which, according to the original programme, should have been incurred during the year 1909, no less than 5¼ millions have been postponed; and similarly out of the 16¼ millions allotted for restorations under the original programme, nearly 9½ millions have been postponed. Larger retrenchments than these are scarcely possible. In the case of the Navy, again, 5 millions of expenditures have been postponed in the current fiscal year out of 25 millions originally allotted, and 10 millions will be postponed out of next year's expenditures of 25 millions. On the other hand, the results of all these economies are not to be interpreted as signifying that a corresponding sum will remain over in the Treasury, and become applicable to the redemption of the national debt. The fact is that the immediate object of these retrenchments is to enable the Government to dispense with the issue of loans which were to have been floated partly for productive and partly for unproductive purposes. It is of course advantageous that unproductive expenditures should be curtailed and that the funds thus saved should be applied to productive enterprises, but the point under immediate consideration is that these retrenchments, though they prevent any further inflation of the national debt, do not directly assist to reduce it. Turning again to another side of the account, we are confronted by the facts that, during the year 1910, the repayment of the second installment of the War Loan, namely 100 million yen, has to be effected, and, during the year 1911, the repayment of a third installment, namely 80 million yen, will fall due. Of course it may be possible to rewrite, or to refloat a considerable part of these funds, but that being a doubtful outlook, the safest plan is to assume that the Treasury must make arrangements for providing 180 million yen in the above 2 years, and probably also must be prepared to find that one half of the total is in foreign hands. Then we come to the purchase price of the nationalized railways. The bonds issued on that account must be handed over at latest in 1910 and 1911. These bonds amount to 500 million yen, and it is estimated that 20 per cent. will be immediately placed upon the market, one half of which amount the Government should be prepared to purchase if a severe depreciation of these securities is to be prevented. Thus it finally results that the Treasury must provide a total of 230 million yen for use in the years 1910 and 1911. Now out of the 110 million yen set aside at present annually for payment of interest and principal of the national debt, the yearly sum available for amortization is 37 millions. But this latter sum was employed in the current year to pay off the first installment of the War Loan. Hence from this source the total available in the years 1910 and 1911 will only be 75 millions, so that in fine an additional sum of from 150 to 160 millions has to be got ready during 1910 and 1911. This is the particular feature of the financial situation which is creating uneasiness at present. Twenty or thirty millions may be obtainable by further postponements of unproductive expenditures, but there would still remain from 130 or 140 millions which are not in sight along any route hitherto indicated.

THE LATEST SEOUL CANARD.

A correspondent sends to the Japan Chronicle a strange story, which we find reproduced by the Japan Herald. It relates to the arrest and detention of the assistant Editor of the Dai Han Mai Il Shimpō on a charge connected with the money subscribed by patriotic Koreans last year for the purpose of reducing the national debt. The correspondent says:—

"I speak with authority when I state that the charge brought against Mr. Yang is absolutely without foundation. The belief of all white men here is that he has been arrested because he was the principal witness for the defence at the trial of Mr. Bethell. However, the affair is now in the hands of the diplomats in London, Tokyo, and Seoul.

It is not clear what is implied in the assertion, "I speak with authority." Are we to understand that the correspondent himself has complete and certain knowledge as to the present disposition of the collected monies? Nothing less would apparently warrant his confident allegation. Very likely Mr. Yang is innocent. We trust that he is. But there is need of some proof more convincing than the mere ipse dixit of an anonymous correspondent. And what we altogether decline to credit is the assertion, "all white men in Seoul believe that Mr. Yang has been arrested because he was the principal witness for the defence at the trial of Mr. Bethell." We are persuaded that the white men in Seoul have too much discrimination to credit such a theory, and that they have at least sufficient courtesy to refrain from publicly insulting the Japanese Authorities. No greater insult could be offered to the officials of a civilized Government than to assert that they deliberately trumped up a false charge against an innocent man, and that they abused the power of the police to effect his arrest, their motive being a vindictive desire to be avenged on him for giving unwelcome but wholly legitimate evidence in a court of law. If such a crime were laid at the door of any Occidental officials by a Japanese newspaper correspondent, it is not difficult to conceive what an indignant clamour would be raised. But it would seem that nothing is too bad for some foreigners to say where Japanese are concerned, and that nothing is too slanderous for the Japan Chronicle to print provided that the Japanese be the objects of the slander.

There is another phase of this incident. When the Bethell trial was concluded, and when the time for the delivery of judgment had been fixed, we published some editorial comments which could not possibly have reached Seoul until the second day after the delivery of judgment, and therefore could not possibly fall into the category of sub-judice criticisms. Yet the Japan Chronicle charged us with violating all the canons of respectable journalism. What, then, is to be said about the action of the Japan Chronicle itself in this last instance? A man has been apprehended and is actually undergoing examination on a very grave charge when the Japan Chronicle published an anonymous letter, not merely proclaiming his innocence, but also ascribing his arrest and arraignment to criminal malice on the part of the authorities. It would be difficult to conceive any more flagrant departure from elementary journalistic morality, and in the immediate sequel of a hot display of righteous but miscalculating indignation against a contemporary for a falsely alleged cognate crime, the Kobe journal's open descent to Avernus is so precipitous and so signal as to be very comical.

THE KOREAN DELEGATE.

Mr. Kim Yunsik, President of the Privy Council in Seoul, who has just arrived in Japan with Prince Ito, is quoted by Tokyo papers as saying that the object of his visit is to observe the progress of the Prince Imperial's studies and at the same time to make himself acquainted with Japan's condition and development. He expresses himself in very courteous and complimentary terms about this country and its doings in Korea, but he disavows all intention of flattering, and he justifies this claim to candour by speaking very frankly about the insurrection. He has little hope that it will be speedily quelled. Its main causes, according to his view, were the sudden disbanding of the Korean Army and the abdication of the Emperor. Many of the disbanded soldiers retained possession of their arms when they fled from Seoul, and they thus formed the nucleus for a dangerous body of malcontents. It is evident that Mr. Kim's impression as to this subject is entertained by the Japanese also in Seoul, for the Seoul Press, when publishing recently a list of reverses suffered by the insurgents, added that the speedy quelling of the outbreak could not yet be hoped for. Mr. Kim is further quoted as saying that while it would be distinctly advantageous for the Korean Sovereign to visit Japan so as to be able to see at first hand evidences of material progress and modern civilization, there was as yet no possibility of saying definitely when the visit would be made. As for the ex-Emperor, he is now living entirely retired from the world, and he takes no part whatever in administrative affairs so that little would be gained by his visiting Japan. It appears from Mr. Kim's statements that the Emperor has been suffering from severe indigestion caused by the state of his teeth, and he is now under the care of Dr. Koike. The ex-Emperor also is laid up with a swelling on his foot.

A train was derailed at 7.20 p.m. on July 17th at Saka near Kure. Negligence on the part of a pointsman was the cause.

YANGTSE PORTS.

The Acting Commissioner of Customs at Chungking, Mr. C. E. Tenant, accounting for a marked decline in the volume of trade at that port during 1907, says, among other things, that Chinese merchants have developed a preference for importing native cotton yarn and raw cotton in likin junks, which gives them the privilege of selling cargo en route. In the items of grey shirtings and sheetings, he refers to the increased production and economical price of hand-made native cloth as one reason for the reduced imports. That is what Japanese spinners have been saying for some time. They declare that instead of competing with one another, the foreign importers should combine against their common foe, the native producer. With regard to tobacco, he says that cigars are turned out by a factory at Chengtu under Japanese supervision, and that cigarettes of Russian type are made in a factory using Japanese machinery.

Mr. Thurlow Lay, Commissioner of Customs at Ichang, like his colleague at Chungking, describes how the appreciation of silver in the early part of 1907 injuriously affected the export trade in the Yangtze Valley. What is one man's meat is another man's poison. The depreciation of silver has had an equally bad effect on Japan's export trade to China.

Mr. Lay has also the following interesting facts to relate:—"In the time of Kublai Khan (13th century) persons skilled in agriculture were appointed to instruct the people and to report periodically the results achieved. The same idea is now being carried out by the Shang-hui (Japanese sho-kai), or chamber of Commerce, which, in Szechwan as in Hupoh, sends out inspectors from time to time to visit country districts and give advice to farmers and others. This body has been working for the past three or four years with good effect. The quality of such products as silk, coir and varnish has much improved, and the production is increasing year by year. Imports of one commodity—silk piece-good—are decreasing owing to the introduction of modern machinery and to the instruction imparted to the natives. A very creditable magazine is published in Chungking by-monthly or tri-monthly, giving the latest market prices of various articles and dealing also with machinery and the latest inventions."

Concerning the methods sometimes resorted to in China in order to obtain funds for the building of railways, the following, from Mr. Lay's report, is illuminating:—

10. MISCELLANEOUS.—The projected railway from Hankow to Wansien has not made much progress. Two Chinese engineers, who were educated in America, have surveyed the line, but a further survey will have to be made before a definite start is made. The line from Hankow to Ichang is to be constructed by the Hupoh authorities, whilst that between Ichang and Wansien is to be taken in hand by the Szechwan merchants, but is to be redeemed in 25 years by Hupoh. It is in contemplation to run the road from Wansien to Chungking and thence to Chengtu (the capital city of Szechwan). The best plan would be to carry the line from Wansien direct to Chengtu and, when funds admit of it, make a branch line to Chungking. It will be a great advantage to the Chinese Government if Wansien is opened to trade either at once or when the railway is constructed. Wansien is a most important place, and the opening of it to trade will enable the Government to check the smuggling which now goes on and to impose new taxes on goods bound to Chungking and to other places beyond that port. There are three modes of raising funds for the railway. One plan is to create a tsu ku, that is, to tax rice growers a certain percentage on their crops, giving them shares in proportion to the sum contributed. The second method is by the imposition of a chuan ku on the official class, making each official purchase as many shares as the lucrative nature of the post he occupies warrants. The third method is the kou ku which is taken to mean a tax on wealthy people and rich merchants, according to their means. Magistrates being called on to allot shares to people who have money. It is needless to say that the three taxes mentioned are almost compulsory. It is said that about 6,000,000 taels have been collected during the last three years for the railway.

What kind of impediments the disordered currency of China exercises on the development of trade, may be gathered from Mr. Lay's remark:—

Though, doubtless, many Chinese profit by the (non-existent) tael, still it would surely be an advantage to the majority if a standard currency were introduced. If purchases were made in dollars and duties paid also in such coins, everyone would be placed on the same footing, and foreigners would be able to have direct dealings with Chinese merchants instead of having to employ middlemen to do their work for them. It has been argued that the foreigner fails because he does not know the language of the country. Even if he were a finished scholar, he would still be unable to cope with the native in money matters. Thus far, I have only found Chekiang men who understand finance, and hence in every yamen there is always found a native of Chekiang (usually a Shaoching man) in control of the financial department of the establishment. A good many dollars have been coined in various provinces, but few are taken by shopkeepers at their face value, and they are only good in the province which has minted them. Similarly, copper coins marked 10 cash are not accepted at their face value. A dollar may have on it 7 mace 2 candareens, but a shopkeeper will only allow 7 mace 1 candareen. Surely reform is absolutely necessary here.

Mr. A. Sharpe Deane, Acting Commissioner of Customs at Shashi, refers to the petty nature of the foreign trade at that important commercial centre, and to the insignificant share taken by foreign vessels in the transport business. As to the latter point, he says:—

In the export trade of the port foreign tonnage participated to a very limited extent, and that only with goods to Hankow. Were steamer companies, however, to offer facilities to shippers for the convenient storage of their cargo while awaiting shipment, and were a safer system adopted for the embarkation and disembarkation of passengers, there would in all probability be an increase in the freight and passenger traffic carried on by the down-river steamers.

The passenger traffic on the Yangtze at Changsha grew from 31,000 in 1904 to 268,000 in 1907, but Mr. Oliver G. Ready says that transport business has great capacities, and that "suitable light-draught steamers of good speed and comfortable accommodation would monopolise the traffic and could not fail to earn handsome profits."

THE TOKYO MUNICIPALITY.

The business of electing new members of the City Council in lieu of those who resigned was carried out on the 17th inst. amid some commotion. The franchise-holders of the City of Tokyo are divided into three parties. The first is the Getsuyo-kai, under the leadership of Mr. Yema and inheriting the traditions of Mr. Hoshi Toru. The second is the Koyu-kai, with Mr. Nakajima for leader. The third is the Kaikakuha or Reform Party, which section is greatly in the minority. The election of the new Aldermen had to be made by the City Assembly and the hour for the latter's meeting was fixed for 4 o'clock in the afternoon. But it is the custom in Japan for the various sections of the Assembly to come to some understanding as far as possible between themselves before actually opening the Assembly's meeting, and on this occasion the task of reconciling the various views proved very difficult, owing to the vehemence of the Reform Party who insisted that a radical change should be made in the personnel of the Aldermen. About two hours' discussion was needed before a settlement could be reached. This settlement finally took the form that out of the 12 Aldermen 8 should be new men and 4 should be re-elected, which figures seem at first sight to represent a victory for the reformers, but closer analysis shows that 8 out of the 12 belonged to the first named of the above three parties, three to the second party and only 1 to the reformers. Thus there is practically no change, inasmuch as the first two parties were united in their support of the municipalization scheme and are now working together in all civic matters. The Assembly finally opened at 6 o'clock, but although its results had now become a foregone conclusion the proceedings were by no means calm. When the Secretary announced, first, the resignation of the Mayor together with the financial officials, and secondly the resignation of all the Aldermen, adding that the municipalization problem had failed to obtain official sanction, several members showed persistent curiosity as to the cause of these resignations. The Aldermen seemed unwilling to admit that they had been induced to take this step by the failure of the municipalization scheme, and the reformers seemed determined to extort an admission in that sense. Finally Mr. Yema made a very downright speech, in which he declared that the purpose of the Aldermen had been to obtain funds for the Exhibition and for City improvements by raising the electric railway fares and thus averting the necessity for increased taxation. Thereafter the majority practically took charge of the proceedings. The temporary chairman nominated a temporary successor and to the latter was entrusted the duty of nominating the new Aldermen, which he did of course in accordance with the previous arrangement. As for the resignations of the Mayor and the financial officials, these were left to be dealt with subsequently, from which it may be inferred that Mr. Ozaki will be asked to retain his post.

It appears that the re-election of Mr. Ozaki Yukio as Mayor of Tokyo is not so certain as was at first supposed. A formidable competitor has appeared in the person of Baron Senge, formerly Governor of the City, which post he resigned in order to become Minister of Justice in the Saionji Cabinet. There is also talk of Count Yoshikawa entering the arena, but this prospect is not treated very seriously. Mr. Enia's party is supporting Mr. Ozaki and Mr. Morikubo's followers are canvassing in behalf of Baron Senge. The Asahi Shimbun raises its voice in support of Mr. Ozaki, whose reputation for integrity and fair dealing has won for him a wide circle of friends and admirers. The election will not take place until the beginning of August.

The impression that Mr. Ozaki Yukio will be re-elected Mayor of Tokyo seems to be gaining ground. It is said to be thought that the occasion is not suitable for Baron Senge's assumption of this office. Still, so far as can be at present seen, there will be a keen contest between the factions of Mr. Enia and Mr. Morikubo, the former being Mr. Ozaki's supporters and the latter Baron Senge's.

The French steamer Caravellas, from the Pacific Coast, while entering Yokohama, ran on a shoal between the Widow Buoy and the Lightship on Thursday morning at about 4 o'clock but was refloated at high tide shortly after noon, no damage being inflicted on her hull. She entered the harbour in the afternoon. The accident was probably due to the prevalence of dense fog.

THE RAISING OF RAILWAY FREIGHTS IN AMERICA.

The Japan Foreign Trade Association has sent us the following copy of a letter addressed by it to the Chicago and New York Chambers of Commerce and to others in the United States:—

(Copy.)

July 16th, 1908.
DEAR SIR,—I, the representative of Japan Traders' Association, have the honour to confirm having sent you a telegraphic message on 8th inst., which is as follows:

Extraordinary advance in railway rate destroys mutual trade, hope most thoughtful consideration. Japan Traders' Association.

It is reported that under the new ruling of Interstate Commerce Commission, the R. R. Companies in your country are obliged to withdraw the "through rates" and going to publish the "Proportional rates" which will cause so great interruption that it necessitates us to ask your help as well as to express our opinion by telegraphic message.

We understand the proportional rates from Pacific Coast ports will be as follows:

	Less than carloads. per 100 lbs.	Carloads. per 100 lbs.
Antimony.....	1.00	0.75
Bamboo poles & Shades	2.00	1.00
Camphor, Crude.....	1.50	0.75
Cassia, Chillies, etc. ...	1.25	1.00
Fans, (Plum leaf or paper).....	2.50	1.75
Paper lanterns, napkins.....	2.50	1.75
Hand Screen, etc. ...	2.00	1.25
Fern Balls.....	2.00	1.00
Fire Crackers.....	2.00	1.00
Gums, Gum Kowries etc.....	1.50	1.00
Hemp, Flax etc.....	1.50	.90
Hides, Skins & Pelts ...	1.50	.90
Earthen wares & Porcelain.....	2.00	—
Linen goods.....	2.00	—
Matting, Matting Rugs..	1.00	.80
Paper.....	1.50	1.00
Sago and Tapioca.....	1.25	.80
Raw Silk, Silk goods ...	4.50	—
Straw Braid.....	1.75	1.25
Tea.....	1.10	.90

In addition to the above rates, shippers have to pay the ocean freight at the rate of about $ 4.00 per ton of 40 cubic feet.

In comparison to the present "through rate" (that is $ 10.00 per ton of 40 cubic feet,) the total amount of rates of the proposed freight including the ocean freight, say $ 4.00 per 40 cubic feet, will be increased to the following percentages.

INCREASING PERCENTAGES.

Articles.	Less than carload. per cent.	Carload. per cent.
Antimony.....	41.4	16.4
Raw Silk.....	12.2	—
Silk Goods.....	12.2	—
Tea.....	—	4.0
Matting, Matting Rugs.....	3.3	8.0
Straw Braid.....	41.1	13.7
Earthen wares,.....	60.0	—
Bamboo poles.....	123.0	22.3
Camphor, crude.....	91.4	16.4
Fans.....	110.0	59.7
Paper goods.....	121.7	68.1
Paper.....	40.3	9.7
Baskets.....	239.0	—
Beans.....	197.9	84.5
Cocoanut.....	259.4	—
Orange.....	180.0	113.0
Japanese Paper.....	106.6	—
Bronze wares.....	130.4	—
Lacq. Wares.....	140.7	—
Toys.....	108.0	—

The above percentages are most seriously calculated on the practical points of view:—for instance, the total weight of earthen and porcelain wares including packing materials and cases per ton of 40 cubic feet, is supposed to be 600 pounds, and as the proportional rate for these wares is $ 2.00 per 100 pounds, the amount of railway freight will be $12.00 per ton, and adding four Dollars of ocean freight to the above freight of $12.00 we will get the total amount of $ 16.00, that is the increase of 60 per cent.

It is well understood that Railway Companies in America are not intending to make any material changes in the rates on the principal commodities, and it may be reasonable, to make an advance, if necessary, in such ratio as 4 per cent. on tea, 8 per cent. on matting or 12 per cent. on silk, but I think it is rather extraordinary to make such an advance as 41 per cent. on antimony, 60 per cent. on porcelain and earthen wares, 121 per cent. on paper goods, 130 per cent. on bronze wares, 140 per cent. 130 per cent. on lacque wares, or 239 per cent. on baskets, and if this is to be carried out it will give a great damage to the business on these kinds of goods.

In all events, I dare say, the advance of freight causes the similar result to double the distance between us, and when the proposed rates are in the force of execution almost all the Oriental goods will be obliged to be carried via Suez line, and the interest of shipping on the Pacific ocean will be greatly diminished, with the result of disadvantage to our mutual trade.

Kindly take this matter up with your most thoughtful consideration, and your effort to the abolishment or the moderation of the proposed advance of freight shall be highly appreciated by our members as well as by our people.

Hoping that mutual trade will enjoy the vast and glorious development.

Yours most sincerely,

KENZO IKEDA. (Signed)
Vice President of The Japan Foreign Trade Association.

MARRIAGE BY PHOTOGRAPH.

The Asahi Shimbun has an article which throws an interesting light on the question alluded to in our last issue, namely, marriages by photograph between Japanese residing in America and their countrywomen in Japan. It appears that two movements of a self defensive nature have recently been organised by Japanese residents in the United States. The first is a crusade against gambling by the Chinese, a vice which is indulged in on such a scale and which involves such evil results that the presence of Orientals in general becomes objectionable in the eyes of American citizens. Japanese agitation for the suppression of this vice promises to have the result of clearly differentiating them from its practice. The second movement has for its immediate outcome this idea of nuptials by photograph. There are about 100,000 Japanese in the United States, and fully 90 per cent. of them lead single lives. Such a condition was tolerable enough so long as a settler's object consisted merely in earning as fast as possible money enough to return home. But in view of the anti-Oriental spirit now prevailing in the United States, the Japanese residents see that the only practical remedy lies in becoming permanent settlers, and in carrying out that programme a wife is a prime essential. To return to Japan, however, for the purpose of providing himself with a wife means not only that a man would have to incur great expense, but also that it would be more than doubtful whether he could re-enter the States subsequently. Therefore the only feasible alternative is to get a wife over from Japan without going to fetch her. All this appears to have been anticipated very cleverly by the well known Mr. Shimadzu, a prominent Christian. Some time ago, he established in the Koishikawa suburb of Tokyo an institution called the Ryokko-kai, which may be freely translated Self-help Society. The inmates of this Institution, mostly graduates from girls' high schools, receive education in all subjects likely to be of practical utility, such as housekeeping, cooking, sewing, type-writing, etc. In fact they are expressly equipped to be the wives of Japanese settlers in the United States. It is between this Institution and the Japanese settlers that photographs have been exchanged, and by this means the settlers are enabled to obtain help-mates whose qualifications and record are known and whose appearance is rendered familiar by the photographs. The idea is that if the settlers thus marry and bring up families, their sons will become naturalized American citizens, and by degrees the anti-Japanese feeling in the United States will die out. The conception seems eminently practical and useful, nor can we doubt for a moment that the Japanese authorities in Tokyo will refrain from interfering with the programme.

THE NAGASAKI AFFAIR.

There has been a judicial search of the premises of the Nagasaki Russian newspaper, but the police are keeping their counsel and no outsider appears to be acquainted with the cause of the inquisition. Some allege that the staff of the journal are suspected of having made surveys of fortifications, and others speak of a nihilist plot in which dynamite figures. It is all very confused, and beyond the fact that a search has been made and that some arrests have been effected nothing is certain.

We are inclined to infer from telegrams received in Tokyo that the measures adopted by the Japanese police with reference to the Russian newspaper in Nagasaki were taken on insufficient evidence. What seems to have happened is that owing to dissensions amongst the Russians themselves, some of them lodged secret information with the police, alleging that the manufacture of false money and the concealing of dynamite were going on at the office of the paper. The police accepted this testimony and took action on the strength of it, but it does not appear that the search made by them revealed the presence of either bombs or spurious money. The telegrams may be misleading, and it is evident that such an affair would be treated with all possible secrecy, but we are disposed to think that it will prove a storm in a teapot.

FORMOSA.

The advance of the Aiyu lines eastward from Byoritsz and Shinchiku has for object to completely encircle the region occupied by the aborigines in that quarter of the island so as to bring the whole under full control. The movement seems to be progressing successfully, for the telegraph says that the aborigines in the Byoritsz section have already surrendered in large numbers.

Turning to the Gilan region we read that the aborigines of Lower Nanwo have also submitted. They undertake to surrender all the heads in their possession and to hand over all their arms and ammunition provided that they be allowed to continue residing in their former homes. The Gilan expedition has thus thoroughly attained its object.

RAILWAY FREIGHTS IN AMERICA.

According to a telegram under date of July 18th from St. Paul to the Nippon Yusen Kaisha, the conference between the representatives of various railway companies with regard to the proposed rise of freight rates has been progressing. They have agreed to take the revised tariff into force on November 1st this year. The new rates on principal goods imported from Japan are as follows:—

	Present rate.	Revised rate.
Figured matting, per 100 lbs.....	0.80	1.00
Tea per 100 lbs.....	0.90	1.00
Silk piece goods per 100 lbs.....	4.00	4.50

Lieut.-Colonel Prince Kuni, now in Berlin, will leave in September for home. On his way he will visit several places in Europe.

BUSINESS NOTES.

Friday, July 17.

Without directly alluding to the Asahi Shimbun, the Mainichi Dempo evidently has that journal in view when it reminds the public that the programme for harnessing the Oigawa in order to supply electric power to Tokyo has been closely examined by the best foreign and Japanese experts and pronounced eminently promising. In fact there can be very little doubt that access to the Asahi's influential columns was obtained by someone who, under the guise of scientific knowledge, deliberately set himself to injure the reputation of the Anglo-Japanese Water-power Electric Company in the interests of a rival.

The Asahi Shimbun notes that the Nippon Yusen Kaisha, in addition to ceasing to employ chartered vessels, is endeavouring to sell some of its old steamers, for which employment is difficult to find in these days of commercial depression.

The Toyo Kisen Kaisha also is said to be about to return the Kasado Maru (originally the Kazan) to the Naval Department.

The Yorodzu Choho publishes a curious paragraph about the new steamer Tenyo Maru. It says that so far from justifying the panegyrics heaped upon her at the time of her trial trip, the vessel's construction is defective, and on her maiden voyage to San Francisco she developed such a list that several of her first-class passengers left her at Honolulu.

There is a movement on foot which appears to have for object the retransfer of the nationalized railways to private hands. The leaders of the movement are two men of much eminence, namely Messrs. Sengoku and Yamada. They have not yet openly declared themselves in favour of retransfer, but they are bringing pressure to bear on the Government with regard to hastening the time for handing over the bonds which represent the purchase price, and with regard to the adoption of some measure to maintain the price of these securities at a reasonable point. Both proceedings are so difficult of accomplishment that to urge them strongly upon the Government is to create a situation from which the Cabinet may be willing to find a heroic exit.

Saturday June 18.

There is considerable briskness in the silk market. Large sales have been effected within the past few days at slightly enhanced prices. It is, however, thought that there will be a period of rest now pending some accumulation of the new crop.

It is now quite plain that the opponents of the Anglo-Japanese Water-power Electric Company are the interested advocates of the Kinugawa scheme. These latter have enlisted the Yorodzu Choho in their cause, and are declaring through the columns of that journal that no reliance can be placed on the opinions of the English engineers who have surveyed the Oigawa. This contest promises to be quite exciting now that the detractors of the foreign engineers have fairly showed their hand.

The Asahi Shimbun has telegrams from Kobe to the effect that a number of the Chinese tradesmen in that place find themselves unable to tide over the difficulties resulting from the depreciation of silver and the consequent stagnation in the China-Japan commerce. For some months embarrassment has been steadily increasing and it is now on the verge of culmination.

Sunday, July 19.

Mr. Amenomiya is quoted as saying that when he originally proposed a uniform fare for the Tokyo Railway, he never contemplated the continuance of that system whatever extensions might be made of the Company's lines. To apply the uniform fare in such an indiscriminate manner would mean that for every extension made the Company would see its dividends decrease. That is evidently absurd, and equally extravagant is it that a passenger should be entitled to change cars any number of times without paying anything for the privilege. Therefore Mr. Amenomiya suggests that certain places for changing cars should be definitely fixed and one sen additional should be charged for every change. He estimates that this would add 7 or 8 per cent. to the Company's revenue.

It is confidently anticipated that Mr. Ozaki will be re-elected Mayor of Tokyo but that a little time must intervene. The routine is that the City Assembly will meet early next month and, having received his resignation, will transmit it to the Governor of Tokyo who will then order an election to be held for the purpose of filling the vacancy. The present Municipal Council are said to be unanimous in their resolve to elect Mr. Ozaki.

The fourth process of the discount system has produced hitherto applications amounting to only half a million for re-payment of the War Loan. It is thought that when all the applications are collected they will not exceed 3 millions out of the 20 which the Treasury offers to repay. Probably the new Cabinet will hereafter resort to the method of lots.

Monday, July 20.

The Nichi Nichi Shimbun says that from statements made by the newly elected Aldermen of the City it is perfectly plain that the raising of the Tokyo Railway fares is now only a question of time, inasmuch as the Municipality looks to derive a considerable item of revenue from that source. The inhabitants of the City proper are not likely to offer any opposition as the matter will affect them scarcely at all. But the case is very different with the denizens of the suburbs, as Shinagawa, Shinjuku, Shibuya, Koishikawa, Fukagawa etc. These people have hitherto been carried over immense distances for a ridiculously small sum, and they are naturally unwilling to forego that valuable privilege; but, on the other hand, they are precisely the people who enjoy unfair advantages under the uniform-fare system, and we trust that the authorities will not show any undue leniency in the face of whatever agitation may be got up.

It is stated that the Keihin Electric Company has practically succeeded in obtaining from London capitalists a loan of 2 million yen wherewith to build a line from the Aoyama terminus of the Tokyo Railway to Shinagawa. Official permission was obtained some time ago and the only question that remained was that of finance. The loan is to carry 6 per cent. interest and the Company will receive 91 yen per bond. In connexion with this Keihin Electric Railway we read that it intends to double its Omori-Shinagawa line with a view to the probability that the Fisheries Section of the great Exhibition will be established at Haneda.

Tuesday, July 21.

The Shogyo Shimpo says that the Canadian Pacific Railway seems likely to be the saviour of the situation with regard to the menacing problem of increased transport charges by the four United States Railway Companies which perform traffic duties for the eastern coast of America. The Canadian Railway will continue its old scale of charges, and thus goods from Japan will be able to avail themselves of this route for reaching the western sections of the United States. There will of course be some inconvenience and some additional expense, but the project offers a distinctly favourable escape from the dilemma. Meanwhile the four American Companies are not at all disposed to maintain an obdurate front. Their action throughout has been not optional but in compelled obedience to the ruling of the Interstate Commerce Commission. Therefore they are desirous of accommodating their Japanese clients as far as possible.

The above note leaves much to the imagination. The Canadian Pacific Railway can not carry goods beyond Montreal, and is therefore only a partial deus ex machina. From Montreal to their destinations in the United States the goods would be subject to domestic rates. We interpret our Tokyo contemporary to suggest that the C.P.R. is prepared to frank merchandise all the way at existing through rates. That is inconceivable.

One of the most recent complications of the immigration question in the United States is that Japanese residing there are resorting to the device of sending home for wives with whom they contract marriages merely by an exchange of photographs. These women on reaching the States become units of the labouring population, which is strongly objected to by American labourers. The matter is said to have been officially taken up and the Japanese Ambassador in Washington is reported to have advised that women applying for passports to join their alleged husbands in the States should be subjected to close scrutiny. It is difficult to see what such scrutiny could effect. So long as a middle-man and a register are the only instruments required for lawful nuptials in Japan, an intervening ocean presents no insuperable obstacle to the completion of a marriage.

The question of raising the fares on the Tokyo Railway is beginning to enter the field of practical politics, but it seems to be thought that some little time will be needed before a new system can be organised and official consent obtained. We read in one newspaper that some of the principal shareholders have submitted a scheme which meets with the approval of the Directors. It is simple enough, namely, to divide the whole City into three sections, and to levy three sen for carriage in one section, six sen for carriage in two and nine sen for carriage in three. The calculation is that after completing the necessary extensions and improving the service, this system of fares would yield a return of at least 10 per-cent. in the form of dividend.

The Government's project for laying an electric line along the present railway bed from Shimbashi to Ueno is said to have at last matured, but some months must elapse before traffic is opened.

There is much talk of the extreme depression which now prevails in the maritime carrying trade of Japan. The freight of a ton of coal from Moji to Yokohama costs only 60 sen, and such a low rate has not been witnessed since 1878. It is predicted that if the present state of affairs continues much longer, many ships will have to be laid up. We may note en passant that, in spite of this exceedingly cheap rate of freight, consumers of coal in Tokyo have still to pay the very high price of 12 yen a ton.

Wednesday, July 22.

The latest news from the United States with regard to the action of the four railway Companies is that the question of raising the fares on goods carried inland from the Pacific coast is likely to be solved in such a manner as to cause very little inconvenience to Japanese exporters. The figures originally proposed have been greatly modified. Of course the railway Companies have been careful to keep in constant view the rivalry of the Suez route. Goods sent by the latter take a long time to reach America, and there is a corresponding loss of interest on exporters' bills but the gain in cost of transport might very easily constitute sufficient compensation if rates from the Pacific coast were raised to the extent originally contemplated.

This month of July is always a comparatively difficult time for the State financiers, the Treasury's outgoings being larger than its incomings. In ordinary circumstances such a situation is met by the issue of Treasury bills, but it appears that the banks have gladly made large purchases of this class of securities and are prepared to increase their holdings, since they find it safest to invest their deposits and reserves in that way. This means of course that the banks have no funds to lend to the general public, and the Treasury being unwilling to accentuate that state of affairs, will not, it is said, issue any Treasury bills this month, but will obtain temporary accommodation from the Bank of Japan, repaying it out of the large receipts from taxation which will come in next month.

The applications for redemption of War Loan-bonds by the discount process have amounted to only 1,612,250 yen on this fourth occasion, whereas the sum offered for redemption was 20 millions. All official forecasts have been completely falsified in connexion with this affair. The first invitation elicited acceptances to the extent of 12 millions in round figures; the second, 7 millions; the third less than 4 millions; and now the fourth, only a little more than 1½ millions. When the first and second failures were recorded, the Treasury officials attributed the ill success of their scheme to insufficient facilities. But there is now abundant proof that the method of discounts is quite unpopular. It is therefore expected that the payment of the next installment will be made by lot during the month of September.

It is again reported that the silk market is active and that prices show an upward tendency.

The debts of the great Temple Hongwan-ji are once more beginning to occupy public attention. A strong party among the priests advocate radical measures by selling property and discharging the liabilities, but the Lord Abbot and his immediate followers are opposed to this method, and there is once more an apprehension of renewed controversy.

Thursday, July 23.

It is telegraphed that the London Chamber of Commerce has unanimously adopted a resolution for rendering a full measure of practical assistance to the Japanese Exhibition of 1912.

The process of bringing back to Japan the rolling stock which was sent from this country originally for use on the South Manchuria Railway during the War is now going on rapidly. There are altogether 3,800 waggons, 160 passenger cars and 210 locomotives. These represent, according to Mr. Hirai, about 10 per cent of the total rolling stock of the Japanese railways, and such an addition to the latter's transport capacity will necessarily exercise a great effect in improving traffic facilities. A part of the returned rolling stock is to be sent to Taiwan for use on the railways there.

The exact figures are now known with reference to the applications for repayment of the first installment of the War Loan. There have been, as our readers know, four operations up to the present, and they have resulted as follow:—

APPLICATIONS UNDER THE DISCOUNT SYSTEM.

	Yen.
I. ....	12,477,825
II. ....	7,109,050
III. ....	3,825,450
IV. ....	1,907,200
	Rewritten.
	27,216,875
Total.....	52,529,400

This leaves about 45 million yen to be still repaid. The Treasury has not yet given any intimation as to whether the system of discounts will now be abandoned in favour of lots, but the general belief is that this change will be made, and that the first payment by lot will take place about the 15th of September.

It is understood that the Treasury will rewrite the whole of its bills which mature on the 24th inst. The amount is 8,400,000 yen, and the period of repayment will be extended to the 14th of October, the rate of interest being one sen 8 rin daily. This works out at about 7 per cent., whereas the most liberal of the banks are now said to be charging at least 9½ per cent. for accommodation on good security.

There is a plan on foot for extensive harbour improvements at Yokkaichi. This port is a natural door of exit for the ceramic wares produced in its hinterland, but at present owing to the state of the harbour these goods have to be carried by small vessels to Yokohama and Kobe and there transhipped for foreign countries. The neighbouring port of Atsuta has already been materially improved and the people of Yokkaichi are anxious to follow that good example. Mr. Hagiwara, Chief of the commercial Bureau in the Foreign Office, has proceeded to Yokkaichi to make investigations.

Some time ago it was announced that the Imperial Commercial Bank (Teikoku Shogyo Ginko) would settle its affairs by a heroic measure, namely, writing off one fourth of its capital. But it appears that this proposal is encountering some opposition from the principal shareholders. The Bank's operations during the last half year resulted in a loss of 580,000 yen, and it has practically unrecoverable debts to the extent of 1,387,500 yen. There seems to be no manner of doubt that if these losses were boldly written off the capital, the Bank could start on a new career with every prospect of success. But the public is in a pessimistic frame of mind with regard to this particular enterprise. The Bank's shares on which 35 yen have been paid up, are quoted at only 13 yen in the open market, which is an extravagantly low figure. There is as yet no indication of what course will be ultimately adopted. This Bank is understood to be carrying a large quantity of Tokyo Railway shares which were hypothecated to it in the days of the boom.

The affairs of the Oguri Bank have been at last adjusted on the basis of full payment of all claims not exceeding 100 yen, and payment of larger claims by annual installments spread over eight years. The Bank is to re-open its doors on the 25th inst. It will be remembered that this bank was the first to go down in the debacle of last year. We may be permitted to hope that its resignation will mark the beginning of better times.

It is announced by the officials of the Experimental Farm at Nishigahara that the somewhat pessimistic views prevalent as to the prospects of the rice crop are not justified by actual conditions. There has indeed been a lack of sunshine, but the general temperature has not been by any means so low as people suppose and the outlook is good at present. The upland rice is an exceptionally fine crop.

As to the share market, the opinions of the press are not optimistic, but it will probably have occurred to our readers long before this that journalistic forecasts have seldom been verified in this matter. The fact is that if the market record for the past 18 months be examined carefully, it will be found to represent a very jagged curve. There have been successive elevations and depressions following each other in monotonous succession. Of late although the elevations have not reached any considerable height, the intervening depressions have not been so deep as was at one time the case, so that on the whole an improved state of affairs may be inferred. The opinion in well informed circles seems to be that there will be nothing like real activity until the autumn and possibly not until next spring.

BASEBALL.

A very interesting game of baseball was played on Saturday afternoon in fine weather between the "Cricketers" and "Baseballers." The grand stand was well filled with ladies and gentlemen and a fair crowd of Japanese lined the boundaries of the field. The "Cricketers" did very well considering they only had a couple of weeks practice. Their fielding work was exceptionally good, Bousfield bringing off several brilliant catches without gloves. Mollison also played a good game. On the other hand the "Baseballers" played a very poor game only managing to win by the narrow margin of 9 to 5.

The line up was as follows:—

BASEBALLERS.		CRICKETERS.
O'Connor.....	P.	Wheeler, Mollison
Walker .....	C.	Thorn
Becker .....	I. B.	Mollison, Wheeler
Gray.....	2 B.	Bell
Nicholl.....	S. S.	Drummond
Gibbs .....	3 B.	Kilby
Da Costa.....	L. F.	Bousfield
McChesney .....	C. F.	Sharnan
Tomeye .....	R. F.	Squire

SCORE BY INNINGS

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
"Baseballers" ...	0	0	0	2	1	2	2	2	0=9
"Cricketers" .....	0	0	0	0	1	4	0	0	0=5

Scorer,—H. S. Stelson. Umpire,—E. G. Babbitt.

S. Tokuno (67) a well-known fencing master of Tokyo, committed suicide on the morning of July 17th by cutting his throat with a short sword. The cause was temporary insanity after excessive drinking.

NOTES ON CURRENT EVENTS.

Judging from St. Petersburg telegrams to the Mainichi Dempo, there seems to have been quite an interesting debate in the committee appointed to consider the question of paying a substantial subsidy to a Russian line of steamers plying between Vladivostok and Chinese, Korean and Japanese ports. A member of the committee having expressed the opinion that from a commercial point of view the proposed service is unnecessary, it was officially replied that the establishment of the service should be regarded as a matter of policy rather than of trade. It was essential that the Russian flag should be seen in the Sea of Japan, and the Minister of Finance by whom this statement was made did not hesitate to declare that prime importance attached to that desideratum. A member of the committee responded in the sense that little credit could accrue to Russia if her flag was seen flying over steamers which carried only one passenger and 10 tons of goods, but in spite of these very practical remonstrances the committee passed the bill.

We have already given the address of the Romaji magazine, but in answer to further enquiries, we beg to state that it is Romaji-Hirome-Kwai, 111 Higashi-Kata machi, Hongo, Tokyo.

It appears that Mr. Consul Suzuki is about to visit St. Petersburg with reference to the seizure of Japanese vessels by Russian cruisers in the Northern Seas. The latest ship to suffer this fate was the Miye Maru, but within comparatively recent times the Daijuku Maru, the Taiyo Maru and the Konpira Maru have also been seized. The Daijuku Maru was destroyed by the ice last winter, but the other vessels are still held by Russia, and it is claimed that they were not guilty of any violation of the law. Mr. Suzuki is not expected to encounter any serious difficulty as the Russian Government recognises the justice of Japan's claims in this matter and as the dimensions of the question are petty.

The figures of Japan's foreign trade for the period, 11th to 20th of July were as follow:—

		Comparison with
		For 10 days. Since Jan. 1st.	last year.
	Yen.	Yen.	Yen.
Exports...	8,813,000...	191,965,000...	—28,745,000
Imports...	9,776,000...	275,253,000...	—15,394,000
Excess of Imports.	963,000...	83,288,000

The excess of imports for the ten-day period is of insignificant dimensions, but the persistence of the phenomenon inspires misgivings.

The following official appointments are gazetted:—

Dr. Ikki, Vice-Minister of Home Affairs.
Dr. Eizaburo Kamei, Inspector-General of the Metropolitan Police.
Mr. H. Arimatsu, Director of the Police Affairs Bureau.
Mr. T. Kawaji, Governor of Kumamoto-ken.
The resignations of Mr. Yoshiwara, Vice-Minister of Home Affairs, Mr. Anraku, Inspector-General of the Metropolitan Police, and Mr. Kogo, Director of the Police Affairs Bureau, have been accepted.
Mr. S. Terada, Governor of Miyagi-ken.
Mr. T. Taniguchi, Governor of Okayama-ken.
Mr. Yoshio Aoki, Governor of Nara-ken.
Mr. Ichizo Hayashi, Governor of Miye-ken.
Mr. Katsusaburo Watanabe, Governor of Tokushima-ken.

The Novoe Vremya has published, with reference to the unveiling of the Port Arthur monument, a most grateful article, which is translated by the Nichi Nichi Shimbun. It appears that one of the editors of the Russian journal attended the ceremony, and that he sent to his journal a very detailed account. He says that never in his life was he more moved than by the demeanour of the Japanese officers and men on the memorable occasion, and that nothing could be truer than the words used by the leading Russian Representative when he said that, only heroes can truly appreciate heroes. The Novoe Vremya expresses the opinion that this event ought to have the effect of drawing Russia and Japan very close together.

The Kano Maru, the first of six fine new sister ships to be employed on the European service of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha, arrived in Yokohama on Wednesday afternoon. Invitations have been issued for an inspection of the vessel on Monday, July 27th, between 2 and 5 p.m.

THE TOKYO STOCK EXCHANGE.

Saturday, July 18.

The market opened tolerably strong on Friday morning, but the feeling of buoyancy was quickly checked by news that the rate of interest had risen abroad, that silver had fallen, that cotton-yarns were cheap and that Japanese securities ruled low on the London market. The bears took full advantage of this intelligence, and prices were forced down in several cases. State securities, however, showed an upward tendency.

Monday, July 20.

The statements attributed to Prince Ito and Viscount Terauchi seem to indicate that it will not be possible for the Cabinet to make any considerable retrenchments; the state of the weather is beginning to cause much uneasiness; the price of cotton yarns is declining, and the news from Kobe shows that the Chinese merchants there are in a very shaky condition—all these causes combined to depress the stock market on Saturday, and all securities moved down appreciably. The immediate outlook is considered gloomy.

Tuesday, July 21.

Monday witnessed a continuance of the debacle on the Stock Exchange. The weather still inspired doubts and the ability of the Cabinet to accomplish anything substantial was persistently questioned. All shares fell, especially those of the Tokyo Spinning Company which tumbled down nearly 5½ points, owing to the fact that virtually all the company's reserves had been absorbed to pay the last dividend, and it is evident that the next must be comparatively small. The depression was deepened by bad news from the Osaka Exchange, and altogether the situation looked very sombre.

Wednesday, July 22.

The depression on the Stock Exchange continued on Tuesday. There was almost complete stagnation, and the Tokyo Spinning Company's shares dropped 2¼ points, so that they closed at 31.30 yen compared with 39 yen last Saturday. In fact, the bottom seems to have dropped out of these particular shares. In the afternoon news came that the balance of trade during the 10 days ended on the 20th was again unfavourable, and this increased the depression. There was, however, a slightly improved feeling at the close.

Thursday, July 23.

There is nothing special to record about Wednesday's market. Buyers were in a hesitating mood and sellers were reluctant. Evidently the process of "skimming" (saya-tori) has been repeated, as was predicted some time ago in these columns. The afternoon session closed heavy, and there are no indications of a speedy revival.

Friday, July 24.

The market opened very flat on Thursday forenoon. Influenced by the unseasonable weather and by the operations of the bears, prices declined steadily. In the afternoon, however, some buyers made their appearance, and things hardened a little. Buyers and sellers are now evidently awaiting some new material. The following are the quotations for September delivery:—

		July 22nd.	July 23rd.
Tanko Kisen .....	83.35 .....	82.80 .....	.55
Tokyo Railway .....	57.15 .....	56.85 .....	.30
Kei-Hin Railway .....	65.40 .....	65.40 .....	—
Yusen Kaisha .....	82.25 .....	81.90 .....	.35
Toyo Kisen .....	— .....	— .....	—
Tokyo Gas .....	81.00 .....	80.50 .....	.50
Tokyo Dento .....	— .....	— .....	—
Fuji Gas Spinning .....	83.05 .....	83.05 .....	—
Tokyo Spinning .....	31.10 .....	31.50 .....	+.40
Kanegafuchi Spinning .....	85.00 .....	85.20 .....	+.20
Beer .....	77.00 .....	76.95 .....	-.05
Sugar .....	67.70 .....	68.70 .....	+.10
Takarada (Hoden) Oil .....	101.50 .....	101.40 .....	.10
Nippon Oil .....	— .....	— .....	—
Namboku Oil .....	— .....	— .....	—
Stock Exchange .....	109.20 .....	110.75 .....	+1.55

SHIPPING ACCIDENTS.

The Russian Volunteer Ship Company's chartered British steamer Port Maria went ashore at Kuregasaki, Nifu, Echizen province, at 2.30 a.m. on July 17th owing to a dense fog on her way from Vladivostok to Tsuruga. Severe damage was sustained in the engine room through which water rushed in, and it was only by hard pumping she escaped from sinking. With the assistance of several fishing boats, she managed to reach Tsuruga at 6.30 a.m. on the same day. While entering the harbour, she signalled to the ships there. A German cruiser in the harbour at once sent several boats for assistance. Thereupon, the Port Maria which was still in distress ran ashore off Matsubara to avoid sinking. The crew and passengers as well as a large portion of cargo was saved.

A private-telegram states that owing to the great assistance from the German warships the Port Maria was floated and temporarily repaired on the night of July 18th.

Damage occurred to the engines of the steamer Saminoye Maru II. (116 tons) at 7 p.m. on July 18th at Otaru. Three coolies were killed and two injured by steam.

THE UNREST IN TONKIN.

That the unrest in Tonkin is regarded as serious by the French population, says the China Mail, is shown by the fact that a large deputation of citizens marched on the Palace of the Governor-General the other day. They first held a meeting and protested in speeches against the ineptitude of the Government in putting down the disturbances, and then marched in a body to the Palace. The sentries could not stop them entering the Palace grounds. They burst open the doors and approached the Palace. The Governor-General met them on the steps and, quickly surrounded, he was compelled to speak to the crowd for about an hour, during which time they severely criticised the silence of the Government and the endeavours the authorities were making to suppress news of the unrest and belittle its importance. They only left the Palace upon receiving a promise from the Governor-General that steps would be taken to restore peace.

When the crowd appeared at the Palace the Governor-General telephoned to the Chief of the Military forces and told him that the Palace was surrounded. Believing that natives were up in arms the Commander-in-Chief ordered the forces to their posts fully armed, but upon learning that the crowd was merely a deputation of citizens the troops were recalled.

BISHOP AWDRY.

THERE can be no doubt that Bishop AWDRY's letters to The Times will produce an excellent effect, as the testimony of a witness who is not only independent but also unimpeachable. As yet we have telegraphic summaries only of the Bishop's last letter, but it is easy to see that he has dealt radically with the attitude of extravagant apprehension that exists in parts of the Occident as to Japan's mood. No ordinarily intelligent observer residing in Japan and having access to the educated classes there, can fail to perceive that the idea of aggressive action in the direction of Australia or the Philippines finds absolutely no place in the Japanese mind of to-day. The Bishop justly analyses this apprehension as arising primarily from the fact that recent wars in the East have seemed to have their origin in questions of opening up undeveloped territory. It is inferred that Japan's ambition lies in that direction, and that she will naturally turn from Manchuria and Korea to Australia, the Philippines and Hawaii. But in Japan itself there is not the remotest indication that such an earth fever exists. There is not the faintest symptom of it. If one thinks calmly for a moment and realizes that such aggression would at once place Japan in the lists with Great Britain and the United States for adversaries, one perceives at once how chimerical the whole fancy is. If Japan has fought two great wars during the past 14 years, her plain object has been to thrust back the tide of Western aggression from her own shores, not to herself aggress. It was inevitable that when she emerged victorious from those struggles she should take suitable steps to protect the regions in question either by an actual exercise of administrative authority, as is the case in Korea, or by enlisting the interest of the nations at large, as has been done in Manchuria. In no circumstances at present conceivable can Australia or the Philippines or Hawaii become a menace to Japan, and unless she is menaced, she does not strike. If, as the Bishop seems to have pointed out, the United States treats the Philippines and Hawaii with such indifference that the transfer of the islands to another Power becomes an imminent contingency, Japan might be disposed to raise her voice on the ground of political geography. Otherwise she has no more idea of attempting to seize those islands than America has of annexing the Empire of Japan. We are not quite sure whether the telegraph rightly represents Bishop AWDRY, but if it does, he appears to have said that the suspicions of the Australians are largely the children of an uneasy conscience. They feel in their heart of hearts that their conservatism obstructs the full discharge of their duties in developing the splendid opportunities they have inherited, and thus they begin to conceive anxiety least some outsider should undertake to complete the development for them. Impecunious Japan, who conspicuously lacks the means of developing even her own resources, is the last Power in the world to undertake the development of Australasia. Nothing could be further from her thoughts. As the Bishop justly says, she aims at nothing beyond obtaining for her people treatment equal to that accorded by the Occident to Occidentals. That is not an extravagant ambition, and that it should be frustrated by the prejudice and illiberality of the West after all the preaching which the latter used to din into the ears of the East is humiliating. The Japanese have a saying that even Jizo gets angry if his face be rubbed three times the wrong way. The West is doing the rubbing now with much vigour. It is proclaiming and acting upon the doctrine of the Occident for Occidentals. Surely it is easy to foresee that even the Oriental Jizo must presently begin to entertain the idea of the East, for Easterns. When one comes to think out what the latter tocsin would mean were it obeyed in practice, a panorama as shocking as it is improbable presents itself. Nevertheless nothing is truer than that like begets like. Europe and America are energetically sowing Cadmean teeth in the Orient; and unless the process is stopped, there must inevitably be an evil harvest. We can not conceive that any more sacred duty devolves upon a Christian leader like Bishop AWDRY than that of averting such a disaster.

LIBEL CASE IN SHANGHAI.

A VERY curious libel case has just been tried in Shanghai. The facts are these, stated in briefest terms. A lady, conceiving that she had a grievance against a teacher in the Cathedral School, wrote to the North China Daily News a letter for publication. This letter would have greatly damaged the School, and accordingly Mr. H. T. MONTAGUE BELL, Editor of the paper, visited the Head-Master of the School and consulted with him as to the possibility of inducing the incriminated teacher to make an apology, and the possibility of getting the lady to be satisfied with that step. The head master called in his colleague, the Head of the Cathedral Compound, and the latter, being consulted, agreed that if the lady were willing to accept an apology, the incriminated teacher might be asked to apologise. Thereupon the Editor went back to his office, fully persuaded that things were in train for an amicable settlement without publicity. Subsequently the lady, being visited by the Head-Master, consented to accept an apology, and the incriminated teacher having agreed to make one if its acceptance were assured, the whole matter, apparently quite trifling, might be supposed to have been settled. But—and here the curious feature of the story presents itself—before setting out to sound the lady, the Head-Master and the Head of the Cathedral Compound had agreed that a barrister should be consulted, and while the Head-Master was visiting the lady, his colleague proceeded to consult Messrs. HOME and DOUGLAS, two barristers practising in partnership. He found Mr. HOME and submitted the case for the latter's consideration and advice, but he conveyed to Mr. HOME's mind an impression that the lady was implacable and that there was imminent danger of the letter's publication. Thus instructed, Mr. HOME telephoned to the newspaper a query as to whether the lady's letter could be inspected before publication, and being, of course, answered in the negative, he then advised the despatch of a communication to the proprietors of the newspaper warning them that if the lady's letter were published, and if, when published, it were found to contain libellous matter, Messrs. HOME and DOUGLAS were instructed to institute legal proceedings on behalf of the incriminated teacher and the Cathedral School. The receipt of such a communication naturally astounded Mr. BELL. He had been doing everything in his power to assist the School and to avert the publication of the letter; he was actually in direct consultation with the Head-Master, and everything seemed to have been satisfactorily arranged, when suddenly a barrister's letter reached him, at the alleged instance of the very men and the very institution to which he was rendering friendly assistance, and the letter amounted in his opinion to an attempt at intimidation. Presently the Head-Master and the incriminated teacher called on him and emphatically dissociated themselves from the barrister's communication, but failed to convey to him the essential fact that their colleague, the Head of the Cathedral Compound, had consulted the barristers and approved of the latter's communication. This failure was proximately responsible for a most unfortunate error. Mr. BELL published the barristers' communication in the following morning's issue of the N. C. Daily News, substituting the initials "X" and "Y.Z." for the names of the incriminated teacher and the Cathedral School, respectively, using the head line "A case for the Bar Society," and adding the foot-note:—

"We have received the personal assurances of Mr. X. and the head of the 'Y.Z.' that no such instructions were given by them to Messrs. Home and Douglas and they dissociate themselves entirely from the idea of intimidation. Will the Bar Society kindly take note?"
Now it is evident that had the Editor believed in the entire trustworthiness of the two barristers, he would assuredly have addressed an inquiry to them, in the sense:—"I have received such and such a communication from you. But I have also received from your alleged clients distinct assurances that they did not authorize, and that they dissociate themselves from, any threat of the kind contained in your communication. How am I to explain this discrepancy?" Unfortunately the editor did not adopt that precaution. He seems to have resented so bitterly the apparent attempt to intimidate him that he jumped to a somewhat credulous conclusion, and persuaed himself that the two barristers had taken the unprofessional and improbable step of threatening in the names of men who had not sanctioned any menace. Regard- ed in cold blood and with the wisdom that follows the event, the procedure of the editor suggests great hastiness and strange readiness to believe an almost incredible incident. But we have to remember that he had been emphatically assured as to the disapproval of the barristers' communication by the very persons under whose alleged instructions it had been sent; that he was pressed for time; that he had already gone far out of his way and taken most kindly precautions to avert the precise catastrophe which he was now menacingly warned against precipitating, and that, without an exercise of exceptional penetration, he would have been most unlikely to divine the curious complication which had actually occurred, namely, that one representative of the School had authorized a step disapproved by the two other representatives, and that the latter had failed to disclose their colleague's independent action to the Editor. In these mitigating circumstances it will suggest itself to our readers, as it suggests itself to us, that while a jury could not but bring in a verdict against the editor on the score of want of caution, they would have fully satisfied the occasion by assessing the damages at some figure little more than nominal, say a hundred dollars. On the contrary, however, they not only found for the two complaining barristers, but also awarded them 5,000 dollars each.

THE BOOKSHELF.

The Social Evil in Japan, by U. G. MURPHY; Methodist Publishing House.

THIS is a simple unpretending story of philanthropic work. The author keeps himself as much as possible in the background. He describes incidents and effects in an essentially impersonal tone. Yet one lays down the little book with a feeling of deep admiration for the noble work he has done, for his method of doing it and for his invincible patience and perseverance. There is room for difference of opinion as to the problem whether it is wiser to seek to regulate the social evil by licensing it and controlling it, or to declare it anathema and endeavour to extirpate it. Many good and thoughtful persons hold the former view, but there are at least as many advocates of the latter and Mr. Murphy is among them. But he recognises that in Japan, where the licensing system has been deliberately chosen after careful reflection, it is futile to essay a radical alteration from the outset. The licensing system, however, is subject to terrible abuses. As practised in Japan a few years ago, when Mr. Murphy and his coadjutors took up the work, it had developed usages which amounted to slavery of the worst form. An unhappy girl, sold into a life of shame, became thenceforth a veritable slave, never to be released from shocking bondage so long as her purchaser found his account in retaining possession of her. The expiration of her nominal term of service found her shackled with debts for things which she had never received, debts which her keeper created by a stroke of his pen and which the law recognised. There was no hope for anyone entering the inferno. Textually the law forbade the detention of a girl contrary to her own will, but practically the brothel-keeper could exercise such pressure that the liberty granted by the law became wholly illusory. Mr. Murphy and his friends set themselves to correct this shameful state of affairs, and the unflinching determination they showed in the face of countless obstacles and countless rebuffs merits the profound gratitude of the unhappy persons to whom they have brought relief and commands the applause of every intelligent onlooker. They received stalwart assistance from the Salvation Army. Indeed without the latter's fearless co-operation it may be doubted whether success would ever have been attained. A word of tribute is due also to Christian Japanese barristers, several of whom rendered aid of the most efficient and disinterested nature. We are obviously precluded from following Mr. Murphy into the details of his narrative, but we are not precluded from saying that we heartily sympathise with his noble efforts, and that we trust he will make all possible expedition in publishing a Japanese edition of his work, for the more widely it is circulated among the people of this country the better for their intelligent understanding of a problem one of the gravest confronting legislators.

EVIDENCE OF FORMER MINISTER DUN.

"I have no hesitancy in declaring that there can be no war between the two countries (Japan and the United States), neither now nor within the time of the present generation of men, unless it is forced by the United States. Japan could only undertake such a war in self defence and as a last resort."

Thus declares Edwin Dun, former minister to Japan, now resident at Tokyo, and thus have declared every one of our diplomats to Japan now living. Unequivocally they have all denounced the shameful agitation against Japan, and yet the prejudiced, sensational press and those of our citizens who permit it to do their thinking, persist in flying in the face of all informed opinion with assertions that sooner or later there must be war between these two countries.

Among all the diplomats who have protested against wicked war talk, Mr. Dun is the only one who has lived in Japan a generation and speaks the language. Of them all, he knows the people best and his statements have a special value. They were called out by newspaper articles condemning the attitude of Hobson written by Rev. John H. DeForest of Auburndale, Mass., who has sent a personal letter from the former minister to the News with the indorsement, "You made a good campaign against Hobson's wild statements about Japan, and I fancy this letter will do as much good in your paper as anywhere."

The letter is published in another column to-day and we commend it to the careful perusal of every reader of this paper. The statements it contains are made by one whose opportunity for knowing the real, responsible public sentiment of Japan is not surpassed by any other person.

Mr. Dun's evidence supports and verifies several contentions that have been made by the News. It leaves no room to doubt that the feeling of Japan is one of friendliness to the United States, and no room to doubt that her interest and her purpose are wholly against war; that she needs to conserve her finance and develop her resources and that these things she desires to do. To go to war for the Philippines, or the Philippines and Hawaii and all else that she could possibly hope to gain even if she could prevail in a war, would be a losing game and foolishly suicidal, and Japan's statesmen cannot be accused of a lack of sense, as Mr. Dun reminds us.

It is to be hoped this evidence will dissipate some of the unfounded belief that Japan wants war. The question of the proper restriction of emigration is an entirely different one and should not be clouded with false notions and belittling prejudice against a friendly nation.

[Note.—The following letter from former Minister to Japan, Edwin Dun, is forwarded to the News by the recipient, for publication, a privilege of which we gladly take avail. Both men have for their opinions as to Japanese feeling and purposes the authority of knowledge gained by long residence in Japan.—Ed. News.]

37 Mita, Shiba Ku,
Tokyo, May 7, 1908.

Rev. J. H. de Forest, Boston, Mass.

My Dear Sir: I have read with much interest and satisfaction two letters of yours taken from the Advocate of Peace and re-published in the Japan Times. The last one in particular which appeared in the Japan Times of May 6th-7th, "Is Japan a Menace to the U.S.?" is to my mind, particularly good and deserving of the thanks of all true friends of both the United States and Japan as well as of all lovers of fair play in general. I endorse every word of that letter. If it were possible I would like to emphasise that:—

"Never in the history of our nation was there a more baseless, senseless and shameful agitation against a great and friendly people than we have witnessed here (in the United States) during the last year."

Like you, when I think of it, I could hide my head in shame for my country.

Fortunately all the efforts of the yellow press and of other parties who from motives of self interest, have deliberately planned to make trouble between the United States and Japan, together with the hysterical writings of the ignorant and foolish, have failed to create any widespread feeling in Japan of hostility towards the people or government of the United States. The feeling among educated Japanese is one of utter amazement and exceeding regret that the absurd statements, in regard to the feelings and intentions of Japan, which have appeared from time to time not only in jingo journals but also in newspapers that should know better, should be given credence by any intelligent section of the America people.

Aside from the question of long standing friendship and of good will existing between the two peoples and governments and considered purely and simply from the standpoint of the self interest by Japan, the idea of a war with the United States is so absurd that it is difficult to conceive how any one endowed with the most ordinary intelligence and information in regard to the relations of the two countries can believe that Japan could desire anything but the friendship of America.

What possible gain to Japan could result from such a war? Her people do not like the Philippines and would not accept them as a gift. Japan's experience with Formosa is quite enough in that direction. The Hawaiian islands are attractive to Japanese emigrants on account of the high wages paid for labor on the sugar plantations, but as the greater part of the savings of the Japanese in Hawaii is, and has always been, sent home, there would be little gained by a change of flag. Moreover the entire money value of the Hawaiian islands would, probably, not cover one month's cost of a war between the two countries. Outside of the Philippines and Hawaiian islands what possible object could Japan have in view? Surely no sane person could believe for a moment that an invasion of the Pacific coast states would be contemplated by Japan. It would be just as reasonable to believe that the United States would have in view an invasion of the main island of Japan. Five thousand miles of water between the two countries renders either one or the other, practically, an impossibility. In addition to the above, modern wars cost money and while the United States might afford to throw away several hundreds of millions of dollars with no tangible object in view, if the mighty head lines to be afforded sensational journals are excepted, it is very certain that Japan could not afford such insane waste and as she could not finance such a war without placing loans on the European market, it is very doubtful indeed if her credit could stand such a strain. For these reasons and accepting for the sake of argument that Japan is as bad as her worst enemies claim that she is, it is absurd to believe that she desires war with the United States. I may also say that I have never heard that her worst enemies even claimed that the statesmen of Japan were lacking ordinary common sense.

I have no hesitancy in declaring that there can be no war between the two countries either now nor within the time of the present generation of men unless it is forced by the United States. Japan could only undertake such a war in self defense and as a last resort.

Is it conceivable that the good people of our country can, for a moment, tolerate the thought even of such a monstrous crime against a friendly nation composed of people just as good as we are? Perish the thought that America could be guilty of such a crime.

I commenced this letter with the idea only of expressing my appreciation of and concurrence with the views expressed in your letters but find the subject has tempted me to go further than I had intended. However as it is written it may go and you are at liberty to make such use of it as to you may seem fit and proper.

Although we have not met for many years I have heard of you frequently and fully appreciate the good work that you and others of your calling have already accomplished and are still doing in this country. For your manly outspoken words asking of Americans only justice and fair play in behalf of a truly great and most lovable people who most earnestly desire the continuance of the traditional relations of good friendship which, until now, have never been questioned since Perry first came to these shores, I beg to express my admiration and to tender to you my thanks. An intimate association of thirty-five years with the Japanese people entitles you to speak with the authority of knowledge, an article that seems to be entirely ignored as something of but little value or use in arriving at conclusions by the gifted Hobson and other kindred spirits of the same intellectual class and calibre.

Yours very truly, EDWIN DUN,
At one time U.S. Minister to Japan.

ALLEGED TREASON.

A sensational report is afloat in Tokyo. It is alleged by the Demio that S. Ishima, a lawyer of Hakodate, and another man have been arrested by the gendarmes in Tokyo on a charge of treason. It appears that they made detailed plans of the Sasebo fortress and 15 other naval stations, etc., and tried to sell them for yen 5,000,000, to a foreign Embassy through S. Sudzuki, an interpreter of the office showing him the maps at the Ariake-Kwan Hotel in Tsukiji. Sudzuki deceived them with a pretext that he would assist in accomplishing the proposed transaction but on leaving the hotel, he stated the affair to the Tokyo Gendarmes' Office. The Demio adds that a surveyor of the Military General Staff Office was arrested late on the night of July 14 in connexion with the affair.

It is also said in Tokyo that the accused fabricated the plans merely for a fraudulent purpose and that these had been already seized by the gendarmes.

WATER POLO.

A very interesting game of water-polo was played off the V. A. R. C. barge at 5.45 p.m. on Tuesday between the following teams:—

The Rest.	Born in Japan.
V. G. Bowden.....Goal.....	G. W. Gregory.
C. von Fallot.....	J. L. Graham
G. Neville.....	W. B. Mason
G. G. Franklin.....	H. Goddard
A. B. Pollock.....	S. Vincent
V. Church.....	F. Luther
H. Deveson.....	D. Drummond
Referee:—Mr. O. Strome.

The Rest proved victorious, winning by 4 goals to 1. The goals for the "Rest" were scored by Pollock (3) Deveson (1) Luther put one through for "Born in Japan."

HEAVY RAIN.

On July 16th and the same night, heavy rain fell in Yokohama. In the night, the weather rose to a storm. Inundations occurred in several parts of the city, although no special damage was sustained.

The zone of the storm seems to have been in Central Japan only. A telegram from Utsumiya states that the rivers Kamakawa and Takawa flooded their embankments, about 270 houses in the places along the rivers being flooded. A terrible storm was experienced in Chiba prefecture. The rivers Miyako, Tone, and Yedo flooded their banks, and the bridges were washed away. On account of the inundation, many trees were damaged and several buildings collapsed. Much damage to cultivated land was sustained as to which investigation is being made. Damage from inundations in Shizuoka is also reported to have been severe. Traffic on the railway between Iwafuchi and Sudzuka was stopped on the morning of July 16th.

It is reported by the Yokohama Observatory that on Wednesday morning, a large area of depression appeared in the direction of North China and advanced slowly towards Japan. On the following morning, the depression reached the Shimonoseki district where it separated into several sections, proceeding to Kyushu, East Japan, Central Japan, etc., showing a reading of 746 millimetres. At Yokohama, the depression was specially low at 7 p.m. on Thursday (16th), the reading being 747.2 millimetres. At 9.06 p.m., a terrible storm was noted with thunder in the direction of northwest. The wind became very strong about one hour later at the rate of 17.4 metres per second. The storm, however, commenced to subside at 10.15 p.m., the depression having passed away. The quantity of rain between 6 p.m. and 9 p.m. was recorded at 69 millimetres.

According to reports received at the Yokohama Chief Police Office, inundations were experienced in several districts along the Sagami river, but no special damage was caused. On Friday morning, the floods ceased.

DOYO.

The Doyo or dog-days commenced on July 20th. The records during the hottest days in the past eleven years were as follows:—

	Average temperature.	Quantity of rain.	Days rained.
1897 .....	25.2	27.2	8
1898 .....	27.0	22.7	4
1899 .....	24.7	141.6	7
1900 .....	24.9	2.0	3
1901 .....	25.7	21.7	5
1902 .....	23.4	291.8	13
1903 .....	25.4	130.9	8
1904 .....	25.7	103.1	11
1905 .....	23.7	123.7	13
1906 .....	26.6	115.6	11
1907 .....	24.9	71.6	8
Average ...	25.2	97.0	8

The Yokohama Observatory reports that this year very little rain will fall during the hottest season. The temperature will not be higher than the average.

It is stated by the Tokyo Observatory that an area of high pressure has been stationary in the neighbourhood of the Kurile group for some weeks past. So long as the high pressure remains there, northeasterly winds will be experienced in north and central Japan with a specially low temperature. The present weather resembles that experienced in 1904 when the crops generally failed. The Observatory officials believe that the pressure will pass away in August and ordinarily seasonable conditions prevail.

TWO BURGLARIES AT KOBE.

A burglary of a daring kind, although the thief fortunately did not get very much in the way of booty, was committed at the residence of Mr. C. L. Spence, 16 Yamamoto dori, 4 chome, in the early hours of this (Tuesday) morning, says the Kobe Herald. It appears that Mr. Spence was awakened about 1.30 a.m. by a noise in his bed room and found a man was in the apartment. He at once shouted and jumped out of bed and chased the man down the stairs. He had to delay a moment at the stairhead, however, in order to turn on the light, and by the time he reached the bottom the intruder, a Japanese, could be seen bolting through the drawing-room window. The police were summoned and a search was made in the dining-room, where a cup in which a bit of candle had been placed, evidently for use as a dark lantern, was discovered. It was also found that the contents of the pockets of a coat which Mr. Spence had left in the room had been strewn on the floor. Subsequently a pair of white flannel trousers belonging to Mr. Spence was found in the garden of the next house. A bunch of important keys had been taken from the pockets, together with a few yen, but curiously enough a sum of 5 yen had been left behind, having apparently been overlooked. In the morning the servants stated that they found that their doors had been opened. The police are understood to have good hopes of securing the offender.—At about 3 a.m. on Saturday morning a burglar entered the residence of Mr. A. H. Dare, No. 108, Yamamoto-dori, Kobe. The intruder, it appears, made his way into Mr. Dare's bedroom and searched his clothes, securing a sum of about yen 2. Mr. Dare's coat was subsequently found near a bamboo fence on the eastern side of the premises, and a pair of trousers were thrown on to the verandah outside the bedroom. It is believed that the culprit had entered by jumping over the bamboo fence and climbing up a pillar on to the verandah, afterwards making his escape in the same way.

TOKYO JOCKEY CLUB.

The third day races of the meeting of the Tokyo Jockey Club were held on July 18th at Itabashi near Tokyo. There was a large attendance, most present being interested in the pari mutuel only. The results of the day's programme were as follows:—

1st Race.—1, Smith; 2, Otohime; 3, Kintoki.
2nd Race.—1, Matsusaki; 2, Tone; 3, Hayatori.
3rd Race.—1, Tsufu; 2, Naruto; 3, Shusui.
4th Race.—1, Sawa VI; 2, Gyoten; 3, Yakumo II.
Pari Mutuel paid yen 116.
5th Race.—1, Kachitama; 2, Umezono; 3, Katsujin. Pari Mutuel paid yen 99.
6th Race.—1, Hanazono; 2, Tamano-o; 3, Hatsu-hira.
7th Race.—1, Tokachi; 2, Komagatake; 3, Hiyei. Pari Mutuel paid yen 209.
8th Race.—1, Countess; 2, Asagiri; 3, Hatsune.
9th Race.—1, Settsu; 2, Shooting Star; 3, Amoureuse.
10th Race.—1, Vermont; 2, Marutaka; 3, Flying Star.
11th Race.—1, Takashino; 2, Hatusaki; 3, Garnett.

The fourth and final day races of the Tokyo Jockey Club were held on July 19th with the following results:—

1st Race.—1, King and Otohime (dead-heat); 2, Kanin.
2nd Race.—1, Naruto; 2, Shusui; 3, Matsusaki.
3rd Race.—1, Sawa VI; 2, Tsufu; 3, Oyama.
4th Race.—1, Vermont II; 2, Settsu; 3, Yangkee Ruth. Pari mutuel paid yen 360 each to Vermont and Smith.
5th Race.—1, Hanazono; 2, Tamano-o; 3, Takachi.
6th Race.—1, Shiraume; 2, Tone; 3, Hayatori.
7th Race.—1, Gyoten; 2, Umezono; 3, Wakana.
8th Race.—1, Amoureuse; 2, Kobe; 3, Asagiri.
9th Race.—1, Baika III; 2, Kotsuka; 3, Fukuzono.
10th Race.—1, Garnett; 2, Katsuju; 3, Kocho.
Pari Mutuel paid yen 343.
11th Race.—1, Mitsuiki; 2, La Cantinier; 3, Kikusui.

The meeting of the Tokyo Jockey Club this year turned out to be a specially successful one. According to Japanese papers, the gross proceeds by pari mutuel amounted to yen 2,100,000 which is said to be the highest sum ever taken from that source.

An accident occurred to the engine of a freight train on the night of July 19th while on the way from Himeji to Okayama. An engineer was severely injured and two firemen slightly injured by the steam.

YOKOHAMA.

A man about 25 years old, and a woman of apparently 20 years, were found dead on the morning of July 17th at Saka, a village in Negishi. It is believed that on the previous night, they committed suicide by throwing themselves from the cliff near the place. They both sustained fatal injuries on the head, etc., by having struck the stones and rocks below. The cause was not reported.

An American gentleman, one of the guests of a leading hotel in Yokohama, who was reported missing since June 26th is reported by the Yokohama Chief Police Office to have recently been found. At the request of his friends, the details of the affair are kept private.

About 2 p.m. on July 16th, two sendoes quarrelled at a small hotel in Kanagawa, through a dispute arising from gambling. One of them, V. Ozawa by name, stabbed another named J. Kawashima with a short sword, injuring him severely. The offender at once escaped from the scene. Another tragedy is reported in Kawasaki. On the evening of July 14th, a coolie attacked another coolie with a large knife injuring him on the head and hands. The assailant was arrested on the spot.

An old woman attempted to commit suicide on July 16th by throwing herself into the creek near the Maeta bridge, but some sendoes who happened to be on some lighters near the scene saved her. Family troubles are reported to have been the cause.

Two wagons of a freight train were derailed at Hodogaya at 10.55 a.m. on Thursday while leaving the station. The permanent way was damaged and traffic over the section was delayed for two hours.

Owing to the storm, a boat containing workmen was capsized on the evening of July 16th in Yokosuka harbour while proceeding to the cruiser Ariake from the dock. One of the workmen was drowned, his corpse being found an hour later.

A young woman committed suicide by throwing herself into the sea near Dzushi on Wednesday evening. Her dead body was washed up at Inamuragasaki on the following day. The cause, according to a letter which she had in her possession, is said to have been cruel treatment by her employer.

A new case of death from cholera is reported in Kanazawa, the patient being a girl of 15 years.

A coolie living in Kitagawa committed suicide on July 17th at his house by hanging himself after drinking alcohol. Poverty is reported to have been the cause.

While cruising off Kanagawa for pleasure on July 17th, a boat with five men was capsized in consequence of the change of tides. One of them was drowned.

The Uraga Dock Company will hold a general meeting towards the end of August. It is alleged that owing to the depression of business, there will be no dividend for the first half of this year.

Early on the morning of July 18th, an armed man broke into the house of a foreigner at Sagiyama, Negishi and stole a sum of money and sundry articles.

A land-slide occurred at 4.50 p.m. on July 18th at South Ota-machi. One of the coolies who were working below the hill was slightly injured. Another land-slide took place on the same day at Kitagawa, an unoccupied house collapsing.

The Nippon Union Transportation Company, Yokohama, will hold an extraordinary meeting on July 31st. The company intends to reduce its capital from yen 1,000,000 to half the amount.

It is reported to the Harbour Police Office by the captain of the Mongolia, which arrived at Yokohama on July 17th, that Lien-Hwan (27) a Chinese sailor employed on the steamer, committed suicide by throwing himself into the sea at 10 a.m. on July 4th while on the way from San Francisco to Honolulu. He had been suffering from brain complaint.

The Prince Imperial visited Hayama on July 19th, and returned to Tokyo by the 4.41 p.m. train, the Governor and Chief of Police of Kanagawa prefecture escorting him.

An old man tried to commit suicide on July 15th by laying himself on the railway near Hodogaya. He was saved by a policeman and subsequently taken to the Tobe Police Office. The cause is reported to have been poverty.

On Monday, the Yokohama City Office paid Messrs. Samuel Samuel and Company interim interest of £7,925 for the City Industrial Loan of £317,000 which was raised in London last year.

The difficulties of the Yokohama Stock and Rice Exchange connected with the loss of yen 213,450.59, sustained last year through dishonesty of some employees, were settled at a recent general meeting. Mr. K. Kimura, the present president of the Exchange, and his predecessor, Mr. I. Watanabe, agreed to bear yen 30,000 of the loss. Of the net profit raised in the business during the first half of this year, yen 3,459.59 will be set apart to make good a portion of the loss. The remainder, yen 180,000, will be wiped off by reducing the present capital, yen 600,000 paid up, to yen 420,000. The directors have applied to the Department of Agriculture and Commerce through the local government to grant permission, which is expected towards the end of this month.

The dead body of a man was washed ashore at Jyuniten, Hommoku, on the evening of July 18th. Dr. Tokuda, who examined the corpse is of opinion that the man had been strangled and thrown into the sea, probably at a place in Awa peninsula. The crime is believed to have taken place about ten days ago.

A wealthy farmer living in Kamakura has committed suicide by hanging himself in his bathroom. Temporary insanity seems to have been the cause.

Three new cases of typhus were reported on July 19th in Yokosuka.

On July 19th stones were thrown at two cars on the Keihin Electric Railway at Aoki-machi, Kanagawa, breaking a window in each car. No passengers were injured.

During the first half of this year, the net income of the Yokohama Boyeki Warehousing Co. was yen 9,337; that of the Soda Bank, yen 48,076; and that of the Kaneju Saving Bank, yen 5,372.

While a man living in Suyeyoshi-cho was cleaning a revolver on the evening of July 19th, a bullet was incidentally discharged, the result being that a coolie in the street was injured. The man, whose name is S. Kudzuyma, was at once arrested by the Isezaki-cho police. The victim was removed to the Jyunzen Hospital on Noge hill. The bullet, which had penetrated the back, was successfully removed.

A Chinaman named Wo Tienwang (27) calling himself a Japanese, was arrested on July 19th by the Bluff police while he was asking for money at the entrance of the house of a foreign gentleman living on Bluff.

A case of dysentery is reported in Yokohama, the patient being a woman 54 years old.

An old man living in South Ota-machi was found dead on July 19th in his house. He is believed to have died from apoplexy.

The dead body of an old woman has been washed ashore at Sakawa in the district of Lower Ashigara.

In connexion with the proposed reception of the American Fleet the councillors of Yokohama and some members of the Yokohama Chamber of Commerce held a conference at 11 p.m. on July 21st at the Social Club. Mr. N. Mitsuhashi, Mayor, made a speech in which he stated that he had visited the Navy Department and investigated the programme of the entertainment, and according to the Naval authorities, about two thousand officers and bluejackets will be permitted to come ashore every day for a week and entertainments at theatres will be added to the garden party dinners, etc., already planned, and that the fare on the various railways will be abolished for American sailors. He went on to say that if it was to be so yen 15,000 more must be obtained to defray the expenses. This proposal was unanimously admitted by the members and it was arranged that the proposal should at once be put before the City Assembly to obtain approval.

The health returns of Kanagawa prefecture during the week ended July 19th are as follows:—

	Cholera.	Dysentery.	Typhus.	Diphtheria.	Scarlet fever.	Small pox.
Yokohama—
New cases ...	—	2	3	2	—	—
Died .....	—	2	—	1	—	—
Other Districts—
New cases.....	—	2	6	8	—	—
Died .....	—	—	13	2	—	—

Baron Sufu, Governor of Kanagawa prefecture, appointed a committee on July 21st to make preparations to receive the officers and bluejackets of the American Fleet. The Committee consist of Mr. Hashimoto, Chief of the prefectural police, Mr. Ishii, Superintendent of the Harbour Office, Mr. Sakata, secretary, and six other high officials of the local government.

On the night of July 20th, a number of youths attacked two students from Tokyo, on the Yokohama bridge, near Magane-cho, injuring them severely. The assailants escaped before a policeman appeared on the scene. It may be mentioned in this context that a large number of lads in Yokohama organized a union under the appellation of the gun ren tai or "corps of foolish friends" and are said to be amusing themselves by attacking passers-by in various streets principally at night, also by thieving and fraud. The other day, a few youths belonging to the party threw a ball made of some unpleasant and smelling substance at a foreign lady in Sakuramichi, Negishi, the white costume she was wearing being badly spoiled. It is reported that in consequence of the constant trouble these rascals are causing little children of the Motomachi Primary School have been prevented from attending school. No attention has yet been paid by the police to them.

About 11 p.m. on July 20th, three coolies attacked another coolie in Tobe-machi, inflicting severe injuries. The assailants were at once arrested. A slight dispute after drinking was the cause.

The Yokohama Railway between Kanagawa and Hachioji which was to be opened for traffic in January has since been delayed owing to an unexpected difficulty in construction. Now the opening is reported to take place in September. The intermediate stations are at Kotsukui, Nakayama, Nagatsuda, Haramachida, Fuchinobe, Hachimoto, and Sakai.

A boy, 11 years old, was drowned on July 21st while swimming in the sea near Yamashita, Bluff. The corpse was found about three hours later.

On June 22nd, the Kaga-cho police arrested a coolie on a charge of having stolen two pieces of unrefined copper while carrying them from the hatoba to a warehouse at No. 175, Yamashita-cho, belonging to Messrs. H. Tuska and Co. He sold the mineral to a hard ware dealer in Noge-machi for yen 12.

A man attempted to commit suicide with a short sword on July 22nd at a house in Magane-cho, but one of the occupants informed the Kotobuki-cho police who arrested him on the spot. Money difficulties are reported to have been the cause.

On Wednesday evening, an actor belonging to a low class theatre in Tokyo, was arrested at a house in Magane-cho by the Kotobuki-cho police on a charge of theft. It appears that he stole a number of cues and ivory balls from a billiard shop at Kanda, Tokyo. He sold a portion of them to a shop in Minato-cho, Yokohama.

On the morning of July 22nd, a farmer set fire to a shed belonging to a carpenter in Kawasaki, and then with a sickle attacked the carpenter and two neighbours who were endeavouring to put out the flame, injuring them severely and afterwards making his escape. Insanity is believed to have been the cause.

Early on the morning of July 22nd, fire broke in a house in Kanagawa. The flames were put out before much damage was done. A lamp being overturned was the cause.

A man living in Ashibiki-cho committed suicide at 2 p.m. on July 22nd by throwing himself into the sea near Koyasu, Kanagawa. Severe illness is said to have been the reason of his act.

LITERARY NOTES.

"The Traitor's Wife," a new volume by Mr. W. M. Williamson, appearing in Unwin's Colonial Library, is a story of Revolutionary Russia: of plots and plotters—and lovers. The spy amongst the plotters can play a remarkable and terribly effective role, as Russian history so often shows. Paul Drumitz is the spy in this case. The chief interest of the tale is the love story of Paul Drumitz's wife and an Englishman named Alan Leigh. There is a mystery surrounding her which makes many of her actions inexplicable till the veil is drawn aside. A Countess Brinski is in love with Alan Leigh, and does almost all that a woman can do to win a man. A conspiracy intervenes—Alan is in danger—a great plot is attempted by the Revolutionaries. Afterwards there is much to brood over and in the middle of the awful thing called a pogrom there arrives a dramatic moment full of interest and importance to nearly every character in the book.

A new addition to Unwin's Colonial Library is "The Thief on the Cross," a story by Mrs. Harold Gort, author of "This Our Sister," "The Soul of Milly Green," etc. The book is a study of London slum life, the central character being a factory girl.

"The Angel, the Author, and Others" is the title of a new volume by Mr. Jerome K. Jerome, of which Mr. Unwin is publishing a Colonial Edition. It is a book of humorous reflections, and will delight readers who enjoyed "The Idle Thoughts of an Idle Fellow" and "Three Men in a Boat."

In a recent competition—where a list of names of characters in books was given and contestants were required to set down the names of the novels in which they figured,—the following was compiled by a clever and industrious young lady—we do not know whether it won a prize:—

- 1 Miss Weston laugh.....Mr. Isaacs.
- 2 Estella Vincente.....In Kedar's Tents.
- 3 Babbie.....The Little Minister.
- 4 Roger Chillingworth.....The Scarlet Letter.
- 5 Bathsheba Everdene.....Far from the Madding Crowd.
- 6 L'Abbé Faria.....Monte Cristo.
- 7 Archibald Carlyle.....East Lynne.
- 8 Edith Millbank.....Comingsby.
- 9 Tom Thurnall.....Two Years Ago.
- 10 Ralph Peden.....The Lilac Sunbonnet.
- 11 Will Ladislav.....Middlemarch.
- 12 Ezekiel Daw.....
- 13 Mr. Oldbuck.....The Antiquary.
- 14 David Balfour.....Kidnapped and Catriona.
- 15 Captain Mirvan.....Evelina.
- 16 Kate Aubrey.....Ten Thousand a Year.
- 17 Mr. B.....Pamela.
- 18 Henry Tilney.....Northanger Abbey.
- 19 Reuben May.....
- 20 Gerard.....(1) Fair Maid of Perth, (2) Cloister on the Hearth, (3) Miss Braddon's Gerard.
- 21 Miss Dunstable.....Dr. Thorne.
- 22 Philip Heppburn.....The Mill on the Floss.
- 23 Althea Indagine.....The Bell of St. Paul's.
- 24 Tilly Slowboy.....The Cricket on the Hearth.

- 25 Leonora Nixon.....Quits.
- 26 Coquette (Catherine Cassilis).....Daughter of Heth.
- 27 Lord Luxmore.....John Halifax, Gentleman.
- 28 Mr. Heinsden.....The Professor.
- 29 Mrs. O'Dowd.....Vanity Fair.
- 30 Eugen Courvoisier.....The First Violin.

Mr. Unwin is publishing in his Colonial Library Mr. A. G. Hales' new book, "Marozia." Full of thrilling incident, it deals with scenes and personages belonging to the old world and the new. The first part is woven round the life of a beautiful but unfortunate queen. Here we get the true atmosphere of the Near East from Belgrade to Philippopolis, from the pen of a writer who has lived in all the cities, and has ridden from villayet to villayet with the leaders of the insurgent bands.

Mr. Robert Barr is always an attractive storyteller, and he has shown that accomplishment in full measure in his new novel, Young Lord Strangleigh (Ward and Lock.) Here we have all the equipment of an exciting story—a wealthy young peer, incredibly fast steamers, surface gold mines that produce boundless treasures and brisk adventures by sea and land. One marvels at Mr. Barr's ingenuity in sustaining an interest so vividly, for he has actually written a novel without a woman in it. No humble heroine is provided for the wealthy young peer to marry. Perhaps that means a sequel, for it would be pleasant to meet Lord Strangleigh again and his young mining engineer friend. In any case Mr. Barr has a good story to tell and tells it well.

A new book by Katharine Tynan (Mrs. Hinkson) is appearing in Unwin's Colonial Library. The title is "The Lost Angel," and the scenes are laid in France, Ireland, and England.

The firm of Jarrold sends out a little volume entitled The Cockneys in the Country, by the author of Giles' Trip to London, and it reminds me, says the writer of a Literary Letter in the Sphere, that it has already sold over 600,000 copies of these books. I do not suppose that one in ten thousand of my readers has ever heard the name of the author—Mr. James Spilling—whose works have sold in this prodigious manner. I knew him well; he was for many years the editor of The Eastern Daily Press of Norwich, and was one of the kindest, most considerate, and most genial of editors. Side by side with this faculty for writing humorous books was combined a very strenuous intellectual outlook, for the late Mr. Spilling was a Swedenborgian. Several of the men who have won some success in London during the past twenty years have owed much to Mr. Spilling. I for one recall with gratitude many kindnesses at his hands. This new edition, by the way, of The Cockneys in the Country is brightly illustrated by Mr. A. C. Gould, a son of Sir Francis Carruthers Gould.

I have been reading says a writer in an exchange, with very great interest a verbatim report that was taken for private purposes of the case of Unwin v. Clarke. This was the pretty squabble that occupied the law courts a few weeks back over two novels by Mr. Crockett. I somehow think it would pay a firm of publishers to take verbatim reports of trials of a certain interest and publish 500 copies at half-a-guinea each. There would probably be a considerable profit on the venture. In any case, I found this verbatim report of the Crockett case most entertaining reading. It was amusing to note the limitations of certain more or less literary witnesses. One had never heard of Mr. Stanley Weyman's Minister of France, a series of short stories that were first published in The English Illustrated Magazine; another had never read A Window in Thrums. A well-known Liverpool bookseller complained, indeed, that that book did not sell as much as it once did. This can easily be accounted for. Were Mr. Barrie to publish a new Window in Thrums to-morrow it would sell every bit as well and it would help the sale of his previous books. But he has drifted into the more remunerative occupation of playwright and has changed his audience. Were he to decide to devote himself again to writing fiction I have not the slightest doubt but that the old audience, which largely consisted of a church and chapel going public as contrasted with a theatre-going public, would all come back to him in shoals. Mr. Barrie should be delighted to know the anxiety with which the judge on the one side and Mr. Henry Fielding Dickens on the other were anxious to protect this favourite author's fame.

While a distinguished English publisher, Mr. John Murray, has covered himself with glory during the past week or two in his action against The Times, says a contemporary, a publisher in Vienna has been getting into hot water. It will be remembered that some time ago quite a small sensation was caused when a certain Lieutenant Bilse issued a book entitled Life in a Garrison Town, which book took the German-speaking world by storm and had a certain interest here through the translation that was issued by Mr. John Lane. I recall a very pleasant luncheon that Mr. Lane gave to some of us to meet Lieutenant Bilse, whose success one felt was rather an accidental one. Since then the ex-lieutenant has been in prison for libel, and now the publisher of the Austrian edition of his work, Fritz Freund, has been sentenced to three weeks' "strict arrest" on some technical point not easily comprehensible to the non-German mind. Herr Freund is said to have made £5,000 out of the Austrian rights of Herr Bilse's book. Since then he has been the inventor of a scheme something after the fashion of Mr. Dent's "Everyman's Library"; that is to say, he has issued a "Library of Celebrated Authors."

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

A case of cholera is reported in the district of Aki near Kure.

Two cases of rinderpest are reported in Shirogane, Shiba, Tokyo.

The Prince Imperial will visit the northeastern provinces this autumn.

Owing to the heavy rain, a land slide occurred in Oita, a man being crushed to death.

A floating mine was found on July 14th in the neighbourhood of Neungju isle, Korea.

A new case of plague was reported on July 22nd in the village of Yawata, near Kobe.

Fire broke out on July 15th in Pinang-Tieh, Taitung, Formosa, destroying 48 buildings.

The First Squadron, consisting of the Mikasa, Iwate, Idzumo, Kasuga, and Nissin arrived at Yokosuka on July 19th from Kure.

A photographer has been arrested in Utsunomiya on a charge of having infringed the Military Secret Preservation Regulations.

Z. Iwai, a bailiff belonging to the Muroran Local Court, has been arrested on suspicion of having received money from people by threats.

A post-delivery man of the Kyobashi Post Office in Tokyo, has been arrested on a charge of having stolen money orders from several letters.

An employee of the Shimbashi Railway Station has been arrested on a charge of having stolen various articles from luggage belonging to passengers.

The swimmers of the leading schools in Tokyo will hold a meeting on August 5th near Yahata, Awa peninsula. The programme will include a race round Okino-shima.

The Prince Imperial will visit six northeastern prefectures leaving on Sept. 20th, spending about four days in Sendai commencing Oct. 4th, after which he will leave for Tokyo.

The plague at Saigon, which fortunately is not so bad as it was last year, has carried off a European victim there, M. Champoudry, a clerk in the Government service. He lived in insani-lary premises, which had been disinfected only there days previously. He is the first European to die of plague at that port.

The Training Squadron consisting of the Itsukushima and Hatsudate left Ominato on July 22nd and is expected to arrive at Yokosuka on July 27th.

The repairs of the Sagami (formerly the Peresniot) have been completed at Yokosuka. She has now been attached to the First Reserve Squadron.

The headman of the district of Sosa, Chiba prefecture, has been arrested on a charge of having misappropriated yen 200 belonging to the district office.

A Tsuruga telegram states that Baron Mumm von Schwarzenstein, German Ambassador, will shortly leave there by the Fuerst Bismarck for Vladivostok on his way home.

The Asahi says that Mr. K. Hata, formerly Minister for Home Affairs, now at his native place, Morioka, Iwate prefecture, will visit Europe and America, leaving Yokohama on Aug. 25th.

A case of plague is reported in Kobe. The patient, a woman 44 years old living in Hachiman-dori, died on Tuesday morning. A number of houses adjoining that of the victim were segregated as usual.

A locomotive and a wagon collided at 2.10 p.m. on July 17th at the Yukihashi station on the Kyushu Railway. Both were severely damaged. An engineer and two workmen were injured and one workman was killed.

Prince Ito, Resident-General, arrived at Maïdo on the evening of July 19th from Shimonoseki, putting up at the Ganki-ro. To day, July 21st, he is expected to arrive at Oiso where he will spend a few days at his villa there.

Baron Sakatani, formerly Minister for Finance, now in Berlin, will shortly leave for London, where he will stay till the beginning of September. He will then leave for home via Suez. He is expected to arrive in Tokyo about Oct. 22nd.

The Osaka Shosen Kaisha held a general meeting on July 22nd at the Public Hall in Nakanoshima. An interim dividend was declared at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum. The firm will shortly open a service between America and Japan.

According to the latest telegram received by the Kawasaki Dockyard Company the Siamese destroyer and torpedo boats which recently left the dockyard for Siam arrived at Hainan on the 17th. Owing to bad weather they have not yet left that port.

A Hiroshima telegram to the Asahi reports that Lieutenant K. Kuniyoshi in reserve was sentenced on July 18th by the Hiroshima Court Martial to 5 years' imprisonment with hard labour on a charge of having forged official and private stamps.

Professor K. Otaki of the College of Agriculture fell on the electric railway at Okubo at 2 p.m. on July 20th, in trying to jump on to a car, while it was running. He sustained severe injuries on the head, etc. He was immediately removed to the Jyuntendo Hospital.

Two clerks of the Sapporo branch of the Nippon Shoko Bank have been arrested on suspicion of fraud. A civil engineer of the Iwanai Harbour Improvement Office, says a Sapporo telegram, has also been arrested on a charge of having received a bribe from some merchants patronized by the office.

H. E. Chong Ming-ch'i, Governor of Kuangsi, has sent a telegram to the Central Government in which he reports the restoration of peace and good order in his province through the capture and decapitation of the two principal leaders of the anti-monarchists in the South named Li and Huang. According to the N. C. Daily News the Governor further urged the great importance of constructing immediately railways to unite the principal cities of the province and the organizations of an extra division of disciplined and modern-armed troops to garrison important points on the Kuangsi-Tonking frontiers. A suggestion is also made that the Governor's headquarters shall be removed to some city more strategically situated than Kueilin, the present provincial capital of Kuangsi, which stands in a plain exposed to attack from all sides.

The disappearance of the doubloon from the British Empire—by Royal Proclamation in the Gazette—is a distinct blow to romance, says a contemporary. The coin has lingered till recently in the West Indies, where it has been legal tender at the value of 64s. That is considerably more than it is worth in the Spanish territory.

The Emperor gave a tiffin on July 22nd at the Take-no-ma Hall in the Palace in honour of M. Malevsky Malevitch, the new Russian Ambassador. Among those present were Princes Arisugawa and Higashi Fushimi, Marquis Tokudaiji, Chief Chamberlain, Viscount Terauchi, Minister for Foreign Affairs, Count Tanaka, Minister for the Imperial Household and Viscount Okazawa, Chief Aide de-Camp to the Emperor.

The death is announced of Captain Joyce, pilot, of Penang, which took place at the General Hospital there on June 27th. The deceased was fifty-nine years of age, and was well known in the Straits. For some time Captain Joyce had been suffering from Bright's disease. He was at one time in command of the steamer Rajah of Sarawak. Captain Joyce, who was a native of Edinburgh, had been a resident in the Straits for close on thirty years.

There was considerable commotion at the Tanjong Pagar Docks last night, said the Straits Times of June 27th, when the steamer Carlyle was being docked for scraping. The water was being pumped out when one of the scrapers was snapped by a crocodile and narrowly escaped injury. After the dock had been emptied, a crocodile about ten feet in length was discovered floundering about. It was noosed and is now in captivity.

The S. C. M. Post's Formosa correspondent states that on June 27th, fifty-three gold rods, each of which weighed nearly a pound, and which were valued at about yen 30,000 in all, were dug out at a place in Tainan City by coolies who were employed to dig a sewer there, and the rods were taken by fifteen of them to their respective homes. But afterwards the matter was reported to the police, and the coolies concerned were arrested. The place where the gold rods were buried is said to have been occupied by a rich man in the Chinese period.

The Taisho or hot days commenced on July 23rd. It is reported by the Yokohama Observatory that the high pressure remains stationary in the direction of Hokkaido. Areas of depression have appeared in the direction of Formosa and are slowly advancing towards Japan. Fragmentary areas of depression are afloat in the direction of Shimano, Kai, and Kodzuke provinces. In consequence of the foregoing phenomena, the temperature is lower than the average of past years. The observatory officials believe that the present weather will not continue much longer.

The R.M.S. Monteagle, for Vancouver, takes from Nagasaki Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Clark and their son and daughter, Mr. S. G. Clark and Miss Officer, who intend settling in Canada. The gap in the social life of the foreign community made by their departure, after twelve years' residence, will be hard indeed to fill, says the Nagasaki Press. As is well known, Mr. J. S. Clark has been engaged at the Mitsu Bishi Dockyard and Engine Works as Consulting Naval Architect and all the steamers of more than 3,000 tons constructed at the Dockyard, including the T.K.K. steamer Tenyo Maru, were built under his supervision, and the excellent results attained were in large measure due to his skill and experience in ship construction. Since severing his connection with the Mitsu Bishi Dockyard about three months ago Mr. Clark's services have been utilized in an advisory capacity by the Kawasaki Dockyard Company of Kobe. Mr. Stewart Clark has been manager here for the Rising Sun Petroleum Company, and we trust in Canada will speedily secure congenial employment.

During the voyage of the American liner Aki Maru which left Yokohama on June 10th for Seattle and returned on July 23rd, trouble occurred on board the steamer. It appears that on June 14th, Sunday, a sailor named Y. Matsui attacked his comrade, S. Kawasaki, with a short sword inflicting injuries on his head and breast, after a slight dispute. The victim died on the following day. The captain had the offender put under arrest until arrival at Yokohama, when he was handed over to the Harbour Police Office.

An ingenious device was adopted by a Japanese, says the China Mail, in order to smuggle arms and ammunition on board the Minnesota. A large trunk, which he had in his possession was found, on being searched by the police, to have a false bottom, and on this being removed three revolvers and seventy rounds of ammunition were found to be hidden away. The aperture between the two bottoms was barely an inch and in order to successfully hide the revolvers, spaces, in which they fitted, had been carved out enabling the false bottom to go into its proper position without suspicion. All round the sides of the revolvers the cartridges were laid, and if it had not been for the astuteness of the police, they would, in all probability have remained undiscovered. At the Magistracy on July 8th defendant had to pay $50 fine or go to prison for three weeks.

We reproduce a Berlin telegram of June 29th apropos the Reuter's despatch published elsewhere: The trial of Prince Zu Eulenberg, charged with perjury and with inciting another person to commit perjury in connection with the "round table" revelations of last summer, began here to-day. At the request of the prosecuting attorney the public and the newspaper correspondents will be excluded throughout the trial. The Prince, who was carried into the courtroom in a chair half an hour before the court opened, chatted cheerfully with his wife and sons while waiting for proceedings to begin. He appeared composed and confident. The trial is expected to continue for at least a week. Among the witnesses present were Count Kuno von Moltke, former military governor of Berlin, who has been living in retirement in Egypt since the trial of his suit against M. Harden for libel; Lawyer Bernstein, who defended Harden in the Moltke-Harden libel suit, and various trades people from Starborg and Liebenberg, where the Prince had his country seats. The jurors, who were selected in ten minutes, are mainly mechanics, manufacturers and directors in other concerns.

In connexion with the recent poisoning case at Hanoi, says an exchange, papers from that port state that after partaking of soup on the night of June 28th the men of the 9th Colonial Regiment, by hundreds, were seized with violent colic and other indications of dangerous illness. All who were not suffering were called out and the defence of Hanoi was rapidly organized. Then inquiries began to be made, and it was recognized that the Doi and the Cai of the Compagnie d'ouvriers were the authors of this criminal attempt. They were all arrested, and eighty-three men of the artillery and eighty-two of the 9th Colonial Regiment were conveyed to hospital. It was subsequently ascertained that the poison employed was arsenic, but fortunately it was diluted to such an extent that it failed to have the desired effect. It was also ascertained that on the Saturday evening when the poison was observed to take effect, about a score of natives cycled round to the camp of the Tirailleurs, and when the news spread the whole band disappeared. At the same time upon the road to Sontay, a Cai and a native were seen cutting the telegraph lines. Another important detail is that all the officers of the 1st Tonkinoise experienced the effects of the poison but not a single Tirailleur was indisposed. Altogether sixty men were placed under arrest in connexion with the affair.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE CHOJA-MACHI POST OFFICE.

[TO THE EDITOR OF THE "JAPAN MAIL,"]

SIR,—Some time ago I wrote to you about the extraordinary delay in the delivery of mail matter by the Choja-machi Post Office. For some time after the complaint was published there was some improvement but matters have now drifted back to the disgraceful state that formerly existed. At present we do not receive mails usually three to four hours after they have left the office and sometimes much longer. The same must be the experience of those who live in my neighbourhood. We do not live in an out-of-the-way place but my house is situated in a part of Negishi which can be reached by 20 minutes walk from the post office. It is evident that there is something wrong in the management of the post office. For the sake of public interest I would call the attention of the Department of Communications to this matter so that an improvement may be effected as soon as possible.

Negishi, July 18th, 1908.

X.

POSTAL AFFAIRS.

(TO THE EDITOR OF THE "JAPAN MAIL.")

SIR,—Can you or one of your correspondents enlighten me as to the reasons that move the British Government, presumably, to handle Postal matter not paying Letter rates so casually that it does not leave the Pacific Coast until a week or so after it should have been delivered here. I refer to bundles of Commercial Papers despatched and delivered as below:—

London	Tokio
Despatch	Delivery
23rd May	26th June
30th "	20th July
5th June	20th "
13th "	18th "
20th "	20th "

Between the 26th June and the 18th July, three mail steamers arrived at Yokohama from across the Pacific any one of which would have delivered the third sending at least ten days ago. Look at the second instance, Fifty days from London to Yokohama! And yet all these wrappers were superscribed "By First Mail." A letter can make nearly three trips "via Siberia" to London in fifty days, and is not a Convention with the Russian Government whereby they open their route to the free despatch of all postal matter expedient and urgently required?

I cannot conceive any cogent reason which should deter anyone from pressing the mails forward at all haste, much less is it possible to unravel the mind whose methods are deliberately calculated to delay. Do passengers who have to make connections wait for steamers unavoidably delayed? If not, why do the mails?

Yours faithfully,

HENNIKER HEATON,
(locum tenens)

Tokio, 20th July, 1908.

THE ANGLO-JAPANESE BANK, LIMITED.

The second annual general meeting of this Company was held at Winchester House, Old Broad Street, London, E.C., on Tuesday, 30th June. Sir WESTBY PERCEVAL, K.C.M.G. (Chairman of the Board of Directors), presiding.

The SECRETARY (Mr. Arthur H. King) read the notice convening the meeting and the report of the Auditors.

The CHAIRMAN, in moving the adoption of the Report and Accounts, said:—

Gentlemen,—As you have learned from the Report, I have recently returned from a visit to Japan, and, before commenting upon the accounts submitted for your approval, I propose to give you shortly the conclusions I arrived at, both with regard to the conditions of the country in which our interests lie, and also as to the prospects of our doing a profitable business there in the future. You may very plausibly reply that facts are better than opinions, and point out that the Bank has been opened in Yokohama for some eighteen months and little or no profit has resulted. My answer to this is that few banks in the first two or three years of their existence are able to make profits. As a matter of fact, many of those which ultimately have become the most successful began their career by a succession of years in which no profits were made, the reason being that in the building up of a Bank it is more important to consider ultimate rather than immediate results, and to lay the foundation for the future by doing business which will most effectually establish the Bank on a sound working basis, rather than to seek for the best returns obtainable at the moment. In other words, time is required, and it would be unreasonable for us to expect any variation from this almost general rule. In our case, however, special reasons existed why the Bank did not meet with the immediate success and recognition in Japan which we were led to expect. Our delayed success is, in the main, owing to two causes, both of which are now happily removed. In the first place, when the Bank opened in Yokohama, the Empire of Japan was in the throes of a speculative mania which had seized upon the whole community, including many of the local Banks, and under such conditions it was virtually impossible for a new concern to start operations on a safe basis, and, very fortunately for the Shareholders, we decided to husband our resources, and wait for a more favourable opportunity. By doing so, we have had to incur the criticism, and even the disapproval, of those who looked for immediate profits, but your Directors have the consoling reflection, that, owing to the conservative policy that they adopted, they have been able to preserve the capital of the Bank intact, and to avoid losses, and they believe that the main body of the Shareholders will applaud their forethought. The second difficulty I refer to, presented itself in the attitude which certain Government officials assumed with regard to our Bank at its inception. When the Bank was formed, we all thought that what was termed the commercial first fruits of the alliance between the two countries, would be welcomed in Japan, as an evidence of a desire on the part of the English people to do something more than co-operate for defensive purposes, and it was considered that the Anglo-Japanese Bank would be regarded as the practical expression of the wish of the British Capitalist and Trader to join in the development of the Industries of Japan, and to increase the trade between the two countries. It was therefore a surprise, as unexpected as it was unpleasant, to find that, despite the fact that the inception of the Bank had come from leading business men in Japan, our advent there was regarded by Government officials with that courteous and impassive hostility which the Japanese are past masters in the art of applying. The reason for this attitude was that, at the time, an effort was being made in Japan to largely monopolize the channels for the introduction of capital, by means of patronizing special Banks under official control, but here again, time and common sense have worked for us and removed what might have been a serious obstacle to the progress of the Bank. The effort has fortunately been unsuccessful, and has been strongly condemned by Japanese business men as contrary to the best interests of the country. The sound sense of the people has asserted itself, and instead of attempting to confine the inflow of capital to one or two channels, the policy now ruling is to welcome its introduction through any medium which will enable the people of Japan to carry out the great programme of industrial development, upon which the Empire has so wisely embarked. In like manner, in the past, British Traders have been handicapped by unwise and sometimes unfair regulations, but here again, stern facts are forcing the Japanese Government and Japanese Merchants to recognise that nothing is more prejudicial to the introduction of foreign capital and the expansion of trade than unnecessary official interference, and the imposition of undue restrictions upon commercial enterprise. I believe there is every intention on the part of the Japanese to treat the foreigner fairly, but we can hardly expect an Eastern Nation, with a habit of thought entirely different from our own, to at once assimilate and put into practice Western views of finance and commerce without some little friction during the process. The marvel is that Japan has succeeded so well in the art of modernising, and if critics instead of seeking for and condemning wholesale, and often unfairly mistakes which, according to her views, have been made, would look also on the Japanese side and its difficulties, it would tend to a better understanding and a quicker removal of causes for complaint. The two serious obstacles, therefore, to our progress, viz., the fever for speculation and the mistaken policy with regard to foreign capital have practically disappeared, and we are now in a position to profit by the improved conditions. I have no hesitation in asserting that there is both sound and profitable business to be done by us in Japan. To think otherwise would be a startling reflection on the most interesting and progressive nation of modern times. I am not one of those who look with alarm at the public finance of Japan. The attacks which have been so freely made are of the most exaggerated and unwarranted character. We know how the South African War has disconcerted our own finance, and it is not to be supposed that Japan can emerge from her own recent struggle with Russia without some financial embarrassment, and the necessity for placing additional burdens on her taxpayers. The people of Japan—a more happy and contented peasantry never existed—are quite able to bear all the taxation that is necessary to provide for all the Government obligations, and they will do so without a murmur. They have given the West an object lesson in patriotism, self-sacrifice, and military prowess which they know has to be paid for, and, if from no higher motive, their national pride will cause them to defray their public obligations to the uttermost farthing. To say that the people are taxed beyond bearing point is an instance of those exaggerations which have been so freely indulged in. The policy of the Government is wisely to reduce expenditure to the utmost, in order to make any increased taxation as light as possible, but those who are able to form a sound opinion agree that, if necessary, the country can stand an increase of taxation without undue inconvenience. As a matter of fact, if the incidence of taxation were slightly altered, a largely increased revenue could be collected, and be very little felt. Under the present system, agricultural land escapes very lightly indeed. I believe I am right in stating that the land tax is levied under an assessment made in 1899 on a calculation made some years previous, which now works out at a ridiculously low figure, and an increased revenue could be derived from this source alone, more than sufficient to provide all that can possibly be required. The population has grown to nearly 50 millions, and in 1907 the foreign trade amounted to over 926 million yen, and is increasing and must rapidly grow, although naturally there will be periods of check. Japan must continue to do an increasing trade, both internal and external, and the necessity for Western capital to develop her resources is daily becoming more apparent, and provides for us the opportunity to be useful, on terms of profit to ourselves. I have referred to the existing conditions in Japan at some length, as they have such an important bearing on our own future. I am pleased to be able to state, that while in Japan, I was fortunate in being able to carry successfully through a working arrangement with the Hundredth Bank, an old established local Japanese Bank of the highest standing, which will add considerably to the influence, and, I believe, the profits of our Bank. Our object from the first has been to identify ourselves with the material progress of the country, and to co-operate with the Japanese Native Banks, in providing facilities for the introduction of capital for sound enterprises. This object, I feel sure, will be considerably assisted by the arrangement referred to, inasmuch as it ensures to us access to a class of business, which has hitherto been closed to us. No obligation is involved on our part, but it will provide for us a means of participating in a class of business which we have always been endeavouring to secure. The Bank in question is one of the most prosperous in Japan, as well as the most capably managed, and pays a dividend of 30 per cent. on its capital. You will have also seen that we have opened a branch office at Shanghai, which promises to be a valuable adjunct to our business. The advances we have made there are amply secured, and returned a fair rate of interest, and we have good reason for believing that a considerable accession of business will result from the valuable connections which we have established. It is known that China is about to embark on a policy of expansion, and we have good reason for our belief that good opportunities of profitable business will result. The experiment is in no sense hazardous, as we are keeping our capital in China absolutely liquid, and we have even insured ourselves from any possible loss in exchange in transferring money back to London, by entering into a forward exchange contract, which we thought a prudent course to adopt, owing to the large fluctuations in the price of silver. We have also opened an office in Tokio, the capital of Japan, where it was necessary we should be in existence in order to keep in touch with Japanese officials, and secure participation in Japanese business, which is more plentiful there than at Yokohama. I think you will agree that these new departures are evidences of progress on our part, and personally I feel assured that results will justify the forward move which we have made. Our trouble is not the lack of business so much as the small volume of capital at our disposal. Those who have had any experience in Bank administration know that it is no easy task for a Bank to earn dividends from the profits derived from its own capital, and that, without deposits and the use of money other than capital, progress must be slow. Until quite recently the condition of the London Money Market has been such as to make it almost impossible for us to either attract deposits or to obtain the use of additional capital in any other form. The time is becoming more favourable, and we hope some means will soon be found of increasing the resources at our command. It will be one of the paradoxes of London Finance at a time when money is so cheap that its interest-earning power is reduced to microscopical proportions, if we, having a profitable and safe means of employing it, cannot obtain it. We can demonstrate that there is both sound and lucrative business to be done, and I hope that the false assumptions recently ruling, that the policy of Japan is aggressive and her public finance unstable, no longer exist. Believe me, Japan has had quite enough of fighting for years to come, and has now embarked on the peaceful pursuit of developing her resources, but it is too much to expect a race with strong martial instincts to impair her fighting strength by allowing her army and navy to become ineffective, and as her allies we should be the last to complain of a reasonable expenditure on repairing the military and naval equipment after the damage caused by the War. I will say no more on the subject of public finance, but it behoves both the public men of Japan and their friends in this country to do all in their power to rebut the false ideas which too often prevail, and to present Japan in her true colours. Such misconceptions are a serious impediment not only to Japan, but to the trade of our own country with the Japanese, and are too often fostered by those who are jealous of the position Great Britain has secured in Eastern waters. I am sure you have noticed with gratification that during the period covered by the accounts, we have not written off the amount of nominal depreciation on our investments, as on 31st March last, but the amount was a very small one—roughly £4,000—and according to present indications we believe no provision will be required. Owing to the small capital we employ, our fixed expenditure is, at the present time, out of proportion to our earnings, an additional incentive for increasing our resources, inasmuch as no increased annual charges would be incurred for handling a capital of double or quadruple the present amount. We hope some means may be found of achieving this desirable object, and, in the meantime, I feel sure that the Directors can rely on the patience as well as the sympathy of the shareholders. The prospects of the Bank are very much brighter than they were last year, and from this time onward I have no doubt whatever that we shall move forward and possibly more rapidly than most of us think. Although the price of the shares is no immediate concern of the Board, it is much to be regretted that sales should take place at such obviously ridiculous values, and shareholders will be wise not to believe any idle talk which they may hear regarding the Bank, but to accept our assurances that the capital of the Bank remains intact, less the preliminary expenses, and that the shares have a breaking up value of over £4 a share. Whilst admitting that the preliminary expenses were high in view of the small amount of capital subscribed, it is a mistaken idea to regard it as lost. A very large proportion of it was for unavoidable out-of-pocket expenses, and in return for the expenditure, we have our organisation both here and in Japan, which must always cost a considerable sum of money, as well as time, to create. In other words, it is an expenditure for which value has been received. Nothing in the world is more easy than to criticise, and although we welcome fair intelligent criticism, and sound advice from our friends, there is nothing more prejudicial to the well being of any company than the irresponsible and I fear sometimes the biased criticism of those who attend meetings with the object of discrediting an undertaking in public estimation. As a rule, such men have a very small holding in the company, and speak not in the interest of the shareholders, but of others who seek to disparage the undertaking in the eye of the public. I make these remarks in no way to discourage bona fide shareholders from speaking. What we appreciate most of all is the shareholder that recognises the difficulties of the Directors, and so far as he is able assists, by putting any little business he can in the way of the Bank, and shuts his ears to the false statements which may be made about it, believing that the Directors and officials of the Bank are much more interested than anyone else in making it a success, and that they may be relied upon to act, not only prudently, but to bring to bear some experience and business acumen in its management. It is only by all pulling together and by mutual confidence between the shareholders and their representatives on the Board that we can achieve the best results, and I believe that I and my co-directors may confidently rely not only upon that courteous and sympathetic treatment which you have hitherto extended to us, but also upon retaining your confident belief that we are acting prudently and wisely in the conduct of affairs.

Mr. MACANDREW seconded the motion, and the Chairman having replied to one or two questions put by Shareholders, the Report and Accounts were adopted.

On the motion of the CHAIRMAN, seconded by Mr. EDMANN, Mr. JOSEPH MACANDREW, the retiring Director, was re-elected a Director of the Company.

On the motion of Mr. UKE, seconded by Mr. CHANDOR, Messrs. WOODTHORPE, BENAN & Co. were re-appointed Auditors for the Company for the ensuing year, at a remuneration of 75 guineas.

On the motion of Capt. G. E. G. F. PIGOTT, seconded by another Shareholder, a cordial vote of thanks to the Chairman was passed, and the proceedings terminated.

THE CONDITIONS OF PEACE BETWEEN THE EAST AND THE WEST.

By J. H. DE FOREST, D.D.

MISSIONARY OF THE AMERICAN BOARD IN JAPAN.
ADDRESS AT THE ANNUAL DINNER OF THE AMERICAN PEACE SOCIETY, MAY 12, 1908.

It is easy enough for the average mind to say that, since public opinion against war is increasing from age to age, since peace societies, humanitarian sentiments, arbitration and the Hague tribunal are well to the front, that these and similar conditions that make for peace may be relied upon to carry us successfully through this new experiment of vast dimensions—the coming together of the West without the cause of great wars.

Very well. Let us give thanks for all the growing conditions that make for peace and friendship among all nations. But let us also humbly bear in mind two facts: (1) All these forces combined are not yet powerful enough to insure even our so-called Christian West from the danger of war among ourselves. Europe is aimed to the teeth and the voice of peace is yet powerless to win disarmament. (2) If in a great civilization like ours, based on a common history, a common religion, a common body of laws and customs, we are still armed for possible conflicts among ourselves, what can we expect when two great civilizations, hitherto comparatively ignorant of each other, some in mutual contact—civilizations with wholly different languages, laws, governments; with religions whose differing sacred traditions are a potent cause of misunderstandings; and the whole problem yet more complicated by race prejudice and by vast economic disturbances?

We have a great unfinished problem in our own western hemisphere as to how we can secure a century of peace at home; and now to this is added another, every way more complex and difficult: how to bring the two halves of the human race into relations of permanent peace based on permanent friendship. It is this last problem I will try to discuss, though briefly and imperfectly, limiting myself to certain phases of the political and religious conditions under which the West meets the East.

THE POLITICAL PROBLEM.

In the political meeting of the East and the West there are many things that rasp the feelings of the people out there, and these we ought to study with great care. Politically we meet them as superiors, relegating them to the place of inferiors. This we call international law exterritoriality. I do not think the ordinary man or woman of the West has any idea of the ceaseless friction and discord and hatred that this system of exterritoriality enforced on the East breeds in the minds of the people out there. You cannot take up a daily paper in the Eastern ports, or enter into a piazza talk at the hotels, or watch the conduct of men in the foreign settlements, without running up against some form of exterritoriality that is offensive and hateful to the people of the land.

THE GOOD OF EXTERRITORIALITY.

Of course, I know that the system of exterritoriality has its good side; that it is the only way our ablest and best jurists have discovered by which commerce and international intercourse are possible on peaceful lines with the East. In the case of Japan it was the spur that hastened her adoption of Western codes of laws, and enabled her to enter among world powers as a political equal many decades sooner than might otherwise have been possible. And under this system those splendid emporiums of Yokohama, Kobe, Shanghai and others have risen from nothing to be counted among the most prosperous centres of world commerce and, better yet, centres for the distribution of world knowledge.

EXTERRITORIALITY.

But all the same, exterritoriality at its best is an infringement of territorial sovereignty, and that is what no independent nation will permit, unless gunboats force it. Its very definition carries a sting in it, for, as Woolsey says, it is "to protect the citizens of civilized nations against the unsuitable laws of more barbarous countries."

There it is! We are civilized, they are semi-barbarous. One illustration will show how it works. Yokohama, fifty years ago, was a small plot of ground ceded to the foreign powers, whereon their nationals were permitted to live and do business. It grew rapidly to be a commercial city of world significance. But the foreigners there were cooped up within a few acres, and could not spend a night, or do business, outside of these narrow limits. On the other hand, Japan had no authority within the foreign settlement. If a foreigner struck, robbed or killed a native, the Japanese could not arrest and try and punish him, but each of the sixteen foreign consuls had his own court for his own nationals. And there were always foreign warships in Japanese waters as delicate reminders of our purpose to maintain our exterritorial privileges.

A NATIONAL HUMILIATION.

You can easily see how all this must have exasperated a great and sensitive people with a history and traditions and literature and art and religions. One of my first discoveries thirty years ago was that the Japanese felt humiliated over their loss of territorial sovereignty, and would do everything possible to regain complete authority over everybody within their empire. "We must hasten the abolition of exterritoriality," was the burden of a stirring address that I heard soon after going to Japan, by a principal of a high school to his graduating pupils. And four years ago, when Professor N. Hozumi, of the Imperial University of Tokyo, spoke at the St. Louis Exposition about Japanese law, he frankly acknowledged the good side of exterritoriality, saying that it had made his government hasten the revision and codification of their civil, criminal and commercial codes. Yet you can see how humiliating this system was, from the Professor's added confession: "At the same time, we felt that the existence of such a legal anomaly was a disgrace to our country and wholly incompatible with that scrupulous regard for the integrity of territorial sovereignty which ought to characterize the intercourse of independent nations. So attempts were repeatedly made to revise the treaties and expunge from them the abominable exterritorial clause."

ABOLISHED IN JAPAN.

Fortunately Japan's new codes of laws, which cost her fifteen years of serious work, satisfied Western powers, and in 1899 what a wave of joy went over the empire when the revised treaties recognized Japan's judicial and tariff autonomy and her full political equality! Ever since the feelings of Japan toward the West have been as equals with equals. There are no longer any concessions in which foreigners are cooped up, and where they have their consular courts. The Japanese alone have authority, and their police and courts are everywhere. The whole empire is open for foreigners to travel or do business as they like, only always under Japanese law and protection. That is, there is no difference between Japanese and foreigners, so far as travel and business and residence are concerned.

Now this political equality with Japan is one of the greatest of steps in the prevention of war. It is a great thing that Japan had such splendid self-control under repeated provocations as to endure forty-five years of exterritorial disgrace without an appeal to arms. Japan is the only nation that has done that, and I am glad to say that, during these hard years of trial, the government and people of the United States, of all the sixteen treaty powers, were the most sympathetic and helpful towards Japan's political ambition. It is because our legation stood for Japan's rights when representatives of other powers were inclined to ignore them; it is because our nation was the only one that returned an indemnity wrung from her in an hour of weakness; it is because our minister was the only one, when the joyous day of Japan's release exterritoriality came, to issue a proclamation congratulating Japan and exhorting all Americans to obey all laws and do everything possible to cement cordial relations with the people—it is for this political sympathy that Japan loves America as she does no other nation, and is one of our warmest friends. And, I may add here, that for us to regard lightly this sincere friendship, or to permit a section of our press and politicians to weaken it by their shameful insinuations and wicked misrepresentations, is the greatest political mistake we can make towards the East. Let us as a government and as a people stand true to this historic friendship with Japan.

EXTERRITORIALITY IN CHINA.

If exterritoriality was a real peril to peaceful relations with Japan, it is much more a source of hatred and even of war with China. For China, with its enormous population and extent of territory, wakes up more slowly than did compact Japan to the necessity of adopting codes of law that fit world intercourse. Moreover, China has not been nearly as skillful in handling exterritorial problems as Japan was, and unscrupulous foreigners have taken advantage of her ignorance and political weakness to exploit her mercilessly. So that now we see, what Japan never would have allowed, China's customs under foreign control, and railroads under foreign construction and ownership, and foreign steamships running hundreds of miles into her most populous and wealthy regions, while foreign gunboats follow.

What I saw in Shanghai a year ago may throw a little light on this subject. Aggressive Westerners have made a wonderful city there, where but a few decades ago were nothing but paddy fields. They have built wide solid roads running out in the country in every direction, and they were laying trolley tracks in the most substantial manner, so that Chinese authorities were opposed to the building of these lines outside of the concession, yet the foreigners were pushing on regardless of the government's refusal to grant them permission. I saw those tall fierce-looking turbaned Sikhs from India used as police in the city, and I heard that they were hated and feared by the Chinese. I also found that some lawless Americans had been running the worst kind of gambling hells, opium dens, and prostitution houses, which our shiftless consular court had not prevented. And but shortly before that there had been such a mis-carriage of justice in the arrest and detention of a Chinese woman by the foreign police that a threatening Chinese mob necessitated the foreigners living under arms for a while, and the assembling of the gunboats of Western powers. In addition to these irritating facts is the ever-present opium question, the solution of which, fortunately, we may hope is in sight.

Now I do not say that, under existing circumstances, all these things are necessarily wicked and unjust, but this much is plain to the man on the street, that no self-respecting government, with power to make others respect it, would stand these things; no, not for an hour.

SOME EVIL RESULTS OF EXTERRITORIALITY.

If the evils of this system were felt only in the very small concessions, it still would be humiliating to any government to have to endure them. But they are felt all through the empire. China, as everybody knows, has been exploited by foreigners in various ways: by getting concessions for railroads, by forcing unwelcome commerce, and even by seizing territory, until now there is a bitter anti-foreign sentiment growing through the eighteen provinces and among the 400,000,000 of China. That disastrous Boxer movement that impelled all the legations; that cast the lives of so many missionaries and their converts; that sent a destructive allied army to Peking which enriched itself by looting the palaces; that forced from humiliated China another huge indemnity; that compelled her to erect, in honor of a murdered German official, a monument which must anger every Chinese who sees it; and the boycott of American goods,—these and their like are some of the recent results, direct and indirect, of this system of exterritoriality.

EXTERRITORIALITY A NINETEENTH CENTURY NECESSITY.

Now I do not see how this offensive system can be wholly abolished, and foreigners be left under the laws of China, so long as those laws permit torture, and so long as bribes are believed to be a power in her courts. At the same time, it is notorious that we "civilized" Westerners have pushed exterritorial privileges far beyond their original intent, until we have stirred up among those whom our international law terms "semi-civilized" wide and bitter hatred and even wars. And the question I want to raise is, Is not one century of this enough? Is there not a better way of politically meeting the peoples of the East that would not be a perpetual humiliation? And should not Western governments be as eager to limit the aggressions of their nationals in China as we are to repel any such aggressions upon ourselves?

POLITICAL SYMPATHY WITH CHINA INCREASING.

Now I believe that some of our Western powers are getting tired and ashamed of our nineteenth century treatment of China, and really want to do something that shall make a happier twentieth century for her and thus for the world. Some brief illustrations will show the beginning of a better political sympathy with her. We of the United States are improving the quality of our consular officers. President Cleveland, seeing the injustice to Japan of sending incapable consular agents there, selected Mr. McVior for the office of Consul General at Yokohama and said to him: "We have deprived the Japanese of their right to govern Americans living in Japan, and therefore it is our duty to Japan to place over our nationals there a man who is a trained lawyer, one who will maintain there the high traditions of our courts."

I have just referred to the recent lawlessness of some Americans in Shanghai whom the Chinese government, of course, couldn't touch. Well, President Roosevelt sent Judge Willey there to drive out those authors of vice and crime, and he did. But they were so firmly entrenched that they resisted, and actually attempted to impeach the Judge. And you have all read, with delight, in the recent papers the fiery, indignant words of our President concerning these vicious Americans in Shanghai: "Judge Willey was attacked solely because of the fearlessness and integrity with which he had stamped out vice and crime in Shanghai. If this attempt to impeach him were to succeed, the beneficiaries would be every keeper of a house of prostitution, every swindling lawyer, every man who lives by corruption and blackmail in the cities of the Far East." And he truly adds: "It is not too much to say that this assault on Judge Willey in the interests of vicious and criminal classes is a public scandal."

Perhaps the greatest political sympathy ever shown to China was when our righteous Secretary Hay called a halt in any partition of China, and put a stop to underhanded plans of European powers by his policy of the open door throughout the East.

Great Britain also is growing more honorable and sympathetic with China, as you all know, by her willingness at last to put an end to the opium trade. This is a great step towards international justice. And in this connection I may say that we of the United States may well praise our government for having forbidden our nationals to engage at all in the sale of opium.

One more act of political kindness Great Britain has recently done which I wish the other powers would imitate. Some of our Western papers published in the open ports of the East have persistently taken an attitude of hostile criticism and even of defiance of the authorities of the land. They have in several instances done everything they could to stir up ill-will and hatred and strife between the East and the West. It is bad enough to have yellow journals at home, but it is far more insulting to permit them on exterritorial soil. So Great Britain has decreed that both the editor and proprietor of any English newspaper on exterritorial ground that publishes anything calculated to stir up international hatred should be severely punished.

These illustrations show how our governments are waking up to the necessity of limiting some of the abuses that have sprung up.

THE MISSIONARY PROBLEM.

But I must hasten to state briefly how the missionary movement, which is now a great world movement, is complicated with this exterritorial problem. Having been a missionary for a third of a century in Japan, the most of which time I was under exterritoriality, I have been compelled to raise the question. How can the great body of some four thousand missionaries in the East help to lessen the friction of exterritoriality and possibly to hasten its entire abolition? Perhaps a brief comparison of Japan with China may give some clues.

The treaties with Japan have never contained the phrase "Merchants and missionaries," while those with China have it. This is a very significant point. Japan was quick to see the greater danger to her territorial integrity if one class of foreigners were permitted to go into the interior, while another class was confined to concessions in the open ports. She saw clearly that the privileges of exterritoriality must be strictly confined to the foreign concessions, where the consular courts were, and that no foreigners should be permitted to live even a rod outside of those narrow limits. Of course this didn't suit us missionaries, who were eager to go to Tokyo, Kyoto and other cities, and there build schools and hospitals and churches for the extension of Christianity. But, all the same, we got there; yet every one of us who went outside those five little concessions of a few acres had to go as an employee of a responsible Japanese, and the only occupation permitted us was that of teachers. Wherever we built our homes and schools and churches, it was always done in the name of a Japanese, who held all legal titles, in which no foreigner's name appeared. No foreigner could legally own a foot of soil, or even a brick or tile of his own house. Nor could he travel from place to place without a passport furnished by the central government through his legation, which passport was given to merchants and missionaries alike for only two reasons,—for purposes of health or science.

You can see at once that Japan, by this regulation, which we missionaries didn't like at all, virtually prevented one large class of difficulties—those arising from disputes over property. Yet flourishing Christian schools and hospitals and asylums and churches were built up with mission money in the interior, all, however, under the names of Japanese only.

ONE REASON WHY MISSIONARIES ARE MURDERED IN CHINA.

But in China, in some shabby way, and because France was the political protector of the Catholic priests, it happened that the treaties recognize two classes of foreigners—merchants and missionaries. The merchants must stick to their narrow foreign concessions, and have no liberty of living or doing business in the interior, while missionaries can freely go pretty much everywhere, and can even buy land in their own name and build everything they want to. And the most astonishing thing of all is, that Catholic missionaries accepted a sort of official status, so that they ranked with prefects and even viceroys, and wore the insignia of native officials. Protestant missionaries were wise enough to refuse this rank, but they carried with them all the privileges of exterritoriality, and were exempt from Chinese authority. At times, like the Catholics, the Protestants have, on the grounds of humanity, interfered in lawsuits, and have come in for their share of political indemnities, none of which things we in Japan could do.

Thus, in China, the doors of friction and misunderstandings and hatred and martyrdom were opened as they never were in Japan. Of course, this is not because the missionaries in Japan were wiser and better than those in China. On the contrary, we wanted to do just as they did. But the Japanese Government was vastly wiser than the Chinese, and by preventing us from getting the least political advantage, they unwittingly made all the better missionaries out of us, for which I, for one, am profoundly grateful. I believe it is because of this, in the main, that no missionary was ever assassinated in Japan; that no native Christians were ever massacred; and that no imperial edicts were ever issued warning the people not to hurt the missionaries. Japan is the only non-Christian nation in which modern missions have been truly successful without stirring up bloody strifes; it is the only nation in which there is no martyr blood; and of the growing naturalized church there it cannot be said, and probably never will be said, that the blood of the martyrs is the seed of the church.

But in China how different! Our missionaries there have indeed done a wonderful work. No more magnificent men and women, in character, in scholarship, in heroic action and noble suffering, can be found anywhere on earth than among the thousands of the self-effacing missionaries in China! Yet, caught in the frictions of exterritoriality, and because they were easy to attack, they have been murdered by the dozen, and the infant church of Christ in China, both Catholic and Protestant is built on the blood of martyrs, both foreign and native.

EXTERRITORIALITY A MISFIT FOR THE TWENTIETH CENTURY.

You, friends, have asked me for some of the conditions of peace between the East and the West. I have tried to show you that, although exterritoriality is intended to prevent strife and to be a real condition of peace, it is in reality a heavy strain on international relations. No nation has ever warded off its dangers so skillfully as Japan did, and by its abolition one vast irritant between her and the nations of the West has been removed. And I may add that it is also for the peace of the world that Japan has taken over Korea, and thus removed that weak and utterly incompetent people from the sphere and perils of exterritoriality.

It cannot be emphasized too much that the real persistent peril to peace between the East and the West is the nineteenth century system of exterritoriality. We are talking of universal arbitration, yet we forget that this exterritoriality exercised towards 400,000,000 of people—the greatest and oldest nation on earth—makes general arbitration impossible with them. So long as territorial sovereignty, the very heart of national honor, is infringed, how can China as a free agent gladly consent to a treaty of arbitration that can touch only those minor matters outside of our exterritorial rights? Arbitration, to mean anything good and lasting, must be based on mutual respect between political equals. We have just concluded a treaty of arbitration with Japan as a political equal, but we can't do it with great China, where it is needed far more for the peace of the world.

GOVERNMENTS MUST DISCOVER NEW METHODS.

What then can be done? Something surely is wrong when such a historic, civilized, moral nation as China is ready and willing to join in equal treaties of arbitration, yet is disqualified because of our exterritorial system imposed by force upon her. If the love of peace is growing; if the spirit of international justice is on the increase; if it is our duty to minimize the causes of international friction,—then it seems to me that it is up to our Governments to find some methods of intercourse with China that shall abolish the most of the evils that have grown up during the last century, and that shall be worthy of this more moral twentieth century. And is it not possible that this splendid principle of arbitration may be extended and gradually substituted for this one-sided and hated exterritoriality? And in some such way of recognizing the political and territorial sovereignty of China, is it not possible to make an atmosphere in which the friendship of the East, instead of its hatred, may be rationally cultivated?

The spirit of justice that has led us to return inflated indemnities; that stamps out the lawlessness of Americans by sending out fearless judges and righteous consular officers; that prepares for a better understanding of the East by raising up a body of competent linguists to be responsible interpreters of Eastern problems; that has led Great Britain to try to abolish the opium trade, and to put an end to press agencies that stir up international ill-will,—this growing spirit of international justice we may confidently trust will find vastly better ways of meeting the great historic peoples of the East than was furnished by the too-shameful exterritoriality of the nineteenth century.

THE PEOPLE ALSO CAN HELP.

Let us, the people, change our attitude towards the East. We have too long looked down upon them as inferiors, and even in our churches we have sweepingly characterized them as heathen and pagan. Our prayers, our preaching, our hymns, and our missionary literature have contained altogether too much of these terms which to the cultured peoples of the East are most highly offensive. I am astonished that a recent memorial, otherwise splendid in its spirit, signed by five secretaries of five great missionary societies, should have on nearly every page these slighting words, "the heathen world." I have heard again and again in the East sentiments of deep resentment at this insulting manner of sweepingly characterizing the people there. It does seem as though the churches of Christ, sending out their messengers of peace and goodwill through the great East, might at least be as polite and considerate as the agents of our governments have to be in all their diplomatic utterances and correspondence. It is hard to estimate the damage to the cause of goodwill between the East and the West that is done by the careless and persistent use of these belated and offensive terms on the part of those whose deepest and sincerest purpose is to do good in the spirit of Christ.

WHAT MISSIONARIES WILL DO.

No one can fail to see that the missionary movement is now a recognized world movement, and it is impossible that a body of three thousand missionaries in China should not be a potent factor in uniting the East and the West. We of Japan, living in the interior, came to see that Japan was worthy of political equality and could be trusted to do right towards us, and so we drew up memorials to our ministers, virtually saying that in our opinion the time had come to trust Japan; and I believe our representations were of political value.

Some such missionaries are also in China. One said to me last year: "I am perfectly willing to come under Chinese authority. I am sure they never would harm me." Already boards are most careful in selecting men for China, men who understand the Gospel of Christ as big enough to be sympathetic with all that is good in international and interdenominational relations. Already some boards have instructed their missionaries to have nothing whatever to do with native lawsuits, and the Chinese government, we are glad to say, has recently deprived Catholic priests of their political rights and privileges. Already Protestant missions have agreed to encourage the formation of one great Chinese Church that shall be fitted to give Christian standards to the family and to society, instead of trying to plant the various Western denominations on Chinese soil, which would be nothing better than exterritorial Christianity.

With this great body of missionaries becoming sympathetic with China's political ideals, with their noble purpose to make a Chinese Church, instead of teaching Western forms of our religion, with their growing schools and colleges teaching world knowledge and world movements, we may confidently expect they will more and more be heard in favor of some more righteous and friendly method of international intercourse that shall not be a perpetual humiliation to the Government and people of China.

MERCHANTS WILL GIVE VALUABLE AID.

The great and powerful body of foreign merchants in the East contains some of the noblest men and women in the world. Yet we are forced to say that the influence of our merchants in the past century has been strong for the perpetuation of exterritoriality. In Japan they resisted its abolition to the utmost, and we may expect that those merchants, by whose indomitable energy such cities as Shanghai were built, will do the same. Yet the spirit of universal justice is growing among the merchants of the world. It is a significant sign of the times that some Chambers of Commerce in the United States sent resolutions of enduring friendship to Japan, a sort of merchants' protest against the senseless jingo hostility to Japan. Commerce is one of the bonds that unite nations with golden cords, and in spite of local frictions, boycotts and even wars in the past, we are confident it will be a most valuable aid in deepening and enriching the friendship between the East and the West.

THE WEST NEEDS THE SYMPATHY OF THE EAST.

There is one very important point, in conclusion, that we in our overstrong sense of superiority are continually overlooking, and that is: we need the sympathetic co-operation of the East in the solution of the most difficult problem the world has ever seen. The complex and trying problem of this century—one laden with untold consequences of good or evil—is the coming together of the millions of the East with the millions of the West, two mighty civilizations, with different languages, customs, institutions, religions. Wherever the lines have hitherto met, there have been frictions, suspicions, strife, wars. The burden of the peaceful solution of this immense world problem, so far as the West is concerned, falls on the Anglo-Saxon race. Great Britain saw perfectly well that the West alone could never do it, and hence that splendid first alliance between the East and the West.

We of this Republic cannot have such a political alliance, but we need the moral and sympathetic alliance with the nations of the East, without which arbitration treaties will be of little avail. To think that we of the West are going to solve this problem without the warm, sympathetic co-operation of the East as equals is a thought born from our traditional thinking of them as heathen, and their religions as false, and their future as hell, while we pride ourselves on being Christian, with the only true religion, and our destiny as heaven. To think that we can solve it by gunboats and repression is Hobsonian in the extreme. We can only solve it by the practice of that universal righteousness and justice which are as necessary among nations as between individuals, both sides being givers and both sides receivers.

In this vast complex world-work every individual may contribute something, by right habits of thought, polite and considerate ways of speaking, and by doing to others as we would they should do to us.

Thus we all can help bridge what is mistakenly called the impassable gulf between the peoples of the East and the West, both of which are, at bottom, God's children, and therefore of necessity brethren.

"STRAINED RELATIONS."

Apropos our London correspondent's telegram, which appeared in our yesterday's issue said the Hongkong Daily Press of July 9th, the following letter which appears in a Service paper of recent date is of more than passing interest:—

SIR,—In the "Naval and Military Record" of May 28th it is pointed out that a state of affairs exists in the Channel fleet which is highly detrimental to the best interests of the service, and might in case of war lead to disaster, and that the paintwork signal incident of last autumn should by this time be forgotten. This opinion is shared by every officer in the fleet, but how is the rapprochement to be brought about?

It will be remembered that on the occasion in question, Lord Charles requested the Admiralty to haul down Sir Percy Scott's flag, which, of course, meant the ruin of Sir Percy's career, and that the Admiralty refused to support his lordship in this request. On this his lordship ordered Sir Percy to in future only communicate with him in writing, and that state of affairs still obtains!

At the Dover festivities, in connection with the visit of the French President, these strained relations were very evident, particularly on the occasion of an official dinner given by the French Consul, when it was discovered at the last moment that Lord Charles and Sir Percy were placed next to one another, and the seating arrangements had to be suddenly altered.

HARMONY.

TELEGRAMS.

(REUTER'S SERVICE.)

THE BRITISH ARMY.

London, July 17.

Mr. Haldane has announced that a regiment of cavalry and four battalions of infantry will be withdrawn from South Africa between Sept. 7th and Feb. 6th.

BRITISH POST OFFICE RECEIPTS.

Mr. Sydney Buxton, Post-master General, estimates that the revenue from the Post Office will show a surplus of 3½ millions.

MOTORING ACCIDENT IN FRANCE.

Ex-Minister Etienne had two of his ribs broken and several internal injuries in a motoring accident at Alencon. His wife also was seriously injured.

PERSIA.

The refugees have left the British Legation at Teheran on receiving assurances of pardon, except a few who have been exiled.

ROSYTH TO BE ABANDONED.

Later.

The Morning Chronicle states that the Government has decided to abandon the naval dockyard at Rosyth on the advice of naval experts.

MACEDONIA.

Further military revolts have taken place at Serres and Newkopol. The Albanians have expelled the Turkish authorities at Limna, and Ferozivitch is doing the same at Prishtina.

INDUSTRIAL RIOTS AT BOMBAY.

July 17.

Fourteen hundred mill hands struck work in Bombay yesterday and attacked mills where the operatives remained at work. They smashed windows and besieged two Europeans in one of the shops. The police were called and fired upon the mob but the casualties are unknown.

THE EULENBERG SCANDALS.

The case of Prince Eulenberg has been postponed indefinitely owing to the illness of the Prince.

THE BALKAN PROBLEM.

Reuter's correspondent at Constantinople says it is believed that the Greek bands, which are now better organized than formerly, are acting in concert with the Young Turks whose propaganda under the banner of union and progress has taken a considerable hold on the army and among intelligent Moslems.

WELCOME RAINS IN INDIA.

London, July 18.

Abundant rains in Upper India are specially benefitting the famine tracts, and the crop prospects generally in India now are excellent.

THE PEARY EXPEDITION.

Commander Peary has left Cape Breton bound for the Arctic regions, where he will spend three years if necessary in attempting to reach the Pole.

MULAI HAFID.

Mulai Hafid, interviewed by the Morning Post's correspondent at Fez, disclaimed any hostility to Europeans, whom he wants to come and develop the country. He says he is prepared to abide by the act of Algeciras.

PERSIA.

A St. Petersburg telegram says that at Tabriz a mob of some thousands, after excited harangues by priests, proceeded to the Bagishuman quarter with a demand for the withdrawal of Rakhim Khan. The latter's horsemen fled without offering resistance, and the town is again in the hands of the revolutionaries.

JAPAN'S POLICY.

Sir Benjamin Stone lunched with Mr. Balfour, Count Komura and Sir Robert Hart at the House of Commons. Komura, replying to the toast of his health, said the change of Government in Japan did not mean any break in the continuity of Japanese policy. She will continue to devote her energies to the improvement of her internal resources.

OLYMPIC WINNERS.

Olympic winners at the Anglo-French Exhibition are: Hammer, J. Flanagan, United States, 170 ft. 4 in, a record; 1500 metre running, Sheppard, United States, 4 m. 5 ½ s.; 3500 metres walk, G. E. Lamer, British, 14 m. 55 s.; 20 kilometres cycling, Kingsburg, British, 34 m. 13 ½ s.; lawn tennis, Ritchie, England, beat Froitzheim, Germany by 7-5, 6-3, 6-4. The sports are proceeding under depressing conditions; there being deluges of rain and the huge stadium being almost empty.

FRENCH DIGNITARIES GO VISITING.

Later.

President Fallieres and M. Pichon have left Paris to visit the Scandinavian Courts. Afterward they will visit the Tsar at Reval. The President, when leaving Dunkirk, declared that the object of his journey will be to draw closer the ties of friendship and alliance on which depend the good relations of the nations of Europe and the maintenance of the peace of the world.

RUSSIA.

St. Petersburg.—The Council of the Empire has approved the budget for 1908. This is the first budget which has received the sanction of the legislature. The Minister of Finance emphasized the gradual restoration of Russian credit, and alluded to the enhancement of Russian securities, which are 10 or 15 per cent. higher than they were in 1906. There are also, he added, signs of improvement in the economic life of Russia.

OFFICER SHOT IN MACEDONIA.

London, July 20.

An officer has shot and seriously wounded General Osman Hidayet, commanding at Monastir, while the latter was reading to the garrison a telegram from the Sultan. This appears to substantiate the report that a number of the officers have notified the authorities at Constantinople that unless 38 arrested officers of the Young Turkey party were liberated all the Generals in Macedonia would be killed. The garrison at Tikvesh has mutinied.

KING EDWARD AND THE AUSTRIAN EMPEROR.

Arrangements are being made for a meeting between King Edward and the Emperor of Austria at Ischl on Aug. 12th.

THE KAISER AND YACHTING.

The Kaiser has entered his yacht Meteor for the Cowes regatta.

THE QUEBEC CELEBRATION.

London, July 20.

The Quebec tercentenary has practically begun. The entire city is en fête and ablaze with decoration. Twelve thousand five hundred troops have arrived from all parts of the Dominion. The British and French Squadrons and an American battleship are lying in the river. The official guests include representatives of the families of Montcalm and other French and British commanders, besides those of General Wolfe.

UNREST IN THE TURKISH ARMY.

Later.

The unrest in the army at Adrianople continues. Groups of officers have telegraphed to the Sultan formulating their grievances, including delay in promotion, arrears of pay and delay in discharge.

FALLIERES' VISIT TO THE BALTIC.

President Fallieres has arrived at Copenhagen on board the battleship Verité, escorted by a French squadron. He was received by the King, the Princes, and diplomats and proceeded to the palace.

TABRIZ.

The correspondent of The Times at Tabriz says that the royal infantry sent from Teheran to restore order left their rifles and uniforms in Tabriz and absconded en masse.

ADMIRAL ROHJDESTVENSKY DEAD.

Later.

Admiral Rohjdestvensky has died at Balmheim from heart trouble, resulting from his wounds in the battle of Tsushima.

OLD AGE PENSIONS.

The House of Lords has read the old age pensions bill a second time by 123 to 16.

THE NEW YORK-PARIS RACE.

The German car, which has led the motor race from New York to Paris, has arrived at St. Petersburg.

THE OLYMPIC GAMES.

The present position of the countries competing in the Olympic games is: Great Britain 30, United States 9, Sweden 5, Norway and Germany 2, Canada, France and Belgium 1. Notable English wins were that by Bartlett, who covered 100 kilometres on a cycle in 161m. 48s. making a world record, and that of Voight who covered 5 miles in a flat race in 25m. 11½s.

VISCOUNT KOMURA.

London, July 21.

Viscount Komura starts on July 27th for Japan for Siberia.

NEW ZEALAND AND THE AMERICAN SQUADRON.

Wellington, (N. Z.)—The Premier, Sir J. G. Ward, says that the American fleet which is coming to Australia is not that of a foreign country but of a nation which is kith and kin of the Anglo-Saxon race. There will some day, he added, be a fight to decide whether white men or Orientals are to govern Australia and the Pacific islands. An American fleet will then fight shoulder to shoulder with the old world.

ASSAULTS ON OFFICERS IN MACEDONIA.

Murderous assaults on Turkish officers, supposed to be committed by adherents of the Young Turkey party among the subalterns, continue in Macedonia. A lieutenant-colonel has been murdered at Seres, another officer has been murdered at a place called Abre, and a lieutenant-colonel has been wounded at Salonika.

OLYMPIC WINNERS.

London, July 22.

At the Olympic Games of the Anglo-French Exhibition the Americans won the final for the 800 metres, also the high jump. America is also said to have won most of the heats in the sprints.

FIGHTING AT TABRIZ.

A telegram from Tabriz states that fierce fighting has been going on there, two hundred being killed and wounded.

MACEDONIA.

A telegram from Salonika reports that six batteries of Anatolian redifs proceeded to Monastir where the Young Turks have formed a regular government at Okhreda and Resnia. A Greek band killed thirty Bulgarians and burned down twenty houses at Pelpicia (?) near Monastir.

DEATH OF BISHOP POTTER.

The death is reported of the well-known American ecclesiastic, Bishop Potter.

ROHJDESTVENSKY NOT DEAD.

Later.

The report of the death of Admiral Rohjdestvensky is not true. It arose from confusion with a person of the same name who was undergoing treatment at Bad Nauheim.

COUNT KOMURA.

Count Komura has had an audience with the King and has presented his letters of recall. Sir Edward Grey was present. Afterwards Komura had a farewell audience of the Queen.

DE BEERS CLOSE DOWN.

The De Beers have decided to close down the De Beers mines, which will necessitate the discharge of 200 white men and 1,200 natives.

GAMBLING IN THE MALAY STATES.

Mr. R. Laidlaw (Renfrewshire) asked Colonel Seely (Under Secretary for the Colonies) to reconsider his refusal to continue (? abolish) licensed gambling in the Malay States after the present leases expire. Colonel Seely replied that while the Government was desirous of putting an end to the system, precipitate action would do more harm than good.

THE STANDARD OIL FINE.

Chicago.—The Circuit Court of Appeal has quashed the fine of 29 million dollars imposed on the Standard Oil Co. on August 3rd last year, and has ordered a retrial.

(By SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH THE "TOKYO ASAHI SHIMBUN.")

PERSIA.

London, July 16.

Correspondents at Tabriz say that the Shah's cavalry, which has been despatched to establish order, are committing depredations on the Russian merchants, who have suffered enormous losses and had 17 killed.

MACEDONIA.

The press unanimously acclaim the British proposal for a mobile force to restore order in Macedonia.

ANNAM.

The Acting-Governor of Indo-China informs the Colonial Office that the unrest in Annam is ended.

CONSERVATION OF AMERICAN RESOURCES.

The committee for the conservation of national resources, which was appointed by the President in June, has already perfected a system for collecting data. The States are promptly rendering assistance.

THE TROUBLE AT TABRIZ.

London, July 18.

A special telegram from Tabriz says the situation has suddenly changed. The citizens, having agreed upon united action against the Government forces, vigorously assaulted headquarters. The General withdrew his cavalry to the suburbs. Many were killed and the crowd looted the houses of the Shah's supporters.

THE PEARY EXPEDITION.

London, July 18.

Commander Peary cables The Times from Sydney, Nova Scotia, that the ship Roosevelt was starting on her voyage to the North Pole.

GERMANY AND FRANCE.

Berlin.—Despite the repeated assurances of the French Government, various newspapers continue an anti-French campaign, declaring that the French officials are not carrying out the Government policy. Socialists are holding meetings to protest against this agitation.

MACEDONIA.

Vienna telegraphs that it is officially reported in Constantinople that the Greeks are transporting guns and ammunition into Macedonia. Some of the Turkish troops are reported untrustworthy.

AMERICAN POLITICS.

Washington.—The political atmosphere is tranquil. Both Taft and Bryan are busy preparing for their nomination to the Presidency. There are dissensions in the Democratic camp and it is reported that certain labour leaders are insubordinate.

MUTINY IN THE TURKISH ARMY.

Vienna.—While the Turkish General Osman Hidayet was reading a pacificatory order in the barracks at Monastir an officer fired several shots, severely wounding him. In consequence there are signs of unrest in the army. The Sultan has borrowed £80,000 to be sent to Salonika to distribute among the troops and has promoted 550 officers.

RUSSIA.

Later.

St. Petersburg.—Subscriptions to the new internal loan amply cover 13¼ million pounds placed with banks, the remaining 6¼ millions will be obtained from the Savings Bank. The press continue to sharply attack Germany in connection with the Macedonian question.

CHINESE SUSPICIONS.

London, July 21.

Peking.—The recent new regulations forbidding surveys except by special permission are due to the Government's alarm at recent Japanese surveys in Mongolia, the results of which, the Government is convinced, were never published.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

On the London Stock Exchange Japanese stocks are dull despite the satisfactory May returns.

THE BALKANS.

Vienna.—A Greek band attacked a Bulgarian village near Monastir and massacred 25 villagers (? villagers).

EUROPEAN POLITICS.

The German Peace Society has issued a manifesto in which it protests against the groundless war scares, and ridicules the idea that the British undertakings with France and Russia are intended to isolate Germany.

STOCK EXCHANGE.

London, July 22.

Japanese securities are lower on the Stock Exchange.

PERSIA.

Tabriz.—There has been brisk fighting and the revolutionaries scored a success over the Shah's troops on Tuesday. The latter were re-inforced and compelled the revolutionaries to retreat to their defences.

THE QUEBEC FETE.

A special telegram from Quebec says that a feature of the tercentenary fête is the extraordinary popularity of Lord Roberts, alike with the troops and the populace.

NEW GERMAN BATTLESHIP.

A new battleship of 18,000 tons was to be launched at Stettin on the 22nd. She is the first ship of the 1907 programme and was only a year in building.

AMERICAN POLITICS.

Washington.—A meeting of the Western Republican leaders in connexion with Taft's presidency campaign is stated to have revealed the fact that at least five States which were carried by Roosevelt in the last election are now doubtful. Mr. Bryan has issued an appeal to the Democratic press to solicit a dollar subscription on his behalf.

THE QUEBEC CELEBRATION.

London, July 23.

A special telegram from Quebec says that the Prince of Wales arrived in the afternoon and received an enthusiastic welcome. Thousands lined the banks of the river. The Prince was received by the Lieut.-Governor, the Premier and the Cabinet Ministers. Replying to the Government's address, His Highness specially referred to the loyalty of the French Canadians, and cordially approved of setting apart the battlefield and the Plain of Abraham as a national memorial.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

Japanese securities are steadier on the Stock Exchange.

THE DISAFFECTION IN INDIA.

News from Calcutta states that stern measures have been taken against the agitators. The tone in Bengal is considerably improved. Commenting on the sentence of six years transportation passed on Tilak, the leader of the agitation, The Times points out that although repressive measures have now been taken, due measures of reform will be developed as promised, in order to meet as far as possible the aspirations of social reformers.

(RECEIVED IN TOKYO.)

THE PROPOSED AUSTRALIAN SERVICE.

(From the Japanese Consul-General in Sydney.)

The Governments of New South Wales and Victoria, considering it necessary that a regular line of steamers should be opened between Shanghai and Australia, have decided to combine in granting a four years' subsidy, and have invited applications from ship-owners willing to undertake the service.

THE HAGUE HALL OF PEACE.

On the 12th of last October at the second meeting of the Hague Conference, the French Delegate proposed that a Hall of Peace should be elected, and that every country should present not only building materials, but also representative works of art, in aid of the institution. This proposal was unanimously agreed to, and now the building committee have inquired, through the Dutch Government, what materials Japan intends to contribute. The matter is now under consideration in Tokyo.

(RECEIVED AT THE FOREIGN OFFICE.)

AMERICAN RAILWAY FREIGHTS.

Mr. Consul-General Mizuno telegraphs that the American Railways have fixed the following rates:—

Antimony .....	$1.00
Pamboo ware basket work .....	1.50
Brushes .....	1.00

Toys, articles of vertu, metal work, decorative articles, 1.50 per 100lbs. for goods not exceeding $10 in value and $2.00 for goods above that value.

Satsuma Faience, except first class.....	1.30
Paper wares, lanterns, &c. ....	1.25
Fireworks .....	1.00
Lacquers .....	1.25
Linen stuffs .....	1.00
Fancy matting, &c. ....	1.25
Straw braid .....	1.50
Tea .....	1.25

The above are all the highest rates. In the case of a second waggon-load, there will be discount.

(FROM THE "ASAHI SHIMBUN.")

MR. K. HAYASHIDA.

New York, July 15.

Mr. K. Hayashida, Chief Secretary of the House of Representatives, left New York on July 15th for England. The engineers of his party will stay in America for some days more to investigate the construction of buildings.

MR. O'BRIEN.

San Francisco, July 15.

Mr. Thos. O'Brien, American Ambassador to the Imperial Japanese Court, has arrived in San Francisco on his way home on leave. In reply to an interviewer, he is reported to have said that there were some comments against Japan on her action towards the South Manchurian Railway. There was no doubt that the freight rates for Japanese merchandise were lower than those for foreign goods. However, there was no prejudicial treatment toward American merchandise. Referring to the proposed visit of the American Fleet to Japan, his Excellency stated that the visit of the battleships was much talked about in Japan. The Japanese were busy making preparations to welcome the American officers and bluejackets, and the visit of the squadron will further strengthen the sincere relations between the two countries. A large number of Japanese warships will be appointed to receive the Americans. He further went on to say that Japan was of course unwilling to cause a dispute with America in regard to the immigrants question, for the Japanese Government was endeavouring to settle the question by proper means. In conclusion, he added that Counts Hayashi and Komura were friends of America and that in consequence of the present change in the Japanese Cabinet, nothing could affect America.

RAILWAYS IN AMERICA.

San Francisco, July 16.

The representatives of leading manufacturing in America will hold a meeting on July 27th in Chicago. They will oppose various railways which have raised the freight rates by over 10 per cent. on an average.

THE DEMOCRATS.

San Francisco, July 17.

The president of the Labourer's Union has asked Mr. Hearst to support Mr. Bryan at the forthcoming election. Mr. Hearst refused to comply by saying that the platform of the Democrats was not sincere.

RAILWAY FREIGHT IN AMERICA.

Mr. Tomita, Japanese Consul in Chicago, has stated to the Chamber of Commerce in the city that the proposed rise in the freight rate on various railways would prevent the further development of Japanese commerce in America and asked them to take the necessary steps towards the railways. The American Chamber replied that the rise of the freight would also injure the American business and that the union would endeavour to induce the railway companies to alter their proposal.

The presidents of various railway companies have met in New York and considered the proposed rise of the freight rates. No conclusion has yet been brought about. Probably the proposed rise will not be enforced.

BRITISH NAVY.

The British Government has decided to purchase three of the Brazilian warships which are under construction in England.

THE TOKYO EXHIBITION AND AMERICA.

San Francisco, July 20.

Mr. Loomis and other Americans on the committee for the Grand Exhibition to be held in Tokyo in 1912 will leave for Japan at the end of this month with a view to making arrangements with the Japan Exhibition authorities for selecting a place to establish the building. During their visit to Japan, the committee will make investigations on American merchandise in the Orient. The committee have provided an office with regard to exhibition affairs. This winter they will visit the governors of various states asking them to persuade the business men in their respective states to exhibit their merchandise in the Tokyo Exhibition.

The American Government intends to take steps on a large scale towards the Japanese Exhibition. The American enterprise will create special benefit not only to the commercial relations between America and Japan but to diplomatic connections.

MR O'BRIEN.

Mr. Thos O'Brien, American Ambassador to the Imperial Japanese Court, has arrived in Chicago on leave. In reply to an interviewer, he is reported to have said that the ambition of the Japanese is bent on commerce and not on military matters.

"I want it understood," said a wife to her husband, "that I am a woman of few words."
"Yes, I know," replied the husband, "but don't you think you are overworking them a trifle?"

20"	x	1 1/2"	6	in me,	doz.	3.25-3.37
22"	x	1 1/2"	7	"	"	4.25-4.52
24"	x	1 1/2"	7 1/2	"	"	5.10-5.40

Figured Habutae (Hem stitched.)

20" x 1 1/2"	9	"	4.30-4.50
22" x 1 1/2"	10	"	5.30-5.60
24" x 1 1/2"	12	"	7.20-7.40

Figured Habutae (scallop'd):—

10" x 1 corner embroidered	"	0.95-1.00
12" x 4	"	1.15-1.20

COPPER.

The market is not yet settled.
According to a London telegram under date July 20th, the quotation was £58.30.

During six months ended June 30th, the fluctuations in London were as follows:—

	Highest.	Lowest.	Average.
January	64.02 6	61.00.0	62.04.10
February	61.02.6	57.00.0	59.02.00
March	61.10.0	56.10.0	58.17.06
April	61.10.0	57.11.6	58.17.06
May	58.10.0	57.00.0	57.07.01
June	58.00.0	56.07.6	57.16.09

It is to be noted from the foregoing figures that price are gradually going down. It is believed that this is due to largestocks in Europe and America; to increased production in America; and to insufficient demand.

Refined per 100 kin...	Yen 45-49
Bessemer per 100 kin ...	" 52-50
Electric refined per 100 kin ...	" 53-57

TEA.

No change since previous report.

From the first offering of new tea in Yokohama up to July 21st 6,462,300 kin were sold and the stock on Thursday aggregated 141,000 kin.

QUOTATIONS.

Choicest ...	Y. 65	upward
Choice ...	60 to 65
Finest ...	55 to 60
Fine ...	50 to 55
Good Medium ...	45 to 50
Medium ...	32 to 34
Good Common ...	29 to 32
Common ...	26 to 29

RICE.

Tokyo.—The market has been active.

Osaka.—Unsettled.

Kobe.—Generally dull.

Foreign rice is brisk. Enquiries from country traders have continued.

Osaka and Kobe.—The markets remain steady.

Domestic rice in Fukagawa	491,799
Foreign rice in Fukagawa	159,249
Delivery.	Closing Price.
July	Yen. —
August	17.19
September	17.26

RICE AT WHOLESALE: STANDARD PRICE.

	(Tokyo.)	per roku .
Superior	Yen 17.80
Medium	17.40
Common	16.40
Average	17.10
(Osaka.)	(Kobe.)
July	16.66	July 16.43
August	16.78	August 16.61
September	16.79	September 16.69

EXCHANGE.

Yokohama July 24

London silver 1/4 lower and China sterling quotations not yet in, but local rates are firmer on China in anticipation, other rates being unaltered and closing for the mail via Siberia as under.

London—Bank T.T.	1/0 3/4
— Bills on demand	1/0 3/4
— 4 months' sight	1/0 3/4
— Private 4 months' sight	1/0 3/4
— 6 months' sight	1/0 3/4
Paris & Lyons—Bank sight	1/5 1/2
— Private 4 months' sight	1/5 1/2
— 6 months' sight	1/5 1/2
Hongkong—Bank sight	per $100 88 3/4
— Private 10 days' sight	do 86 3/4
Shanghai—Bank sight	84 3/4
— Private 10 days' sight	85 3/4
India—Bank sight	153
— Private 30 days' sight	155
America—Bank sight	49 3/4
— Private 30 days' sight	50 3/4
— Private 4 months' sight	51 3/4
Germany—Bank sight	207
— Private 4 months' sight	211 3/4
Har Silver (London)	24 3/4

* Nominal.

FUKUSHIMA &amp; Co., BROKERS &amp; DEALERS IN BONDS &amp; SHARES, FINANCIAL AGENTS, &amp;c.

Tokyo, July 24th, 1908.

BONDS AND STOCKS.	Face Value.	Paid Up.	Dividend Per Annum.	Dividend Payable.	Average Quotations.	Remarks.
Bonds and Debentures.
EXCHEQUER BONDS 1st	Yen 100	Yen 100	5	June to December	99.70
EXCHEQUER BONDS 2nd	100	100	5	March to September	96.10
EXCHEQUER BONDS 3rd	100	100	5	March to September	95.10
NEW IMPERIAL BONDS ISSUED 1906	100	100	5	June to December	82.90
Tobacco Monopoly Bonds (Mark 3=B)	100	100	5	June to December	94.30
Tobacco Monopoly Bonds (Mark 12=E)	100	100	5	June to December	92.50
*Tobacco Monopoly Bonds (Mark 5=H)	100	100	5	June to December	84.10
CONSOLIDATION LOAN BONDS (SEIRI)	100	100	5	June to December	81.50
IMPERIAL LOAN BONDS (GOKURI)	100	100	5	June to December	81.50
Yokohama Water Works Bonds	100	100	6	June to December	90.50
Yokohama City Works Bonds	100	100	6	June to December	88.00
Osaka Harbour Construction Bonds	100	100	6	June to December	94.00
Kobe Water Works Bonds	100	100	6	June to December	90.00
Kawasaki Shipbuilding Yard's Debentures	100	100	6	June to December	91.00
Osaka Steam Ship Co.'s Debentures	100	100	6	June to December	91.00
Banks.
Nippon Ginko (Bank of Japan)	200	200	12	February to August	529.00
Kogyo Ginko (First class)	50	50	7 1/2	June to December	54.80
(Second class)	50	37.50	7 1/2	June to December	40.80
YOKOHAMA SPECIE BANK	100	100	12	February to August	197.50	E.D.
Taiwan Ginko (Bank of Formosa)	100	100	10	February to August	133.80
Railway &amp; Electric Tramway Co.'s
Nippon Railway Co.	50	50	11 1/2	June to December	87.00	E.D.
3rd Issue New	50	35	11 1/2	June to December	61.00
Sanyo Railway Co.	50	50	11	March to September	74.70
Kwansai Railway Co.	50	50	5.9	March to September	42.90
Kyushu Railway Co.	50	50	9.7	March to September	69.05
Hokkaido Tanko Steamship Co. (New Issue)	50	50	14	June to December	81.50	E.D.
Tokio Railway Co.	50	50	17	June to December	21.80
New	50	25	7	May to November	56.00
KEIHIN ELECTRIC TRAMWAY CO.	50	50	10	May to November	63.80
YOKOHAMA ELECTRIC TRAMWAY CO.	50	50	6	May to November	35.00
Hanshin Electric Tramway Co.	50	50	12	April to October	89.50
Electric Light and Gas Co.'s.
TOKYO ELECTRIC LIGHT CO.	50	50	10	May to November	64.50
New	50	25	10	May to November	31.80
YOKOHAMA ELECTRIC LIGHT CO.	50	50	14	May to November	63.00	E.D.
New	50	20	14	May to November	28.80
Osaka Electric Light Co.	50	50	15	June to December	103.00
Kobe Electric Light Co.	50	50	14	June to December	68.50	E.D.
Uji-gawa Electric Co.	50	12 1/2	10.	March to September	6.00
TOKYO GAS CO.	50	50	13	June to December	79.20	E.D.
New, 2nd Issue	50	12.50	13	June to December	27.20	E.D.
Osaka Gas Co.	50	50	8	June to December	77.50	E.D.
Steamship and Dockyard Co.'s.
Japan Mail Steam Ship Co. (N.Y.K.K.)	50	50	12	April to October	80.00
Oriental Steam Ship Co. (T.K.K.K.)	50	50	12	February to August	32.80
Osaka Steamship Co. (Osaka Shosen K.K.)	25	25	6	June to December	14.40	E.D.
YOKOHAMA DOCK CO.	50	33	12	May to November	48.00
Uraga Dock Co.	50	50	no.	June to December	10.00
Kawasaki Ship Building Yard	50	50	12 1/2	May to November	53.50
Spinning and Weaving Co.'s.
KANEGAFUCHI COTTON SPINNING CO.	50	50	16	June to December	84.20	E.D.
New	50	12 1/2	16	June to December	24.80
Tokyo Cotton Spinning Co.	50	50	8	June to December	31.50
FUJI GASIAN COTTON SPINNING CO.	50	50	18	June to December	81.70
Imperial Hemp Weaving Co.	50	50	12	June to December	49.70
New	50	25	12	June to December	24.50
Nissin Spinning Co.	50	12.50	no.	May to November	7.60
Exchange.
TOKYO STOCK EXCHANGE	50	50	10	May to November	108.50
Tokyo Rice Exchange	50	50	15	May to November	90.00
Osaka Stock Exchange	50	50	9	May to November	99.50
Osaka Rice Exchange	50	50	9 1/2	June to December	62.00	E.D.
Brewery Co.'s.
DAI NIPPON BEER BREWERY CO.	50	50	15	June to December	75.20	E.D.
Japan Beer Brewery Co. (Kirin)	50	50	8	June to December	59.50
Godown Companies.
YOKOHAMA CHIUO GODOWN CO., LTD.	50	50	12	June to December	50.50	E.D.
Yokohama Bueki Godown Co., Lt.	20	20	15	June to December	28.50
Fire Insurance Co.'s.
Tokyo Fire Insurance Co., Ltd.	50	12	no.	June	11.50	E.D.
YOKOHAMA FIRE & TRANS. INS. CO. LTD.	50	12	16	May	16.60
Meiji Fire Insurance Co., Ltd.	50	50	20	March	220.00
Oil Co.'s.
Hoden Oil Co.	50	50	36	March to September	99.30	E.D.
Nippon Oil Co.	50	50	24	June to December	82.00
Nanboku Oil Co.	50	50	10	June to December	37.00
Sugar Manufacturing Co.'s.
*Dai-Nippon Sugar Refinery Co.	50	50	15	April to October	67.30
New	50	12 1/2	15	April to October	19.50
Taiwan Sugar Manufacturing Co.	50	50	10	June	54.30	E.D.
New	50	25	10	June	26.00
Ensui-kow Sugar Manufacturing Co.	50	12 1/2	20	June	15.70

S. Sellers, B. Buyers, St. Steady, N. Nominal, E.D. Ex dividend. † Ex New ‡ Cannot be held by foreigners in their own names.

MAIL STEAMERS.

NEXT MAIL IS DUE

From	Line	Steamer	Date
Europe	N. D. L.	Scharnhorst	F. July 24
Hongkong	G. N.	Minnesota	Sa. July 25
Europe	M. M.	Armand Belic	Tu. July 28
America	T. K. K.	Tenyo Maru	Th. July 29
Hongkong	P. M.	Manchuria	W. July 29
Vancouver	C. P. R.	Em. of India	W. July 29
Hongkong	T. K. K.	Nippon Maru	Su. Aug. 2
Hongkong	C. P. R.	Em. of China	M. Aug. 3
Hongkong	B. T.	Suovic	Tu. Aug. 4
Seattle	N. Y. K.	Iyo Maru	Th. Aug. 6
America	P. M.	Korea	Su. Aug. 9
Hongkong	O. & O.	Asia	Tu. Aug. 11
Tacoma	B. T.	Shawmut	Th. Aug. 13
Hongkong	P. & A.	Nunantia	Sa. Aug. 15
America	T. K. K.	America Maru	W. Aug. 19
Vancouver	C. P. R.	Em. of Japan	W. Aug. 19
Hongkong	P. M.	Mongolia	Tu. Aug. 18
Hongkong	C. P. R.	Glenfarg	Th. Aug. 20
Portland	P. & A.	Nicomedia	Sa. Aug. 22
America	P. M.	Siberia	F. Aug. 28
America	P. M.	China	Th. Sept. 3

- 1 Left Shanghai on the 20th inst.
- 2 Left Kobe on the 23rd inst.
- 3 Left Hongkong on the 20th inst.
- 4 Left Honolulu on the 18th inst.
- 5 Left Hongkong on the 18th inst.
- 6 Left Vancouver on the 15th inst.
- 7 Left Seattle on the 21st inst.

NEXT MAIL LEAVES

For	Line	Steamer	Date
Europe	M. M.	Tourane	Sa. July 25
Australia	N. V. K.	Nikko Maru	Sa. July 25
Shanghai	N. Y. K.	Chikuzen Maru	Su. July 26
Hongkong	N. Y. K.	Aki Maru	M. July 27
Seattle	G. N.	Minnesota	W. July 29
Hongkong	C. P. R.	Em. of India	W. July 29
Europe	N. Y. K.	Kamo Maru	W. July 29
Hongkong	T. K. K.	Tenyo Maru	Th. July 30
America	P. M.	Manchuria	F. July 31
Europe	N. D. L.	Scharnhorst	Sa. Aug. 1
Vancouver	C. P. R.	Em. of China	M. Aug. 3
America	T. K. K.	Nippon Maru	Tu. Aug. 4
Tacoma	B. T.	Suovic	W. Aug. 5
Seattle	N. Y. K.	Shinano Maru	W. Aug. 5
Hongkong	P. M.	Korea	M. Aug. 10
America	O. & O.	Asia	Su. Aug. 13
Hongkong	B. T.	Shawmut	F. Aug. 14
Portland	P. & A.	Nunantia	Su. Aug. 16
Hongkong	C. P. R.	Em. of Japan	W. Aug. 19
America	P. M.	Mongolia	W. Aug. 19
Vancouver	C. P. R.	Glenfarg	Th. Aug. 20
Hongkong	T. K. K.	America Maru	Th. Aug. 20
Hongkong	P. & A.	Nicomedia	Su. Aug. 23
Hongkong	P. M.	Siberia	Sa. Aug. 29
Hongkong	P. M.	China	Sa. Sept. 5

LATEST SHIPPING.

ARRIVALS

Oanfa, British steamer, 5,876, W. C. Lycett, 17th July.—Glasgow and Liverpool via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.

Mongolia, American steamer, 8,700, Henry E. Morton, 17th July.—San Francisco via Honolulu, Mails and General.—P. M. S.S. Co.

Saishu Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,324, I. Nomu, 17th July.—Kushiro, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Benten Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,668, M. Deguchi, 17th July.—Otaru via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Konan Maru, Japanese steamer, 858, Aiba, 17th July.—Yawata, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Kosai Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,423, M. Ogino, 17th July.—Shanghai via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Matsuyama Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,959, K. Iwanaga, 17th July.—Otaru via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Yerimo Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,350, N. Koba, 17th July.—Takao, General.—Osaka Shosen Kaisha.

Empress of China, British steamer, 3,003, R. Archibald, 18th July.—Vancouver, B.C., Mails and General.—C. P. R. Co.

Riojun Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,980, T. Tibbals, 18th July.—Otaru via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Fukushu Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,090, 18th July.—Anping via ports, General.—Osaka Shosen Kaisha.

Yechigo Maru, Japanese steamer, 712, Y. Terada, 19th July.—Yokkaichi, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

China, American steamer, 3,186, D. F. Friele, 19th July.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—P. M. S.S. Co.

Glenfarg, British steamer, 2,350, H. W. L. Holman, 20th July.—Vancouver, B.C., Mails and General.—C. P. R. Co.

Benten Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,668, M. Deguchi, 20th July.—Otaru via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Hirashima Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,035, J. C. Richards, 20th July.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Choshu Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,203, H. S. Smith, 20th July.—Taipei, General.—Osaka Shosen Kaisha.

Fusan Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,500, Iwamatsu, 20th July.—Takao, General.—Osaka Shosen Kaisha.

Tosa Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,610, J. Nagao, 20th July.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Kumeric, British steamer, 4,006, Cowley, 21st July.—Seattle Wash., Mails and General.—Dodwell & Co., Ltd.

Saxonia, German steamer, 3,316, Habel, 21st July.—Hamburg via ports, General.—C. Illies & Co.

Chikuzen Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,458, N. Shimizu, 21st July.—Shanghai via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Monteagle, British steamer, 3,953, W. Davison, 22nd July.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—C. P. R. Co.

Menelaus, British steamer, 3,006, R. G. Woodget, 22nd July.—Glasgow and Liverpool via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.

Kincraig, British steamer, 2,382, W. F. Cowrie, 22nd July.—Stax, Phosphate, Samuel Samuel & Co.

Anhui, British steamer, 1,350, A. H. Harris, 22nd July.—Shanghai via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.

Wakamiya Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,437, R. Yamawaki, 22nd July.—Osaka, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Kamo Maru, Japanese steamer, 5,284, F. L. Sommer, 22nd July.—Nagasaki, Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Yechigo Maru, Japanese steamer, 712, T. Terada, 22nd July.—Yokkaichi, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Aki Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,995, M. Yagi, 23rd July.—Seattle, Wash., Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Nubia, British steamer, 3,824, F. J. Fox, 23rd July.—London via ports, General.—P. & O. S.N. Co.

Savuki Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,787, S. J. G. Parson, 23rd July.—London and Antwerp via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Mikawa Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,853, E. Combes, 23rd July.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Caravelas, French steamer, 1,971, Le Clere, 23rd July.—Tacoma, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Bentlarig, British steamer, 2,510, A. Wallace, 23rd July.—London and ports, General.—Cornes & Co.

DEPARTURES.

Siberia, American steamer, 5,655, A. Zeeder, 17th July.—San Francisco via Honolulu, Mails and General.—P. M. S.S. Co.

Alesia, German steamer, 3,312, J. Ernst, 17th July.—Portland, Or., Mails and General.—P. & A. S.S. Co.

Soyo Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,230, T. Oa, 17th July.—Mojito.—Toyo Kisen Kaisha.

Mongolia, American steamer, 8,700, Henry E. Morton, 18th July.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—P. M. S.S. Co.

Empress of China, British steamer, 3,003, R. Archibald, 18th July.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—C. P. R. Co.

Chinhua, British steamer, 1,349, J. B. Harris, 18th July.—Shanghai via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.

Prinz Ludwig, German steamer, 5,704, F. von Binzer, 18th July.—Bremen and Hamburg via ports, Mails and General.—H. Ahrens & Co., Nachf.

Ashlabula, British Tank steamer, 4,527, G. Harding, 18th July.—Itzaki, Kerosene Oil.—Standard Oil Co.

Progress, Norwegian steamer, 1,611, Selyervig, 18th July.—Mojito.—Samuel Samuel & Co.

Oanfa, British steamer, 5,876, W. C. Lycett, 18th July.—Puget Sound ports, Mails and General.—Butterfield & Swire.

Lothian, British steamer, 3,223, Lockhart, 18th July.—Batavia, General.—Dodwell & Co., Ltd.

Telemachus, British steamer, 4,802, J. H. Goodwin, 18th July.—Marseilles, Havre and Liverpool via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.

Yamaguchi Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,059, Kamo-shita, 19th July.—Shanghai via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Yechigo Maru, Japanese steamer, 712, T. Terada, 19th July.—Yokkaichi, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Riojun Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,980, Tibbals, 19th July.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Matsuyama Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,959, K. Iwanaga, 19th July.—Otaru via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Fukushu Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,090, 20th July.—Kobe, General.—Osaka Shosen Kaisha.

Indrapura, British steamer, 3,152, W. T. Kelway, 20th July.—Otaru, General.—Jardine, Matheson & Co.

Saishu Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,324, I. Nomu, 20th July.—Kushiro, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Glenfarg, British steamer, 2,350, H. W. L. Holman, 20th July.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—C. P. R. Co.

Kumeric, British steamer, 4,006, Cowley, 21st July.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—Dodwell & Co., Ltd.

Benten Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,668, M. Deguchi, 21st July.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Konan Maru, Japanese steamer, 858, Aiba, 22nd July.—Wakamatsu, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Mike Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,060, R. Smith, 21st July.—Otaru via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Bingo Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,873, A. Christiansen, 22nd July.—London and Antwerp via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Hiroshima Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,035, J. C. Richards, 22nd July.—Otaru via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Fusan Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,500, Iwamatsu, 22nd July.—Katsura, General.—Osaka Shosen Kaisha.

Yerimo Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,350, N. Koba, 22nd July.—Mojito, General.—Osaka Shosen Kaisha.

Tosa Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,610, J. Nagao, 22nd July.—Seattle, Wash., Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

China, American steamer, 3,186, D. F. Friele, 22nd July.—San Francisco via Honolulu, Mails and General.—P. M. S.S. Co.

Monteagle, British steamer, 3,953, W. Davison, 22nd July.—Vancouver, B.C., Mails and General.—C. P. R. Co.

Kosai Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,423, Ogino, 23rd July.—Shanghai via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Mike Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,060, R. Smith, 23rd July.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Yechigo Maru, Japanese steamer, 712, T. Terada, 23rd July.—Yokkaichi, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

PASSENGERS.

ARRIVALS

Per American steamer Mongolia from San Francisco via Honolulu:—Mr. R. C. Dennison, Mr. Arthur Le Grand Doty, Mr. C. Garsia, Mr. Robert Gayol, Mr. O. C. Gould, Mrs. Y. Hiroshima, Mr. M. R. Jeffris, Mr. K. B. Jeffris, Mrs. N. S. Edge, Mr. D. H. Jeffris, Mr. Edward C. Parker, Mrs. Edward C. Parker, Mrs. Edward C. Parker, Mr. R. Maxwell Talbot, Mr. W. H. Tomhave, Mr. C. S. Wheeler, Mrs. C. S. Wheeler, Mr. E. M. Gale, Mrs. Edith Gumbrell, Mr. H. O. Henry, Miss L. Keyes, Mr. J. Adams, Miss M. Blasi, Mr. C. U. McElroy, Mrs. C. U. McElroy, Dr. E. B. Merchant, Mrs. Julia Patterson and maid, Mr. Jefferson Patterson, Miss Mary Patterson, Master Frank Patterson, Mr. Frederick H. Randall, Mr. P. Sanz, Mrs. P. Sanz, Mrs. Wm. Webster, Miss Elizabeth Webster, Mr. J. L. Woods, Mr. K. Ungemach, Dr. Avon Poehl, Mr. L. A. H. Allain, Mr. A. F. Griffith and wife, Miss L. M. Silcox, Miss A. Willett Rev. D. Russell, Miss A. J. Foster and Mr. C. T. Fillis in cabin. For Kobe:—Mr. A. H. Brown. For Shanghai:—Miss F. Catharine Bryen, Miss Eliza Bryan, Mr. G. W. Cram, Mrs. G. W. Cram, Mr. Frank L. Fearon Mrs. Edith Gumbrell Miss L. Keyes and Mr. T. P. Sze. For Hongkong:—Mr. Maurice P. Alger, Mr. Chas. J. Anderson, Mr. Wm. R. Babcock, Mr. J. W. Bays, Mrs. J. W. Bays, Mr. Eugene Behrendt, Mr. Frank L. Blessing, Mrs. M. Bogard, Mr. Olney Bondurant, Miss B. Bott, Mr. H. M. Cake, Mrs. H. M. Cake, Miss Hazel Call, Mr. E. Danenberg, Mr. Earle Eubank, Miss Jane S. Fair, Miss E. Florendo, Miss Charlotte Finlay, Mr. W. J. Gabraith, Mr. H. W. Goforth, Mr. Matias Gonzales, Jr., Mr. H. N. Graves, Col. W. C. Greene, Miss Eva Greene, Mr. Harry M. Gwynn, Miss M. Heard, Mr. F. M. Johnson, Mr. Kuang Tung Sing, Miss G. Lianas, Mr. W. J. Larkin, Mr. Reuben L. Larson, Miss Eleanor de Leon, Mr. F. W. Livingston, Mr. E. E. Marr, Mr. B. G. Marsh, Mr. C. G. McClean, Mrs. C. G. McClean, Mr. Dudley H. McDowell, Mr. H. Minturn, Miss Marie Munson, Mr. Lloyd Newland, Mr. A. W. Palfreyman, Mr. Quan Kwong Tong, Mrs. F. Pritchett, Mr. J. F. Richardson, Mrs. J. F. Richardson, Miss Jessie H. Ritchey, Mr. Stephen Ritchey, Rev. J. W. Robinson, Mr. A. B. Segur, Mr. Con Shea, Mr. Wm., Morgan Shuster, Mrs. Wm., Morgan Shuster and two nurses, Miss Caroline Shuster Miss Letie Shuster, Mr. Jay W. Simpson, Miss L. Sison, Mr. Albert I. Smith, Mr. Raymond E. Terry, Mr. H. G. Upham, Miss Blanche Walker, Mr. Wm. M. Wooden, Miss E. A. Treney, Miss A. J. and Mr. Leong Yew in cabin.

Per British steamer Empress of China from Vancouver via ports:—Miss Clive, Mr. George Gollin, Mrs. Gollin, Mr. Jardine Gresson, Mrs. Gresson, Mr. David D. Horne, Mr. H. G. L. Milles, Mr. F. Redhead, Miss E. R. Scidmore, Miss W. D. Smith, Mr. C. C. Su, Lieut. J. C. Tovey, Mr. K. Wu and Miss R. Male in cabin.

Per American steamer China from Hongkong via ports:—Mr. W. S. H. Holmes, Mr. H. Irwin, Mr. T. D. McKay, Mr. P. S. Morse, Mrs. F. S. Moise, Maj. T. C. S. Palmer, Mr. H. Peters, Mrs. H. Peters, Master Otto Peters, Miss Ramsay, Brig. Gen. P. Reade U.S.A., Miss E. M. Redwood, Mr. Russell, Mrs. Russell 2 children and amah, Mr. C. Watney, Mrs. C. Watney and Miss MacArthur. For Honolulu:—Mr. D. McIntyre. For San Francisco:—Dr. Bell-Irving, Mr. W. J. Conroy, Mr. J. Frost, Mr. Geo. Lammert, Mrs. Geo. Lammert, Rev. J. J. McCook, Miss McCook, Dr. E. H. H. Old, U.S.N., Mr. A. T. Percival, Dr. C. W. Pruitt, Mr. Howard Richards, Mr. C. A. Sutter, Mr. C. W. Schmidt, Mr. Suj. Po Kong, Mr. Theo. Willi and Mr. Leon de Waele in cabin.

Per British steamer Monteagle from Hongkong via ports:—Mr. J. J. Blake, Miss Patterson, Miss C. Denkam, Miss Carper, Miss P. Lappere, Mr. H. Thomas and Mr. A. G. Witcher. For Vancouver:—Mr. Byrne, Mrs. G. C. Judson, Mrs. L. B. Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Gaddie, Mr. E. James, Miss V. Greene, Mrs. Joblin, Mr. and Mrs. Cohen, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Kennedy, Mr. H. S. Wilson, Miss Ganzoley, Miss Coleman, Mr. G. Hoyes, Dr. and Mrs. Carrington and 3 children, Mr. and Mrs. Wilkinson and child, Mr. J. Thompson, Mr. C. B. Stedman, Rev. G. E. Whitman, Mr. H. Irwin Black, Mr. J. H. B. Smith, Mr. Wong He Chong, Miss C. Hickson, Mr. C. H. Newton, Mr. T. D. Carman, Miss Carman, Mr. and Mrs. Jaffray and infant, Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Johnson, Mrs. A. Campher, Miss Jenkins, Miss Roy Packer, Mr. Charing Pearce, Mr. Harvey Johnson, Mr. J. Kingsmill, Mrs. C. Cavien, Capt. J. Bassett, Mr. Russell Bassett, Miss F. Jennings, Miss A. Wooden, Miss Craig, Miss D. Craig, Dr. and Mrs. A. G. Heam and 3 children, Miss Macdonald, Mr. R. A. Heam, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Clark, Mr. S. G. Clark, Miss Officer, Miss and Master Elliott and Mr. Schackie in cabin; 43 Chinese, and 3 Japanese in European steerage; 58 Chinese in Asiatic steerage.

DEPARTED.

Per American steamer Siberia for San Francisco via Honolulu:—Mr. Andres, Dr. E. A. Bowser, Miss Huldah Bryan, Capt. J. D. Chase, Mrs. Chang See, Master C. Clinton, Miss E. Clinton, Miss Harriet R. Cobb, Mr. P. A. Collins, Mrs. P. A. Collins, Mr. C. J. Cutting, Mrs. Donelly, Miss Donelly, Mr. P. W. Du Bose, Mr. M. R. Fester, Mr. S. Furusho, Miss M. Gale Taylor, Miss M. P. Gibbs, Miss Sarah H. Gilbert, Miss E. W. Graves, Mr. F. Grimley, Mr. E. C. Hallinan, Mr. H. Hering, Mrs. T. D. Holmes and inf., Miss Ellen Holmes, Miss Lois Holmes, Miss Mabel Holmes, Master Henry Holmes, Miss M. L. Hood, Major H. S. Howland, Mr. Hsu Shu Hsien, Mr. H. Huebner, Miss Francis Jennin, Mr. E. M. Johnson, Mrs. F. S. Johnson, Miss Francis Johnson, Miss Helen Johnson, Mr. W. C. King, Mr. King Wo Hai, Baron G. A. Klingspor, Dr. W. B. Langsdorf, Mrs. W. B. Langsdorf, Miss Wilhelmina Langsdorf, Miss Helen Langsdorf, Mrs. W. Langsdorf, Mr. L. Ching Tien, Rev. C. F. McKee, Mrs. C. P. McKee, Col. J. E. Mahoney, Mrs. T. Matsumoto, Mr. Li Mendelssohn-Bartholdy, Mrs. L. Mendelssohn-Bartholdy, Mrs. M. Mitchell, Mr. T. Miyakawa, Mr. H. W. Morris, Mr. G. H. Oatway, Mr. Chas. S. Pegg, Mr. Pond Sze Chi, Mrs. F. Raisch, Miss P. Raisch, Mr. S. S. Rodman, Mrs. W. A. Sheridan, Mr. Y. Shinjo, Mr. R. D. Smith, Mrs. R. D. Smith, Mr. J. E. Ward, Mr. Samuel B. Williamson and Mrs. T. H. Wood in cabin.

Per German steamer Prinz Ludwig for Bremen and Hamburg via ports:—Mr. F. Hior, Mr. J. Kuhn, Mr. Hans Andrae, Miss Rankin, Mr. Knaw Joo Chin and servant, Mr. Chen Swee Feang and servant, Mrs. Serbill, Mrs. F. G. Kelley, the Hon. and Mrs. Tam Jaik Kim, child and 2 servant, Miss Ong Koon Wan Tan, nurse and amah, Mr. S. Donnerberg and servant, Mr. Otto Kaiser, Mr. and Mrs. von de Stadt, Miss Olga Heermann, Mr. Carl Heermann, Prof. Dr. Klein, Mr. M. Hein, Mr. W. Reimers Jr., Mr. Wu Yang Tsung, Mr. Arthur Mark, Mrs. John Pratt, Mr. Dung Sui Pong, Mr. J. Sato, Miss Bessie Mead, Miss Antoine Bannmann, Mr. George Handmann, Mr. J. Sakuma, Miss C. McGregor, Miss Marie Kuentzel, Mr. K. Kelle, Mrs. E. Hendrich, Mr. Cha Juh Hen, Mr. Mark Tong Wa, Mr. Ng Ni Chin, Mr. Zu Gin Ham, Mr. Su Yun King, Mr. Dong Sang, Mr. Rah Cheong, Mr. Song Ung, Mr. Gai Pong King, Mr. Lau Ket, Mr. Lan Ting, Mr. Cheung Fong, Mr. Lan Tze Lam, Mr. Lo Chick Kong, Mr. Hong Ying Soh, Mr. Hong Gin Soh, Mr. Zek Jie Bong, Mr. Kin Ben San, Mr.

LEA and PERRINS' SAUCE

Assists digestion and gives a delightful piquancy and flavour to all

MEAT DISHES, SOUPS, FISH, CHEESE, CURRIES, GAME, POULTRY & SALADS.

The Original & Genuine Worcestershire.

By Royal Warrant to H.M. THE KING.

C. B. Sin, Mr. Paul Mueller, Mr. Wothing Nam and Mr. Kar So Sing in cabin.

Per American steamer China for San Francisco via Honolulu:—Mr. D. Bell-Irving, Mr. W. J. Conroy, Mr. M. Leon De Waele, Mr. J. Frost, Miss H. E. Gibbs, Mr. Hossain Rahim, Mr. Suj. Po Kong, Mr. Geo. Lammert, Mrs. Geo. Lammert, Rev. J. J. McCook, Mr. D. McIntyre, Ass't Surgeon E. H. H. Old, Mr. A. T. Percival, Mr. C. W. Pruitt, Mr. H. Richards, Mr. C. W. Schmidt, Mr. S. E. Slade, Mrs. S. E. Slade and maid, Mr. F. M. Slade, Mr. R. C. Slade, Master S. E. Slade, Mr. C. A. Sutter and Mr. T. Wills in cabin.

Per British steamer Monteagle, for Vancouver, B.C.:—Mrs. L. B. Anderson, Captain T. Bassett, Mr. R. Bassett, Mr. H. Irwin-Black, Mr. J. J. Blake, Miss Bump, Mr. J. D. Byrne, Mr. P. D. Carman, Miss Carman, Dr. P. T. Carrington, Miss P. T. Carrington and 2 children, Miss Changing-Pearce, Mr. Wong He Chong, Mr. J. S. Clark, Mrs. J. S. Clark, Mr. S. G. Clark, The Rev. Clark, Mrs. Clark, Mr. M. B. Cohen, Mrs. M. B. Cohen, Mrs. M. B. Cohen, Miss M. B. E. Coleman, Miss M. B. Craig, Miss D. Craig, Mr. F. C. David, Mrs. F. C. David, Mr. J. Duran, Miss A. G. Edwards, Miss Elliott, Master Elliott, Mr. Fatta, Mr. Jos. Gaddie, Mrs. Gaddie, Miss V. Greene, Miss C. Gonzalez, Mr. F. G. Harrington, Mr. G. Hayes, Dr. A. G. Hearn, Mrs. A. G. Hearn, & 3 children, Mr. R. A. Hearn, Mr. R. A. Jaffray, Mrs. Jaffray, & child, Mr. E. James, Miss M. L. Jenkins, Miss F. G. Jennings, Mrs. L. M. Joblin, Mr. F. R. Johnson, Mrs. F. R. Johnson, & child, Mr. Harvey Johnson, Mrs. Geo. L. Judson, Mr. K. Kanazawa, Mrs. K. Kanazawa & 2 children, Mrs. M. Kempkins, Mr. J. S. Kennedy, Mrs. J. S. Kennedy, Mr. J. Kin, Mr. T. Kingsmill, Mrs. A. Lanphier, Mrs. C. Leven, Miss Macdonald, Mr. A. Newton, Miss Officer, Mr. K. Okada, Mrs. H. Newton, Miss Officer, Mr. N. G. Sargent and child, Mr. Max. Schucke, Mr. J. H. B. Smith, Miss Lo Bick Som, Miss Southworth, Mr. O. M. W. Sprague, Mr. Os. M. W. Sprague, and infant, Mr. S. B. Stedman, Mr. W. O. Stiller, Mr. J. Thompson, Mr. Geo. E. M. E. Wilkinson, Mrs. Wilkinson, & children, Mr. H. Wilson and Miss A. Wooden in cabin.

(毎土曜一回發行)
支店 大坂 支店 大阪 支店 大阪 支店 大阪
支店 大阪 支店 大阪 支店 大阪 支店 大阪
支店 大阪 支店 大阪 支店 大阪 支店 大阪
支店 大阪 支店 大阪 支店 大阪 支店 大阪

BONGERS DE RATH & Co., 321, HIGH HOLBORN, LONDON, Supply CARMINE, Madder Lakes, Ultramarines and all Permanent Colors for the Arts and Industries. Telegrams "OXIDE LONDON." Telephone 5,000 Central. Diploma of Honour and Gold Medal 1885. First order of Merit 1887. Bank, National Provincial Bank of England, Holborn, London. Correspondence in any European Language. B. DE R. & Co. are also open to receive and test samples of any new chemical combination, raw or finished product.

December 18th, 1907.

e.m. ins. 6m.

"Here's to the health of every man, woman, and child in the land."

BOVRIL

The Japan Weekly Mail

寄土曜日 A REVIEW OF JAPANESE COMMERCE, POLITICS, LITERATURE, AND ART. 一回刊行

No. 51

REGISTERED AT THE G.P.O.
AS A NEWSPAPER.

YOKOHAMA, AUG. 1ST, 1908.

明治廿五年三月廿日
第三千四百四十四號

Vol. I.

CONTENTS.

Summary of News .....	117
China .....	118
Financial .....	119
The Fukuoka Railway Question .....	120
Political Parties .....	121
Prince Ito .....	122
Korea .....	123
Russia and Japan .....	124
Formosa .....	125
The Government .....	126
Manchuria .....	127
India and Japan .....	128
President Roosevelt .....	129
Foreign Capital .....	130
Count Komura .....	131
Business Notes .....	132
The Tokyo Stock Exchange .....	133
Notes on Current Events .....	134
Death of Mrs. Van Hansmith .....	135
The Fire on the "Schornstein" .....	136
Leading Articles: .....	137
The Cabinet .....	138
The Boikott .....	139
Water Polo .....	140
Monthly Summary of the Japanese Religious Press .....	141
Port Arthur .....	142
Brace's "Naval Annual" .....	143
The "Kamo Maru" .....	144
Yokohama Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals .....	145
Yokohama Engine and Iron Works, Ltd. .....	146
Grand Hotel Limited .....	147
Cricket .....	148
Burglary on the Bluff .....	149
The Imperial Court .....	150
Customs Appeal .....	151
Baseball .....	152
Shipping Accidents .....	153
Yokohama .....	154
Yachting .....	155
Riot at Hashima .....	156
Australia .....	157
The Law Courts .....	158
News of the Week .....	159
Some Curious Customs of the Head Hunters of Pepanto-Bonito .....	160
Province, Northern Luzon, Philippine Islands .....	161
Japanese Agricultural Immigration into Korea .....	162
Telegrams .....	163
La est Commercial .....	164
Latest Shipping .....	165

"FAIS CE QUE DOIS: ADVIENNE QUE POURRA!"

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

No notice will be taken of anonymous correspondence. What is intended for insertion in the "JAPAN WEEKLY MAIL," must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer, not for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

It is particularly requested that all letters on business be addressed to the MANAGER, and Cheques be made payable to same; and that literary contributions be addressed to the EDITOR.

YOKOHAMA: SATURDAY, AUG. 1ST, 1908.

DEATHS

At No 84-A Bluff, on Monday, 27th July, Holland Morse, only son of Mr. and Mrs. CHAS. H. THORN, age one year.

At 29, Sanaizaka-machi, Ichigaya, Tokyo, on Sunday, July 26, at 7:30 p.m., Mrs. LUCETTA H. CLEMENT, aged 77.

SUMMARY OF NEWS.

NEW FORMOSA rice, 11,676 bales, was brought to Nagasaki on July 23rd.

THE Maine and Alabama of the American Fleet arrived at Manila on July 20th.

THE volcano Kirishima, on the boundary between Shinano and Hida provinces, is active.

THE Crown Prince will leave about Aug. 7th for Shiohara where he will stay during the hot season.

THE third crop of tea was put on the Shidzuoka market on July 28th, the nominal price being yen 2.25.

MUCH sympathy will be felt with Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Thorn with regard to the death of their son, only about a year old, from spinal meningitis.

A MEETING of the Kobe Chamber of Commerce was held on Thursday afternoon, when Mr. Matsugata Kojiro was appointed President in succession to Mr. Kishimoto. It is, however, still uncertain whether Mr. Matsugata, who is now at Tairen, will accept the appointment.

THE Yokohama Specie Bank intends to establish branches in Rangoon, Singapore, Montreal, Vancouver, and Seattle.

THE engine of a motor car on which was Prince Arisugawa exploded at 8:30 p.m. on July 25th at Aoyama. The Prince escaped uninjured.

THE first meeting of the Toyo Race Club was held on July 25th at Tohata near Fukuoka. The sales on the pari-mutuel amounted to yen 122,500.

A SPECIALLY great heat was again felt in Yokohama on Tuesday. According to the Observatory, the reading of the thermometer was 91 deg. F. at 1 p.m.

TWO female clerks of the Yokohama Post Office committed suicide on July 25th by throwing themselves from a cliff at Kowaki-dani in the district of Hakone.

THE Kanagawa Prefectural Agricultural and Industrial Bank held a general meeting on July 24th. A dividend was declared at the rate of 9 per cent. per annum.

THE Keio Gijuku Baseball team were beaten by the Punahou Club, Honolulu, on July 25th by 5 runs to nil, and by the Diamond Head Club on July 26th by 9 runs to 3.

THE dead body of a young woman was found on Monday morning in the sea near Takashimacho. As she was not identified, the corpse was handed over to the City Office.

A MAN living in Suyeyoshi-cho committed suicide on July 25th by hanging himself. He had been suffering from rheumatism for some time past and was unable to work.

THIRTEEN employees of the Osaka branch of the Domestic Transportation Company were arrested on July 22nd, for stealing a large quantity of rice to which they were entrusted.

TWO children while playing at the recreation ground in Kanagawa at 4:30 p.m. on July 22nd fell into the sea. Some boys who were swimming near by got them out but both were found to be dead.

A MAN dealing in electrical apparatus in Shiba, Tokyo, murdered his female servant on the evening of July 22nd by strangling her. On the same night he was arrested. The cause is not reported.

THE 74th Bank, Yokohama, held a general meeting on July 25th. Net income during the first half of this year was yen 83,189. An interim dividend was declared at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum.

ON the afternoon of July 27th, a hail storm was experienced in the district of Saku, Nagano prefecture. Much damage was sustained by cultivated land, and a woman was killed by a thunder-bolt.

THE Isezaki-cho police arrested on the evening of July 25th four youths in connexion with the assault upon students from Tokyo, which took place on the night of July 20th on the Yokohama bridge.

ABOUT 50 men employed at the Hashima Coal Mine, in Nagasaki prefecture, belonging to the Mitsui Bishi, caused much trouble on the evening of July 24th. They attacked offices, etc., at the mine, and destroyed them. In the disturbance, one coolie was killed, and many were more or less injured, the police finally arresting seven of the rioters. It is said that they had asked the employers for an advance of money, but the request was refused.

A BANTO of the well-known Mitsukoshi Gofukun-tan was arrested on July 25th on the charge of having spent yen 800 belonging to the office on the pari-mutuel at various race meetings.

PRINCE ITO, Resident-General, left Oiso on July 24th by the 7:59 a.m. train and arrived at Shimabashi at 10:20 a.m. He at once proceeded to the Palace where he had audience of the Emperor and Empress.

A COOLIE stabbed to death another coolie on July 24th at the Ashio Copper Mine. A dispute after gambling is stated to have been the cause of the crime. The offender was arrested on the following day.

THE dead body of a woman, apparently 40 years old, was found in the creek near the Senshu bridge, Hinode-cho. The cause of death is not known. She is believed to be the wife of a coolie or a sendo.

THREE men were arrested in Tokyo on July 23rd on a charge of counterfeiting entrance tickets for the recent meeting of the Tokyo Jockey Club. They are stated to have sold quite a large number.

THE Asahi says that in connexion with the alleged frequent missing of goods on the Kyushu Railway, the police in the districts between Hakata and Yatsushiro intend to examine all the employees of the line.

MR. T. MATSUMOTO, President of the Imada Bank, in the district of Taki, Hyogo prefecture, committed suicide on July 25th by throwing himself into a pond. The cause is said to have been the failure of his bank.

A FISHERMAN while fishing off Misaki, Idzu peninsula, on July 24th found the dead body of a young woman, apparently a student. A passage ticket for the Tsu-un Maru, running between Uraga and Shinagawa, was found in her possession.

DR. KOCH will leave Japan about Aug. 24th for America. When he first arrived he intended to stay in Japan until the beginning of October, but he recently received an order from his Government to be present at the international tuberculosis prevention conference to be held in Washington towards the end of September.

A NUMBER of prominent business men of Yokohama held a dinner party on the evening of July 23rd at the Bankers' Club in honour of Messrs. S. Kimura and H. Bekkey of the Specie Bank, who recently returned from a visit to America and Europe. Mr. Kimura made a speech with regard to financial conditions in the United States.

ACCORDING to the Nagasaki Press, Mr. Boris Orjikh, whose house at Oura was recently searched by the police as the outcome of a charge laid against Mr. Orjikh of concealing explosives and forged notes, intends instituting an action for libel against two Russians, who he believes gave the information which led the authorities to make the search.

JULY 26th being the anniversary of the birthday of the Emperor of China, the usual celebration was held in Yokohama. The Red Dragons were hoisted and various decorations were made in the Chinese quarters. The foreign Consuls and a number of officials of the local government visited the Chinese Consulate-General before noon. In the evening, a dinner party was held at the Chinese Club.

CHINA.

Friday, July 24.

An Imperial decree has been issued in Peking couched in the usual paternal language of admonition which is so common in the mouth of Chinese Sovereigns. The gist of the document is that the Viceroys and Provincial Governors are to take steps for establishing within a year from this date bodies which apparently correspond to the Japanese local assemblies. The decree approves of the rules drawn up with reference to this by Prince Ching and his colleagues, and is very earnest in recommending the people to make the new system a success in spirit as well as in letter. The document also directs that the office which has been organized for investigating the question of a national assembly shall proceed diligently with its work, selecting from foreign representative systems such features as seem commendable and grafting upon the new system such parts of China's ethics as seem worth preserving. A law of election is also to be compiled and the whole is to be submitted for the approval of the Throne.

The Shanghai Chamber of Commerce (Asahi Shimbun's telegrams) is said to have decided on addressing to the Corps Diplomatique in Peking a representation with reference to note issuing by foreign banks in China. The Chamber suggests that the banks to which this privilege is accorded shall be distinctly indicated; that the specie reserves held by them as security for the redemption of the notes shall be subjected to careful scrutiny, and that no bank without due authorization shall be allowed to issue convertible paper.

The rumours recently circulated as to the serious illness and even the death of the Chinese Emperor are now flatly contradicted. It appears that his Majesty is in excellent health.

Saturday, July 25.

It is expected that the Peking-Hankow Railway will be re-opened for traffic with the exception of one place by the end of July.

Peking is indulging in a week's festivities to celebrate the birthday of the Emperor.

We find a statement in the Mainichi Dempo that since the close of last year the number of Chinese students coming to Japan for educational purposes has perceptibly increased. At one time the custom of having recourse to this country for education fell into some discredit, owing to the fact that many of the first arrivals adopted what is called the "rapid system," and thus emerged from the schools with only a smattering of superficial knowledge which soon fell into discredit. Since then, however, Chinese lads who had received a thorough education were found fully proficient on their return to China, and quite a large number of them satisfied the examination test in Peking last spring. The result is that the Japanese schools have once more become popular, and there is every prospect of a large influx of students. Our contemporary adds that the Department of Education will welcome all thorough-going students while disapproving of the "rapid system," and that whereas in Germany Japanese students have to pay tuition fees twice or thrice as large as those levied from German students, no such distinction is made in Japan where the schools are open to all on equal terms.

Sunday, July 26.

The conference about the Yalu Timber Felling Industry seems to be temporarily hung up on two points. One is the royalty demanded by the Chinese Government; the other, the supply of timber for the Chekiang Railway and the Yellow River. As to the former, the idea that the commissioners, originally somewhat wide apart, seem now to have come within measurable distance of each other, but as to the latter there is a somewhat serious difference of opinion. The Peking Convention provides that the Chinese Government shall have the right to purchase whatever timber may be needed for the Railway and the River. The Japanese commissioners make no attempt to deny this right but they urge that some limits must be set to it, mainly on account of the Yellow River where an immense supply of timber may be required at any moment for embankment purposes. The Chinese commissioners do not deny that some limit is practically essential, but neither do they see how to assess it. It is thought that this problem can not be solved pending the arrival of His Excellency Tang Shaoi in the capital.

Chientao seems to be in a very unquiet state. A raid is reported to have taken place at the Tienpaoshan Mine, and parties of marauders are committing excesses at various places. It is believed that these rioters are for the most part insurgents fugitive from Korea. The Chinese and Japanese authorities are taking steps to restore order, the former increasing their troops and the latter their gendarmes.

We gather from an article in the jiji Shimpō that the new Cabinet is desirous of settling the Chientao problem, as to leave it unsolved is injurious to the friendly relations of the two Empires. Hitherto the negotiations have been confined to an exchange of despatches, and it is evident that such a method is not unlikely to prove practically interminable. It is now contemplated therefore that both sides should appoint commissioners to thoroughly discuss the matter. Even if this be done, a speedy solution can not be expected, as the arguments advanced on either side must be largely historical. We may here mention that the Mainichi Dempo's Peking correspondent wires that a long despatch on the Chientao question was sent by the Waiwupu to the Japanese Legation on the 2nd inst. It is described as a closely reasoned document, firmer in tone than ever.

With regard to the large sum, generally estimated at 20 million taels, owed by Chinese merchants to foreign importers in Tientsin, the Haikwan Taotai's proposals for a scheme of adjustment have not been approved by the foreign Consuls, and the matter having been appealed to the Corps Diplomatique in Peking, they too have turned down the scheme. Another meeting has therefore been held by the Consuls in Tientsin, and they are reported to have decided either that the Government must be asked to guarantee the debt or that it must be secured by some other trustworthy underwriting. The interests mainly concerned in this matter are German, and the German Consul is naturally exerting himself conspicuously.

The Mainichi Dempo has a telegram from Canton saying that the inundations have proved a cold douche for the boycott. "Tis an ill wind." The unfortunate Chinese are too much occupied by their domestic calamities to pay much attention to their foreign affairs.

It sometimes seems that whatever is right in this best of all worlds. Here in Japan we have critics who utterly condemn the nationalization of the private railways, but one writer, in Shanghai, the N.-C. Daily News, has this to say on the subject:—"It is a recognized axiom that if the country is to receive full benefit from railway communications, the construction of new lines must be carried out on a uniform plan, and under the direct control of the Central Government. This point has been urged by Viceroy Chang Chih-tung and has been accepted by the Throne." There is not much sign of doubt in our Shanghai contemporary's mind.

With reference to this subject we find the following further letter in the N.-C. Daily News:-

Last year I made a few specific inquiries into the conditions of work on some of the large foreign buildings in the course of erection in Shanghai. On one, which is quite typical, I found that sixty per cent. of those employed were under the age of sixteen years, that is fifteen years and under by foreign reckoning. In this one place were several little mites eight years of age, seven years only by foreign reckoning! These babes had to carry mortar in buckets up the crazy collection of insecure planks which do duty for scaffold platforms in this place. Scores of these youngsters were under twelve years of age. These children work for no wages, but for their food and to learn the business. In the carpenter's department a somewhat better state of things prevail, the boys are generally older, the youngest being eleven and twelve years and they are of better physique. I should surmise that they come from a better class. A couple of weeks ago on a Sunday evening, coming along the Bund, I found a little fellow crying in company with an older companion. When asked what he was crying for, the older boy said that the younger had been at work all the day and was too tired to walk to his home in the City. That boy was eleven years old.

Surely it is high time something was attempted to ameliorate the hard lot of these little ones. A foreman of works with whom I was recently discussing this problem remarked: "What thing can do? Man make plenty trouble; small boy, he no pay hobby." No, the boy is too small, he no can pay hobby; that is why Christian law should come, and in the home lands does come, to his protection. Members of Christian nations resident in Shanghai may not forget who it was that made little children in a very special degree the wards of the Christian Faith when He said "Take heed, that ye cause not one of these to stumble."

Permit me to add this letter to the appeal that is being made for a measure of protection for the labouring children of Shanghai.

I am etc.,
July 15.

W. NELSON BITTON.

It is certainly very pitiful but yet one does not see what can be done by the foreign community of Shanghai.

Monday, July 27.

The Provincial Assemblies, whose creation in China by an Imperial decree has formed the subject of recent telegrams, are explained in the following article which we take from the North China Daily News:-

The Department Investigating the subject of Constitutional Government (Hsien-chien-pien-t'sa-kuan) has received the Imperial sanction to its suggestions as to the establishment of Provincial Assemblies throughout the country. Each of these Assemblies is to be presided over by a President assisted by a Vice-President, who is to succeed the President in case of his demise. Should the Vice-President of a Provincial Assembly die, his place is to be filled by a member of that body elected by the others. The numbers of a Provincial Assembly are to be limited by the amount of its grain tax and the number of the graduates attaining literary degrees allowed by law at each provincial examination. That is to say that as the province of Chihli pays the most grain taxes and has the largest proportion in literary graduates, it is to be allowed to have 140 members in the Provincial Assembly. The provinces of Chinese Turkestan and Heilungkiang being the smallest in both respects are to have only thirty members in their respective Assemblies. Kiangsu is to have 116 and Czekiang 114. The Manchus' members from Peking are to join the Chihli Provincial Assembly and will amount to ten extra representatives in that Assembly. The Manchus in the provinces follow the same rule, (joining the assemblies of such provinces as they belong to with the addition of from one to three representatives as the case may be). The members to be sent to join the Parliament in Peking are to be determined by the high provincial authorities who shall have the power of veto as to who shall not be sent from the provinces. Members of the Provincial assemblies are to be at least twenty-five years of age.

As to qualifications they must have been connected with educational enterprises for at least five years, or have graduated from the middle schools of either China or abroad. They may also be selected from amongst the Masters of Arts or first class licentiates of the country or retired officials of the 8th and 9th grades providing such have not been denounced to the Throne or cashiered at any time during their career. Furthermore any respectable and proper person with a business capital of at least $5,000 may be eligible as a member of the Provincial Assembly. Those who cannot be elected to the Assemblies are officials and their secretaries of the provinces they are in; officers of the regular Army; instructors of the military academies and officers of the gendarmerie. Evil characters, opium smokers and those who have been imprisoned for breaking the laws are also prohibited from entering the legislature. No person who has been elected to an assembly will be allowed to decline unless he be really incapacitated by illness or prevented by serious matters from leaving his home. Members may be re-elected after serving their terms of office in the assemblies. An assembly has the power to denounce to the high provincial authorities any official guilty of avarice and dishonesty, and to denounce a high provincial official to the Imperial Parliament for similar offences. The private affairs of an unpopular official must however be sacred from criticism. These Assemblies shall transact business under the superintendence of the Viceroy and Governor of the provinces concerned.

It appears to be now thought in Peking that the creation of these assemblies is a species of sop to Cerberus, and that the Throne has no intention of establishing a national assembly in the near future. This suspicion has been confirmed by a recent event. Some liberal officials memorized the Throne in the sense that punishment ought to be meted out to conservative high officials who obstructed the progress of constitutional government. The reply of the Throne was to hand over the memorialists themselves to the Board of Punishments, accompanying this procedure with an intimation the gist of which was that the Court has its own ideas with regard to a national assembly. This is taken to mean that the Liberals will have to possess their souls in patience for some years to come.

Shanghai has a telegram which recalls the old-time reputation of that settlement as a hotbed of canards. It says that 7000 Korean refugees, making for the border of Kilin province with the intention of migrating into Chinese territory, were met by a body of Japanese troops of whom they killed 3 officers and 40 privates. Inquiries in official quarters in Tokyo have elicited the fact that no such intelligence has been received at any of the Departments of State, and that in all probability the story is a rechauffe of the recent rumour that a party of 700 Koreans had crossed the Tumen into northern Korea and were raiding the country. This latter tale also is a great exaggeration. The truth seems to be that a man called Yi Yonyung, who worked in Russia's interest during the war is now living at Novoskoi near Possiet Bay, where he has a small band of followers who occasionally make forays into Korean territory. These folks are undisciplined and ill armed. They are easily routed whenever they come in to contact with any Japanese troops, but their recent crossing of the Tumen constituted a novel incident in the record to which people have become accustomed, and thus the story became distorted in transmission.

It is stated that the Government, in Peking has telegraphed to the Kilin authorities in the sense that no legitimate pretext can be found for adopting the course set forth in a recent memorial from the rights-recovery party in that province. These folks expressed a desire to exclude the Japanese from any participation in the building of the Kilin-Changchun Railway and to confine the enterprise to Chinese subjects alone. The rights-recovery party in Kilin ought by this time to know, one imagines, that the joint construction of the above Railway is duly provided for by treaty and that therefore the arrangement can not be set aside for the mere gratification of nationalistic ambitions.

The Chientao question is evidently beginning to cause some anxiety in Japan. The Mainichi Dempo and the Asahi Shimbun publish paragraphs to the effect that while the Japanese have been waiting for events to furnish a solution of the problem—which is understood to have been the policy of the last Cabinet—the Chinese have been slowly but steadily increasing their military force until they now have 2,500 men beyond the Tumen and the Yalu, and are thus complete masters of the situation, for Colonel Saito with his 80 gendarmes sink into insignificance in the presence of such a force. Moreover the Chinese are exercising all the control which their overwhelmingly superior strength warrants, and altogether the situation is highly unsatisfactory from Korea's point of view. The Government in Tokyo is said to be seriously considering whether this apparently interminable policy of drift is not likely to be dangerous and certain to be detrimental to the interest of the two Empires, and whether practical Statesmen are not exposing themselves to a charge of paltering when they devote months to an interchange of despatches about questions of ancient history. Some kind of compromise would surely be wiser in such circumstances, especially as Japan's unique object is to insure that the persons and properties of Korean subjects settling in Chientao shall be duly protected.

Tuesday, July 28.

It is stated that his Excellency Tang Shaoi, who is now on a visit to Peking, will return to Mukden and settle various matters there before setting out on his special mission to the United States. This will defer his departure from China until November and he will not reach Washington until after the Presidential election. The present expectation is that he will subsequently make a tour of Europe and finally spend some three weeks in Japan before resuming his duties at home.

A telegram from Shanghai says that the Belgian Consul at Hankow shot himself with a revolver on the 26th inst. The act is said to have been committed in a fit of temporary insanity.

The new Chinese Representative to the Court of Japan, Mr. Hu Weitieh, has reached Nagasaki en route for Tokyo. Interviewed by one of the Asahi Shimbun's staff, his Excellency said that as his first object was to promote his country's friendship with Japan, he entirely dissented from the boycott, and was therefore gratified to learn that it had lost much of its force and that Japanese merchandise was beginning to find purchasers again in South China. His Excellency spoke in high terms of Mr. Abe, the Japanese Chargé d'Affaires in Peking, but he said that the coming of the new Minister, Mr. Iijun, was much desired. As to the Chientao and Manchurian problems, Mr. Hu resolutely closed his lips.

The Asahi Shimbun quotes an anonymous informant whom it describes as well versed in Chinese affairs. He takes an extremely pessimistic view of the results of the recent floods in South China. Should these inundations prove as serious as report alleges, not only will the crops throughout all the inundated region be destroyed and thousands of people consequently reduced to a state of famine, but also the import trade, which for many months has been struggling against the injurious effects of depreciated silver, will receive another crippling blow. Nor is this all. The Asahi's informant further thinks that the perennial insurgents will seize the occasion to organise a general outbreak, and if China gets through this year without suffering serious calamity she may count herself fortunate. Most of these gloomy presages must have already occurred to the public at large, but we doubt whether many people have reflected on the evident possibility that an anti-dynastic movement, organised when tens of thousands of able-bodied men are reduced to a state of destitution, is likely to attract a large number of recruits who in ordinary circumstances would be found in the ranks of the law-abiding and orderly.

Wednesday, July 29.

Hongkong was visited by a severe typhoon on the 27th and 28th instant. It lasted for 11 hours terminating at 3 p.m. on the latter day. A hundred lives are said to have been lost in the harbour, and the steam launch of the British warship Astraea was wrecked when attempting to succour the drowning folks. Only six of her crew were saved, but how many were lost the telegram does not state. There had of course been the usual storm warning and due preparations had been made, but the following ships are reported as having been blown ashore: the Laysan, the Pocahontas, the Schuykill, the Aeolus, the Haiching, the Persia, the Charles and the Hardwin. Great damage seems to have been suffered by other ships and by buildings and trees on shore. It is believed that there has been considerable loss of life on land as well as on sea, but no accurate figures are yet available.

There is also a telegram from Peking which says somewhat vaguely that inundations prevail on the coast of Chili. We presume that this refers to floods in the rivers, but there has not been any intimation as to specially heavy rain in that part of China.

Lu Chuanlin has memorialized the Throne in the sense that if, in spite of the recent revolutionary disorders in Yunnan and the inundations in the southern provinces of China, the lately announced intention of raising the rate of the salt tax be carried out, great distress must ensue. He urges that the portion of the Boxer indemnity returned by America shall be applied to recoup the losses resulting from the suppression of opium smoking. His Excellency Yuan is said to be opposed to this use of the money, which he considers ought to be laid by as a reserve. It is believed that Tang Shaoi's approaching visit to America is not solely for the purpose of thanking the Washington Government, but that his Excellency will have instructions to raise a loan if reasonable terms can be obtained.

The British Representative in Peking is said to be conferring with the Waiwupu for the purpose of obtaining for the British and Chinese Corporation the work of extending the Tientsin-Pukau Railway beyond the latter place.

An Agreement is said to have been concluded between the Russian and Chinese authorities at Harbin for facilitating the suppression of the Hunghtsz. The agreement provides that Chinese troops, if they have obtained the previous consent of the local Russian authorities, may pursue fugitive bandits across the Russian frontier. On such occasions the Russian troops will be instructed to render every possible assistance, confining their operations, however, to Russian territory. There are some minor provisions of no special interest, the main fact being that all reasonable facilities are extended by Russia to the Chinese.

Thursday, July 30.

Things are not moving with entire smoothness in China. The Court's order with respect to the compulsory resignation of Mr. Cheng has caused some commotion. It will be remembered that Cheng had advised the removal of Mr. Wu's name from the role of Constitution Commissioners on the ground that he was too conservative. The Throne replied by handing over Cheng himself to the Board of Punishments, and this was interpreted as signifying that the Court had no real intention of granting constitutional government within the next few years. The organ of the Constitutional Party has therefore come out with a strong article declaring that the punishment of Cheng will not have any effect in checking the ardour of the reformists.

At the same time the question of choosing an heir apparent is again said to be agitating the Court. It is surprising that this problem has been left so long unsolved in an Empire like China where matters of succession have such vital importance. Certainly the sooner this potential source of trouble is eliminated the better from every point of view.

Further accounts show that the typhoon at Hongkong on the 28th inst was of almost unprecedented violence. Two light-draft gunboats, one English and one French, were driven ashore, and a steamer bound from Canton for Hongkong with 300 passengers on board was sunk by the gale and about 200 of her passengers were lost. Another account says that the typhoon invaded Canton and that hundreds of flower-boats were wrecked. For miles the river was strewn with debris and it is impossible to estimate the loss of life. It is strange that nothing is said as to the course which this centre of depression subsequently took, but from the fact that Canton was attacked after Hongkong we presume that the storm travelled inland. There were three centres of depression in the neighbourhood of Japan on the 27th inst. One travelling in a north-easterly direction, touched the coast of Kyushu and passed out into the Pacific Ocean. Another was reported from Sonjin on the north east of Korea. This was a very slight depression and its ultimate movements have not yet been traced. The third visited Vladivostok and its neighbourhood and travelled thence to the Tartary States. None of these can be identified with the Hongkong cyclone, and it would seem that Japan has for the present escaped the effects of all these disturbances.

FINANCIAL.

Viscount Terauchi is quoted by the Liberal News Agency as expressing strong doubts with regard to the feasibility of any further reductions of military expenditures. His Excellency points out that when the Budget for the current fiscal year was framed, the originally fixed expenditures for the Army were reduced by postponements totalling 60 million yen and spread over three years. Then again when the business of compiling next year's budget was undertaken by the Saionji Cabinet, the military outlays were subjected to further postponements representing 15 million yen. Close investigations are now being made to determine whether any other economies are possible, but in view of the difficulties experienced in providing for these reductions totalling 75 million yen, it is doubtful whether anything more can be effected in the same line.

Meanwhile the officials at the Finance Department are working double tides. The Premier, in his position of Minister of Finance, has called for the fullest and most complete investigations preliminary to drafting a definite financial programme including next year's Budget. The present state of affairs presents many complications. Apart from the general account there are special accounts for the Army and Navy, for the National Debt Redemption Fund and for the Treasury's specie holdings abroad. All these have to be carefully examined and collated, and the work is so arduous and so pressing that the officials of the Finance Department have to dispense with their usual summer vacation this year.

The Shogyo Shimpō makes an interesting statement. It is to the effect that the members of the present Cabinet have pledged themselves to do away with an evil which has greatly hampered the drafting of all Budgets hitherto. That evil is that each Department of State has engaged in a competitive struggle to obtain for itself a lion's share of the appropriations, and thus the sum granted to a Department came to be a measure of the Minister's political influence rather than of the actual needs of his Department. Upon the Treasury devolved the onerous and seldom successful task of reducing and reconciling these rival claims, and the general result has been a constant tendency to expanding budgets. The public has often heard of this abuse and if the Katsura Cabinet is really determined to abolish it, the nation may be congratulated.

Amid various and sundry vague rumours as to the new Cabinet's financial policy the Chuo Shimbun—which would certainly merit credence were the Seiyū kai Ministry in question—undertakes to make a very detailed statement, interesting even though regarded as a mere approximation. The kernel of the analysis is that the Treasury will contrive to increase by 16 million yen the annual appropriation for redeeming exchequer bills, thus bringing the whole amount of the appropriation to 53 millions. This result is obtained as follows:—First, there will be no change in the measures adopted by the Saionji Cabinet to make the current year's accounts balance. These measures, as our readers ought to know, are that in order to avoid giving effect to the budgetary provision for a loan (domestic) of 70 million yen,—which could not be floated in the market of to-day,—a sum of 37½ millions will be economized by postponing public works (productive and unproductive) and 72 millions of last year's surplus will be drafted into the accounts of income. That completely disposes of the year ending March 31st, 1908. Then comes the vital question of next year's budget. The first radical step in drafting that document will be to change the programme of unproductive expenditures (military and naval) from 6 years to 10 years. That will produce a saving of 50 million yen annually. Out of these 50 millions we must deduct 34 millions, which is the sum that ought to be obtained yearly by floating domestic loans under the six-year programme and under other arrangements. That will leave 16 millions (the difference between 50 and 34,) which will be devoted to the redemption of exchequer bills. Already the sum allotted under the Special Account for the Reduction of the National Debt is 110 million yen, out of which 37 millions go to redemption.

Hence, if the 16 millions explained above be added, the result will be that exchequer bills to the extent of 53 millions will be wiped out annually.

There remains another question. In 1910 and 1911 two installments of the War Loan have to be paid back. They aggregate 180 million yen. No direct provision for this is made in the programme outlined by the Chuo. It is explained, however, that under the new arrangement for redeeming 53 million yen worth of national bonds annually, instead of 37 millions, no difficulty will be experienced in obtaining the re-writing of these bonds when the time comes 3 and 4 years hence.

We believe that if the above programme were supplemented by reversion to the system of redemption by lot, instead of by purchases in the open market, Japanese securities would quite recover from their present depression.

It will be observed that the Chuo Shimbun's programme contains no reference to anticipated surpluses of ordinary revenue. These will certainly accrue, however.

THE FAKUMEN RAILWAY QUESTION.

The Fiji Shimpō devotes a long article to dealing with the statement of their case recently put forward by the British and Chinese Corporation. Most of our contemporary's arguments have already appeared in these columns but one very interesting point is made. It will be remembered that the Corporation's rejoinder quoted a despatch said to have been addressed by the Waiwupu in May last to the Japanese Legation in Peking. This despatch has not yet been published, and therefore a quotation from it inserted in a printed document occasioned some surprise as showing that the writer of the rejoinder must have had special access to Chinese official archives. The quotation represented that at the Peking Conference in December 1905 the Chinese Plenipotentiaries objected to the use of the word "parallel" as too vague and sought to induce the Japanese to substitute a statement of distance. To this, however, the Japanese were said to have objected on the ground that such precision was not only difficult but might tend to produce a bad impression. The Fiji Shimpō describes these statements as baseless fabrications. It affirms that the draft of this particular article in the Peking Convention was put forward by the Chinese Plenipotentiaries, and that so far from objecting to its phraseology they were themselves responsible for it. The Fiji also denies seriatim the charges frequently preferred of discrimination on the part of Japanese railway and telegraph authorities in favour of their own nationals in Manchuria. It claims that these complaints are wholly baseless and it defies those formulating them to adduce one solitary practical example. Another point made by the representative of the Corporation is that Japan has distinctly recognised the regions westward of the Liao River as being outside the sphere of any legitimate demands on her part. This too is declared by the Fiji to be a pure fabrication. Japan has never made any such declaration.

These are only some of the arguments advanced by the Fiji but as the others are already familiar to our readers we refrain from reproducing them. Our Tokyo contemporary concludes by denouncing the rejoinder as an altogether shallow and disingenuous compilation, and says that it certainly will not meet with the approval of Englishmen in general.

POLITICAL PARTIES.

Friday, July 24.

According to the Mainichi Shimpō Count Okuma has been administering what is vulgarly called a wiggling to Mr. Inukai Ki. The latter has always been understood to be in entire accord with the Count, whereas Mr. Oishi Masami, the leader of the section which calls itself the Reform Party in the Progressists, has often been supposed to act in defiance of the Count's views. Like a wise politician as he is, Count Okuma considers that domestic dissensions are essentially inopportune in the face of an embarrassed enemy. He regards the present Cabinet as such an enemy, for he does not place any credence whatever in its capacity to amend the financial situation or to revitalize the country's foreign policy. Now, then, is the time for the Progressists to build a platform upon these two conspicuous planks and to stand forth as saviours of the situation. But instead of taking that course they are presenting the unsightly spectacle of quarrelling among themselves. The Count wants a much more drastic display of activity and a complete sacrifice of petty personal feuds on the altar of a common cause.

Meanwhile from another quarter it is predicted that while the Seiyū kai will not seek to wreck the Cabinet on the rock of the Budget, they will certainly seek to force it into troubled waters, and the instrument they will choose for that purpose is a bill for abolishing the gun administrative unit. This bill was before the Diet in its 23rd session, and it precipitated a coalition between all the elements of the Opposition, mainly because the measure was supposed to have emanated from Mr. Hara who was then the most prominent figure in the Saionji Ministry. But the reasons which then animated the opponents of the bill could be met now by a slight change of the scheme, and therefore the Seiyū kai have here a weapon which may be at any moment used for the purposes of a violent assault on the Katsura Cabinet. Some predict that they are already preparing to use this weapon, but others confidently affirm that Mr. Hara is to take a trip to Europe, which proceeding would have the double effect of removing temporarily from the scene the prime author of the above bill and of generally weakening the political vim of the Seiyū kai.

Saturday, July 25

We spoke some days ago of the formation of a new political party consisting mainly of politicians who have hitherto ranked as independents or as business men. The preliminaries of organisation seem to have progressed very favourably, and according to present appearances the party will command something like 60 votes in the Lower House. From statements attributed to its promoters, the idea of a mere club is likely to be abandoned, and the association will register itself as a regular political party. There is not to be any avowal of support to the Cabinet or of opposition to the Seiyū kai. The main planks of the party's platform will be adjustment of the finances and rehabilitation of the Empire's foreign policy. On these great questions the members will vote in concord, but in small matters they will be allowed to exercise personal liberty.

Sunday, July 26.

The new political party held its first meeting at the Maple Club on the 25th inst. Thirty six members were present and they passed resolutions declaring that the platform of the Party should be, first, adjustment of the finances on a sound basis; secondly, the establishment of a secure and settled system for redeeming the national debts; thirdly, reform of taxation and the development of productive enterprises, and fourthly, the recasting of foreign policy. It was resolved that the Party's name should be the Boshin Club, so-called after the cyclical appellation of the current year. At the banquet which followed, it was stated that, according to present prospects the Party would soon have about 70 names upon its roll. The principal promoters seem to be Messrs. Nakano Buyei, Ena Shunichi, Iwashita Seishu, Nakamura Yaroku, Takano Takenori (the Formosan Judge whose removal from the Bench created so much commotion some years ago), Dr. Tomizu, Sengoku Mitsumu (Chief Engineer of the Kyushu Railway), etc.

Meanwhile the leaders of the Seiyū kai are said to be reconciled to the prospect of losing 20 or 30 votes. They claim to be quite unconcerned about this, and to be determined to make no efforts either to attract adherents or to drive out the disaffected. The first question which will produce a struggle on the opening of the next session of the Diet will be the election of the President of the Lower House. The Seiyū kai will put forth all their strength to secure this post for their own candidate. The second question will be the abolition of the gun element in the local administrative system. They expect to rally to their side in this matter not only the Progressists but also the Yukokai, and thus a very critical situation will be created for the Ministry.

It must always be remembered, however, that the Seiyū kai has responsible leaders, and that these are not at all likely to encourage or even to sanction a course of destructive opposition to the new Ministry. One unquestionable product of political education in Japan is a conviction that the country has some interest in the stability of its Cabinets and that no party which works merely for its own aggrandisement can count on the nation's approval.

Monday, July 27.

The Boshin Club does not come into existence amid anything like a chorus of applause. All observers appear to agree that while its declared platform is capable of accommodating a very large number of politicians, its prospects of really concerted action are very remote. But the leaders of the Boshin Club themselves allege that this question of homogeneity gives them no concern. They have adopted the Club organisation expressly for the purpose of allowing individual liberty of action to their members. With respect to certain points they are actually a unit. Those points are that the country's unproductive expenditures are excessive, that a larger sum must be devoted annually to the redemption of the national debts, that the system of taxation must be amended, that every possible measure must be taken to remove the causes of the present business depression and that the country's foreign policy must be conducted on improved lines. Outside these main planks each member will be at liberty to choose his own footing, but the Club expects that with regard to these cardinal issues a large number of politicians will be found in agreement with it.

Meanwhile Prince Ito, who is at present sojourning in the Onshi-kwan at Omori, was visited on the 25th inst. by Prince Yamagata and Marquis Katsura. The interview lasted for a long time and its immediate result is that the journalistic prophets have performed a complete volte face. On Sunday morning they got up with the conviction that the next session of the Diet would witness fierce struggles, first with reference to the presidency of the Lower House, and secondly with reference to the question of abolishing the gun element in the local administrative system. But on Monday morning these same seers rose with the conviction that the Seiyū kai will not attempt to make any trouble during the next session of the Diet, but will leave the Katsura Cabinet in undisturbed possession of office. This shows how largely conjecture enters into Tokyo's political appreciations. One thing at all events may be taken for granted, namely, that the Saionji Cabinet did not vacate the seats of power merely for the purpose of pulling down their new occupants.

Wednesday, July 29.

Mr. Matsuda Masahisa, one of the Seiyū kai leaders and Minister of Finance in the last Cabinet, has been interviewed by a member of the Niroku Shimbun's staff. He says that the Seiyū kai have not yet definitely decided what shall be their attitude towards the present Cabinet and that until the Cabinet itself fixes its policy there is no occasion for the Seiyū kai to adopt any emphatic line. As to the possibility of still further reducing the appropriations for the Army, Mr. Matsuda does not seem hopeful. He points out that the so-called six-year programme has not received the sanction of the Diet, being in fact a mere Ministerial idea. It may possibly be extended to an 8-year programme, but in any circumstances it is hard to see how Japan can do with a smaller force than 19 divisions, seeing that she owes her place among the nations mainly to her display of military prowess. On the other hand, there is no valid reason for pessimistic views about the financial situation. The people are well able to pay the taxes and will become better able as their material resources develop. As to the railway question, it presents no special difficulties. In view of the large surpluses of ordinary revenue which may confidently be anticipated, the Treasury need not find any difficulty in placing the railways in a special account and even in assisting them to the extent of 4 or 5 millions annually. But if the railways are to be offered as security for a foreign loan, Mr. Matsuda thinks that the dimensions of the loan should be fixed not with regard to the railways only but also with regard to the general question of Japanese development.

PRINCE ITO.

We read in the Fiji Shimpō that Prince Ito, who was received in audience by the Emperor yesterday, has probably advised His Majesty as to the occupant of one important chair in the Cabinet, namely, that of Finance. If the Prince consents to accept the office of President of the Privy Council and to retain the post of Resident-General at the same time, our contemporary thinks it probable that Viscount Sone will be released from the position of Vice-Resident-General, which office will devolve upon Viscount Kiyoura, Viscount Sone returning to Tokyo to take the portfolio of Finance. We imagine that this is by no means an improbable arrangement. There seems to be a pretty general desire that Viscount Sone should take charge of the nation's finances, and doubtless no more acceptable successor than Viscount Kiyoura could be found to replace him in Seoul.

KOREA.

Friday, July 24.

Temporary repairs have been effected on the railway between Seoul and Fusan and the service was renewed on the 23rd inst. but goods can not yet be handled. It was expected that traffic would be reopened on the Seoul-Chemulpo line from the night of the 24th, but the damage suffered by the track between Seoul and Wiju is so severe that no date can yet be fixed for resumption of traffic.

The draft of new fishing regulations in Korea is now under consideration. Three methods are said to be contemplated by the new law. The first provides for granting what may be called fishing charters. These are to hold good for 20 years and may be transferred from hand to hand by sale or otherwise. The second method contemplates licences granted by local officials for a period of one year; and the third seems to be based on the idea that the business of fishing may be lawfully engaged in merely by addressing a report to the authorities. This synopsis is somewhat vague, but the telegrams do not justify greater explicitness. It is at all events thought that the effect of the new system will be to extend fishing privileges.

Saturday, July 25.

There appears to be quite a commotion among the Japanese residents in Seoul in consequence of the Resident-General's decision that the Mayor of the Japanese Municipality shall be an official nominee not an elective officer. Hitherto the system of election has been pursued, but it is said to have been attended by abuses such as render a change desirable. Mr. Tsurubara, however, gives what seem to be very good reasons for this change. He says that the Municipality threatens to become the battlefield of provincial factions. Instead of being a body representing Japanese subjects in general, it is subjected to the influence of this or that group of provincials, and thus the interests of the many are sacrificed to the ambitions of the few. Then again there is the question of expense. In spite of the fact that the Municipality is not self-supporting in the matter of education, there is a disposition to remunerate its officers on a scale quite out of proportion to its actual resources. By making the Mayor an official nominee the holder of the post can be one of the Residents, and the most important officers may be officials of a Residency, so that the expense of maintenance will be very trifling. It comes to this in fact that the Japanese community has abused the privileges of self-government.

News comes from Yunkwi-wan in the north-east of Korea that a band of 400 Hunghutsu have made their appearance at that place. A Japanese force has left Fusan to deal with the marauders, and we presume that it is travelling by sea, for from Fusan to the mouth of the Tumen is a far cry.

The Hochi Shimbun publishes a Seoul telegram to the effect that the insurrection is being steadily suppressed, and that according to present appearances order will soon be completely restored.

Seoul telegraphs to the Hochi Shimbun that conclusive proofs have been obtained as the misappropriation of the National Debt Fund by the staff of the Dai Han Mai-II Shimpō. Of course this statement is too vague to command entire credence but we must at all events infer that the matter is still under investigation.

Sunday, July 26.

In the Seoul Press of the 21st instant we find the following:—

We are informed that, as the result of the police investigation into the alleged irregularities in connection with the funds of the Loan Redemption Association, it has been decided to arraign before a court of law Mr. Yong Kitaik, editor of the Tai Han Mai-II Shimpō, the vernacular counterpart of the Korea Daily News.

This is the case which the Japan Chronicle allowed an anonymous correspondent to prejudice in its columns while Mr. Yang Kitaik was actually under arrest and undergoing examination.

The commotion continues in Seoul with reference to the decision of the Residency-General that the Mayors of the Japanese Municipalities are to be henceforth officially nominated instead of being elected by the people. It is impossible without very much fuller material to form any intelligent opinion about the rights or wrongs of this case. On the one hand it is alleged that the elective system has been productive of abuses which effectually discredit it; on the other, while the existence of some abuses is not denied, it is urged that they are not sufficiently serious to warrant such a drastic change. Inasmuch as Prince Ito may be said to be the father of local autonomy in Japan, we can not suppose that he would have taken the above retrogressive step without ample cause.

Monday, July 27.

Vladivostok appears to be developing some disquieting elements. A telegram to the Asahi Shimbun under date of the 23rd inst. describes the gradual growth of a strong party of anti-Japanese Koreans in that city. Ever since the Japanese troops commenced their active campaign against the insurgents in Korea this spring, fugitives have been reaching Vladivostok and enrolling themselves under the banner of Yi Yonyun—of whom we have spoken elsewhere—and of a certain Kim whose personal name is not given. These Koreans have adopted the title of Wi-pyong. They easily obtain arms by purchasing them in Russian towns, and they are said to be drilling and organising openly. They have declared against the Japanese tradesmen a boycott which is enforced by club law, and there have recently been cases of violent and destructive raids against Japanese stores. Throwing stones through the windows of houses occupied by Japanese subjects is said to be a frequent occurrence. The telegram adds that the Russian authorities are displaying singular nonchalance in the face of these events, and, as might have been expected, there are not wanting rumours to the effect that the disturbance has Russian instigators.

Our readers will remember that some enterprising Japanese recently sought the Government's permission for the transfer of the Chyongjin-Hoiryong Railway to private hands. This is a mere temporary line with waggons pushed by hand. It was laid by the military during the War for the transport of arms, ammunition and provisions. Since the restoration of peace the line has continued to be used for military purposes, but in the intervals when not so employed the waggons have been handed over for private use to a certain Mr. Miura. There are 52 miles of track and it is said that at present the resources of the line barely suffice to carry materials for the building of barracks and other official needs. Moreover the districts traversed by the road are not productive, and it would have to be extended to Chientao in order to become a paying property. In these circumstances the War Department is not disposed at present to sanction the application for transfer.

Little by little the Korean refugees in Japan who have been pardoned and allowed to return to Korea are behaving in a manner which indicates that the sympathy originally extended to them by the public was misplaced. The latest case is that of Yu Kilsun, now head of the Legislative Bureau in Seoul. He is said to have been convicted of a plot to obtain illegal possession of some valuable landed property.

Tuesday, July 28.

With reference to the plan recently put into operation for enrolling Korean subject into an auxiliary gendarmerie 3000 strong, the Asahi Shimbun has an instructive note. It says that the force hitherto available for protecting life and property in the Peninsula is limited to 2000 Japanese gendarmes, an equal number of Japanese police and 3000 Korean police. This gives an average of one man to every 2000 inhabitants, whereas the ratio in Formosa is one to 700 inhabitants and it has never been supposed that Formosa is over-policed. Hence it was thought necessary to enroll a body of 3000 Korean auxiliary gendarmes which will bring to 10,000 the number of guardians of peace and order in the Peninsula. Our contemporary adds that this will give a ratio of one man to every 1,000 inhabitants, but we are unable to endorse the arithmetic of a proposition that if 7,000 means a ratio of 1 to 2,000, 10,000 becomes a ratio of 1 to 1,000.

It appears that one of the chief sources of Imperial expenditure in Korea has hitherto been the multitudinous religious ceremonies of worshipping at ancestral tombs. These ceremonials have furnished a pretext for all sorts of apparatus and outlay, and of course it has been in the interest of the Court officials and their assistants to keep up the custom and to extend it as much as possible. But the Emperor, acting doubtless at the instance of the Resident-General, has now decided to abbreviate the useless ceremonies and to substitute majesty for magnificence in such observances as survive the ordeal of pruning. It is believed that this measure will immensely relieve the pressure on the Privy Purse.

With reference to the veto recently imposed by the Kilin authorities on the export of grain from Chientao to Hamyongdo, it will probably have occurred to our readers that if Korea does not recognise Chientao to be Chinese territory, neither can she recognise such a veto as imperative on her own subjects resident in Chientao. Of course that phase of the situation presented itself immediately, and Japan, as Korea's representative in matters of foreign policy, has met the case by ordering her gendarmes to extend protection to Korean subjects who may be desirous of exporting grain across the river to Hamyongdo. This is a comparatively small matter, but it illustrates the complications which at any moment may arise and proves the importance of radically solving the Chientao problem as soon as possible.

Wednesday, July 29.

The agitation against the recently announced substitution of official nomination for election in the case of chief officers in Municipalities, continues to grow in vehemence. Lecture meetings are spoken of, and a strongly concerted effort is being made to induce the Residency-General to reconsider its decision.

There have been, as our readers know, rumours of various acts of violence committed by Korean settlers or refugees in Vladivostok against the persons and properties of Japanese subjects. We now learn from the Kokumin and the Nichi Nichi Shinbun that the truth of these rumours is denied at the Foreign Office in Tokyo. An explanation as to their probable origin is given. The Foreign Office in Tokyo having received information that Yi Ponyung, (a native of Korea naturalized in Russia to whom reference has already been made in these columns) is a strong opponent of Japanese doings in Korea and has been exerting himself in various ways to foment irruptions of Korean settlers from the north of the Tumen into Korean territory, addressed a complaint on the subject to the Government in St. Petersburg. The latter is said to have given a most satisfactory reply, endorsed by the Governor-General of the Amur. The reply is to the effect that Russia will not suffer her territory to be made the base of operations by naturalized Koreans against a friendly Power, and that effective steps will be taken to check this abuse. Thus the upshot of Mr. Yi's endeavours has simply been to draw closer the bonds of amity between Japan and Russia.

There is an emphatic denial of the statement emanating from Shanghai that some thousands of Korean subjects emigrating to Kilin from Chientao encountered a body of Japanese troops and killed 40 or 50 of them. The story is said to be made out of whole cloth. Nothing could be more satisfactory than the relations between the Japanese local authorities and the Korean settlers in Chientao. The only trouble which ever occurs now-a-days in that region is that occasionally small parties of marauders cross from Korea into Chientao and give some trouble to Colonel Saito's gendarmes.

It is stated that, at the suggestion of Viscount Sone, two Koreans are to be chosen from each province to form a committee for drafting the statutes of the Eastern Colonization Company. With these 26 provincial representatives there will be associated 7 others specially chosen, the total strength of the Committee being thus 33.

Thursday, July 30.

A telegram to the Asahi Shinbun from Seoul contains curious information about the scandal connected with the National Debt Redemption Fund. Our contemporary's correspondent alleges that the investigations hitherto conducted have furnished clear proof that 60,000 yen of this money was made away with by the Korean editor of the Dai Han Mai-II Shimpō acting in collusion with Mr. Bethell. The Korean editor is said to have declared that the whole responsibility rests with Mr. Bethell, and accordingly application has been made to the British Consul to institute proceedings against the latter. But the Consul is alleged to be making many difficulties and his attitude is not clearly understood. We (Japan Mail) venture to think that if the Consul is hesitating, his hesitation is due solely to insufficiency of evidence. If there were a valid case he certainly would not delay about taking it up. In fact the Consul has very little discretion in such a matter, for if the Korean authorities decide to lay a charge against a British subject in the proper consular tribunal, the due hearing of the charge becomes a matter of course. This part of the telegram is therefore unintelligible and it throws discredit upon the whole message.

We read in the Asahi that all possible expedition is being observed in carrying through its various processes the Convention between Japan and America for the protection of trademarks and patents. It is desirable to extend the operation of this Convention as quickly as possible to Korea, but a difficulty intervenes, namely, that a bureau of registration has to be organised in the Residency General, and that of course can not be accomplished in a moment.

RUSSIA AND JAPAN.

The Russian naval officers have subscribed for a wreath of silver flowers to be hung on the monument to the Japanese dead at Port Arthur. The wreath is said to be 3 ft. by 2½ and to be beautifully chiselled. It bears the inscription "From the Russians to the brave men of the Japanese Navy who fell at Port Arthur."

There is a disagreeable report from the north. It says that while the fishing schooner Miye Maru (102 tons) was being taken by the Russians from Nicolaivsk to Vladivostok, a collision occurred between her Japanese crew of 36 men and the Russians who were escorting them. Ultimately the Japanese were tried by court martial and six of them were condemned to death. As yet no official telegram has been received on this subject, and it is said to be thought at the Foreign Office in Tokyo that the fracas occurred at Nicolaivsk and not while the schooner was at sea. The officers of the Deep Sea Fishery Company, however, to which the Miye Maru belongs, are quoted as saying that such an affair is inexplicable except on the hypothesis that the Japanese sailors received at the hands of their Russian escort treatment of an unendurable nature. The Miye Maru was captured by the Russians at a point 7½ miles from Nicolaivsk and therefore well beyond the range of territorial waters. The Company had been led to expect that her release was imminent. If she be confiscated by the Russians, the loss to the Company will aggregate 150,000 yen.

An almost incredible version of the Miye Maru affair is sent from Vladivostok by the Asahi's correspondent at that place. From it we learn that as the crew of the schooner were being marched down to the latoba at Nicolaivsk, one of them fell out of the ranks in order to avoid a muddy spot on the road. The Cossack escort proceeded to pound this man with the butts of their rifles, and this inhuman treatment so enraged the sufferer's comrades that one of them threw a stone which struck the officer commanding the escort. A halt was immediately called and 7 of the crew were marched back and tried at once by court martial, with the result that one was acquitted and six were condemned to death. This story is so difficult to believe that the Asahi at once made inquiries at the Foreign Office in Tokyo, only to learn, however, that no official report had been received, which is not surprising, seeing that there is no Japanese Consul at Nicolaivsk. The Foreign Office officials added, however, that they have hitherto been in the habit of receiving reports from Messrs. Shimada & Co.'s commercial office in Nicolaivsk and that they have always found them quite trustworthy. Messrs. Shimada confirm the statement that 6 men have been condemned to death, but the Foreign Office officials are inclined to think that there has been a telegraphic error, and that the expression for "simple punishment" (shokei) has been transformed into "capital punishment" (shikei). The Hochi Shinbun's telegrams, however, leave little room for this comforting conjecture. Of course the curious point is that the officers and crew of the Miye Maru should have been treated as criminals and carried from the Commander Islands to Vladivostok under escort. At all events the details hitherto published are too vague to warrant any conclusive judgment.

The affair of the Miye Maru has not been cleared up. The Foreign Office in Tokyo is said to have addressed inquiries to the Russian Government in St. Petersburg, but it appears that no detailed intelligence has yet reached the Russian capital. A promise has been given that inquiries will be at once made and the result communicated to Japan. Meanwhile there has been an attempt to obtain a postponement of the sentence of death by application to the authorities at Vladivostok where the condemned men are lying in prison, but no success has hitherto crowned this effort. It is now evident that the conjecture as to a mutilation of the telegram conveying news of the death sentence has to be abandoned.

The Mainichi Dempo has a telegram from St. Petersburg saying that the Russian Budget has been definitely compiled on the following lines:—

	Roubles
Ordinary revenue.....	2,386,945,498
Extraordinary revenue .....	14,980,200
Total revenue .....	2,399,926,698
Ordinary expenditure .....	2,312,251,090
Extraordinary expenditure .....	269,152,078
Excess of expenditure.....	181,476,470

It is proposed to make up this deficit by raising a loan at 5 per cent.

FORMOSA.

News comes from Formosa that the through railway running north and south will be fully opened for traffic on the 26th of next October. The telegrams further say that excellent results have been obtained in the sequel of artillery practice against the aborigines in the Taikakau district.

It appears that the operations recently undertaken by the Nishizawa Company for developing the resources of Pratas Island have been abandoned.

General Count Saluma, has just returned to Japan by the Saikyo Maru and has been interviewed at Bakan by a member of the Jiji Shimpō's staff. His Excellency says that the construction of the line running east and west in Formosa will be commenced next April; and that the sixteen-year project for constructing irrigation works and the six-year project for building a harbour at Takau are going on satisfactorily and steadily, inasmuch as Formosa, being financially independent of Japan proper, has not shared the latter's necessity in the matter of postponing public undertakings. The Viceroy speaks, however, in a somewhat pessimistic strain about the aborigines. There are 120,000 of these people and statistics go to show that they neither increase nor decrease in number. The bigotry of their religious beliefs is remarkable, and every attempt hitherto made to impress them with the superiority of modern civilization has proved unavailing owing to their rooted conviction that all the beneficial phenomena of nature would pass out of existence if they abandoned their old time customs in the matter of ancestral worship, head-hunting and such abuses. In short General Sakuma is persuaded that the only effective weapons for drawing these benighted people into the pale of civilization are the sword and the rifle.

THE GOVERNMENT.

It is stated that at the meeting of the National Debts Adjustment Committee held on the 29th inst. a decision was arrived at to have recourse to the method of lots in paying back the 5th installment of the first series of War Bonds. This decision is based upon the now clearly established fact that the method of discounts has proved a failure. Particulars as to the redemption are not yet published, but it is expected that the operation will not take place until September, and that the Government will adopt the course of redeeming the remainder of the sum by equal installments from September to December.

The Tokyo News Agency, which is often spoken of as an official organ, now comes forward with a statement of the Government's financial policy. Speaking broadly, the Agency's account follows the lines recently indicated by the Chuo Shimbun but is not quite so explicit. In the first place, we are told that for the purposes of the current year's Budget, postponements of public works will be effected to the extent of 38 million yen. This means that in order to avoid recourse to the domestic loans sanctioned by the Budget, expenditures will be reduced to a corresponding degree. As to next year's Budget the policy adopted will be to exercise the utmost possible economies in ordinary expenditures; to abstain from all outlay on account of public works except those absolutely provided for by law; to increase the National Debt Redemption Fund by about 20 millions annually; to wholly eschew recourse to further loans; to take steps for utilizing the specie reserve held abroad; to adopt requisite measures with regard to the payment of the bonds representing the price of the nationalized railways, and generally to adjust the country's finances on a sound and stable basis.

It will be observed that there is a certain amount of vagueness in the above statements and that nothing whatever is said about any revision of taxes. Nevertheless the business men of the country are understood to be unanimous in desiring the abolition of the transit tax and a radical modification of the succession duties.

It will readily be supposed that the opponents of the Katsura Ministry have already put their finger upon the one palpably weak point of the above programme, namely, that in order to provide for increased redemption of the national debt it proposes to curtail productive enterprises, or, in other words, to check the country's material development. Superficial folks may be pleased by the idea of the country rapidly paying back its debts, but reflecting men will agree that this may be effected at too great cost if it involves a check to the country's growth of wealth. Whether this criticism is just or unjust can not of course be determined until the details of the Government's plan are known.

It appears that the agitation set on foot by the directors of the nationalized railways is being carried on very vigorously. Messrs. Sengoku and Yamada, the principal promoters of the movement, together with their fellow-members of committee, are said to be in frequent communication with the Prime Minister. Their programme is either that the railways should be resold to their original owners or that they should be converted into joint enterprises worked by officials and people in coöperation. No details of these proposals have been published, but it seems to be confidently believed that men like Messrs. Sengoku and Yamada would not endorse any unpractical arrangement. The Asahi Shimbun alleges that the Committee has elicited from the Prime Minister a significant admission in the sense that, apart from the advantages or disadvantages of State ownership, the fact of an addition of some 500 million yen to the national debt must be regarded as a main cause of existing financial embarrassment, and some step for correcting the situation is essential.

MANCHURIA.

It appears that Viceroy Hsu's recently issued instructions with regard to foreign settlements refer only to the settlement at Mukden. His Excellency desires to collect all the foreign residents into one place outside the western gate of the city where a considerable area of land has been laid out for the purpose. It is stated, however, that the order contains several points which are very unsatisfactory, especially with regard to perpetual leases, and as Japan is conventionally entitled to be consulted in all matters relating to the formation of the settlements, her Consul is understood to have expressed to the Viceroy dissent from the proposed arrangement.

Mr. Kiyono, a managing director of the South Manchuria Railway, is quoted as saying that the transfer of the Railway to the direct control of the Communications Department was suggested by Baron Goto some time ago but did not meet with the approval of the then Minister of State for Home Affairs. According to the same authority, Baron Goto, when accepting the portfolio of Communications in the new Cabinet, stipulated that no new President for the South Manchuria Railway should be appointed. We gather from Mr. Kiyono's statement that it is Baron Goto's idea to dispense altogether with the special office of President of the Railway and to leave its functions to be performed by the Minister of State for Communications. We note, however, that in some quarters there is circulated a semi-official denial of the fact that this administrative change was made by Baron Goto a condition of his entering the Cabinet.

The attempt of the rights-recovery party in Kilin to upset the Convention for the joint construction of the Changchun-Kilin Railway is said to have elicited a strong veto from Peking on the ground that a matter definitely fixed by treaty can not be altered at unilateral option.

On the 29th inst. the labours of the commission for drafting the Yalu timber regulations came to a satisfactory end. Some point have been reserved for subsequent consideration by the Governments concerned, but, on the whole the negotiations may be said to have concluded happily.

INDIA AND JAPAN.

Lord Curzon's recent utterances in the House of Peers and the disturbances now reported from Bombay naturally attract much attention in Japan. The Fiji Shimpō has an interesting article on the subject. Our contemporary had treated as mere idle talk the rumours arriving from time to time in the sense that Japan's victory over Russia had produced a disquieting effect on the mind of Orientals. But when that belief is endorsed by a Statesman like Lord Curzon and by a politician of such reputation as the present Governor-General of Indo-China, the problem assumes a different aspect. To any really intelligent observer the reasons which made for Japan's success are quite patent, and the fact that war was forced upon her is equally obvious. If unreasoning folks regard the result only without paying any attention to the circumstances, they are not unlikely to be led into error. Lord Curzon said that the education given by England to her Indian subjects is unwise and the Governor-General of Indo-China has said the same thing mutatis mutandis. The Fiji is evidently disposed to agree with both utterances. It is quite confident that but for England's enlightened and benevolent rule India's position would be now very different indeed from what it actually is, and it is equally convinced that if shallow-headed agitators in the great Principality fall into the error of attempting to free themselves from British rule, they will merely sacrifice the blessings of a hundred years of the best Government and will bring calamity on their own heads. It is possible, and indeed there are not wanting signs, that the Indian students in Japan will contribute some recruits to the band of agitators. But it would be most unfair to hold Japan responsible for that. All that she can do is to warn such mistaken patriots that they will never have her sympathy, still less her assistance, and to invite them to seriously study the story of the recent War so that they may learn to distinguish how little the racial element affected the issue.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT.

The perplexing passage in President Roosevelt's speech delivered to naval officers at Newport is his reference to the necessity of protecting the labouring classes. This is obscure and may perhaps have been meant to be indefinite. But taken in conjunction with the statement clearly attributed to him by the telegraph that, had not America annexed the Philippines, she would not now have any necessity for a fleet more powerful than that she already possesses, the President's analysis of the situation seems to be prompted by distrust of Japan. It will be wise, however, to await the full text of the speech before drawing any hard and fast conclusion. The unfortunate thing is that the world forms its first impressions from telegraphic reports, and these impressions generally survive the corrections which ought to be applied on fuller perusal. There can be very little doubt what the verdict of history will be upon the question between the Occident and the Orient as illustrated by the events of the past few years. The doer of wrong is the West; the sufferer of wrong, the East. Just as in the affairs of everyday life we invariably find that men look with suspicion and distrust upon those whom they have treated badly, so in international dealings the Power that has an uneasy conscience regards others with apprehension. All through these happenings Japan has preserved a perfectly equable and calm demeanour. She has bowed quietly and with dignity to the exclusive prejudices of the very nations which 50 years ago threatened her with heavy pains and penalties because she herself ventured to be exclusive. It is the irony of fate that thrusts the United States, which first knocked at Japan's door, into the forefront of nations that now seek to close their doors in Japan's face. How it will all end no peace-loving onlooker dares to predict.

FOREIGN CAPITAL.

It appears from comments made by the Tokyo press that the inadvisability of seeking new foreign loans at present is beginning to be appreciated in this country. The proximate cause of the conviction is the terms which had to be given for the paltry sums recently raised in France and America by two Japanese companies, the Toyo Kisen Kaisha and the Kanagafuchi Boseki Kaisha. Foreign money, our vernacular contemporaries think, is too dear at such rates, and the best plan is for the Japanese to "sit tight." We can not too strongly endorse that view. It is essential that Japan should give breathing time to Europe and America. There is nothing to show, and no reason to think that her credit is impaired in the eyes of foreign capitalists. People who entertain the idea of investing money in an Eastern country, or who become promoters of such transactions, take infinite trouble to ascertain the economic conditions existing in that country, and have in its centres of business correspondents who keep them fully informed of everything that is going on. Thus the capitalists of London above all, and of New York, Paris and Berlin in probably a lesser degree, know that Japan's affairs are in a sound state, and that the depression from which she has been suffering for the past 15 or 16 months is a mere transient phenomenon which will ultimately be replaced by a time of prosperity. It is not, then, because of Japan's unfitness that these shrewd and fully posted financiers hesitate to offer money to her at tempting terms. It is because they have not yet digested her previous issues. We have to remember that during the recent war, a space of less than two years, London accommodated Japan to the extent of about 100 millions sterling. A hundred millions sterling in eighteen months would be an immense transaction in any circumstances, but it becomes colossal when we observe that the borrower was an Oriental nation engaged in a war of vast magnitude and uncertain issue. It may be reasonably asserted that every potential purchaser of Japanese securities took a share in the huge transaction, and that a great many, probably a large majority, of them have quite as many of this country's promises to pay as they can conveniently hold. In time, not a very long time either, these bonds will find a wider market, and there will then be created a new field in the great financial centre, London. But to place new loans now would be to pour water into an already full vessel. Japan must wait. A waiting policy will pay her best in the end.

COUNT KOMURA.

The Jiji Shimpō has a telegram from London saying that during his stay in London Count Komura has had opportunities of consulting not only the leading statesmen now in power but also those who are out of office, on the subject of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance. His Excellency found absolute unanimity of opinion with regard to the great utility of the Alliance as a peace-preserving instrument. English publicists do not yield to Japanese in their approval of the Alliance and in their desire to see it perpetuated. Upon this important point Count Komura is entirely assured, and he adds that the result of his inquiries is fully confirmed by the treatment accorded to him by men of all parties during his sojourn in London.

The above is distinctly pleasant news. It would be absurd to deny that certain local journalists in the Far East are doing everything in their power to educate an opinion adverse to the Alliance, and however insignificant their efforts may be, one can not but assume that they represent some section of public opinion. Probably this news about Count Komura's experiences will furnish a text for fresh denunciations by these journalists, but it will also constitute an effective answer to their arguments.

We may mention here that rumour now busies itself with the names of Count Hayashi and Viscount Aoki as probable representatives of Japan in London. We can not find that this forecast is based on any very trustworthy information but we give it for what it may be worth. The Mainichi Dempo is mainly responsible for the statement, and it adds that Viscount Aoki is seeking to enlist the assistance of Prince Yamagata while Count Hayashi is Prince Ito's choice.

BUSINESS NOTES.

Friday, July 24.

The Progressist Party is endeavouring to procure an extension of the programme for the grand Exhibition. Mr. Kato Masanosuke is said to have visited Viscount Kaneko to urge the advisability of a larger plan. The Viscount is quoted as having replied that any considerable change of that nature is out of the question. The present scheme is that Japan shall erect all such buildings as are required, first, for her own exhibits, and, secondly, for the exhibits which foreign countries make at her instance. Foreign exhibits which do not fall into this category must be housed in buildings erected at the expense of the exhibitors. This makes it necessary to leave a considerable margin of building space, for it is now evident that the exhibits from foreign countries will be of great dimensions. The United States, for example, has increased its original appropriation of 500,000 dollars to 3 millions, and the Mexican Government intends to put up a large national hall where the products and manufactures of Mexico will be fully represented. The general rule in foreign countries is to divide the space allotted for exhibitions into two equal parts and to leave one part without any erections. But in Japan the ratio adopted on this occasion is 10 to 1, namely, 350,000 tsubo of space and 35,000 tsubo of building. There will thus be abundant room for foreign exhibitors to put up suitable buildings, and the plan can not now be altered. Viscount Kaneko and his brother-Commissioners think that 10 million yen will be quite enough for Japan to spend.

It is stated that the Toyo Kisen Kaisha has succeeded in effecting a loan of a million dollars at 6 per cent in New York. There is no security other than the endorsement of the Specie Bank and the First Bank. The money is to be repaid in 15 months; the commission is 1 per cent and the financiers are Messrs. Kuhn Loeb & Co. Mr. Asano, who has now left the United States for Europe, is said to have already transmitted the money to the Specie Bank.

The reorganisation of the Imperial Bank of Commerce is still a subject of discussion. What the directors propose is to reduce the total capital from 8 million yen to 6 millions, and to reduce in the same ratio the paid up capital, namely, 5,600,000 yen, and the unpaid capital, namely, 2,400,000 yen. But the shareholders wish for a more drastic measure. They propose to reduce the capital by 50 per cent., and altogether to wipe out the unpaid portion. It is doubtful that such a course would be in accordance with the commercial code, and certainly it would not be approved by the creditors of the Bank. This difference of opinion will probably necessitate postponement of the final meeting which was to have been held to day.

Saturday, July 25.

It is stated that the Toyo Kisen Kaisha originally intended to raise the sum of 4 million yen abroad but that Mr. Asano was not able to obtain more than 2 millions in New York and he has consequently proceeded to Europe in search of the remainder. The purpose to which the proceeds of the loan are to be applied is the building of the two big steamers, the Tenyo and the Chiyo. Last May the Company issued 13,000 new shares, and by calling up one fourth of the face value, obtained a sum of 1,625,000 yen. This sufficed to pay the money still due for the construction of the Tenyo Maru as well as one fourth of the cost of the Chiyo Maru which is now in process of building. The total outlay on account of these two vessels is put at 4½ million yen and to this has to be added a sufficiency of working capital. Hence the loan of 4 millions. As to the fact that the term of repayment is only 15 months, the directors explain that by that time they hope to be able either to call up the remaining sum due on the shares or to rewrite the debentures.

The Japanese-Korean Gas Company seems likely to prove a marked success. In spite of the financial depression now prevailing all the Company's shares were subscribed by the end of last month, and it is proposed to call up the first installment by the 10th of August.

The project for constructing a harbour at Ofunado together with a connecting railway has again been brought vigorously upon the tapis. The projectors believe that they have the sympathy of the Katsura Cabinet, and they hope to obtain in the next session of the Diet the introduction of a bill guaranteeing interest from the paid-up capital of the enterprise.

The Treasury bills to the amount of 8,600,000 yen which fell due for repayment on the 24th inst. were offered by the Government for rewriting, and were immediately snapped up by the banks, although the rate of interest is only 1.8 sen daily. It is evident that the banks have a great deal of loose money lying around and that they welcome any real safe opportunity for investing it.

By way of a striking contrast to the above, attention may be drawn to two other loans which have just been contracted. One amounts to 450,000 yen, the borrowers being the Fukuoka Municipality and the lenders the Meiji, the Teikoku and the Nippon Insurance Companies. The rate of interest is 9½ per cent. and the period 15 years. The other loan is half a million yen contracted by the Nagoya Electric Light Company and furnished by the Meiji and Kaijo Insurance Companies. The borrowers receive 95 yen per bond and pay 9 per cent interest, pledging themselves to redeem the debt whenever required. It thus appears that the difference between the Government's credit and the credit of a substantial public organisation is just 3 per cent.

Sunday, July 26.

The Shogyo Shimpō asserts confidently that the general bases of financial reform have been laid down by the Cabinet, and that the Departments of State will submit by the close of this month estimates in accordance with those bases. To the utmost possible degree economy will be the order of the day, not in the realm of extraordinary enterprises only but also in that of ordinary outlays. The sum available for redemption of the national debts will be increased and the system of taxation will be amended.

The affairs of the Imperial Bank of Commerce seem to be still far from adjustment. A largely attended meeting of shareholders was held on the 25th instant. It proved somewhat turbulent. The shareholders were asked to recognise a loss of 583,246 yen, and when inquiries were made, as to the period covered by this loss, it was elicited that several periods were concerned. The question then naturally arose why the loss had not appeared in previous accounts, and the only answer being apparently that the directors had hoped for an improvement in the Bank's affairs, several of the shareholders became violent in their denunciations, and finally it was decided to appoint a committee of ten for purposes of adjustment, and to hold another meeting on the 10th of August.

On the 25th inst. Mr. Mudaguchi, President of the Tokyo Railway Company, invited the principal shareholders of the Company, Messrs. Kondo, Wakao, Fukuhara and Okura, to a meeting for the purpose of explaining to them the situation of the Company's affairs and the views of the directors. He said in effect that unless the uniform system of fares were abandoned and some increase made in the schedule, the Company could not possibly pay a reasonable dividend to its shareholders and at the same time extend its lines to the suburbs while keeping its rolling stock and road bed in order. In the sequel of the Government's refusal to sanction municipalization, the Mayor of the City and the Aldermen had resigned, and it might appear natural that the directors of the Company should resign also. That would certainly be the easiest and most comfortable course for the directors to pursue, but they felt that the duty devolved on them of putting the Company's affairs into a satisfactory condition before stepping out of office. Accordingly they asked the shareholders to grant them a little law. One of the shareholders, whose name is not mentioned, suggested that the directors had become unpopular and that as this question of raising the schedule of fares would probably lead to some commotion, its solution might be better undertaken by other hands. This view did not, however, find favour with the other shareholders, and it was decided to act as suggested by Mr. Mudaguchi.

It is said that the promoters of Baron Senge's election to be Major of Tokyo have decided to abandon that project and to support the candidature of Mr. Ozaki, whose election is therefore considered to be assured. There appears to be an idea that the election for the mayoralty has some connexion with the future of the Tokyo Railway, but there can be little doubt that whoever be elected to fill the post, the Municipality must arrange to get a substantial income from the Railway, which can be done only by raising the fares.

The Oguni Bank re-opened its doors on the 25th inst. as previously announced. The event created no excitement in Tokyo. Out of 650 depositors who were entitled to be paid in full only 64 presented themselves and drew out the paltry total of 3,200 yen. The scene at the head office in Nagoya, however, was more animated. There were 24,000 petty depositors and of these a very large number put in an appearance so that there was a considerable crush. Three hundred were paid off before 10 o'clock and thereafter things went more smoothly. The Bank is said to be now regarded with confidence by the public.

The President of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha has been interviewed by a representative of the Shogyo Shimpō in the sequel of the Vice-President's recent utterances which produced such a marked effect upon the share quotations. Mr. Kondo confirmed in general what Mr. Kato had stated. He explained that the present depression in the realm of the maritime carrying trade was not limited to Japan nor was it an affair of recent origin. It existed all over the world, and had been going on for several years some people estimated as much as seven. In England 200 ships were laid up, and in Hongkong 20 were unemployed. The Nippon Yusen Kaisha had as far as possible pursued the policy of removing steamers from coast-lines where the transport business could be discharged by rail, and had made it an object to avoid injurious competition. Nevertheless like other companies, it felt the pressure of the times. Doubtless in view of its importance as a factor of national development and in view of the services it had rendered in connexion with the War, it would continue to receive State aid as was the case with similar enterprises in Western countries.

Tuesday, July 28.

It is stated that the Keihin Electric Railway has succeeded in raising a loan of 2 million yen through the agency of Sir Clifton Robinson. The rate of interest is 6 per cent. the net receipt 91 yen per bond and the period prior to redemption 27 years. We question the accuracy of this last figure it is so quoted.

As for the loan of 20 million yen said to have been negotiated by the Industrial Bank, the officials of the Bank are reported to have admitted that they are in treaty with Parisian capitalists but that the result is still uncertain.

Four thousand Japanese subjects have now been carried to Peru and are said to be working very hard and making a signal success. Some of them are holding as much as 25 acres of land and many have become tradesmen.

Wednesday, July 29.

It appears to have been premature to state that the Keihin Railway Company had actually obtained a foreign loan. The terms are still under discussion and it is possible that some time may be needed before an agreement is reached.

The Shogyo Shimpō says that there can be no doubt that foreign purchasers of Japanese exchequer bills have been numerous of late. The total bought is put at from 2 to 3 millions of yen. This is because European financiers fully expect that the new Cabinet will take steps to place Japan's monetary affairs on a more satisfactory footing and that the market price of her stocks will appreciate considerably in the near future.

Japanese onlookers consider that while the cotton spinning troubles in Bombay will have the effect of greatly increasing the demand for Japanese yarns in China, they must at the same time injuriously affect the export of Japanese silk piece goods to India. This export has of late become an important feature of the country's trade, and anything tending to impair it would be a serious matter.

On the 3rd of next month the principal bankers of Japan are to hold another meeting in Tokyo for the purpose of formulating a policy which they will recommend for the Government's adoption. This policy will embody the results of the investigations recently carried on by a committee of experts to whom the bankers entrusted the problem.

Thursday, July 30.

In the Mainichi Dempo we find an article which notices with approval the activity shown by the directors and other officials of the Tokyo Railway Company since the municipalization project was vetoed. So long as the fate of that project remained unknown, the officials of the Company naturally felt no very zealous desire to improve the service, but they are now exerting themselves with commendable earnestness in all directions. As to the question of raising the fare, there can be no doubt that such a step is unavoidable, and that it will certainly be approved by the Municipal Council and the Municipal Assembly, since otherwise no revenue can accrue to the City from the Railway. The Nichi Nichi Shimbun quotes one of the most active of the Directors, Mr. Inouye, as explaining that with a uniform fare every extension of the line to the suburbs means practically so much loss of revenue since it involves an outlay quite disproportionate to the revenue that accrues. All the time too the expenses of the Company increase owing to wear and tear of road-bed and rolling stock and owing to the necessity of increasing the emoluments of old and trusted servants. The Company fully recognises the necessity of assessing its fares on a juster basis, but is anxious to be guided by the feeling of its clients, the citizens of Tokyo.

The Nippon contains a note referring to the debentures which are to be floated in England for the purpose of the Seikosha. It is expected that these debentures will carry less than 5 per cent. interest. A favourable condition of the market will be sought before the issue, and in the meanwhile the Bank of England will advance any funds required. Our contemporary observes that such terms bear an eloquent testimony to the standing of the great Firms of Armstrong and Vickers, without whose association very different conditions would have to be complied with.

Our readers are aware that for some time back a project has been on foot, under the inspiration of Mr. Amenomiya and others to amalgamate 8 temporary railways into one concern and to call the combination "Dai Nihon Kido Kaisha." This project has at length matured. The railways are the Kumamoto, the Yamaguchi, the Hiroshima, the Ise, the Hamamatsu, the Shidzuoka, the Fukushima and the Atami. Of these the first 6 have paid up 25 yen per share, and will now be required to pay up 5 yen more; the seventh has paid up 20 yen and will now have to pay up an additional 10 yen, but as for the eighth, which has paid up 50 yen in full, nothing special is stated. The capital of the amalgamated company is put at 2,335,000 yen.

The Mainichi Dempo says that there is great activity in the silk market and that the demand for the Zaguri variety in America is altogether exceptional.

The Tokyo Municipality is still in doubt about its re-election of the Mayor or his replacement by a new official. The accounts published about this matter differ from day to day, and it is really impossible to determine the actual facts. What seems certain, however, is that there will be some delay in summoning the meeting of the City Assembly by which the matter must be decided.

THE TOKYO STOCK EXCHANGE.

Saturday, July 25.

In the money market's present mood anything and everything produces a sensible effect. On Friday morning the Hochi Shinbun published a most pessimistic view expressed by the Vice-President of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha with regard to the prospects of the maritime carrying trade, and the effect produced upon that company's shares was disastrous. They tumbled down 3 points, dragging everything else in their wake. In the afternoon session bad news from Osaka accentuated the debacle, and even the Tokyo Gas shares on which a fine dividend has just been announced, dropped a point and a half. The tone at closing was, however, a little firmer. The Tokyo Railway suffered least, but the fact is that it has no margin to fall much lower.

Monday, July 27.

The Tanko Railway shares were the victim of bear operations on Saturday. A rumour was vigorously spread to the effect that, in order to pay its last dividend, the Company had been obliged to eat into its reserves. The result was that these shares tumbled down  $2\frac{1}{4}$  points, and the rest followed suit. In the afternoon session, however, a firmer feeling prevailed, and, on the whole, the market closed at a higher level than that of Friday.

Tuesday, July 28.

The exceptionally fine weather, supplemented by various more or less trustworthy rumours, gave an upward impulse to the market on Monday. Cottons were favourably influenced by the news of the Bombay spinning-mill troubles, and some talk was heard of a loan of 20 million yen raised by the Industrial Bank in France. At all events there was a better tone, and intelligence of briskness in Osaka helped the general appreciation.

Wednesday, July 29.

The Tokyo Stock Exchange was absolutely lifeless on Tuesday. Sellers alone put in an appearance. There was no ostensible reason for such dullness unless the near approach of settling day be held responsible. At all events it is evident that no buoyancy whatever exists as yet.

Thursday, July 30.

The market on Wednesday (forenoon only) seemed to indicate that there has been some recovery from the baseless pessimism of the past few days. In most cases prices showed fractional rises and the market closed firm. The volume of shares to be dealt with to-day (30th) is quite exceptionally small—only some thirty-odd thousands—, which fact is partly due to the stagnation generally observed in mid-summer. The following are the quotations for September delivery:—

	July 28th.	July 29th.
Tanko Kisen .....	81.15	80.80	— .35
Tokyo Railway .....	56.30	56.30	—
Kei-Hin Railway .....	65.10	64.40	— .70
Yusen Kaisha .....	78.40	78.70	+ .30
Toyo Kisen .....	—	—	—
Tokyo Gas .....	79.70	79.80	+ .10
Tokyo Dento .....	64.20	—	—
Fuji Gas Spinning .....	82.00	82.45	+ .45
Tokyo Spinning .....	31.80	31.60	— .20
Kanegafuchi Spinning .....	84.10	85.10	+ 1.00
Iteer .....	75.10	75.90	+ .80
Sugar .....	67.95	68.70	+ .75
Takarada (Hoden) Oil .....	101.80	102.00	+ .20
Nippon Oil .....	—	—	—
Namboku .....	—	—	—
Stock Exchange .....	108.05	108.90	+ .85

NOTES ON CURRENT EVENTS.

In our columns on the 25th ultimo we reproduced a rumour that the German Ambassador is to leave Japan for Europe. It appears that this report is absolutely without foundation.

It is now confidently stated that Mr. Ozaki Yukio's re-election to the post of Mayor of Tokyo is assured. We do not profess to be conversant with the shades of political differentiation represented by such terms as the "Monday Society," the "Friday Society," etc., of which the Tokyo electorate is made up. At all events it appears that a section of the Monday folks, who have hitherto been in favour of Baron Senge, have now declared themselves supporters of Mr. Ozaki, whose election therefore will be a mere matter of form. It appears to be thought that whichever of the two be elected, a revision of the Tokyo Railway's fares is assured, but certainly the Stock Exchange does not seem to take that optimistic view. Judging from the daily quotations, there is just as little confidence in revised fares as there was in municipalization. In fact there is less confidence, for whereas at the first rumour of municipalization the shares sprang up several points, they have never responded at all to any talk of increased charges.

The idea gains ground that Viscount Sone will be recalled from Korea to take the portfolio of Finance, and that the post of Vice-Resident General will be given either to Viscount Kiyoura or to Baron Ito Miyoji. We should regard the latter choice as particularly happy. Baron Ito has now lived for many years in retirement, but he is universally recognised as one of the very ablest officials at Japan's command. It has not been, we believe, owing to anything but his own choice that he has remained out of office for all this time.

Colonel Hino has just returned from a trip to Ili. He travelled inland from India and his journey occupied altogether 470 days. The most interesting piece of news that he brings back with him is that there are quite a number of stores in Ili where foreign goods are sold. These stores are run by Chinese subjects, who were originally in the service of foreign firms at Shanghai and who were furnished with capital by their foreign employers for the purpose of opening a market in Ili. The goods sold are nearly entirely German, and the fact constitutes a striking illustration of the activity of German enterprise. From a political point of view the influence of Russia is very great in Ili. She has several Consuls there, and her traders supply the major portion of the goods required by the 3 million inhabitants apart from the necessities of life which are procured locally. Japan's name has come to receive much honour since the War. It appears that the Mohammedan inhabitants prayed for her success. A certain amount of Japanese goods are imported into Ili by the Chinese merchants of the metropolitan province, but Colonel Hino found only two Japanese subjects there. One was the Head of the Military College, the other the Principal of a local school.

DEATH OF MRS. VAUGHANSMITH.

It is with deep regret, says the N.-C. Daily News, that we learn of the death on July 15 of Mrs. Vaughansmith of Tientsin, as the result of an operation in London. Less than a year has passed since the death of Mr. W. H. Vaughansmith, and it is to be feared that the anxiety of those days and her loss exercised an injurious effect upon Mrs. Vaughansmith's health. She left Tientsin a few months ago on a well earned holiday and the news of her unexpected death comes as a shock to her many friends throughout China.

Mrs. A. M. Vaughansmith was born in 1861 and began her literary career in 1889 as leader writer to the Japan Gazette, and correspondent of The North-China Daily News. Subsequently she worked for the Japan Mail, and eventually became editor of that journal. In 1894 she came to China as war correspondent for the Civil and Military Gazette Lahore, and in 1896 became editor of The Shanghai Times. A year later Mrs. Vaughansmith was appointed editor of the weekly Peking and Tientsin Times and remained connected with that journal until the time of her death. She was also representative in North China of The Standard and of this paper. Mrs. Vaughansmith published two popular books during her life, namely, "Children's Japan" and "Verdant Simple in Japan." [We (Japan Mail) may add that Mrs. Vaughansmith was never connected in any way with this journal.]

THE FIRE ON THE "SCHARNHORST."

It appears that the fire on the German mail steamer Scharnhorst began at noon on the 9th in the No. 4 hold, among the ship's provisions. Steps were at once taken to subdue it and the ship made all speed for Singapore arriving there at 4.30 p.m. When the fire was got under it was found that the Singapore mail bags (of which 84 had been collected at way ports) and others were flooded by water from the adjoining hold. Says a Straits contemporary:

"With all possible speed they were landed and taken to the Post Office, where Mr. G. G. Wilson, the Assistant Postmaster-General, in the absence of his chief, Mr. W. G. Bell, who is away in Penang, had a staff waiting to cope with the extra work that would be involved. The bags were so completely saturated that their efforts were at first directed more to salving than to sorting, but it was soon found the letters had not fared so badly as the newspapers. This was owing to the correspondence being well bundled and covered with brown paper through which water will not penetrate quickly, whereas newspapers, journals, and so forth were packed singly, as usual, and thus sustained greater damage.

"The floor of the Post Office was cleared and made ready to receive the soaked mail matter in order that, by the morning, it would be sufficiently dry to permit of delivery. Papers, books, packages, letters, and the usual contents of a mail van were strewn over the floor and guarded carefully throughout the night, so that by 9 a.m. to-day practically all the letters and the majority of the papers had been delivered. Now drying on the floor and in various parts of the building are mails for Bangkok, Saigon, and Manila, which the postal authorities deem it prudent to keep back for a short while. On board of the German liner the mails for Hongkong, Shanghai, China coast ports, and other places have been placed in the Singapore Post Office taking no responsibility respecting matter other than that with which it deals usually. These mails will leave by the liner at 1 a.m. to-morrow, and should be comparatively presentable by the time the next port of call is reached. The Scharnhorst's damage is confined to the No. 4 hold, where the ship's provisions suffered both from fire and from water, and this morning ship chandlers were busy replenishing the pantries and assisting the officers to prepare the ship for the comfort of the passengers."

THE CABINET.

LEADING newspapers of Tokyo continue to indulge in conjectures as to whether and when the next Cabinet will make a declaration of its financial policy. That there will be some important change of method appears to be generally taken for granted, as indeed is not unnatural, inasmuch as the only valid reason which can be assigned for the retirement of the SAIONJI Ministry is that its methods of finance had elicited the nation's disapproval. On the other hand two things are evident. One is that Marquis KATSURA can scarcely be expected to elaborate a definite programme until he has been in office long enough to have full access to all the materials necessary for forming an opinion. The other is that ordinary prudence will deter him from tying his own hands by a premature declaration. What is perhaps significant is that the newspaper press itself is equally silent. It neither recommends nor formulates any course which can be called a working programme. The only confident prediction as yet uttered is that the Administrative Reform Committee will be abolished. Administrative reform has been on the tapis for the last 15 years. Cabinet after Cabinet has pledged itself to do something in that direction, and it can not be said that the pledge has ever been violated, but it can be said that the results have usually proved so insignificant as to suggest want of earnestness. Whether there is really much room for administrative retrenchment no outsider can venture to affirm, but the SAIONJI Cabinet had something of the kind in view, for it appointed a Committee to investigate the subject. The understanding was, however, that a part of the economies suggested by this Committee should be devoted to increasing the salaries of junior officials, which are now manifestly inadequate. The net result therefore could not have been of any considerable benefit to the Treasury. The present Cabinet is said to have abolished, or to be about to abolish, this Committee, and therefore the idea of augmenting the pay of junior officials may be regarded as suspended, if not abandoned. But although the Committee be abolished the main purpose for which it was organised will not be given up. Administrative economies will be effected, but the method pursued will be to strike off a uniform percentage from the appropriations of each Department, and to leave to the Departments themselves the duty of effecting such changes as shall be in accord with these reduced outlays. Meanwhile it has always to be remembered that the Treasury is confronted by the necessity of amassing funds to redeem the various installments of the exchequer bills issued during the War. One hundred million yen worth of these bills will fall due for redemption in 1910, and unless the financial conditions change very materially between this time and that, there can be no prospect of getting these bills rewritten on anything like the terms at which they were issued.

In any circumstances it is the duty of the Government not to follow any Micawber-like policy in dealing with this question. There can be no blind reliance upon an improvement of economic conditions, however probable it is that such an improvement will have taken place before 1910. The money must be provided, and in fact one of the best ways to avert the need of paying it is to have it ready for payment. With this task in hand the Treasury may well be perplexed to find resources for the heroic scheme of redemption desired by the people. The only newspaper which essays to map out a general course is the Shogyo Shimpō, and the only really important reform which it attributes to the Cabinet is the one frequently advocated in these columns, namely, reversion to the old system of redeeming exchequer bills by lot instead of by purchase in the open market. If this change were made, it is difficult to see how bonds liable at any moment to be redeemed at par could remain at a discount of 12 or 15 per cent. For the rest, the course suggested by our contemporary amounts practically to the abandonment of all enterprises calling for an issue of fresh loans. This means of course a corresponding arrest of the development of national resources so far as official initiative is concerned. But, after all, the day may be said to have passed when the duty of taking this initiative devolved upon the Government. The matter may now be safely left in the hands of the people. This does not refer of course to railways, telegraphs and telephones, but even such instruments of progress must be governed by the nation's ability to extend them. The time will certainly come when Japan will have plenty of money for productive enterprises, but just at present a good deal of domestic and foreign digestion is needed to correct the plethoric condition created during the War.

THE BOOKSHELF.

Films of Blue, by JOHN INGRAM BRYAN; Tokyo, the Kyo-bunsha.

MR. INGRAM BRYAN has given us a little volume of poems which contain many gems of thought in a fair setting of words. They are short poems, essentially the expression of fugitive sentiments, but many of them leave an abiding impression. It is always a difficult task to form an unqualified opinion about poetry, unless it be transcendently good or thoroughly bad. We shall therefore invite our readers to make their own estimate, and to that end we reproduce here two of Mr. Ingram Bryan's productions, premising that they are fairly representative, but admitting, at the same time, that we have chosen them because they seem to be specially free from a blemish which occasionally protrudes itself in some of their companion compositions:—

The sea breaks soft to-night
Along the foot of the hills;
And the babbling of the rills
Makes song to love's delight.
Out of the mists that rise
And float to the hills away,
Like dreams of the dying day,
There peep the brave blue eyes.

Alone in the twilight there,
With the mists, the hills, and sea,
Will he come back to me,
With his kiss of crooning care?
They say he'll come no more
To clasp me close to his breast,
When the day-god dips in the West,
And the love-star twinkles o'er.
Then into the night I flow,
To wait the break of the morn,
When life shall new be born,
And man not love forego.
For the dreams beyond my ken,
Of hopes, and joys, and fears,
And disappointed years,
Will have more meaning then.

* * * * *
If everything that's born must die,
My love for thee was never born;
I've loved thee from Eternity,
As now upon our bridal morn.
I have ranged the wide world over,
Felt the pulse of every sun;
And I say it as a lover,
That I never loved but one.
Her eyes were dark and glancing;
Her face was wanly white;
Some sweet presence all-entrancing
Did fill me with delight.
She seemed so calm and lonely,
A stranger on life's way;
And I the one soul only,
She wanted to obey.
I have seen some wondrous faces,
Lips of rose and passion deep,
But always there were traces
Of what love can never keep.
There were eyes that oft undid me,
Angel hair of purple fire;
But somehow love forbade me
To respond to their desire.

The occasional blemish to which we allude is illustrated by the following verses:—

A dream of the deepest repose
Is the moon in the blue,
Cheering the weary day's close,
(Which Fuji can't do)
With the splendors of night,
Orient night.
* * * * *
As quivering sparks of radium,
Pulsing from the heart of light,
Those souls illumine the stadium
Of man's unrelenting fight.
* * * * *
When each spirit takes its journey
Worldward from the realms of space,
'Tis my mere concern to see
Just what like will be its face.
* * * * *
What seeds the earth sucks in
That yield no life;
What strength all time trunks in
For nought but strife.

It is unnecessary to point out how perilously near the brink of doggerel some of the above lines reach. Happily such defects are very rare, and they can not obscure the beauty of their context.

Selected Masterpieces. The Ukiyo ye School.

Volume III., with letter press by SHIICHI TAJIMA. The Shimbashi Shoin, Tokyo.

THIS most beautiful work gains in interest and attractiveness as it increases in bulk. To any one hoping to plunge at once into the glories of the Ukiyo School the first volume and the second were slightly disappointing, for the author carefully followed the evolution of the School, and consequently introduced types which showed the inferior graces of all initiatory efforts. Yet it was essential to pursue that path, not merely for the sake of truth but also to correct the too prevalent notion that the Ukiyo Academy was born fully fledged and complete in all its features, being, in short, a signal revolt on the part of Japanese artists from the rigid traditions of what may be called the ideographic galleries. There was certainly such a revolt, but like everything developed from human genius it was a gradual process, which did not attain its zenith until several generations of masters had contributed their quota to the great total. This third volume brings us into the presence of full achievement, and most captivating is the result. There are 30 full-page plates in all, and the letter-press is interspersed with minor illustrations. We may say at once that the plates are absolutely faithful. All the shades and tones of the originals—even the mellowing of age—are reproduced with faultless fidelity. As a general, nay almost universal, rule, book illustrations reproducing great pictures inspire one chiefly with impatient longing to see the originals, but these plates of the "Selected Relics" are entirely satisfying, and one feels that one is confronted by an altogether instructive gallery. The series begins with Kwaigetsudo, a man little known to foreign students under that name, though as Masanobu Okumura he is familiar to all collectors. The early part of this artists' career was stormy. His connexion with an intrigue between an actor and a court lady involved a sentence of exile to Oshima, and some years passed before, settling in Yedo, he earned the title of the first Ukiyoe artist of the Eastern Capital. There is, to be sure, a little confusion about his identity, for while biographical sketches refer to him under the nom-de-plume of "Ankei," the identifications of his pictures go to show that his name was "Ando." The question has collateral interest, as illustrating the extreme care and research now devoted to a school of artists who, in their own time and by many succeeding generations, were regarded as caterers to vulgar taste and quite unqualified for admission to classic galleries. From plate 74 to plate 81 we are regaled with specimen of the Kwaigetsudo School. They all show clear mutual affinities—beauty of colouring, grace of pose and great decorative brilliancy, but there is considerable stiffness in drapery owing to the use of outlines where softness and pliancy are entirely sacrificed to force of brush. It is not until we come to the days of Kumeido and especially Shisendo Rifu that we find this artificiality replaced by a more conscientious conception of nature. All these examples of the Kwaigetsudo School are from paintings on silk or paper: we are not yet introduced to the chromozylograph.

The next School treated is that of the Torii, which alone among the Ukiyo-ye subdivisions has survived all vicissitudes and continued in existence from the period (Genroku) of its establishment down to the present day. It owes this vitality to the patronage of the theatre, for during the space of 225 years its disciples have enjoyed almost a monopoly in designing and executing histrionic posters. Here one comes into contact with a galaxy of great masters—Kiyomoto, Kiyonobu, Kiyomasa, Kiyomitsu, Kiyotsune, Kiyonaga (greatest of all) and a host of others, all of whom are described and illustrated in detail. Every student of the Ukiyo-ye has acquired a conviction that the fore-shortening of faces presented a constant problem to the Torii Artists, but plate 91 from a painting on silk by Kiyonaga shows how completely that great master solved this problem and how inimitably soft and pliable his drapery shows by the side of any of his predecessors' work. Thirteen plates are devoted to the Torii School but still the chromozylograph finds no representative.

Passing over a few artists whose works do not survive in sufficient quantity to be easily accessible, the authors take us to the imperishable pictures of Koryusai (Isoda), Suzuki Harunobu and Tomikawa Fusanobu. Four reproductions of Koryusai are given, the last being from a coloured print, a copy of which is doubtless in the hands of many a fortunate collector. Koryusai's work is not excelled by that of any master. He has graces that are all his own. It is true that many give this pride of place to Suzuki Harunobu, but it has always seemed to us that Harunobu's mannerisms obtrude themselves too persistently, and that his work loses in force something of what it gains in grace and delicacy. Here figures, however, in reproductions of some most charming chromozylographs.

Finally we have the Harumachi School and the Momokawa. The plate produced to illustrate the former is the only selection which seems to invite criticism, for it verges very perceptibly on the false proportions of the latest Ukiyo-ye artists.

It would be useless to expatiate upon the beauties of this noble volume. To lovers of the Ukiyo-ye, and all that have studied it love it, eulogies are superfluous. It is enough for them to know that without spending a fortune and a life-time on the collection of specimens they can now at very small cost provide themselves with an almost exhaustive gallery of the finest illustrations.

The "Kokka."

No. 217 of The Kokka devotes the greater part of its textual space to an essay from the pen of Dr. Ito Chuta on the stone column and lion before the sepulchre of the courtier, Hsiao, of the Liang Dynasty. The learned author enters into a great deal of topographical detail, but the main interest of his essay lies in the fact that he finds in the monument and its decorative designs features which induce him to abandon the long-believed theory as to the relations between the arts of the Southern and Northern Dynasties of China. That theory is that these arts were of different lineage, that of the North having been introduced into the comparatively uncivilized regions of inland China via Hsiyu, while that of the South came to the enlightened section of the Chinese nation from India by sea. The column has fluting, which is an essential characteristic of the classical art of the West. The designs on the belts are of the same type as those fashionable in the North Wei Dynasty. The capital is of the Indian order, and the lion has wings, which adjuncts establish a relation with Assyria, ancient Persia or Sassan. Hence Dr. Ito concludes that all the details have a clear affinity with Hsiyu or India, and that the style came from the column of King Asoka which stands at Stanbar in India. On the other hand, Indian columns are rarely polygonal, have never been ornamented with fluting and usually possess bell-shaped capitals. Hence we have relations to India and Hsiyu simultaneously.

The illustrations of the volume are quite up to the usual level, which, as our readers know, is very high. Plates IV. and V., from the collection of Viscount Akimoto, well deserve examination. They are attributed to Keishoki, and they exhibit an extreme type of the Sesshu School's unhappy mannerism, hard and obtrusive outlines, a mannerism from which Motonobu was the first to break away completely.

The Magic of May, by JUTA; George Bell and Sons, London.

This is a work refreshingly out of the common. The characters it introduces are so unusual as to be startling, but they are sketched with such force that one entirely overlooks their abnormal features and accepts them as orthodox types. Perhaps there is at times a little straining after the dramatic and a consequent failure to conceal art, yet this blemish, if in truth it exists, is obliterated by the general excellence of the work. It is a strange plot. A man born in possession of all the highest attributes, develops one moral blemish under the constant menace of a mother's cruelty. This defect becomes operative at a crisis in his life and betrays him into a course which involves disgrace. Only one man has cognisance of his fall and that man has conceived in his boyish days an unrecognised but absorbing affection for a girl whom the other subsequently learns to love. She, on her side, has loved her boyish companion, but has stifled the passion, believing to it be unreturned. She therefore responds to the addresses of the later comer and marries him. But now her early playmate returns from India where he had witnessed the disgrace of her second lover, and the question is whether he shall use this knowledge to alienate her affections from her husband. Out of these materials a story of intense pathos is constructed. There is deep suffering, there is compensating joy, and there are human beings who restore one's faith in humanity. George Elliott is recalled by these profound metaphysical studies.

The Forefront of the Battle, by ANDREW LORING; George Bell and Sons, London.

CONSIDERING that ingenious folks have been writing novels by the thousand for the past hundred and fifty years, it is wonderful that anything new should remain to furnish a plot, but Andrew Loring shows in this volume that the lives of men and women may include phases hitherto entirely unfamiliar to ordinary thinkers though in no sense unnatural. There is, indeed, nothing novel in the passions portrayed—love, revenge, self sacrifice and jealousy; these are common enough and will always remain common. But the setting provided for them by Mr. Andrew Loring gives the picture a new aspect. The central male figure is a politician of commanding intellect who, before the age of forty, becomes prime minister. To remove his rival in love he acts the part that Daid acted to Uriah, but after a long interval the man doomed to destruction returns, a physical wreck indeed but still living. It is easy to conceive that a terrible drama ensues, but it is not easy to conceive what the drama becomes in the powerful hands of Loring. He introduces us to English men and English women of whom it is wholesome to have read even in a work of fiction. We advise our readers to acquire "The Forefront of the Battle" if they desire not merely recreation but also moral refreshment.

WATER POLO.

A practice game was played off the Y. A. R. C. Bathing Barge on Tuesday evening at 5.45, the sides being as follows:—

"Reds."		"Whites."
H. Goddard	Goal.	G. W. Gregory
A. B. Pollock	Full	E. Eagling
Nord	Backs.	R. C. Bowden
J. L. Graham	½ backs	W. G. Nicolle
P. E. Nicolle		E. Eagling
Dentici		M. Luther
Deveson	F'rds.	G. G. Franklin
J. E. Laffin		S. Vincent

Reds won by 3 goals to 2, the goals for the winners being scored by Deveson, Dentici and Laffin and for "Whites" Vincent put in two.

MONTHLY SUMMARY OF THE JAPANESE RELIGIOUS PRESS.

It is perhaps too much to expect that every educated Protestant and every educated Roman Catholic should understand each other's views. Perpetual misrepresentation among Christian sects is the order of the day, involving pages upon pages of explanation. To quote an instance in point, Mr. Nakamura Chōnosuke, writing in the Shinjin on Living Faith and Dead Theology must needs refer to the Roman Catholic Church as typical of dead Theology and to Protestantism as representing living faith. The truth of course is that there is any amount of dead theology in the Protestant ranks as well as among the Roman Catholics and that there is any amount of living faith among the Roman Catholics as well as among Protestants. Mr. Nakamura went on to affirm that Roman Catholicism is a narrow-minded religion and one that imposes on its adherents many onerous restrictions. He then praised Protestantism for the way in which it has enabled men to leap over the boundaries set up by the Catholic Church. To this article the Kōe replies at some length, pointing out that narrow-mindedness is a term which needs delicate handling. By many it is applied unreasonably to those whose convictions differ from their own. As regards restrictions the Kōe points out that no religious sect can dispense with them, and as to their onerousness, that depends on the state of mind of the person observing them. The Kōe says that the Protestant's boasted freedom from restrictions is no subject for congratulation when it is borne in mind to what length the love of liberty has carried some Protestant sects.

In the July number of the Kōe there is an article entitled "The Attitude of a True Christian," which is most liberal minded in tone and constitutes a very effective answer to the attack made on Roman Catholicism by Mr. Nakamura. We give the substance of this article below:—We are Christians, but still we remain men and Japanese. Being Japanese, our hearts beat in sympathy with our fellow-countrymen on numerous occasions. We rejoice with those that rejoice and weep with those that weep. In a great many cases what others seek we seek, what they avoid we avoid. Between what is condemned and what commended, what is rejected and what taken by us and them there is no great difference. Wherever we go and in whatever pursuits we engage we remember first of all that we are men and that we are Japanese. When we see men engaged in educating the young, dispensing charity to the poor, and the like, we readily join hands with them, endeavouring to show if possible more zeal than they do in this kind of work. In our creed there is nothing to damp the ardour of patriotism, nothing to discourage efforts whose chief object is the advancement of the country's material and immaterial interests. On the contrary, there is much in our religion that tends to make us more earnest than outsiders in seeking to improve the state of the country. It matters nothing to us whether enterprises have been started by non-Christians or by ourselves. All that is worthy of support we support heart and soul. With all earnest-minded, sincere, serious-thinking and upright people we should co-operate. Though they may not believe in our religion, their many virtues, their knowledge, their devotion to good causes, their skill in the management of affairs should command our respect. We should not be backward in showing in what high estimation we hold such people. Fraternally we should work with them. The warmth of genuine friendship should exist between us and them. From their knowledge and experience we should benefit much. Hand in hand we should go with them in every good work. We should do this because we are Christians. This co-operation with our fellow-men in every way possible is of the very essence of Christianity. But while saying this, we do not mean to assert that it is necessary to give up our own special views nor to express agreement with opinions or principles which seem to us to be erroneous. We should strive to realize the ideal set us by St. Augustine in those words "Not to love sin on account of the man who commits it, nor to hate the man on account of the sin that he commits" (Hito ni yotte tsunni wao ai senu: tsunni ni yotte hito wo nikumazu). While hating sin, we should love the sinner. He who can not rise to this level is no true Christian. Christians must be on their guard against exclusiveness. They must remember that they are men and women first and Christians afterwards. To live day after day in their own little world, regarding with cold indifference all the good work that is going on outside the narrow circle within which they move is a great mistake. The Christian should be ever ready to recognize and show his appreciation of the good that others do, of the devotion they show, of the moral beauty displayed in the lives of men and women whose creed differs from their own. While holding resolutely to their beliefs, they should cultivate liberal-mindedness towards those who differ from them. And above all, they should remember that they themselves are full of imperfections, that they have much to learn. Humility is a grace that they need most of all. In dealing with the faults or errors of others we must ever bear in mind how much there is in us that needs correction. Nothing is more repulsive to outsiders than the assumption of proud superiority which characterizes the manner of certain Christians. Humility is the most fundamental of all Christian virtues and its absence often destroys the good effect of thoroughly sound doctrinal teaching. The Christian attitude to the outside world, then should be one of respect, love and benevolence. He who lacks this spirit is not endowed with the mind of Christ. If Christians generally were to display this spirit, their creed would be more highly honoured by worldly men than is now the case.

Writing in the Seikō (Success) Mr. D. Tagawa, editor of the Miyako Shimibun says that young men in this country have very few opportunities of social intercourse with their elders. In England men of all ages meet at Clubs and at a variety of social gatherings, but here the older men keep aloof from young men to a large extent. The remedy for this state of things is with the senior men. They must take the initiative in providing occasions for social intercourse with junior men.

The Kirisutokyo Shūhō has an article penned by Mr. R. Motoda on "The Need of Preaching to Individuals." Most men who preach to congregations are ignorant of the real views, sentiments and religious perplexities of the various members of the audience, says Mr. Motoda. The consequence is that their action can only be compared to that of a doctor who should dispense medicines without diagnosing each separate patient treated. Much that is said on such occasions is quite inapplicable to the individuals addressed. Persons who are suffering from special mental complaints hear of remedies that may suit other people but which if applied in their cases would only aggravate their maladies. In this country, especially among the better classes, people object to attend preaching services and prefer to be visited by evangelists (Koto ni waga kuni ni oite wa, susunde kyōkai ni onomuki, sekkyō wo kikan to hoshuru mishinto (末信徒) wa mare ni shite, shirizotte dendo no raiho wo uke, Kirisuto no oshie wo kikan to hoshuru mono wa hikaku-teki ni ōshi). Another advantage that visiting has over preaching is the fact that it enables the person visited to receive favourable impressions from the character of an evangelist, if he be a man with a powerful personality. To sit at meat with publicans and sinners was Christ's way. Thus did he seek out lost sheep and bring them into the fold. But there is no denying that this kind of evangelization is far more difficult to carry on successfully than evangelization by means of preaching. Inexperienced, young evangelists are apt to make a mess of things, giving offence to the people visited by want of tact and doing more harm than good. Mere theological training is no adequate preparation for this kind of work. The appeal to individuals which I advocate, concludes Mr. Motoda, should be undertaken by every earnest-minded Christian layman. There are cases in which the unpaid layman stands a better chance of succeeding than the paid pastor, for reasons which must be apparent to everybody.

* Noli vitium propter hominem diligere, neque hominem propter vitium odisse.

The present system of education is not conducive to the development of character, writes Mr. Abe Isoo in the Kaitakusha. In all our higher schools, he goes on to say, the attention of students is concentrated on special subjects. Beyond these their mental vision does not go. In general knowledge they are very deficient. This system may produce a nation of experts, but it is fatal to the development of such highly cultured all-around men as are found in large numbers in Western countries. One of the chief objects that teachers in high-class schools should set before them is to endeavour to get the students to take an interest in all sorts of subjects that have no direct connection with the one in which they hope to graduate. Unless this is done there is no kind of foundation laid for after-life. In many cases real self-education and self culture only begin after a student has graduated at a University, but unless the basis for this self-development is supplied at school it may never come about at all. Technical knowledge is all very good in its way, but a nation can not make its mark in the world by that alone. Nothing makes up for the lack of those high moral qualities which come from extensive study of men and things, from contact with the best types of humanity the world has produced. High class technical education we have, but in high class general education and general culture we are gravely deficient, says Mr. Abe.*

In an article entitled "My Views on Immortality" published in Mr. D. Ebina's organ the Shinjin Dr. Ukita Kazutami first asserts that he is a strong believer in the perpetuity of individual traits of character. No man lives to himself. His personality, his actions and his words are continually influencing others and their influence will bear fruit in the world long after his death. A man may only live 70 years, but the effects of his life will be traceable for generations after his death. In a hundred ways we are benefited or injured by our ancestors and so posterity will have to bless us or curse us for what we bequeath to them. Just as every object casts its shadow and every voice is followed by its echo, so each action and each utterance of ours bears fruit of some kind or other. Individual types of character, then, according to Dr. Ukita, will live on to distant ages. But he believes too in another kind of immortality. He thinks that after death all spirits are absorbed by the Deity and become part of it. But he is careful to observe that to him this does not mean the certain loss of self-consciousness or individuality on the part of each separate soul. "We shall all remember the past," says Dr. Ukita "though not so perfectly as it is remembered by the Deity to which we have been joined." While he predicts future happiness, as regards individual existence, he admits that belief in it or expectation of it is founded on fancy, but to him it does not seem to be a fancy of which human beings need be ashamed (Saraba gojin wa kojiri-tekini [individually] mo sonzai su to iu wo yeyō. Shikashi kore wa tada sōzo de aru. . . . Hito aruwa yūkewai (妖怪) no shinkō to ōshi (同視) suru aran mo, kōre kesshite jinrui to shite hazukashikaranu sōzo de aru.)

Dr. Ukita's article reads like an attempt to harmonize Buddhist and Christian teaching on the future life. Some of his language is distinctly Buddhist and some again is Christian. What he writes about absorption into the Spirit of the universe might have been written by Dr. Inoue Enryō, Dr. Murakami; or any other noted Buddhist. The essential Christian doctrine that individual memory and thought will undoubtedly remain after the change which death causes Dr. Ukita does not regard as trustworthy. Here is his statement respecting that: Tada gojin no kioku ya shiso nado no mokori ya ina ya wa, totei gojin no shigi (思議) subekarasaru mono to shinjuru. So that it would seem that he does not go beyond the acceptance of the Brahman and Buddhist belief in spiritual absorption after death.*

* "Empire rests on the character of the nation that aspires to it," said Lord Rosebery in a brilliant address delivered at the Glasgow University a few weeks ago.

The number of suicides reported by the daily press in this country is appalling. The way that suicide cases are treated by irresponsible newspaper scribblers tends to make readers regard self-destruction as one of the finest of heroic acts. At the beginning of this month a drunken student who had been plucked at the Second High School went to a Sendai brothel and, after cutting the throat of a miserable prostitute, put an end to himself in the same way. This abominable action formed the subject of long paragraphs in one of the local papers entitled "A Magnificent Way of Dying." The suicides that are taking place can doubtless be traced to a variety of sources, but according to the editor of the Seikyō Shimpō (Greek Church), widely prevailing pessimism is one of the chief causes of the alarming phenomenon. It seems to us that the old samurai admiration for suicide, instead of dying out, has revived during the last few years. That public opinion of this kind affects the minds of young men and young women very seriously can not be denied. If public opinion universally condemned suicide, would the newspapers go on holding up self-destruction as worthy of admiration? We think not. Even pessimism does not lead to suicide in all countries by any means. But be this as it may, here is the gist of what Mr. Ishikawa has to say on the prevailing mental depression. That since the Russo-Japan war cases of suicide have increased to an alarming extent is admitted by everybody. The fact shows a decline in that fortitude and moral courage which enables a man to overcome instead of succumbing to the difficulties of life. Outwardly Japan is developing great strength, physical, commercial and financial, but inwardly she is displaying astonishing weakness. That many people are disappointed with the results of the war can not be denied. It raised the country's reputation; it added to her material resources, opening up new fields for commerce and industry, but its psychological effects were distinctly bad, and, considered from an economic point of view, it has added so much to the financial burdens of the people as to drive many people to despair. It is a singular thing that a nation which displayed so much fortitude when confronting a powerful foreign foe should appear so pusillanimous when battling with the difficulties of everyday life. But this seems to us quite certain: the prevailing suicides are the result of prevailing pessimism, and this pessimism is the result of the misplacing of hopes. The visions of happiness that a victory over a foreign foe was expected to yield have all proved to be deceptive phantasms. The nation is suffering from the plague of disillusionment.†

Mr. T. Yamada writes in the Seikyō Shimpō on the general unrest throughout Asia. Like a great many other Japanese, he refers to the disturbances in India and Persia sympathetically, interpreting them to signify national development of the right

* Dr. Ukita seems rather to contradict in one part of his article what he says in another respecting the survival of individual consciousness, but his final statement is that nothing can be determined on this point.—(WRITER OF SUMMARY.)

† It will be remembered by some readers that a few years ago Japan's greatest philosopher, Dr. Katō Hiroyuki, contributed an article to the Taiyō in defence of suicide committed by defeated troops, extolling it up to the skies as a piece of heroism in which Japanese surpassed all other countries. The men applauded for their patriotism by Dr. Katō did not, however, commit suicide. They had more common-sense than they were credited with. But suicide is praised to-day in the most open way by hundreds of educated Japanese. Foul Japan is by no means dead, as some sanguine folks imagine.—(WRITER OF SUMMARY.)

‡ The extreme selfishness of suicide, involving as it usually does much distress, and privation to others is seldom touched on by journalists who write on this subject.—(WRITER OF SUMMARY.)

kind. Though Japan rules Formosa and Korea, her leading writers habitually represent subjection to a foreign yoke as necessarily ignominious and hence condone even murder and assassinations committed in furthering the cause of political freedom. Mr. Yamada tells us that he welcomes the new movement throughout Asia (Daitai ni oite wa kono shin genshō wa yorokobu). He goes on to argue that the mental inferiority of many Asiatics is the result of political oppression. This certainly does not apply to India, but the trouble is that writers like Mr. Yamada possess no special knowledge of the sentiments and past history of the many races under British rule in that country.

Dr. N. Ariga's article entitled Nihon Koku-min no Seishinjo no Gimon which appeared in the June number of the Tetsugaku Zasshi was briefly noticed in these Columns in the Weekly Mail of July 11th. It has naturally attracted the attention of Christians, as it partly supports their contention in favour of making belief in God the foundation of State authority. The Kirisutokyo Sekai on July 2nd published a full epitome of Dr. Ariga's article and commented on it editorially. In the summary given by this Christian journal the following remarks of Dr. Ariga occur:—In Western countries constitutional government and belief in the Absolute, that is, in God, go hand in hand. The belief in the higher Power tends to increase the authority wielded by the State. We can get this here by a revival of Confucianism. The great reforms of the Taikwa Era (A.D. 645-649) as well as the reforms of the early part of the Meiji era were all modelled on Confucianism (Taikwa no Kaishin ya, Meiji no ishin ya mina hyōjun to jukyo ni toreri). Confucianism suits a democratic form of government as well as absolute monarchy. Its elasticity is marvellous. As to how it should be explained is a question we can't discuss here. One thing is plain: steps must be taken to revive the old belief in a suprasensate Power, for the State absolutism in which men now profess to believe has elements of weakness in it which will bring about its destruction. The Kirisutokyo Sekai ridicules the notion that Confucianism can supply the defect of which Dr. Ariga complains. Scholars have come to the conclusion, says this Congregational organ, that Confucianism is not a religion at all, but a moral code designed especially for application to politics. It is true that there are vague references to Heaven and God, but there is no attempt to base morality on Theology. Neither one of our three great schools of Confucianism (the Wang Yang-ming school, the Kogakuha, and the Chuntz School) has attempted to show that Confucianism is anything more than an ethical system. What is there in Confucianism, asks the Kirisutokyo Sekai, to satisfy the deeper religious yearnings of the human soul? Can it ever occupy in Japan the position that Christianity has occupied in the West? In order to be made to do that it would need to be transformed to an unrecognizable extent. Even were Confucius himself to reappear on the earth, he could not give us a creed that would suit the progressive age in which we live. It would be easier for the Stoic philosophy to supplant Christianity in the West than for Confucianism to play the rôle in Japan that Christianity plays in Europe and America. Is not our present orthodox system of morality essentially Confucian? Does not the Imperial Rescript on education embody the leading principles of Confucianism, loyalty to superiors, filial piety, and the like? Is not the morality taught in our Government Schools to-day all based on Confucianism? And is not this very fact the chief reason of its acknowledged ineffectiveness? Does not Dr. Ariga himself express great dissatisfaction with the mental state of people who have been taught mere Confucian morality? While, on the one hand condemning Confucianism indirectly as failing to supply the higher form of belief of which Dr. Ariga sees the need, on the other hand he praises it as capable of playing the rôle of a national religion in Japan. The Doctor's argument is self-contradictory (jika-dochaku). But still we can not but feel glad that he has had the courage to speak out on this topic. What he says stands in striking contrast to recent utterances of Dr. Katō Hiroyuki, who objects to the notion of placing a Heavenly Father higher than an earthly Monarch in the way Christianity does, interpreting it as a slight put upon an Emperor. The Kirisutokyo Sekai aptly describes Dr. Ariga's argument by that inimitable Chinese phrase Ryūō dabi, the head of a dragon and the tail of a serpent, since it begins grandly, and ends insignificantly, and concludes its article by asserting that only by the adoption of Christianity can Japan escape from the dilemma in which she now finds herself owing to the dissemination in this country of doctrines that contradict each other.

The discussion between the Fukin Shimpō and the Kirisutokyo Sekai on the subject of the Atonement of Christ which lasted for over a month was brought to a close on June 25th. The conclusion which is reached by the Kirisutokyo Sekai is that Christ did not receive punishment as a substitute for mankind, that He Himself never taught the doctrine of the atonement as it is now taught by the orthodox party in the Church, that His special Mission was to lead men to repentance. The word metanoia embodied his Gospel. The New Testament and the earliest Christian writers support this theory, says the Kirisutokyo Sekai.

Summer Schools have been opened by Christians for the past 19 years, but this year the Dōshisha is holding what is termed a Theological Summer School. It was to open on July 13th and to close on the 30th of the same month. Its object is to help pastors and evangelists, many of whom are expected to attend. The Dōshisha has started a Theological lending Library which should prove a great boon to impecunious Christian workers. The rules of the Library allow pastors and evangelists of all denominations to borrow books from it, provided they fulfil the conditions specified.

Mr. Yamaji Aizan, writing in the June number of the Dokuritu Hyōron (Independent Review), pronounces theological discussion to be for the most part a waste of time. Religion does not depend on theology for its effectiveness as a means of comfort and enlightenment, says Mr. Yamaji. The chief function of religion is to save men from the evils of various kinds to which they are exposed. Men's beliefs as a rule are gradually formed as a result of many influences, some internal, that is, coming from inherent mental tendencies, others external. These beliefs are not often altered in deference to the opinions expressed by controversialists (Hito no shinkō wa giron nite sayu shi ubeki mono ni arazu). When the orthodox party tell us we must believe certain doctrines in order to obtain peace of mind or salvation, we tell them that that is quite unnecessary. Peace of mind comes from following the lead of conscience, from accepting what seems to us trustworthy and sternly rejecting all that appears to be false or unproven.

In No. 677 of the Fukin Shimpō we find an article from the pen of a well-known jurist Dr. Uzawa Sōmei entitled "Law and Christian Thought," an epitome of which we give below:—That the effects of Christianity on Law in the West have been many and far reaching is known to jurists. If asked what is the foundation of all law, we should reply character. The object of all law is the realization of certain moral ideals. And since it is one of the functions of religions to set moral ideals before the world for imitation, in ancient times religious teaching invariably gave colour to legislation. The laws made were all based on men's ideas as to what was right and what wrong. On such questions as the position and rights of woman, and the amount of liberty that all human beings can claim, men's views in the West were greatly influenced by Christianity. The long struggle between the Papacy and civil power as represented by various European monarchs was caused by different views on an essentially religious question, though it affected the laws of every country in numerous ways. If the Pope could prove that his authority was derived direct from God and that that of ordinary monarchs only comes from man, then it was contended that it was plain he was superior to all earthly sovereigns. So it came about that civil rulers claimed to be chosen and appointed by God and wielded both civil and spiritual power as the heads of States and the heads of Churches. The doctrine of the atonement as worked out by St. Paul in the Epistle to the Romans is stated in legal terms. The exaction of a penalty for violation of the law, the satisfaction of the requirements of law by the payment of a penalty, the payment of the penalty by one person on behalf of another, thereby freeing that other from all liability—what is all this, but the application of legal phraseology to the function that it is supposed Christ fulfilled in atoning for the sins of mankind? The notion of joint responsibility for sins committed, which is so much dwelt on by certain Christian writers was originally derived from law. The Law in many cases not only punishes the actual committer of a crime but also those who are in some way connected with its commission. The idea that when Adam and Eve sinned all mankind sinned too is nothing but the extension of this joint responsibility from the parents of mankind to all posterity. There are Christian theologians who like the Buddhists regard sin as nothing more than weakness, as a wandering away from the right path, and not as a violation of the law of God. To me it seems that the more serious view of sin is in agreement with Western Law; though by this I do not mean to say that the legal view of sin is precisely that of religion. What I affirm is that the notion that evil is something more than a trivial departure from the right path, that it is an offence against law to which a penalty is attached that has to be paid if the transgressor wishes to go free, is in strict accordance with the fundamental principles of law. To me it seems that repentance is not sufficient to save mankind from the punishment that sin entails. Into the question of whether the punishing of a perfectly innocent person in order to save the guilty is in accordance with the highest principles of justice Dr. Uzawa does not go. Therein lies the difficulty which many feel when asked to accept the teaching of the orthodox party concerning the Atonement.

PORT ARTHUR.

To one whose house a few short years ago was headquarters for 230 Japanese Infantry Reserves for 53 days, while they were preparing to go to Port Arthur, and who acted as special Volunteer Red Cross nurse to Russian prisoners of war and Japanese wounded, many of whom were from Port Arthur, an opportunity for a summer in Port Arthur was not a thing to be lightly refused, so a late June day found us en route for that famous place.

A day and a night of fog on the way, half the time lying off the coast of Korea, off from Mokpho and Pinnacle Rock only served to touch up our fancy concerning warships hunting for each other or escaping from each other as the case might be. Dalny or Tairen is the beginning of the break away from Japanese sights and sounds, though the Anna's mournful flute was heard even there on the night air.

Japanese-built houses such as seem fine in Tokyo, look flimsy beside those of Russian build. Solid and substantial Chinese Town with its endless capacity for dust, busy Japanese Town and the Russian quarters were all visited and their contrasts noted; the new brick Presbyterian church is a fine modern feature.

The deep restful greens of Japan have given way to brown; on the hills with a film of green and patches of bare red soil, with the green of new millet growing in the fields, as one makes entry to Manchuland by the south Manchurian R. R. with the heavenly blue of Manchurian skies and sea around all. No moss grown stones, roofs or gardens here, all seems like "Heavens high eternal noon." Sunshine and breeze invigorating and stimulating.

Even in the midst of the sunshine the breeze from mountains and sea has a touch of coolness, sometimes stiffly, so that it rouses the blood to resent it like an unwelcome caress; yet however thinly clad the lack of dampness creates no chill, and I later found that the extra wrap for the pause in the mountain tramp, was not needed.

Nearing Port Arthur, Bodaifan with its two Russian wounded cannon at the top sweeps your thoughts toward all that Port Arthur stands for, and you enter the town in a tremor of interest. But it took several days to fully get bearings of localities and directions. Surely this spot was destined for a great city; the Russians chose well, it was a splendid terminus for the Siberian Railway, the outlet for a continent. If only they had been content without aggression on their neighbors even, might not the world have been the richer for the beautiful great city that was already in its youth. Poor Russia, had she not been false at the heart, she might have done the world a service!—Civilization and progress do not mean aggression, and Christianity does not mean selfishness! Was there ever a site more lovely for a human habitation. Mountains all around and the beautiful harbor, and the glorious sky and air over all, will it ever reach its destiny? What secrets do these hills contain? Will their production, and foreign enterprise which is already on the ground, yet make of this a great city, as it deserves? Clothe the Manchurian hills with forests as the Japanese have begun to do, create a water supply and what might not these Manchurian plains produce to supply a world market.

The first that fills thought and eye in Port Arthur is these beautiful brick and stone houses, elegant even in their desolation. Doors through which none needed to stoop, windows which let in plenty of light, gone—the booty of the Chinese, perhaps all they got in exchange for their fatherland. Building in all stages of construction from foundations well laid, to roofed and roofless ones. Saddest of all is the splendid foundation wall of a great Greek Cathedral surmounting the slightly spur of a hill in New Town. It may be a sweet morsel for some to repeat, that the workmen on it, Chinese, were never paid. But with the disorder and sudden scattering at the outbreak of war surely it was not strange, and now who knows who and where the workmen are, "Is't it pitiful, wasteful!" Houses any one in Japan would covet, with perhaps a corner gone, or only with holes perhaps inches, perhaps feet across, through the strong walls. With here and there heaps of brick and mortar or broken ground that tell a sad tale. Next door to me in a yard full of heaps of brick, stands only a forlorn chimney in one place and a fire place in another. Here they all sit in empty desolation. Japanese residents and officialdom use what they can but plenty more seem to be left. I covet them and this invigorating air where the mercury hovers in the region of 70° Fah. in the house thus far, and where we seem to have got behind the weather bureau with perpetual sunshine. What a joke on the gay careless Russians if this splendid town and these elegant houses should become useful chiefly as the summer resort of dilapidated missionaries! Though I don't know who would care for them the rest of the year. The Chinese cannot be trusted, they are worse than the natives of Karuizawa who appropriate other people's belongings in their absence. It is said the Russian, left their houses fully furnished in care of their trusted Chinese boys, and came back to find walls, floor and roof, even doors and windows gone. It is said the Chinese will steal the handle off your door while you sit inside, and the clothes line on washing day must be watched or the side gate locked, while windows and doors, especially near the street must be guarded. All doors and windows are double, to keep out the cold of winter—Chinese are sneak thieves not burglars,—and Russian chimneys and stoves are a feature, the stove is scarcely more than a hole in a great chimney for fire and ashes with a door. Each room is provided for; this little house I am in has 5, the wall at the north is a solid unbroken one of brick apparently like all everywhere from 1½ to 2 feet thick. This house might be mistaken for a carriage house though me front of it reminds me of the entrance to the safe vaults of a great bank.

A fine hotel here, the Yamato, seems well equipped and charges from 7.00 to 15.00 yen per day. But taking all in all, I judge that the living of a private family here need cost no more, if as much as in Karuizawa, though in early July the season's fruit is not fully on the market; only 12 hours from Chefoo, all that is there will be found here we are told. There are two families of Danish missionaries and one Russian man and wife with perhaps a few odd Russians and one family of American Presbyterian missionaries in Port Arthur which beside the transients form the foreign population. The Russian and wife stand in excellent repute. A marked feature of the town is the numbers of "izvoshchik," Chinese driving their shabby carriages and pair at full tilt hither and yon. One need only appear on the street, and from distant corners and cross roads they rush towards you; a ride to the station perhaps a mile away or to the Old Town three miles away or to any part of the town requires a 30 sen fare for the carriage which will carry 4, or 40 sen for going and return, or 40 sen per hour up hill and down dale, to the top of the forts almost, on a run. Excellent drivers the Chinese seem to make, too, with their four reins, the whip constantly flourishing descends but lightly and rarely. As I have already seen the much broken and tied harness may part; the horse may get a leg over a tug or pole or a wheel may drop off but all stops on the instant at the word of command from the driver, so that with the low carriages, one feels fairly safe for all the speed and general dilapidation. The individuality of the faces of the Chinese drivers strikes one. In Japan I might ride all day behind a jinrikisha puller and not be able the next day to pick him out from a bunch of his fellows, unless I took unwonted note of him, but here without thought, as I pass the drivers of the ancient vehicles here and there, I think "that's the man who drove for me yesterday or last week."

Some days ago the Soya—the old Varyag came into port and saluted long and loud as all warships do. The mid ran out to see what it was all about; soon after the little Tomochan followed leading the two small chin dogs by their chains, saying when questioned as to why she brought them out, "I didn't know but there was going to be another war and I thought I'd save the dogs." I went to the park the other evening to hear the skillful military band play; as I stood in the moonlight listening and looking off toward "203 meter Hill" and "Taiyoko" the band struck up the Lohengrin wedding march, and the same little Tomochan exclaimed "O I heard that last summer at the wedding in Karuizawa." If a band can play so well and a little child remembers and recognizes a piece of music a year after she has heard it once and for the first time, Japan may yet develop powers that may make her famous for the arts of peace as well as war. But who thinks of all this at Port Arthur? Golden Hill, Tiger's Tail, Outer and inner Harbour, Old Town, New Town long familiar names here become realities. I went to Kinshui—Nanshan—the other day; I have been to 203 meter Hill, to Higashi Kikwanshan, North Fort, Ulangshan, Bodaifan and the circle of forts, and down deep into underground passages, and seen bones, scars and signs of tumult; they are what stir the soul; they are Port Arthur. No wonder the world was wet with blood and woman's tears.

FRANCES.

Mulai-Hafid, who has been proclaimed Sultan of Morocco at Fez in place of his brother Abdul Aziz, is removing from the palace all traces of European civilisation, says a London paper. On breaking open the Treasury he was furious, finding only a coffer containing some old clothes of Abdul-Aziz. Mulai Hafid then whipped the occupants of the harem in order to compel them to disclose where the Royal Treasure had been hidden, but the ladies declared that Abdul Aziz took everything with him when he left Fez.

* Dr. Uzawa does not make it plain whether he thinks that the language and the principles of law came originally from Christianity or whether the language and principles of Christianity came from law. He simply shows that they are closely allied to each other. The Fukin Shimbun probably regards the article as written in defence of orthodox views respecting the atonement, but if this be its object, it does not go far enough.—(WRITER OF SUMMARY).

BRASSEY'S "NAVAL ANNUAL."

This work is now so widely and favourably known that it is usual to refer to it merely as the Naval Annual. Now in its twenty-second year of publication it has attained that age and won its present popularity by the accuracy of the information contained in its pages, the painstakingly careful arrangement of its tables and lists, and the just and impartial tone that has always marked its well informed special articles. We miss in the present volume, it is true, the enlightening and lucid accounts of the manoeuvres of the British navy, but secrecy seems in these days to be quite a hobby of the Admiralty, though there is fair reason to suppose that however information may be suppressed at home there is not much in connection with the navy of which foreign Powers have not a good inkling. Perhaps we may except the construction of the Dreadnought, the secrets of which seem to have been kept with, in the circumstances, tolerable success. And in this connection we may quote the following from the Berlin correspondent of the Navy League Journal, who certainly ought to be well-informed: "An interesting fact has transpired relative to the large armoured cruiser Blücher, launched at Kiel last month. When it became known that the tonnage of this cruiser was only 15,000, the question was asked in naval circles why the Government had seen fit to construct such a vessel in view of the far greater displacement of the British Invincibles, to which the Blücher was meant as a reply. According to an article which appeared in a Berlin paper recently, the building of this cruiser was the result of a complete misunderstanding, or, to put it in plain English, a downright 'sell.' When the Invincible was first mentioned, the British Admiralty announced that her displacement would be 15,000 tons, and only in the following year did it become known that her tonnage was actually 2,250 greater. By that time the Blücher was well in course of construction, and at a stage when it was impossible to so radically alter her design to make her a match for her British contemporary. It goes without saying that his Machiavellian conspiracy of the British Admiralty has aroused the wrath of the German Press, but to the impartial observer the situation is not without its element of humour. The Wilhelmstrasse authorities would do well to ponder over the impolicy of basing their building programmes upon rumour." This rather flippant paragraph, if true, serves to show that naval secrets are occasionally kept.

The editor of the Annual, Mr. T. A. Brassey, has a reference in his preface to the reticence of the authorities. He confesses that one of the chief features in the present number is the uncertainty of the particulars given regarding many ships under construction, which, he says, is to be attributed to the recently introduced British practice, imitated by Germany and other Powers, of withholding details of dimensions, speed, armament, etc. As to this practice he quotes the comments of a competent authority who said in the 1907 Annual:—"From the nature of the case, after a warship has been laid down, information as to the details of design must be in the hands of many persons, and can be procured by those who attach importance to its acquisition; it is idle to assume that secrecy such as is claimed can be preserved." And Mr. Brassey adds—"It is certain that, whether through the agency of the secret services or by other means, information as regards new designs is placed in the hands of all those from whom there would be an advantage in concealing it, while Parliaments and taxpayers who have to provide the money are kept in ignorance."

In such circumstances, of course, the task of reviewing the progress of Navies, and dealing with the lists of ships must have been one of considerable difficulty, and in spite of all the care and trouble taken to ensure accuracy doubtless errors have crept in. His readers will, naturally, sympathise with the editor and be moderate in their judgment of mistakes. But apart from this the volume is fully up to its predecessors in interest. There are in addition to the usual chapters, an article by the distinguished jurist, Sir Frederick Pollock, (a new contributor) on the Second Peace Conference; one on the Naval and Maritime Industries of Italy by the well-known Italian naval writer "Jack la Bolina;" and contributions from old supporters of the Annual, Admiral Sir Cyprian Bridge and Mr. John Leyland, while the subject of Engineering, which had not been reviewed since the untimely death of Mr. Dunell, is dealt with by Mr. Alexander Richardson. With these we may deal later on. The contents include fine illustrations of the new battleship Lord Nelson, the torpedo destroyer Tartar, the Japanese armoured cruiser Tsukuba, and the armoured cruisers Shannon and Indomitable.

Lord Brassey, former editor of the work, contributes an introduction in which he expresses views of the thoughtful and perhaps conservative kind that one might expect from him. He sets out by remarking that the present Administration has made a serious effort to lighten the burdens of the taxpayer, but that the situation has been changed by increasing activity in Germany, and he goes on to say:—"We do not criticise the policy of Germany. If we go back ten years we see that country in a position of hopeless inferiority to the united forces of France and Russia, Powers which were bound together by a close alliance. Naval expansion was necessary for Germany, for self-defence, and to uphold the national interests in distant parts of the world. Fully appreciating this fact, and acting in no unfriendly spirit we are bound to maintain our maritime supremacy. The fleet of England is her all in all."

After noting that the numbers voted for the permanent service of the navy are in excess of the two-Power standard—Britain 128,000, Germany 47,000—and exceed the requirements for manning all the ships on the Navy List that can be reckoned effective, he suggests that some reduction in the seamen class is possible on grounds of general policy but that an increase in the marines is desirable, and he gives good reasons for his view.

Shipbuilding, he remarks, is a disheartening branch of naval administration, for the best work of to-day is deemed obsolete tomorrow. There are differences of opinion among the best authorities, but there can be no difference as to the leading principle, that the British Navy must be strong in battleships. But he is not convinced as to the absolute superiority of the Dreadnought over her predecessors. The Lord Nelson and the Agamemnon, within the practicable range of the naval battle, are not sensibly inferior to the Dreadnought, and many naval officers would prefer to take the chances of battle in the Lord Nelson rather than in the Dreadnought. It has been the policy in late years to lay down ships in groups with obvious advantage in relation to the homogeneity of squadrons; therefore, having produced a type so successful he would lay down at least four Lord Nelsons. He suggests also in addition to the latter and the improved Dreadnoughts a special type for service in narrow and shallow waters.

As to the question of cruisers Lord Brassey is emphatic that these vessels should be strongly armoured. No ships can be reckoned as combatants, "unless their guns, including secondary armament, are fully protected, either in turrets or casemates, or by side armour. All cruisers built for the Navy should be armoured vessels."

For scouting over wide stretches of ocean no fighting ship could compete with the liners of the North Atlantic in coal-supply and power of maintaining high speed for long distances. Recommendations in favour of liberality in regard to subsidies have thus far been as the idle wind, and so the County class of cruisers which, from want of protection are weak as combatants, must serve, and will do so admirably, as scouts. "With the means," he adds, "which defenders now possess in the shape of mines and torpedoes, close blockades can no longer be maintained by a battle fleet. Watch and ward must be kept by a squadron, lightly armoured and armed, yet of sufficient size to remain at sea."

Coming finally to the matter of training, he says it is impossible to exaggerate its importance. As Sir Reginald Custance had truly said: "Battles are won by men and not by ships."

Lord Brassey quotes Captain Bradley Fiske as having pointed out that it is a fact notable in naval history that up to the battle of St. Vincent nearly every victory went to the side which had the most ships, while since then it has gone to the side which, from causes preceding the battle, had the best trained personnel. In the battle of St. Vincent the Spaniards were untrained. It was the same with the French and Spaniards at Trafalgar, with the Chinese at the Yalu, the Spaniards at Manila and Santiago. Want of training, and the unintelligent apathy of the Russian people, gave an overwhelming and an easy victory to Japan. He concludes in the following terms:—"I have recently been in company with our squadrons abroad, and have once more visited our dockyards at Gibraltar and Malta. Old impressions have been confirmed. In every department, efficiency; in every officer and man, the resolve to tread the path of duty. To the Navy, praise is more than a personal tribute. It is the award of the nation to its sailors and soldiers."

THE "KAMO MARU."

The fine new steamer of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha, the Kamo Maru, which arrived in Yokohama the other day and left for London on July 29, was opened for inspection on Monday at the Pier, where many residents had an opportunity of visiting her. The Kamo Maru is a two masted fore and aft sch. rigged steamer, classed 100 A. 1. at Lloyd's, built of steel, 8,524 tons, gross; 5,285 tons net; length 483 ft., breadth 56 ft., depth 34 ft. 6 ins.; she is of 2 decks complete with partial lower deck poop, forecastle and long bridge deck, promenade and boat decks over bridge. Her passenger accommodation consists of first class arranged amidships, being 1 en suite with double berths and sitting room, 6 single berth rooms, 23 double berth rooms with sofa bed, 1 four berth room with sofa bed, total 31 cabins, 83 passengers, large dining saloon in bridge front, social hall and drawing room and smoking room on promenade deck complete; second class, arranged on poop, 7 cabins with sofa, 32 passengers; dining saloon and smoking room complete; intermediate class 2 cabins, 12 passengers; third class 2 spaces 140 passengers.

Electric lighting is complete throughout and in the dining saloon, smoking rooms, social hall, drawing room and also in each first class cabin electric fans are fitted up. The heating and ventilating is on the most approved principles and there is a complete refrigerating installation. The Kamo Maru, of course, has double bottoms. Her cargo capacity is, dead weight 9,300 tons, measurement 10,200 tons, and her bunker capacity is 1,700 tons. She is driven by triple expansion engines motored from 6 single ended Scotch boilers, and her engines work at a pressure of 200 lbs. and use Howden's forced draught. Her indicated horsepower is 7,600; and she was launched in December, 1907, by the Mitsu Bishi Dockyard and Engine Work, Nagasaki.

The Kamo Maru is a spacious, comfortable and elegantly fitted up vessel. Her first class accommodation is unusually favourable to passengers, for if one does not care to take the en suite with double berths and sitting room, there are the six large single berth rooms to choose from, as well as 23 very large double rooms with sofa bed and one four berth room with a sofa bed, giving a total of 31 cabins providing for 83 first class passengers.

The upholstery of the vessel has been carried out on a uniform scheme. The curtains everywhere are of gold and green, the carpets and rugs are of varying shades of green and the seats and sofas are in sage-green leather. The social hall, the drawing room, the dining saloon are all most charmingly fitted up and it would be difficult to find a more comfortable vessel in which to make the journey to England.

Captain F. L. Sommer is in charge of the ship, his chief officer being Mr. Le François. Mr. Wm. Kerr is chief engineer and Mr. Chappell second engineer. Mr. Kondo is the purser and Mr. McHugh, fleet superintendent of stewards, will serve on the vessel. Her maiden voyage begins on the 29th inst. when she will leave for London.

YOKOHAMA SOCIETY FOR THE PREVENTION OF CRUELTY TO ANIMALS.

The Annual General Meeting of the Yokohama Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, was held in the Old Court Room of the British Consulate (kindly lent for the occasion) at 5.15 p.m. on Friday, July 24th, 1908.

Present:—Mrs. W. T. Payne, Mrs. M. Spencer Smith, Mr. Tanuma, Mr. Cyril Allen, Mr. M. Spencer Smith, Mr. Marshall Martin, Mr. Vincent, Mr. M. Russell, Mr. Oza, Mr. J. E. Drummond, and Mr. H. V. Summers, Hon. Secretary, and others.

On the motion of Mr. MARSHALL MARTIN, seconded by Mr. Cyril Allen, Mr. M. Spencer Smith was asked to take the Chair.

With a few opening remarks, the CHAIRMAN proceeded to read the report of the Society's operations during the past season, as follows:—

"During the year 1907 a large number of pamphlets were issued, both in English and Japanese, and as the result, a considerable increase of interest was evinced by the Japanese population, and the roll of Japanese Members has been to some extent augmented, and the continued efforts in this direction are meeting with gradual success.

There is no doubt that one of the chief objects of the Society is to interest the Japanese themselves in the work, and without their support it is felt that no continued improvement can be effected.

Throughout the year the Society has continued to enjoy the distinguished patronage of His Excellency Baron Suifu, to whom the Society avails itself of this opportunity of extending their most hearty congratulations on the well merited honour recently conferred upon him by His Imperial Majesty The Emperor; also Mayor Mitsuhashi, whose kindly assistance has always been available in the cause.

The question of prosecution is one of considerable difficulty, but during the past year there have been many instances where the police have taken up cases drawn to their attention by the Society's Inspector, and in some of these cases a small fine has been imposed, particularly in the case of horses, and Members returning from abroad have stated that, in their opinion, the condition of the horses engaged in transport work through Yokohama, has been very materially improved. The Society intends in the future to commence to take stronger action when any particularly bad case comes under their observation, but it must be remembered that it is useless to prosecute right and left until the carters, etc., have been taught the evils of their way. It may not be out of place to say here that it will greatly assist the Society if every Member will personally try to check cases that come under their notice.

As a case in point, the Society begs to draw attention to the fact that a certain number of local residents are in the habit of using "bearing reins." This habit is comparatively harmless while driving on the flat, but it puts a great strain upon the horses when pulling a load up-hill, and anything that Members can do to stop this practice with horses drawing vehicles up the main hills to the Bluff, will be a step in the right direction. We must bear in mind that it is we who set the example, and it is really a pitiful sight to see a horse struggling up a hill with a heavy load behind it, with its head kept high in the air by the bearing rein, while the natural position for the horse's head while drawing a load up-hill, is almost on a level with its knees.

The Society is glad to be able to report that as a result of negotiations both with the police and with the Waterworks, it has been successful in erecting on Jizo zaka, a water trough, for the benefit of the animals mounting that hill. It is the intention of the Society to erect, if possible, within a short time, water troughs on Camp Hill and Hegt's Hill also, and in some of the principal thoroughfares in the Settlement.

The Society regrets to have to announce the loss of the valuable services of Mr. Cyril Allen, who, owing to pressure of business, has been compelled to resign the position of Hon. Secretary. This gentleman has, throughout his tenure of office, shown the greatest energy and zeal for the Society's benefit, and the vote of thanks passed at the recent Council Meeting, will, we feel sure receive the hearty endorsement of the Members.

The Society is very pleased to be able to announce that Mr. H. V. Summers has been so kind as to undertake the duties of Hon. Secretary, and there is no doubt that the fact of his being a first class Japanese scholar, will be of the greatest assistance to the Society.

The Society has not thought it worth while to publish a detailed report and accounts for the benefit of each individual Member of the Society, owing to the expenditure, which would be so involved. Any questions will be gladly answered by the Council. I shall, however, be pleased, for the sake of regularity, if some Member present will be good enough to approve and move the adoption of the accounts.

It appears that some Members have not been quite satisfied with the actual work done by the Society but it must be remembered that progress is necessarily slow when the drivers, carters and coolies with whom the Society deals, hardly understand the meaning of the word cruelty. It is, however, the intention of the Society to issue a definite programme for this year, which will be discussed presently, so that everyone can follow the progress of the work done.

To turn to the Accounts, we are glad to say that the financial situation is thoroughly satisfactory. 146 subscriptions have been collected, as against 122 for 1906, and there is reason to hope that for the present year the number will be somewhat augmented.

The Society has been very fortunate in receiving most generous donations from various Members, amounting to over yen 770. In addition to this, the Nippon Race Club has most generously consented to contribute yen 300 per annum for the support of the Society. This additional income is most welcome and will enable the Society to engage a second Inspector, if such a step is thought advisable by the Members.

Three of the Members, on departure from Yokohama, have enrolled themselves as Life Members, by which the Society is benefitted to the extent of yen 150. It is to be hoped that other Members, when leaving Yokohama for good, will remember the Society in a like manner.

With regard to the disbursements, the chief item is the Inspector's salary, which has amounted in all to yen 425. A bicycle and uniform have been supplied to him at the cost of yen 105. The provision of the bicycle has considerably assisted the operations of the single Inspector, with whom the Society has hitherto been obliged to be satisfied.

The working account for the year shows a credit balance of yen 651.02, which stands to the Society's credit in the Hongkong & Shanghai Banking Corporation.

On the motion of Mr. MARSHALL MARTIN, seconded by Mr. Cyril Allen, the Report and Accounts were adopted.

The next business was to elect a CHAIRMAN for the ensuing year. Mr. Marshall Martin proposed, and Mr. H. V. Summers seconded, Mr. S. Isaacs be appointed Chairman, Mr. M. Spencer Smith explaining that Mr. Isaacs had signified his willingness to fill the office if elected, and he was duly elected.

Mr. MARSHALL MARTIN then proposed, and Mrs. Payne seconded, that Messrs. Summers, M. Spencer Smith, and Okada, be re-elected as Hon. Secretary, Treasurer and Japanese Secretary respectively.

The CHAIRMAN then expressed that he considered it very advisable that the Society should make special appointment of a small body out of those forming the Council, to serve specially as a directly Executive Committee, and called for any suggestions or nominations.

Mr. ALLEN considered that it would be best to leave the selection to the Council.

Mr. MARSHALL MARTIN thought it better that this Executive Committee should consist of the Chairman, Hon. Sec., Hon. Treasurer, and Japanese Secretary, together with two other Japanese gentlemen, say Mr. Watanabe and Mayor Mitsuhashi, and that Mrs. Payne and another lady be included.

Mr. TANUMA thought it best to leave it to the Governor and the Mayor to select suitable Japanese to serve on the Executive Committee. The meeting agreed with this view, and Mrs. Marshall Martin was asked to join Mrs. Payne on the Committee, but Mr. Marshall Martin pointed out that Mrs. Martin would be unavoidably prevented from doing so on account of departure from Japan. Mrs. Spencer Smith was asked to fill the vacancy, which she kindly consented to do.

The CHAIRMAN moved the re-election of the Council en bloc. This was seconded by Mr. Spencer Smith, and carried unanimously.

The Chairman then drew attention to the importance of some definite programme being decided upon for the advancement of the Society's objects during the coming season. After much discussion it was decided that:—

(1) A cart horse parade be arranged as soon as possible after the cooler weather set in.

(2) That the "bettos" Guild be approached, with the view of securing their sympathy with the aims of the Society, and to solicit their co-operation.

(3) That immediate steps be taken to place water-troughs at the top of Hegt's Hill and Camp Hill.

(4) That the Executive Committee take prompt steps to secure the services of an assistant inspector, if possible one with a little knowledge of English.

(5) That the Executive Committee take measures to infuse an interest in the Society's objects amongst the Japanese schools. Mr. Martin suggested that this could be effectively introduced by the compilation of a small catechism, with question and answer, dealing with the doctrine of humane principles, in simple form.

(6) That enquiries be instituted with the view of arriving at an arrangement for destroying animals that may either be in a crippled or diseased condition, or which the owners may not desire to keep.

The CHAIRMAN emphasized his feelings in connection with the last mentioned suggestion, and thought that if some such arrangement could be arrived at, a great deal of suffering could be prevented, and it might also possibly be the means of doing away with the existence of what are at present termed "dog killers", who are employed from time to time to kill off what are supposed to be stray animals, but in reality they often killed pet and valuable animals under cover of their authority.

Mrs. PAYNE thought that the Society could do a great deal for dogs, which she considered were worse off than horses, the Japanese people realising that they could get work out of horses, and therefore treating them with greater consideration.

Mr. OSA, of India, addressed the meeting, pointing out various points in connection with the condition of animals in Japan. He said that he had made attention to animals his life's work, and desired to inform the Society that he would be pleased to attend wounded animals at any time, free of charge. He also stated that many Indian merchants in Yokohama were interested in the cause, and he would make it his particular duty to enroll them on the Society's list of Members, and obtain their support in other ways.

The CHAIRMAN conveyed his hearty appreciation of these kind offers.

A vote of thanks was expressed to Mr. E. C. Davis, the retiring Chairman, and also to Mr. E. F. Crowe, the British Commercial Attache, for having so kindly placed the room at the disposal of the Society for its Meeting.

The business of the meeting was concluded with a vote of thanks to the Chairman for having so ably filled the Chair.

Two freight trains collided at 4.20 a.m. on July 25th at Kataoka on the Nippon Railway. Five wagons containing 24 horses were derailed and damaged. Twelve horses and two men were injured. Negligence on the part of a pointsman was the cause.

YOKOHAMA ENGINE &amp; IRON WORKS, LTD.

The 21st annual general meeting of the Yokohama Engine and Iron Works, Ltd., was held at the offices, No. 161, Yamashitacho, at 4 p.m. on Wednesday, July 29th. Mr. B. C. Howard presided, and there were also present Messrs. M. Surth, L. J. Healing, A. E. Fischer, C. B. Bernard, W. K. Tresize (Manager) J. W. Weaver (Foreman), and R. T. Bell (Secretary.)

The Secretary having read the notice calling the meeting,

The CHAIRMAN said:—This is the 21st Annual General Meeting of the Yokohama Engine and Iron Works, Ltd. Referring to the remarks of the Chairman at the last general meeting re new buildings and alterations on the Petersen property, Nos. 114 and 115, we have now pleasure to report to you that these have been completed. We had hoped to report to you the completion of alterations, etc., at No. 161, but owing to various causes we have not been able to finish this work. The material for the new machine shop at No. 161 has arrived and the preparations for construction commenced, but as we propose to do the work with our own men as opportunity offers it will take some time to complete the new building. When completed the various machines now at No. 115 will be brought to No. 161 and we then will have all machines under one roof instead of separated as at present. The new electric light plant at No. 161 has been installed and the necessary official permission to work it has been obtained. The Directors would be pleased if shareholders would from time to time inspect the works at both Nos. 113/114 and 161. Before presenting the report I wish to mention to you the valuable services of our Managing Director, Mr. Bernard, who was appointed to that office some months ago for the reason that it was found necessary, in order to successfully carry out the working of the Company, that there should be one member of the Board with whom the Manager could consult at all times on all matters, and the expectation of your Directors has been fully met in the selection of Mr. Bernard to fill this important office. I also wish to record the efficient manner in which all the work connected with this Company has been carried out during the past year by our Manager, Mr. Tresize, and his staff. Work that we have done in connection with the new building has been carried out under his supervision and almost all the work has been done by our own men. The result of the year's working will show to you that we have not been idle and the contracts in hand will keep us fully occupied up to the end of the year. These contracts have necessitated a large outlay by us for material, which will account in a measure for our overdraft at the bank, and for the large amount of profit which it has been deemed advisable to carry forward. It will be seen by the balance sheet that after payment of the interim dividend and bonus for the first half year, making the usual provision for depreciation, Directors' and Auditors' fees, etc., the net amount of profit available is yen 73,921.19, of which your Directors recommend that yen 25,000 be placed to reserve and a final dividend of yen 2.50 per share, say yen 19,500, be paid, leaving a balance of yen 29,421.14 to be carried forward. The annual report and statement of accounts have been in your hands for some days and if there are no objections to the same I propose to you to take them as read and will ask someone to second the proposal.

Mr. L. J. HEALING had much pleasure in seconding the adoption of the report and accounts, (which have already appeared in our columns). He said the accounts certainly showed a most excellent year's working and he thought the Chairman, the Directors and the staff were highly to be commended for having such a good result to put before the shareholders. He thought that the proposal to pay only a small dividend of 2.50 per cent. making 10 per cent. for the year, was also highly commendable.

Adopted.

The CHAIRMAN said two Directors, Messrs. N. F. Smith and M. Surth, were retiring by rotation but were eligible for re-election.

Mr. TRESIZE proposed and Mr. Fischer seconded the re-election of those gentlemen and the motion was unanimously adopted.

On the motion of Mr. Healing, seconded by Mr. Weaver, the Auditors, Messrs. F. J. Hall and W. Y. Showler, were unanimously re-elected.

The CHAIRMAN said that really was all the business before the meeting, unless some one had further remarks to make. He was happy to say that dividend warrants would be ready on July 31st.

Mr. HEALING said he should like to propose a vote of thanks to the Directors,—but more especially to the Managing Director for the time he had given to the company. Also he proposed a special vote of thanks to the Manager and all the staff of the company. It was only by complete unity and organization that such successful results could be achieved. For himself and on behalf of absent shareholders and, he was sure, of those present, he had much pleasure in proposing a vote of thanks to them all.

Mr. FISCHER seconded and the vote was adopted unanimously.

Mr. TRESIZE, for himself and for the rest of the staff, thanked the meeting and said all would endeavour in the future as in the past to do their best for the interests of the company.

This closed the meeting.

REPORT AND ACCOUNTS.

The Directors beg to submit to the Shareholders the Statement of Accounts for the year ended 31st May last.

The net profit for the year (including the sum of ¥12,477.04 brought forward from 31st May, 1907), after payment of an Interim Dividend of ¥19,500 in January last and providing for depreciation of buildings and machinery and payment of Directors' and Auditors' fees, amounts to ¥73,921.19, which the Directors recommend should be appropriated as follows:—

In payment of Final Dividend for the year	Yen.
of ¥2.50 per share.....	19,500.00
To Transfer to Reserve Fund.....	25,000.00
Balance to be carried forward.....	29,421.19
	73,921.19

BOARD OF DIRECTORS:—Messrs. N. F. Smith and M. Surth retire by rotation in accordance with the Articles of Association, but offer themselves for re-election.

AUDITORS:—Messrs. F. J. Hall and W. Y. Showler retire and offer themselves for re-election.

B. C. HOWARD,
Chairman of the Board of Directors.

Balance-sheet for Year ended 31st May, 1908.

LIABILITIES.		Yen.	Yen.
To Share Capital:—
In 10,000 shares of Y. 50 each .....		500,000.00
7,800 shares issued at Y. 50 each.....			390,000.00
„ Reserve Fund.....			50,000.00
„ Sundry Creditors.....			28,514.23
„ Banking Account .....			47,449.88
„ Profit and Loss Account.....			73,921.19
			589,885.30

ASSETS.		Yen.	Yen.
By Land Account.....		152,640.00
„ Plant and Machinery Account .....		119,301.21
„ Buildings Account .....		149,113.66
„ Steam Launches Account.....		25,000.00
„ Office Furniture Account.....		5,086.15
			451,141.09
„ Stocks on hand as per Inventory .....			102,859.33
„ Unexpired Fire Insurance .....			1,321.62
„ Sundry Debtors .....			34,138.19
„ Cash on hand.....			425.19
			589,885.30

Profit and Loss Account for Year ended 31st May, 1908.

DR.		Yen.	Yen.
To Interim Dividend of Y2.50 per share, paid 5th Feb. 1908 .....			19,500.00
„ Depreciation Account:—
Buildings 10 per cent.....		11,640.48
Plant & Machinery 10 per cent.....		10,221.56
Office Furniture 10 per cent....		565.12
Written off, Value of Buildings removed .....		7,931.50
			30,358.66

To Fire Insurance.....	4,823.11
„ Wages and Expenses ..	242,253.69
„ Taxes .....	7,714.45
„ Rent .....	8,184.31
„ Directors' and Auditors' Fees .....	1.9 0.00
„ Upkeep and Repairs .....	10,245.07
„ Interest.....	4,688.81
	310,168.10
„ Balance .....	73,921.19
To be appropriated as follows:
In payment of Final Dividend for the year of yen 2.50 per share.....	19,500.00
Amount transferred to Reserve Fund .....	25,000.00
Amount carried to new Account .....	29,421.19
	73,921.19
	403,589.29

CR.

1907.	Yen.	Yen.
June 1.—By Balance .....		12,477.04
„ Transfer Fees .....	9 00
„ Gross Earnings.....	391,103.25
		391,112.25
		403,589.29

1908.	Yen.
June 1.—By Balance brought down .....	29,421.19

B. C. HOWARD.

Chairman of the Board of Directors.

We have examined the forgoing Accounts and compared them with the Books and Vouchers of the Company, and certify them to be correct.

F. J. HALL, } AUDITORS.

W. Y. SHOWLER, }

Yokohama, 16th July, 1908.

GRAND HOTEL, LTD.

The ordinary half yearly meeting of the shareholders of this hotel was held at the offices of the Company on Thursday. The chair was occupied by Dr. C. H. Hall and there were also present Messrs. C. F. Heinlein, B. C. Howard, A. M. Knapp, G. W. Colton, C. F. Rhine (acting Secretary), A. S. Pearson (Auditor), M. Dentici, M. Dentici, Jr., F. Dietz, B. Martinelli, E. Andreis and T. Tanabe.

In opening the meeting Dr. Hall said:—

Before proceeding with the business of the meeting, it is my duty to announce to you, as I do with much regret, the recent death of our former manager and late director, Mr. Louis Eppinger, which took place on the 14th ultimo.

As you may know, his failing strength and impairment of vision compelled him to relinquish active work in 1904, after sixty years of hotel service of which some fifteen were devoted to the management of this hotel, and you will recall that we had cause for gratification with the results obtained by him.

These were due to the long experience which he brought to his work and to the tact, industry, and sagacity with which he discharged his duties as manager. In recognition of these services to the Company, he was made advisory manager for a time, and later elected a director, that the Board might continue to have the help of his superior judgment. Recognizing the unique advantages of the Grand Hotel for meeting the demands of travel, and fully believing in its future if wise measures were adopted to preserve these advantages, Mr. Eppinger was an ardent advocate of its reconstruction into a really up-to-date house, and his steady assurance of the wisdom of it had much influence in directing the course of the Board and of others to that end. Hotel management in the Far East presents many difficulties which are not suspected by the general public, and because of the success with which Mr. Eppinger met so many of them in our behalf, may we not gratefully say, as we take our final leave of him, "well done, thou good and faithful servant."

I will now ask the Secretary to kindly read the notice convening the Meeting, but as the Report of the Directors has been in your hands for some days, it will be taken as read if there is no objection.

It seems unnecessary to expend regret upon the state of the working for the last half-year, for its causes and their unavoidable nature are but too well known as the world-wide financial disturbance which began a year ago. We may rather take comfort in the fact that while at other tourist centres, in the West as well as in the East, hotels have been closed temporarily, for lack of patronage, we are able to declare a dividend for the last half-year which is not less than the average paid during the nineteen years of our corporate existence. It is further encouraging to know that while travel has been no larger and the cost of supplies considerably greater than during the corresponding period of the late war, the net earning for the past year has been forty per cent. more than it was then. The return would have been some 5,000 yen better still if we had been able to receive all who wished accommodation in April. This yearly repeated turning away of guests during the season of travel makes a considerable difference in the working account for the year.

In view of the measures in hand for renewal of the hotel buildings and contents, and of the Board's unanimous opinion of the un wisdom of "putting new wine into old bottles," some needed renewal of equipment has been postponed pending final steps for rebuilding, but as the up-keep of the house should be maintained, whatever else may be done later, steps are now taking toward this end and a certain proportion of the net profit for the period under review set aside to meet the expense. For this reason the dividend recommended is less than the earning would otherwise have warranted.

The plans and specifications for the new building, including a model to scale, have been received and paid for. The disbursement on this account, yen 50,000, is entered in the Statement before you as indicated by the title, "New Buildings." The major part of the balance there shown above the yen 50,000 was disbursed as expense incidental to the visit to Japan of Mr. Hewitt, the Philadelphia architect, who came at the invitation of the Board to examine the situation and consult upon measures for reconstruction. Although the order for the plans was finally given to Mr. Lovell, the fact elicited by Mr. Hewitt's visit, that two architects of large experience in hotel construction agreed as to what we should do and how it should be done, appears to justify the expense of Mr. Hewitt's visit. You will note perhaps with satisfaction that notwithstanding the large disbursement referred to our overdraft at bank stands at less than yen 12,000, which means that something more than yen 47,000 has been paid on the account. The funds required for this purpose were advanced out of the working account for the past year, the saving of interest charges thereby effected amounting on June 30th to yen 1,417.57. This advance of cash from the working account will be returned debited to New Buildings Account, in accordance with the custom in such cases. The Directors have received, with some surprise, a suggestion from the Auditors that the whole of the amount expended on account of new buildings be written off at once. They are aware that it is one of the duties of an Auditor to suggest the writing down of assets which exceed a reasonable valuation, if any such exist, but in view of the approved practice of public companies of distributing over a considerable period large disbursements made for permanent improvements, and in view of the fact that the plans and specifications are worth to us all they have cost, the Directors have been unable to accept either the Auditors' suggestion or the reasons given for it. The final decision upon the matter rests, of course, with this meeting.

At the ordinary general meeting held last January a question was raised, in connection with passing the accounts, as to the validity of the Board's action in appointing a managing director and remunerating him for special services. The accounts, which included the item questioned, were passed as submitted, but in view of some misapprehension then manifested of the powers of the Board of Directors and the action taken accordingly by it, it seems well to recur to the subject, especially as the Chairman was at that time absent in America on the business of the Company and by direction of the Board. As to the impression voiced at that meeting, that a new office had been created and one of the directors appointed to fill it, receiving remuneration therefor,—all in disregard of our Rules, I trust you will permit me to assure you in the name and with the approval of all of the directors that no office has been created or filled nor disbursement of funds made in disregard of our Rules. The impression alluded to arose, in good faith, from an exclusive regard for Articles 86 and 89 (a) of those Rules, which specify the remuneration a director may receive for usual services and one of the conditions under which his office shall be vacated. Later Rules 106, 110, and 111, which provide for the appointment of a supervising director and for remuneration for special service rendered to the Company, and which specify also that the Board may exercise its discretion in taking action under them, did not, apparently, come under the eye of the member who raised the question. You will note by reference to Article 100 that this Rule confers upon the Board of Directors authority to exercise all such powers and do all such acts and things as may be done by the Company that are not expressly directed to be done by the Company in general meeting. The acts of the Board which are the subject of the question under review are not among those expressly directed to be done by the Company in general meeting. The correctness of the Board's interpretation of Rule 106 and of its appointment under that Rule of a supervising director is confirmed by the usual English practice under the same Rule, which is a common one in the Articles of British joint stock companies. That the directors neither did nor do regard the personal supervision of the management as a part of their duty is shown by the fact that all of them declined to undertake it even while recognising its necessity. At a meeting of the Board subsequent to the general meeting in January, and at which all of the directors were present, the validity of the action relating to a managing director was unanimously re-affirmed, and because in the interest of the Company it is unavoidable, one of the directors continues to exercise the duties of supervising director, and the disbursement required for such special service is included in the accounts before you. This direct supervision by a member of the Board will be discontinued as soon as it is prudent to do so, for none of the directors wishes the task. In the meantime it is interesting to know that the results of this supervision show a credit balance several times greater than its cost.

Our manager, Mr. Smith, having resigned his position in order to return to his home, the Board appointed as his successor Mr. H. E. Manwaring, at present chief controller of the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, Philadelphia. Mr. Manwaring is expected to arrive here about the middle of next September and to take up his duties at once. For the interval our chief clerk, Mr. Houghton, has been placed in charge as acting manager.

Experience in hotel administration having demonstrated the necessity for a staff especially trained in the modern system of hotel accounting and checking which has been elaborated after years of study by some of the best accountants of London and New York, the Board decided to adopt such a system for the Grand Hotel, and to this end appointed as our secretary and chief accountant the senior assistant to the chief controller of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York, who is expected to arrive shortly.

I have here a special communication from our auditors to lay before you, but as it relates to the accounts it will be read during the consideration of them, and in order to place the subject of the meeting before you in due form I now move the adoption of the Directors' Report and Statement of Accounts for the Half-year ended 30th June, 1908, and trust that some one will second the motion.

The motion was seconded by Mr. Heinlein, and a discussion, lasting an hour, followed.

We hold over our report of the subsequent proceedings.

REPORT AND ACCOUNTS.

The Profit and Loss Account, and Statement of Assets and Liabilities, for the half year ended June 30th, 1908, accompany this Report.

The net profit for the half year after providing for general expenses, Directors' and Auditors' fees, Sundry Creditors, and bad or doubtful debts, amounts to yen 29,884.79, which it is proposed to apply as follows:—

In payment of a dividend of yen 4.00 per share for the half year ..... 20,000.00
Set aside for necessary repairs of furniture ..... 5,000.00
For depreciation ..... 4,884.79

The Directors have much regret in reporting the loss of two members of the Board by the death of Mr. Louis Eppinger, on 14th June last, and by the resignation of Mr. Edward Mendelson. Mr. C. F. Heinlein has accepted the invitation of the Board to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. Eppinger.

The Manager, Mr. G. L. A. Smith, having resigned his position, Mr. H. E. Manwaring, Controller of the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, Philadelphia, was appointed as his successor, and pending his arrival the chief clerk, Mr. Chas. Houghton, has been directed to assume temporary charge of the management.

It is proposed that the dividend shall be payable on the 31st day of July, 1908, when warrants will be issued.

C. H. H. HALL, } DIRECTORS.
G. W. COLTON, }

Yokohama, 17th July, 1908.

THE GRAND HOTEL, LIMITED.

STATEMENT OF ASSETS AND LIABILITIES ON 30TH JUNE, 1908.

	Yen.
LIABILITIES.
Capital 5,000 Shares at Y. 100 .....	500,000.00
Debentures .....	10,000.00
Reserve Fund .....	10,000.00
H. & S. Bank Overdraft .....	11,345.81
Sundry Creditors .....	13,476.98
Unclaimed Dividends .....	1,052.04
Kurumaya Security Fund .....	200.00
Profit and Loss Account .....	29,884.79
	575,959.62

ASSETS.
Buildings .....	223,000.00
Grounds .....	173,500.00
New Buildings .....	53,087.91
Furniture .....	82,566.12
Electric Light Plant .....	10,811.00
Steam Launch .....	3,500.00
Wines in stock .....	10,351.83
Provisions in stock .....	1,793.12
Cigars and Cigarettes in stock .....	408.95
Miscellaneous stock .....	921.18
Fire Insurance, value of running policies .....	7,189.75
Cash in hand .....	479.39
Sundry Debtors .....	8,350.37
	575,959.62

PROFIT AND LOSS ACCOUNT:—30TH JUNE, 1908.
DR.	YEN.
To General Expenses .....	31,012.82
„ Insurance Account .....	4,681.90
„ Taxes .....	3,551.97
„ Directors' and Auditor's Fees .....	1,256.03
„ Interest .....	781.04
„ Balance available for dividend .....	29,884.79

To be dealt with as under:—
Dividend at yen 4 per share 20,000.00
Set aside to meet necessary repairs to Furniture .....	5,000.00
Written off Furniture Account .....	4,884.79
	29,884.79
CR.	YEN.
By Balance brought from last half year .....	8,762.67
„ Transferred from Working Account .....	58,432.84
„ Rent Account .....	190.00
„ Sundry Receipts .....	3,821.00
	71,206.55

Yokohama, 30th June, 1908.

G. W. COLTON, } DIRECTORS.
C. F. HEINLEIN, }

We have examined the Books and Accounts of the Grand Hotel Limited for the half year ending 30th June, 1908, and we beg to report that the above Balance-Sheet and Profit and Loss Account are (subject to our separate report) properly drawn up so as to exhibit a true and correct view of the Company's Affairs as shown by the books of the Company.

We also beg to report that all our requirements as Auditors have been complied with (except as stated in our separate Report).

MILLER, PEARSON & MACKIE,

A. E. PEARSON, C.A., Auditor.

Yokohama, 17th July, 1908.

Dysentery is prevalent in Toyama prefecture. During the past few days there were 23 cases.

CRICKET.

"Born in Japan" again defeated the "Rest" very easily last Saturday, this time by 7 wickets. Play started at 2 p.m., about half an hour late as usual. Born in Japan won the toss and decided to put the "Rest" in first, their hope being that the ground would dry towards the latter part of the afternoon. The wickets of the "Rest" fell rapidly, the only batsmen making anything like a score being A. P. Scott 45, and J. McClure 50 although he gave a chance and ought to have been caught out at 30. "Born in Japan" did better, most of the men making good scores, the best being H. W. Kilby, 53; A. G. Hearne 32; J. M. Mollison, 75; G. C. Wheeler, 22; and D. E. M. Drummond 20 not out. When stumps were drawn "Born in Japan" had 231 runs to their credit, two of the men not batting:—

"THE REST."

P. A. Cox, bowled Mollison .....	2
H. T. Hume, run out .....	0
H. G. Bell, l. b. w. b. Wheeler .....	1
A. P. Scott, c. Squire b. Kilby .....	41
P. E. Bousfield, bowled Wheeler .....	1
J. McClure, run out .....	50
A. H. Tait, c. Kilby b. Strome .....	8
B. C. Foster, bowled Wheeler .....	9
M. Spencer Smith, c. Mollison b. Kilby .....	2
C. M. Duff, not out .....	4
N. Buckle, l. b. w. b. Wheeler .....	0
Extras .....	4

BOWLING ANALYSIS.

	B.	N.	M.	W.
Mollison .....	36	21	1	1
Wheeler .....	48	17	2	4
Kilby .....	54	35	1	2
Squire .....	12	25
Strome .....	30	20	1

BORN IN JAPAN.

H. W. Kilby, l. b. w. b. Buckle .....	53
A. G. Hearne, bowled Scott .....	32
O. Strome, run out .....	2
J. M. Mollison, not out .....	75
G. C. Wheeler, c. Bousfield b. Foster .....	22
C. F. Gibbs, c. Bell b. Spencer Smith .....	5
V. A. Hearne, l. b. w. b. Cox .....	14
F. L. Squire, c. and b. Cox .....	0
D. E. M. Drummond, not out .....	20
H. Goddard } did not bat
B. G. Walker } .....	8
Extras .....	8

BOWING ANALYSIS.

	B.	R.	M.	W.
Foster .....	36	38	—	1
Bell .....	48	35	—	—
Scott .....	60	30	2	1
Cox .....	42	28	1	2
J. McClure .....	12	15	—	—
Buckle .....	36	35	—	1
Spencer Smith .....	36	42	—	1

BURGLARY ON THE BLUFF.

Residents of the Bluff should take warning from the burglary on Monday morning, of which Mr. M. Russell, No. 111-A Bluff, is the victim. Two bed rooms were entered on the upper floor from the verandah, by means of windows left open because of the heat, and there is little doubt that but for a slight noise which the burglar made, awakening one of the inmates and causing her to call out that there was someone in the room, a clean sweep would have been made of all the jewelry and valuables in sight. It appears that about 2 o'clock Mr. Russell was awakened by one of his daughters, who sleep in an adjacent room, giving the alarm but before he could do anything to intercept the intruder the latter had got clear away. The young lady was aroused by a slight noise, probably made by the man in going through the window, and saw straight before her at the foot of the bed a white object such as she knew could not be in that place. The observation of a moment convinced her that what she saw was the white tenugui on the head of a man who was stooping at the foot of the bed. She at once called out and the burglar, whose face she partially saw and who appeared to be a young man, got out of the room with amazing nimbleness—by the way he had doubtless come, over some roofs till he gained the servants' quarters whence he easily reached the ground and made off. His footprints were found on the tarred surface of one of the roofs. Lying in one corner of the verandah was a neat bundle containing a kimono belonging to Mrs. Russell which had been hanging over a chair in her bedroom, and which, though of no particular value, the thief had appropriated—perhaps as a convenient medium for carrying his loot. In the verandah was also Mr. Russell's purse, empty. It had contained but a yen or two.

On investigating it was found that the burglar had taken everything of value in Mr. Russell's bed room that he could lay hands on without opening drawers, etc. Among his spoil were Mr. Russell's gold watch and chain from a side table, and pocket book and purse with a pair of gold-rimmed glasses from the top of a bureau, and a valuable ring from a centre table. The pocket-book contained not more than 15 yen but had papers of importance. There usually is a policeman at No. 103, but a messenger failed to find him and eventually a man was got from the foot of Camphill but of course much time had then elapsed. It seems hard that people on the Bluff should have to try to sleep with closed verandah windows, but really there seems no other course open.

THE IMPERIAL COURT.

The Emperor of Korea has presented to the Empress of Japan the First Order of the Sacred Phoenix. The Crown Prince of Korea conveyed the decoration to Her Majesty at 10.45 a.m. on July 27th. The Korean Prince drove to the Palace in Company with Prince Ito, being escorted by a number of troopers of the Imperial Body Guards. The ceremony of presentation was held in the Paulownia Hall. Subsequently the Korean Prince had audience of the Emperor in the Phoenix Hall. At noon, he was entertained in the Homei Hall, where a number of Japanese and high Korean officials were present.

The Prince and Princess Imperial will leave about Aug. 5th for Tamosawa in the Nikko district, where they will stay during the hot season. While staying there, they will visit the villa of Prince Arisugawa, on Lake Inawashiro, in Fukushima prefecture.

Marquis Katsura, Premier, and Marquis Matsukata had audience of the Emperor on July 27th.

The Dempo says that the wedding between Princess Kane, a daughter of the Emperor, and Prince Kita Shirakawa will take place next spring. The Prince is now a student of a Military College and is expected to graduate from the institution towards the end of this year.

Prince and Princess Higashi-Fushimi left Shimabashi on July 28th by the 8.30 a.m. train for Shuzenji, Idzu province. They will spend the summer there.

The Emperor of Korea presented the Princess Imperial with the First Order of the Sacred Phoenix at 10.45 a.m. on July 28th. The Korean Crown Prince conveyed the decoration to Her Highness.

Princesses Fumi and Yasu, daughters of the Emperor, left Shimabashi on July 29th by the 6 a.m. train for Miyanosita. They will stay there during the summer.

Prince Fushimi returned on July 29th from western districts, where he was inspecting military affairs.

Prince and Princess Takeda visited Hayama and Enoshima July 28th.

Princess Fushimi, the younger, left Shinagawa on July 29th by the 3.50 p.m. train for Oiso in company with her four children. They put up at the villa of Yamanouchi, where they will stay for the summer.

The Emperor will be present at military grand manoeuvre which will be held in November at Settsu, Kawachi and the Idzumi provinces. His Majesty will visit Nara, where the inhabitants are making preparations to welcome him. It may be added that the Emperor visited Nara in 1877 and the Empress in 1890.

CUSTOMS APPEAL.

Marquis Katsura, Minister for Finance, has passed a decision on an appeal instituted by Messrs. Simon, Evers and Co., of Kobe. The firm imported 16 cases containing woven goods on which the Kobe Customs imposed duty at the rate of sen 7½ per square yard in accordance with No. 52 of the Anglo-Japanese conventional tariff. The importers held that the goods in question were woven with cotton warp, and with woollen weft and called Sicilian, mohair coating, or rustle coating and not a kind of alpaca. The importers further contended that the duty should be ad val. 10 per cent. The appeal was dismissed on the ground that the material was a kind of alpaca in quality.

The Minister for Finance passed a decision on an appeal instituted by Mr. F. S. Shaw, the representative of the Kobe Office of Messrs. L. J. Healing and Co against a decision delivered by the Director of the Kobe Customs. The firm imported three cases containing tyres with inner-tube and valve, all manufactured from rubber, canvas and brass wire. The Customs imposed the duty at the rate of yen 95.60 per 100 kin in accordance with clause I of No. 426 of the tariff book. The contention of the importers was that the goods in question were manufactures of caoutchouc to be dealt with under No. 1 of the Anglo-Japanese Conventional tariff and that the duty therefore should be ad val. 10 per cent. The appeal was dismissed on the ground that the material was manufactured with rubber, canvas, and metal, to be employed for cycles in the place of pneumatic tyres.

The Minister for Finance passed a decision on July 25th on an appeal instituted by the Kobe office of Messrs L. J. Healing and Co. According to the Official Gazette, the Kobe agent imported rubber valves with brass opening plated with nickel to be attached to the horn of a cycle. The Kobe customs appraisers imposed 40 per cent ad val., duty in accordance with the 3rd clause of No. 486 of the tariff. The importer contended that the material should be regarded as a rubber manufacture and duty should be at the rate of ad val. 10 per cent under the Anglo-Japanese Conventional tariff. The Minister changed the duty from 40 per cent to 30 per cent on the ground that the article was not wholly manufactured as classified in No. 538 of the tariff.

BASEBALL.

A game of baseball was played on Wednesday evening at 4.45, when the Y. C. & A. C. easily defeated the Yokohama Baseball Club (a team composed of old boys from the Waseda University and the Commercial and First Higher Schools) by 11 runs to 5. The line up was as follows:—

Y'hama Baseball Club. Y. C. & A. C.

Masuda .....	c.	Walker
Ito .....	p.	O'Connor
Sato .....	s.s.	Nicoll
Hirooka .....	1b.	Becker
Kurimoto .....	2b.	Gibbs
Fukabori .....	3b.	Lo-on
Yoshida .....	r.f.	Da Costa
Yokomizo .....	c.f.	McChesney
Suzuki .....	l.f.	Gray

Score by innings.

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Y. C. & A. C. ...	0	0	3	1	0	3	1	3	0=11
Y. B. C. ....	0	0	0	0	0	2	2	0	1=5

SHIPPING ACCIDENTS.

A British steamer, the Hazel Dollar, (2,803 tons) laden with beans, which left Osaka at 11 p.m. on July 27th for Yokohama, went ashore about a mile off the district of Lower Sennan on the following morning in a dense fog. The crew and cargo are all safe. The ship was expected to be floated at high tide. The local agents, Messrs. Samuel Samuel and Co., announce that the steamer has been refloated and is now proceeding for this port, her arrival being probably delayed by about 12 to 15 hours.

The seal fishing vessel To-o Maru collided with the steamer Ushiwaka Maru off the Soya Light House on Soya Strait. The To-o was wrecked, but the crew were all saved by the steamer.

YOKOHAMA.

Mr. K. Sukata, Secretary of the Kanagawa Prefectural Government, has been appointed to a similar position in the Cabinet. Mr. J. Abe, Councillor of the Chiba Prefectural Government, was transferred to the vacancy in Yokohama.

A case of dysentery is reported among the sailors on the French steamer Caravellas which arrived at Yokohama on July 23rd. The usual disinfecting measures were carried out.

Two firemen employed on the Nippon Yusen Kaisha's steamer Tosa Maru have been arrested by the Tobe police on a charge of having attempted to carry six men to America who had no passports.

The wire factory of the well-known Furukawa Copper Industrial Company has agreed to amalgamate with the Yokohama Telegraphic Wire Manufacturing Company—with a capital of yen 1,200,000 registered. The condition is that half of the capital should be taken by the Furukawa Co. and that two directors and one auditor should be appointed from among its representatives. Both parties will hold a general meeting on July 29th in Yokohama. The Yokohama firm was established in 1896.

A man has been arrested by the Tobe police on a charge of incendiarism. On Thursday he was removed to the Public Procurators' Office in the Yokohama District Court. He is stated to have attempted to set fire to a house in Ise-cho early on the morning of July 6th.

A little before noon on July 23rd, a woman living in Magane-cho, attempted to commit suicide by drinking about 3 grammes of morphine. She was at once removed to the office of a doctor near by. The cause is inferred from a letter left by her to be a love affair.

A woman suffering from leprosy murdered her cousin (13) on July 23rd by throwing him into a well in the village of Hongo, near Kamakura. On Saturday, she gave herself up to the Isezaki-cho Police Office. She stated that the mother of the victim treated her very cruelly every day and that she had her revenge by committing the crime.

Mr. M. Masuda, a sugar trader, Vice-President of the Yokohama Soldiers Encouragement Society, and Mrs. Tama Watanabe, an honorary secretary of the Yokohama branch of the Ladies' Patriotic Society, have been decorated with the Sixth Order of the Sacred Treasure and the same Order of the Treasure Crown respectively for meritorious service rendered during the Russo-Japanese war. Mr. K. Otani, President of the Soldiers Encouragement Society has been already rewarded.

The Yokohama Clearing House held a general meeting on July 23rd at the Bankers Club. During the first half of this year there were 188,271 drafts and cheques, valued at yen 362,062,342.77, dealt with. The figures show a decrease of 5,638 drafts and cheques and of yen 83,350,664.25 on the corresponding period the previous year. During the period 23 cheques of yen 10,286.20 in all were dishonoured.

A child fell into the creek and was drowned near South Yoshida-machi on the evening of July 24th. A youth committed suicide the same day by laying himself on the railway near the 6th tunnel in Yokosuka, being crushed by a train.

A case of dysentery is reported on the Sakata Maru, which arrived at Yokohama on July 24th from Newchwang, the patient being a young fireman.

Mr. K. Sakata, who was recently promoted from secretary in the local government to a similar office in the Cabinet, paid a farewell visit to the foreign Consuls on July 25th.

A suspicious case of cholera appeared in West Tobe-machi, on July 25th, the patient being the child of a coolie.

Two cars on the Keihin Electric Railway collided at Tsurumi, about 5 p.m. on July 24th. Both cars were damaged and a conductor severely injured.

A man was arrested on July 24th in Nigiwai-cho by the Isezaki police, on a charge of having counterfeited and circulated copper coins.

In consequence of instructions given by the Foreign Office in connexion with the proposed reception of the American Fleet in Yokohama, the superintendents of various police offices in the city held a meeting on July 27th at the office of the prefectural government before Baron Sufu, the Governor. The main feature of an address given by Mr. S. Hashimoto, Chief of the prefectural police, was that the visit of the American Fleet to Japan was regarded as a special honour by all Japanese. The Central Government authorities were sincerely desirous of entertaining the officers and bluejackets with every possible means. After the speech, there were discussions as to the police administrative steps to be taken as the first measure in connexion with the reception. The general views to be adopted were as follows: (1) Every possible means shall be taken in order to avoid misunderstanding by the new comers who are not familiar with Japanese conditions and customs; (2) to deal with dishonest men (if any) who try to entrap the Americans; (3) a special number of interpreters to be employed for the benefit of the visitors. The present conference is to be resumed in the near future.

Mr. T. Takahashi, Superintendent of the Isezaki-cho Police Office, has been promoted to the sixth high official class.

An old workman living in Kumoi-cho, attempted to commit suicide on July 27th by severely injuring his throat with a large knife. Poverty is reported to have been the cause. He was removed to the Yokohama Hospital.

Piracy is reported off Haneda. On July 22nd, four men on two boats attacked a lighter laden with 500 bags of brown sugar and 20 casks of ammonia on its way from Tokyo to Yokohama. The men menaced the occupants on the lighter with swords and revolvers and stole the whole cargo. On July 26th, one of the pirates was arrested in a tea-house in Kanagawa. He confessed that the goods were sold through a man named Y. Nagashima living in Kanagawa.

A man, about 25 years old, was found dead on July 27th on the railway near Hodogaya. He is believed to have purposely laid himself on the line.

The health returns of Kanagawa prefecture during the week ended July 26th are as follows:—

	Cholera.	Dysentery.	Typhus.	Diphtheria.	Scarlet fever.	Small pox.
Yokohama—
New cases .....	—	4	2	—	—	—
Died .....	—	—	1	—	—	—
Other Districts—
New cases .....	—	13	7	7	—	—
Died .....	—	1	12	3	—	—

It is reported in Yokohama that the recent report published in Tokyo papers with regard to the loan of the Tokyo Yokohama Electric Railway Company from a syndicate in London is quite groundless. The report seems to have arisen from the fact that some weeks ago, the directors of the Japanese company asked the Yokohama representative of the London syndicate for a loan of £200,000 on the condition that the interest rate should be at the rate of 6 per cent; the price at 91; and the loan to be left unpaid until 20 years after the subscriptions are closed. The proposal was at once transferred to London by the Yokohama agent. The London office later refused the proposal.

The Yokohama Tax Bureau has issued a notification as to the result of the recent meeting of the Superintendents of various tax bureaux throughout the Empire. According to the notification, for every transfer of silk piece goods—for instance, from a Japanese trader to a foreign firm which intends to export the merchandise—a permit must be obtained from the tax office at the exact time of the transaction. The regulations will come into force on Aug. 1st. Mr. K. Okabe, President of the Yokohama Silk Goods Guild, presented a complaint on July 27th to the Ministers for Finance, Agriculture and Commerce in connexion with the new notification that in 1905 the law, No. 1, with regard to the war tax was promulgated. The silk goods for export were exempted from the special tax. The transferring of the staple from a Japanese to a foreigner was fixed by the law to be reported to the bureau within six months. The present notification abolished the time grace. Mr. Okabe added that the new arrangement would cause much inconvenience in business and would be, as a matter of fact, unnecessary on the part of the Government. The notification would cause obstruction in foreign trade. It is said that some foreign silk exporters are supporting the Japanese in the affair.

On the afternoon of July 28th, the Yokohama City Assembly held a meeting, at which a bill was introduced providing for the payment of yen 15,000 for giving a garden party to the officers and bluejackets of the American Fleet. Mr. Mitsuhashi, Mayor, then gave an address concerning the bill in the course of which he stated that the relations between Japan and America are especially friendly and the reception of the Americans by Yokohama has a close connexion with the opening of the city by their naval predecessors. Mr. K. Doi said there could be no objection to welcoming American friends who were always sincere to Japanese. Dr. Hyodo said that the bill must be passed at once without referring to the second and third readings. Mr. H. Akao said that the citizens were willing to bear more taxes for the purpose of entertaining their American friends. The bill thereupon was unanimously passed.

The Yokohama division of the Salvation Army intends to build its headquarters with a fund of yen 15,000. The general headquarters in England have defrayed yen 10,000 for the purpose. The Yokohama office is trying to collect yen 5,000 among the public.

Epidemic diseases are prevalent in Yokohama. There were four cases of typhoid fever and two cases of dysentery on July 26th.

A woman attempted to commit suicide early on the morning of July 28th by throwing herself into the sea from the bund opposite the Club Hotel, but was saved by a man who happened to be passing. Discord in her family is said to have been the cause.

Lieut. Commander Takeuchi of the Naval Department has made arrangements with Mr. Ishii, Director of the Yokohama Harbour Office, with regard to the anchorage of the American Fleet. According to the plan, the American warships will anchor in two lines northeast from the entrance of the harbour. The Japanese reception squadron, consisting of several ships, will also anchor in two lines parallel to the left of the Americans. The American transports belonging to the fleet will be stationed in the third division of the outer harbour. The prefectural Government intends to build three temporary piers—each about three yards in width and a hundred yards in length on the bund between the English Hatoba and the French Haroba. Fifty or sixty steam boats will be provided for the benefit of the American officers and bluejackets as well as for the Japanese of the reception squadron.

According to a report received at the Yokohama Chief Police Office, an American lady—whose name is given as Mrs. H. Edwards—of Yokohama, who is now living at a villa in Hase, Kamakura, was attacked by two Japanese at 6 p.m. on July 28th near the Kajhin Inn Hotel. The men stole her silver necklace and gold watch valued at about yen 80 in all. On the following day, a policeman of the Kamakura Office arrested them. The articles were recovered and returned to the owner.

The following donations have been received at the Yokohama City Office in connexion with the proposed reception to the American Fleet: yen 1,000 from the Specie Bank; yen 500 each from the Hara, Mogi Shoten, Nippon Yusen Kaisha, Kiito Gomei Kaisha and Mitsu Bussan Kaisha, yen 300 from the Toyo Kisen Kaisha, etc.

Two new cases of dysentery were reported on July 29th in West Tobe-machi, one of the patients being a child and another an employee of the Yokohama Silk Conditioning House.

A truck running between Hirannma and Hodo-gaya ran over a girl at Asama-cho, injuring her left foot severely. The coolie who was driving the wagon was at once taken to the Tobe Police Office.

A man attempted to commit suicide by hanging himself on the evening of July 29th in the Yokohama Public Gardens, but at the critical moment a policeman appeared on the scene and saved him.

An old man living in Enoura, Lower Ashigori, committed suicide on July 27th by hanging himself. Poverty is stated to have been the cause.

The dead body of a young woman was found in the creek near South Yoshida-machi in Yokohama. As she was not identified the corpse was handed over to the city office for burial.

Mr. T. Hirugawa, of the Department of Communications, has been appointed chief civil engineer of the Yokohama Post Office.

YACHTING.

The weather on Saturday was disappointing to yachtsmen, for the wind was very light most of the time and very changeable, going from S.W. to S.E. in the course of the afternoon. Also the sea was almost glassy calm at times, and the sun rays were very hot. Many boats gave up, seeing little pleasure in this sort of thing.

Mary, Maid Marion and Asagao were the only big boats to go out and the Maid, getting into bad places lost ground greatly, and finally gave up and came home. Mary thus sailed round the course alone but did not finish within the time limit, only arriving at 6.10.50.

The Larks had a race, eight starting and five finishing. The times were: No. 2, 5.24.30; No. 3, 5.15.50; No. 9, 5.21.30; No. 11, 5.13.20; and No. 13, 5.24.52. This was a scratch race.

Six Mosquito Club yachts started but their crews did not get much pleasure out of the affair. Wingsome was first at the harbour entrance but took the ground at the south breakwater and threw the others out considerably. Out in the open the wind was so fluky that it was not possible to tell who had the advantage. In the end they finished as follows:—

	Start. h.m.s.	Finish. h.m.s.
Edna .....	2.15.10	Gave up
Pele .....	2.14.40	5.51.13
Wingsome .....	2.15.10	5.49.55
Sunbeam .....	2.15.05	6.06.03
Elsa .....	2.15.32	Gave up
Kneith .....	2.15.30	Gave up

RIOT AT HASHIMA.

The Nagasaki Press thus reports the miners' riot to which we have already referred:—

A serious disturbance took place at Hashima, one of the Mitsu Bishi's island collieries at the entrance to the harbour. It is stated that some miners went to the island police station and demanded the release of some comrades who were under arrest. The demand not being complied with, the men attacked the police station and the mine offices, cut the telephone wires, and damaged other property. Some dwelling-houses were raided by the rioters and an employee of a restaurant was fatally injured by them.

The miners who had not taken part in the rioting were mustered to defend the colliery property and a fight ensued with the rioters, some of the latter being injured.

As quickly as possible information of the disturbance was given to the Nagasaki-ken authorities and about midnight a number of policemen and gendarmes were sent from here to the island under the command of the Superintendent of the Nagasaki station. Judges and procurators of the Chihō Saibansho accompanied the force but before its arrival at Hashima order had been restored.

Thirty miners have been arrested in connection with the affair but many more were implicated.

AUSTRALIAN HORSES.

Mr. George Hood writes that he expects a batch of 25 Australian Race Mares for the Nippon Keiba Kai, Meguro, by the Prinz Sigismund on 31st inst.

TOKYO RACE ASSOCIATION.

At Negishi on Monday, No. 4 of the last batch of imported Australian horses was sold at auction for yen 140, No. 19 for yen 30, and No. 24 for yen 230.

The drawer of No. 13 had been given the option of rejecting the mare if he chose. He exercised this right and on being put up by the Club she was sold for yen 120.

The following is the result of the drawing for 25 Australian Subscription Griffin Maures, arrived per steamer Saxonia:

No. Messrs.	No. Messrs.
1. M. Hayashi	14 K. Kimura
2. M. Kimura	15. S. Horiguchi.
3. R. Ikeda.	16. M. Shiozawa.
4. Otsubo.	17. S. Mori.
5. G. Wajima.	18. H. Hiraoka.
6. T. Kume.	19. Toyo.
7. K. Kanayama.	20. P. Yamamoto.
8. K. Kimura	21. T. Shibuya.
9. R. Wakao.	22. Dead.
10. S. Okada.	23. T. Koshiyama.
11. T. Kyoda.	24. H. Hirayama.
12. T. Fumi.	25. B. Tanaka.
13. Toyo.

THE LAW COURTS.

ALLEGED INFRINGEMENT OF THE EMIGRATION LAW.

H. Morita, Superintendent of the Aomori Police Station; T. Sakuraba, a police inspector of the same office; S. Ichikawa, an official of the Hokkaido Government; and fifteen men who were undergoing preliminary examination in the Yokohama District Court on a charge of infringing the Emigration Law were committed for trial on July 29th.

According to the decision given by the Preliminary Examination Judge, the accused forged a large number of passports with which they sent many labourers from Kobe and Yokohama to America, the defendant thus receiving illegal commission from the emigrants.

The trial will take place about the middle of August.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

A case of cholera is reported in Fukuoka.

About 4 p.m. on July 26th a thunder and hail storm was experienced in the district of Nagano.

The Meiji and Morioka Emigration companies of Tokyo have received an order from Peru for 850 emigrants.

New rice was brought on July 23rd by the Heijo Maru from Lu-Chu to Kobe, the price being yen 13.80 on an average.

Mr. J. Tani, a member of the Hyogo Prefectural Assembly, was arrested on July 25th. There is no report yet as to the charge.

The labourers, male and female, employed at the Kanazawa Habutaye Bleaching Company have struck for an increase of their wages.

The steamer Otaru Maru III, which recently went ashore in the neighbourhood of Soyo promontory, Kitami, was floated on July 24th.

A telegram has been received to the effect that Count Komura, Ambassador to the British Court, left London on July 27th for home via Siberia.

Mr. K. Tsutsuki, Chief Secretary of the Privy Council, has resigned; Mr. K. Kawai, one of the secretaries of the same office was appointed in his place.

The O.S.K. steamer Taigi Maru, which left Kobe for Tairen on the 22nd, damaged her screw off Tokushima, Shikoku, at 9 p.m. on the same day. She consequently returned to Kobe and was docked at the Kawasaki Dockyard. The passengers, seventeen in all, are proceeding to Tairen by the Amakusa Maru.

The Fuji and four other ships of the First Squadron will leave Yokosuka on July 27th for Tsugaru, but the Mikasa, the flagship, will leave on Aug. 1st.

Fire broke out in the factory of the Osaka Cement Company on the night of July 26th, destroying three large buildings. The loss is estimated at yen 100,000.

A telegram has been received in Nagasaki to the effect that some of the American Fleet will call at Nagasaki and Kobe to take in fresh water before visiting Yokohama.

Through the negligence of a pointsman the locomotive of a train was derailed on the morning of July 27th at the Saikata station on the Hokugetsu Railway, causing much damage.

A telegram to the Asahi reports that trouble took place at a race meeting in Moscow in connexion with the payment of money by the pari mutuel. Six hundred persons were found guilty.

A patient in the Numadzu Hospital attempted to commit suicide on July 25th by injuring his throat with a short sword. He had been suffering from brain complaint for some days past.

Five men employed at the Osaka Railway Station were arrested on July 27th on a charge of having stolen goods received at the station by trains through the Sanyo, Hokuriku and Hankaku lines.

A London telegram to the Nichi Nichi reports that Lieut.-General Masewitch, chief of the Vladivostok Naval Station, has been appointed Commander-in-Chief of the Russian Navy in the Far East.

The equipment of the gun-boat Mogami having been completed, she was delivered by the Mitsu Bishi Shipbuilding Yard to the Naval authorities on July 29th. She will shortly leave Nagasaki for Saseho.

Fire broke out early on the morning of July 24th in Senzoku-machi, Asakusa, Tokyo. The artificial leather factory and six other buildings were damaged. Four persons were severely injured while trying to remove their goods.

Mr. Hu Weiteh, the new Chinese Minister to the Imperial Japanese Court arrived at Moji on July 28th in company with his mother and son as well as about twenty officials. At noon the same day they left for Yokohama on the way to Tokyo.

The third day's races of the first meeting of the Toyo Race Club were held on July 28th at Tohato, near Fukuoka. The sale of pari mutuel chances amounted to yen 300,000 in round figures. On the 8th race the pari mutuel paid yen 334.50 Denko, a new horse.

All copies, (about 1500 in all,) of the Shakai Shinbun, a periodical belonging to the soshi calling themselves socialists, published on July 28th, were confiscated by the Tokyo Metropolitan police. It is reported that the paper published an article injurious to social order.

Dr. Koch, who is now at Hakone, will leave there on July 30th for Nagoya where he will spend a few days. On August 1st, he will leave for Kyoto and other western places. He will extend his visit to the Inland Sea on a yacht in company with a number of Japanese doctors from Tokyo, Osaka, etc.

On Tuesday morning the mortal remains of Rolland Morse, the year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. H. Thorn, who died after a brief illness from spinal meningitis, were laid to rest in Yokohama General Cemetery, the Rev. W. P. G. Field performing the last sad rites both at the church and graveside. The cortege left the residence of the parents at 9 a.m., Messrs. A. G. Kellogg, O. M. Poole, A. B. Lowson and W.

L. Keane acting as pallbearers. Amongst the mourners were Mr. C. H. Thorn (father) and E. V. Thorn (grandfather). The general sympathy felt with Mr. and Mrs. Thorn was manifested by the number of floral tributes and by the large company of mourners.

A telegram to the Dempo states that M. Arjikh, a leader of the Russian revolutionaries in Nagasaki, has presented a complaint to the Minister for Home Affairs in connexion with the recent search at the office of the Volia by the Japanese judicial officials in the district.

In consequence of the abuse of credit at Straits outposts by Chinese and Kling dealers—who use the money of European firms for their own purposes—a Singapore merchant, says a contemporary, has suggested the appointment of an experienced accountant to work under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce. The cost for salary, &c., is estimated at $10,000, and it is contended that such an expert would be able to materially assist the official assignee, and supply a link, now badly needed, between merchants and the assignee.

At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Nippon Race Club and of horse owners, called on the suggestion of Mr. N. Mitsuhashi, the Mayor, at the Grand Hotel on Thursday the question was considered of holding a race meeting on the occasion of the visit to Yokohama of the American fleet. Mr. S. Isaacs, Chairman of the Committee, was in the chair, and Mr. Mitsuhashi addressed the meeting. It was decided to hold a two day meeting in connexion with the visit of the fleet.

The opium hulk Korea at Shanghai was in some danger of sinking with a valuable cargo the other day. It appears that the leakage on board was first discovered on Monday morning, (July 20) when it was noticed by those on the Korea herself, and other persons on hulks in the vicinity, that the Korea was drawing more water than usual. An investigation showed that there were four feet of water in the hold. As the vessel was still leaking, the Customs Fire Boat was sent up to her assistance, and succeeded in pumping out the water at 10 p.m. on Monday. There were over 7½ 2,000,000 worth of the opium on board, and it is supposed that the leak was caused by the vessel being loaded down below her usual water line. Probably the effect of sun and wind on her timbers caused them to gape, and the water entered when a fresh cargo of opium was stored on board. Fortunately for the owners opium suffers but little damage from contact with fresh water. Most of the insurance on the opium stored on board is carried in London.

Mr. C. Schmidt and several foreign friends, including some ladies, had an exceedingly unpleasant adventure on Sunday evening when they were on their way to the Koroen Park on the Hanshin Tramway. According to the account given in the Mainichi, when the party was about thirty ken or so from the railway crossing a drunken Japanese knocked against one of the ladies and, on being remonstrated with by Mr. Schmidt, struck the lady in the face, but it appears from an account given by a foreigner that the Japanese hit the lady in the face with a fan in the first instance without receiving the least provocation. Mr. Schmidt then struck the man with his stick, whereupon he was attacked by the Japanese assailant and his friends, some five in all. Mr. Schmidt withstood them pluckily and a struggle ensued, in which Mr. Schmidt sustained injuries on the face and head while one of the Japanese was also hurt. Eventually, after a policeman had appeared on the scene, the whole party adjourned to a refreshment room, where the matter was discussed. In the meantime police had been summoned from various quarters and after a very long delay some officers arrived and arrested the Japanese concerned. The Mainichi states that Mr. Schmidt leniently refrained from prosecuting the men and that they were released after being severely reprimanded by the police. The man who committed the original assault on the lady was an Osaka coolie, thirty years of age, named Yoshida Katsuzo.—Kobe Herald.

SOME CURIOUS CUSTOMS OF THE HEAD HUNTERS OF LEPANTO-BONTOC PROVINCE, NORTHERN LUZON, PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

LOCATION.—The Province of Lepanto-Bontoc with an elevation above the sea level varying from 1000 to 6000 feet, is about 300 miles north of Manila. Cervantes, its capital, is best reached from Candon or San Estaban, in Ilocos Sur; and from either of these two ports the journey inland, covering from 2 to 3 days, is most tedious, as several high mountain ranges have to be crossed.

TRANSPORTATION.—A traveller may be carried in a chair or hammock, supported on the shoulders of four native carriers, or he may hire one of the little native ponies (which by the way are capable of endurance much out of proportion to their diminutive size).

RAINY SEASON.—As the rainy season lasts from June to November, the mountain streams frequently become rushing torrents, and land slides of enormous proportions occur with nearly every rain, so that during these months it would be unwise to undertake the trip. The most desirable months are between November and March, as at that time the weather is most delightful.

INTRODUCTION.—A residence of nine months among this primitive people enabled me to observe a few of their superstitions and customs, a description of which will no doubt prove of interest from an ethnological standpoint. There is no written language among the Igorrotes, and, as is common throughout the Philippine Archipelago, the dialect differs with the tribe, so that it was extremely difficult to obtain anything more than the most meagre data. The Igorrote has no conception of any world outside his own mountain home, and by the nature of his life is extremely superstitious, wearing charms of various kinds about his person, as well as surrounding his hut with objects which he believes efficacious in keeping away evil spirits.

HOUSES.—These aborigines live in huts roughly constructed of wood and grass, the roofs of which extend to only a few feet above the ground, and at either end (in lieu of a window) is a small hole, left for the escape of smoke from the fires, which are used both for light and heat: the interiors of these huts have (in some cases) a flooring of roughly hewn planks, and either in the centre, or to one side, is a rectangular space, boarded in and filled with ashes for the fire.

SLEEPING ROOMS.—In the larger of these huts, sleeping rooms are sometimes constructed and supported upon four posts; they are reached by short ladders. Usually in one corner, or over the entrance, may be seen a collection of skulls of carabao (water buffalo) and pigs, which have been killed for sacrificial purposes; and in remote regions may even be seen the skulls of those who have been defeated in "war" by the Igorrote in whose possession they are found.

KITCHEN UTENSILS.—Their kitchen utensils consist of earthenware pots of native manufacture, in which the food is cooked; and cocoa nut, earthenware or wooden vessels from which they eat (one dish usually serving for the entire family). Sometimes these food bowls are elaborately carved, and are handed down from father to son for generations, in which case they are considered sacred. Knives or forks are unknown, but a wooden spoon is used to dish out the food and the "headaxe" serves for all domestic purposes, as well as for cutting off the heads of those who have been unwise enough to travel in the territory of an unfriendly tribe.

SLEEPING BOARD.—For sleeping purposes, these people use roughly hewn planks (2 inches thick and 2½ to 3 feet wide by about 5 feet long) which are usually placed flat on the ground; a block of wood as a head rest, and a cotton "manta" (blanket) wrapped round them is all they require; and on such a bed, one and often two persons sleep.

CLOTHING.—The clothing consists (in the case of the men) of a loin cloth of native make, a small strip of cotton (usually of some bright color) which they bind about their heads, and which serves for a "pocket," a belt of woven grass, and if they can obtain it, a chain, or even brass wire coiled about the waist completes the dress. The children run about perfectly nude up to 7 or 8 years of age. The wildest tribes, instead of cloth, obtain an inner fibre from the bark of a tree; this is beaten out until it becomes flexible, when it is made into "clothes" which serve the same purpose as the industrial product does for those who are able to obtain it. The Bontoc Igorrotes use a small round "hat" (woven out of bamboo, straw, or some form of rattan) in which they keep their tobacco, etc. This "hat" is retained in place by a small strip of vegetable fibre passed across the forehead, and held by the long hair which is peculiar to their tribe. Their clothing is much the same as that worn by the Lepanto natives, except far in the interior, where little is worn by either men or women except the loin cloth.

PERSONAL ADORNMENT.—Arm rings of boars tusks, necklaces of dogs' teeth, and charms of various descriptions are worn by both men and women. Earrings of brass, wood, glass, shells, or, in fact, anything which can be utilized are also worn. Frequently Igorrotes are seen with their teeth sharpened to points. Smoking is universal except among the members of the "Guardia de Honor" (to which reference will be made later) and pipes are made from iron, brass, clay or wood in many unique shapes.

RICHES.—Riches among these people are calculated by heads of caribao (water buffalo) or the number of rice paddies and camote (sweet potato) patches owned by the individual.

WHAT THE IGORROTES EAT.—The sons of "Bintua" and "Bangan" live as a rule on sweet potatoes, which they cultivate on a large scale. They eat only twice a day but always very heartily. Some of these people eat the meat of animals which have died, and sometimes when it is in an advanced stage of decomposition. They are fond of dog meat, and consider the flesh of snakes a great delicacy. Tender leaves of the sweet potato cooked without seasoning, and locusts decomposed in water in jars, constitute the ordinary fare, while chicken and pigs are only eaten on the occasion of some rare event, such as a marriage or birth, or when a sacrifice is thought necessary in event of grave sickness or an epidemic of disease.

NO FISH.—Owing to the topography of these provinces, the rivers do not contain fish.

PRIMITIVE RELIGIOUS BELIEF.—The Igorrotes believe that the world is the work of a Supreme Being called "Lumaoig" or "Cabunyan" and that this God at one time sent to the earth a flood which drowned all except a man and a woman named respectively "Bintua" and "Bangan." These two are supposed to have learned how to swim and are believed to have been conducted by the Divine Hand to the man to Caloitian (the highest part of a mountain in the Province of Lepanto), and "Bangan" to the top of the mountain Maleng in the Province of Abra. One day (according to the legend) "Lumaoig" sent "Bintua" to meet the woman "Bangan" who returned with him to "Caloitian" in a circular vessel, hollowed out from the trunk of a tree and covered at one end with dog skin. This vessel has been perpetuated in the "Solibao" which is a kind of drum, a meter and a half long, and fifteen decimeters in diameter, and which is used on all occasions when invocations are made to the

UNSEEN SPIRIT.—After the going down of the flood Bintua and Bangan were united in matrimony, and of the union were born four sons and four daughters. The boys were named "Guematin" "Oigan" "Gusting" "Aluyen" and the girls "BANGAN" "CUMI" "IMI" and "INANG." Guematin lived with his parents in Caloitian taking for his wife his sister Bangan. Oigan went to live in Maleng taking as his wife, his sister Cumi. Gusting made his home in the mountain east of Bontoc, taking to wife his sister Ipi and Aluyen went to (what is now called) Ilocos Province with Inang for his companion. From this beginning originated the Igorrote race.

ORIGIN OF THE WORD "IGORROTE."—At a later period in the history of this strange people Bintua and Bangan had a reunion of all their race at Caloitian, and at a feast which was prepared, among the animals which were killed, was a pig, and Bintua gave the tail of this pig to a little son of Gusting (man of the Rising Sun as he was called). Envy moved a son of Aluyen (the man of the Setting Sun) to carry off the tail, upon seeing which Gusting attacked the son of the West and took his life, thus committing the first homicide since the flood. To appease the animosity which this act aroused, the assassin was publicly whipped, after which he and his descendants became known by the name "Iggolot." This was subsequently changed by the Spaniards to Igorrote.

CASAO.—This name is given to a form of sacrifice in which chickens are killed and offered to the invisible God, to the end that the person or persons making the offering may obtain their desires. The sacrifice is supposed to be acceptable or not, according to the appearance of the gall, (which must be of a certain color and quantity; and frequently a number of birds are killed at one time, in order to obtain the desired gall. Other animals, such as pigs, dogs, etc. are also sacrificed, but the chicken is thought to be indispensable when they wish to find out if an undertaking is to be lucky or otherwise. The Casao has different names according to the case, but in all the person who celebrates, does not leave for some time afterwards the house or place where he holds the special sacrifice. Casaos are held in connection with all the events of life, however insignificant, even when contemplating a theft, or before gambling, which latter vice is indulged in to a large extent. The evil spirits, "Anito," "Abi-it" "Fantasma." A spirit whose mission is supposed to be of ill will to men, is called "Anito." "Abi-it" is the name given to the spirit of a person who dies.

This spirit is believed to enter some one of the various lower animals, and, in some cases, inanimate objects, and then continue its existence. These supposed evil spirits exert a great influence over the people as they are thought to be the cause of all disease, as well as the various other ills of life. The natives, to satisfy the imaginary demands of these spirits, hold cañas as a means of propitiation. Cañas are held on the occasion of a birth, at which time a great feast is usually held, three pigs are killed and peculiar offerings are made with an invocation to "Lumaioig" which translated, reads as follows "Oh Thou Lumaioig come and eat with us the meat so that thou wilt preserve us all for a long time, that the child may live for a long time, that its mother may live for a long time, also that our fowls may prosper and our pigs, and that our crops may be good." At this time also, is built an enclosure round about the "house" for purpose of keeping away all who are not members of the family. The husband does not go outside the Rancheria (community) for a month after the great event, and when he does so for the first time, he makes a sacrifice of one or more fowls, to see if the "Anito" will permit him to proceed in safety.

NAMES.—An Igorrote child does not receive a name until it begins to talk, and then the parents give it the name of one of its ancestors. Very frequently, an Igorrote will relinquish his or her name for another, several times, so that it is not unusual to look for natives under one name, and have difficulty in finding them because of this custom. After children have passed 7 years of age, they are sent to sleep in abandoned houses, all the boys assemble together in one, and the girls in another; this arrangement is made by the parents, so that the children may be thrown together as much as possible, and perhaps another reason for this custom, is because the huts are so small. At any rate, the children grow up together, and choose, or have chosen for them, their life companions at a very early age.

MARRIAGE.—The future union of a boy with a girl is arranged by the respective parents, without consulting those directly interested. After several preliminary talks, the father of the girl sends two men to the boy's father to explain the conditions under which the lovers may be united; and if he is able to comply with these conditions, the "commission" return and make their report: the report is of course favourable or not, according to the result of a "Cañao," through which medium they appeal to the unseen Power for guidance. If the report is favourable, the father of the boy informs his son that he is at liberty to make formal proposal to the girl. When the respective fathers observe that their children care for each other, they jointly command the boy to guard the marital life. The nuptials are celebrated three times. At first, the celebration consists of small "Cañao" which fixes the day of their marriage: this affair is so insignificant, that no one outside the relatives attend. The events of importance are the "Cañas" called "Bascang" and "Bayas" which occur as follows: The "Bascang" is held some days after the first celebration, and consists in the offering by the husband to "Lumaioig" of 3 pigs, one large male, one female and one sucking pig. This offering is made as follows—the 3 victims are fastened inside the grounds of the "house" with their heads pointed in the direction of the Sun, then the husband with a vessel of water in the right hand, addresses to "Lumaioig" an oration, which being translated, reads as follows: "Oh Thou Cabanyan, we desire all our good spirits (the spirit of this husband, the spirit of our chickens, the spirit of our pigs, the spirit of our rice to descend to this place that with them we may eat), the three pigs whose lives we offer for the salvation of our own that we may grow large and strong until we will have children." A little later, the man pours the water over the head of the victims and kills them immediately: the meat is then cooked, and with "Binubudin" (the native drink) is offered to "Cabanyan," after which they all eat. The man and his wife for several days following this "Bascang," do not leave the "rancheria." The "Bayas" is the last celebration, and it consists of a grand reunion of all the relatives and friends of the couple. It is held sometime within the first year after marriage. For this celebration, it is necessary that the "binubudin" (made from fermented rice) should have been prepared by the wife on the first day of the public announcement of their union. The husband communicates later to the old people, the time when they may expect to celebrate a birth, and they see that his house is well thatched, so that in case of rain no water will enter, as otherwise "Lumaioig" would be displeased and bring loss upon all of them. All the neighbours contribute presents, and a general good spirit prevails. The afternoon of the day before that on which is begun the "Bayas," the old people of the "rancheria" assemble in the house of the married couple, where they open and drink several vessels of "binubudin," and it is needless to say that drunkenness is general. On the morning when all the invited guests are assembled the great "Cañao" begins with an offering by the husband to "Lumaioig" as before described (with the exception that one head is placed on a post firmly fixed in the earth, and which is taken away when the people have departed). The sacred vessel of "binubudin" is this day placed under the house for an old man to open, and "study its effects" after which it is taken to the place where it is publicly offered to "Lumaioig" and afterwards drunk by those assembled. The larger part of the people leave the feast at nightfall, but many stop until all the food and drink has been exhausted.

CURING THE SICK.—The fathers, husbands, sons and brothers of an Igorrote who is sick, hold a cañao several times during the course of a disease observing from time to time the effect of their "intercessions." No medicine of any kind is given. The more notable of the cañas which are arranged to "cure" the sick person, is the "Sipuc" in which "one of the profession" (usually an old woman) addresses the "Anito" in a loud voice, asking that her life be taken, and the life of the sick one be spared. If the malignant spirits (or whatever they may be called) of the souls of the dead, do not respond to the invocation and the "patient" dies, then the relatives sacrifice chickens, pigs or dogs, or they may utilize some inanimate objects, which were the property of the dead person; the relatives, in short, comply with whatever they imagine to be the demand of the invisible spirits. The "Sipuc" is held in the house of the sick one, but the "cañao" which follows a death is celebrated in the place and manner that the spirits are supposed to indicate.

DISPOSAL OF THE DEAD.—If deceased was rich, the corpse is placed in a sitting posture at the entrance to his hut, in order that all relatives taking part in the funeral (which usually occurs some 4 or 5 days after death) may see the remains. During three days, there are killed many animals which belonged to the dead man, in order to furnish food for the visitors. The body is usually interred in a hole close to the house, where it is placed in a squatting position inside a cylindrical box. Sometimes the boxes are placed on ledges or natural shelves in the limestone cliffs of their mountain home, where in due time this wonderful organism, the body, is reduced to its component parts. The actual burial is preceded by the slaughter of some fowls for the purpose of propitiating the evil spirits, which they say indicate whether or not the hour for the funeral, has arrived. The shroud generally consists of a "Manta," loin cloth and turban. The shroud is of coarse texture and is woven in black and white, and covered with characters distinctively Indian (as these shrouds are made for the deceased during his life time, under ordinary conditions, no money will buy one, and it is only by intimidating a native that such a relic can be procured). The wife superintends but does not assist at the funeral, and the day following, she holds a "cañao" sacrificing fowls, in the hope that the "anitos" will not demand the lives of any other members of the family. On the night of the 3rd day after the funeral the wife (in capacity of superintendent) as well as the parents and relatives of the dead, perform each one a "cañao" as a peace offering, and remain within the boundaries of the "rancheria" for several months afterwards. On the tenth day after the funeral the peace offering is repeated. Should the person who dies be poor, nothing is done except to sacrifice fowls and consult the oracle of the gall (heretofore described) and afterwards bury the corpse, the members of the family of deceased remaining quietly in their homes for a few days.

GOING ON A JOURNEY.—The hut is left after consulting the oracle of the gall of a chicken and that of some wild pigeons. This test is made some hours after the setting of the sun or before sunrise, following which the one who is going to make the journey passes first to some point near the village to listen for the song of a particular bird, upon hearing which he decides that it is well to continue on his way. This point is called "Lalabag," because it is here that he makes the "Labeg" or appeal to the birds. In event of the Igorrote not hearing the bird sing, he returns to his hut, and repeats the "sacrifice," until such time as the result is favourable, after which he proceeds on his way.

This routine is observed only when it is intended to go on a long journey, but there are some observances for even the simplest visits to neighbours. If on the trail to be followed are found creatures of ill omen such as rats, serpents, toads, etc., the traveller halts without the loss of a moment, and remains some hours or even days on the same spot, and frequently a sacrifice of birds is made before he will continue on his way. The body of an Igorrote who dies on a journey distant from his home is invariably taken to the hut where he resided. An Igorrote on a journey, but as yet near his village, returns immediately to the same, if he sees a human cadaver, as this indicates ill luck.

CORPORAL MARKS.—For adornment, the Igorrote allows to be drawn or tattooed upon his body, lines which represent serpents, men, birds, etc.

Certain marks indicate that the one who is so adorned, has killed one or more persons, and such a man is always looked upon with fear by Igorrotes of another village. Some Igorrotes color their teeth black, while others file them in imitation of a saw-blade.

SACRIFICES IN CASE OF EPIDEMIC DISEASE.—An offering called "Seden" is celebrated by all the people of a village on being notified of an epidemic in another village. The "Seden" consists of an offering of some fowls or young pigs, asking the malignant spirits to preserve the community from danger; and to accept the lives of the victims offered in place of the lives of the inhabitants of the village.

To find out whether or not the community will be afflicted by the epidemic existing in another town, they celebrate the sacrifice, called "Tingao," which is conducted as follows—a pig and cock are killed in the town house or "Tribunal" in presence of all the residents of the community. A small piece of the meat of the animals killed, is placed on the point of a piece of "runo" (tropical grass) and towards evening this is taken by two children to what is called the "house of the spirit" (which will be spoken of later). This small piece of meat is called "deo deo" or food for the "Anito." On the following morning the children return to the spirit house to see if the "deo deo" is in the same place or not, if it has not been taken, they fear it, and continue making "Tingao" until the "deo deo" is taken by the Anito. No one leaves the village while these offerings are being conducted, for the space of three or four days. When an attack of the epidemic is feared, the entire population remain in their homes for the time which it is supposed to take the evil spirit to come and go.

THE SACRED TREE.—All offerings which are made to "Lumaioig" and the "Anito" are placed together at the foot of a large tree, close to or inside the town. This tree is called "Paquedian" and is considered by these people sacred, as it is supposed to be the residence of "Lumaioig" the Great Spirit which cares for the community.

THE WILD SPIRITS.—The woods are supposed to be inhabited by spirits which are thought to care for them, therefore before cutting down trees, it is necessary to make some sacrifice in their honour.

CANAS IN CASE OF FIRE.—When a fire occurs in a community, all the dwellers in the burned house, kill fowls to satisfy the vengeance of the evil spirits who brought about such a misfortune. When a house is struck by lightning, all who live in its vicinity, leave it and go to live in some other part of the same community.

PEACE OFFERING BEFORE BEGINNING AGRICULTURAL LABOURS.—Some days before sowing rice, the entire community enters upon a ceremony, called "Guinguio," which is conducted by a woman accompanied by two men (one carrying a lance and the other a shield) who make a great noise in order to frighten away the rats which might otherwise cross their path. The woman takes a grain of "palai" (rice) which has already sprouted and plants it. On the following morning all the people make an offering with which the "Tengao" is commenced. At this time, no one is allowed to leave the village, nor can anyone from another community enter, and to this end they place in the trails leading into the village where the "Tengao" is being celebrated, branches of trees or "runo" which are arranged in a certain way, and this sign is invariably respected. The "Begnias," is a public offering celebrated when the planting of rice is about to be undertaken. In the "Begnias," all who can, go armed with lances and shields, and bathe in the rivers adjacent to the village, and on their return, the participants yell so that all the spirits of the community will be happy to hear that they have begun their agricultural labours, which will provide the rice from which is made the "binubudin" so agreeable to them. After the bathing exercises, every body takes part in a procession to the "Tribunal" where an old man invites "Lumaioig," "Bintua" "Bangan" and the other sons of the Igorrote race to partake of the drink "binubudin" which is served in the huts of the community, they kill fowls, and a small quantity of the meat is placed in the "paquedian" tree. At this offering, as on all public occasions when sacrifices are made, the people drink, sing and dance. At these times, they use the "Solibao" (a kind of drum previously referred to) in remembrance of the flood in whose waters "Bintua" and "Bangan" were carried from "Maleng" to "Caloitian." The transplanting of rice is also preceded by a "cañao" which is called "Tiageno" in which an old man kills (in the name of the entire "rancheria") a fowl at the base of the sacred tree, offering to "Lumaioig" the meat in exchange for a good crop. This same Cañao is repeated after the transplanting, but before they begin to gather the crop, they perform the "Tiagueo" which lasts ten days. This latter is commenced by killing at the foot of the tree as many pigs as may be necessary until one is found with a gall of the requisite size and color. The meat of this is then offered to "Lumaig" together with "binubudin." After the offering, the assembled people eat the meat of all the animals which have been killed, and drink and dance until they become intoxicated, retiring only when there is no more to drink. A somewhat similar "Cañao" is held after the gathering of the crops and storing in the granaries.

PLURALITY OF WIVES.—Plurality of wives is common among the Igorrotes.

DOMESTIC DUTIES.—The man is generally the one who cares for the house and the children, cooks, the meals and carries wood. The man alone, can dispose of his effects, buy, sell, and in general make contracts (oral of course) which concern his wife or wives or other members of his family. He passes the greater part of his time sleeping, or in conversation with other Igorrotes of the "Rancheria" in the "Abung" (or common hut) of which there are several in each community devoted to this object. The woman occupies her time in the labours of the field, after the ground has been prepared by her lord. She plants, weeds, and finally gathers the crop, and even carries it to the store houses.

WHAT IS DONE ON GOING TO WAR AGAINST A HOSTILE TRIBE.—To declare "war," the Chief (who is always elected by vote, some months previous to the expedition) consults the oracle of the gall of a hog, offering the meat (together with several jars of the native drink) to "Lumaig" the anitos and souls of the dead chiefs. On the morning following this, the head of the future expedition goes (accompanied by only one other person) to pass the night and sacrifice some fowls in the "at-at" (a name given to a place near the "rancheria" destined to be attacked. At the time indicated by hearing the song of the wild pigeon, the chief (shield and spear in hand) takes up the march alone, and goes to await his companions (who at this time are conducting a "Cañao" for the "war") at a point previously agreed upon. When the combatants are reunited, they direct their march to the village of the enemy, consulting their luck at frequent intervals. Having arrived at the outskirts of the village, they await their victims, and when they see them coming along the road close to where they are hidden, they kill them and if possible secure the heads. The chief, after sufficient heads have been taken, addresses "Lumaig" and the Anitos as follows:—"Oh Cabunyan, oh Anito, pardon us this our action, because we have done it to secure vengeance for our forefathers, with whom this rancheria was at enmity. Then the expedition returns home. Before entering town, they hold cañaos and are received with rejoicing by the entire population which goes out to meet it. After this comes the greatest of the cañaos. The heads are placed in boiling water, to separate the flesh from the bones, then the bones of the lower jaw are taken and attached to the "Ganzas" or "Gongs" which are used in the native dances. This Cañao lasts three weeks and rejoicing is general.

HOW JUSTICE IS RENDERED.—First an appeal is made to "Lumaig," that he may discover the culprit, after which "justice" is sought in one of several ways, according to the crime committed. One of the methods of discovering crime is called "pudon" which is administered as follows: a small wound is produced on the crown of the head, and if the blood which flows out is "less than the half of a grain of rice" the accused is considered innocent, while if it is more he is guilty. This "pudon" is made in presence of the relatives and friends of both parties, but before applying it, one person from among the friends of each of the accused directs the following invocation to "Lumaig" the sun and moon. "Oh powerful Lumaig sun, moon stars and all you others who are the cause of the light, view what we do, discover the culprit, make little blood flow from him who receives the 'pudon' if he is innocent and much if he is guilty." Then all observe a profound silence for a space of five minutes, after which those elected by the judges for the act, apply the test, and the committee in their decision order that satisfaction be rendered to the injured by sentencing the culprit to undergo, as a penalty, that of which the charge or charges consisted. The "Binnato" is applied as follows: the accuser and accused, each standing back to back and about three yards apart, throw over their shoulders, small pieces of sweet potato, and the one who is struck on the shoulder by the other loses. When both of the parties hit each other, or do not hit, the case is decided in favour of the accused. In the "Tadio" they take pieces of potato equal in size and weight to be reweighed after having been offered by the contestants: the piece which turns out to be the heaviest, in favor of the party who previously offered it to "Lumaig." In the "Miananoc" the accuser and the accused each takes a fowl and kills it, after having offered it to "Lumaig," then each compares the gall with that of the fowl killed by the other party, and the case is decided as previously described. Many times he who loses his case makes a complaint before the provincial authorities against the accuser, but even if he obtains a favourable decision from them, he is not by that relieved from the obligation of complying with "the Divine sentence" and sooner or later he who has won in the test demands its execution.

TIME.—The years, months, days, and hours are not named. To indicate the time of any recent event, the Igorrotes specify the time when certain birds build their nests, the time of droughts, the rains, or the planting of crops.

A PECULIAR CUSTOM.—Some families observe a fast which is called "Baoy." This fast lasts 2 to 3 months, during which time, the people fasting, take nothing but water, and at times a handful of rice from a jar which contains "binubudin." The object of this "Baoy" is the prolongation of life which is supposed to be accomplished by debilitating the system. This self inflicted penance is thought to please the souls of the dead relatives. Before beginning this tremendous fast, the man and his wife hold a "Cañao" in which carabaos, pigs, etc. are killed and all the inhabitants of the "rancheria" as well as the relatives are invited to attend.

"GUARDIA DE HONOR."—This name is given to a Society whose members separate themselves from the several communities, that they may observe certain customs. The society was founded in Lepanto Province by an Ilocano of the Province of Abra in the year 1903. The first Igorrotes to respond to the influence of this teacher were from among those who lived in the district of Baguen, and notwithstanding the persecution to which the Society has been subjected by the "Presidencies" of the several districts, many Igorrotes have joined. The "doctrines," though necessarily vaguely defined, follow along the lines of Catholic teaching, and in a rude fashion, they endeavour to use the prayers and commandments as taught by the Church of Rome. Prayers are offered at the rising of the sun, at midday and at sun down. The Members of the "Guardia de Honor" are held in contempt by the balance of their brother Igorrotes, who are not members of this Society, and build their huts apart from the members of this cult. The Society receives visits from some of the Ilocano members, resident in the lower provinces, and to them they give sums of money for the support of this strange religious organization, although probably none of this money is ever applied to its legitimate purpose. The members of this Society also fast, although the fast lasts but one day, during which time, nothing is taken but water. The most noteworthy thing connected with the Society, is that its members do not at present eat any meat, and some even refrain from using salt, and all abstain from smoking (which latter must require great will power, as smoking is so general.)

DEBTS.—Debts do not become void by lapse of time, but like family feuds, they are handed down from father to son, until some descendant charges himself with the obligation.

ORIGIN OF HEAD HUNTING.—Tradition states that in the old days, when an Igorrote was sick, in order to cure himself of the ailment from which he suffered, he would offer a sacrifice of human heads; and out of this custom (which dates back beyond recollection) grew the feuds between the various tribes, and which in remote districts exist up to the present time.

LIONEL A. B. STREET, M.D.,

Late Surgeon U.S.A.

Yokohama, July 27th, 1908.

JAPANESE AGRICULTURAL IMMIGRATION INTO KOREA.

From recent comments in the foreign Press of Japan, it is evident that there prevail abroad some fundamental misconceptions concerning the nature and character of the immigration of Japanese farmers into Korea. The comments we have in our mind have appeared in the Japan Chronicle and the Japan Herald in connection with our refutation of a grossly erroneous statement concerning Japanese settlers in Korea in villages contained in an article published in the former paper. In that article, quoting an anonymous Korean authority whose acquaintance he casually made at a Korean theatre, Mr. Douglas Young wrote:—"He went on to tell me how Japanese coolies without a sen of their own are being dumped into the Korean villages, completely disorganising rural life and practically living on the all too poverty-stricken natives." In our issue of the 12th inst., as our readers may remember, we pointed out the baselessness of this allegation and said:—"It is quite conceivable that here and there there might be found black sheep among the Japanese settlers in the interior, as black sheep are invariably present in any community. But nothing could be more unjust and cruel than to describe the simple and kindly Japanese farmers who are beginning to settle in Korean villages as 'coolies without a sen of their own' and as living upon the poverty-stricken Koreans. Those agricultural settlers who constitute the great bulk of the Japanese moving to country districts come with money which they invest in the soil, and, moreover, generally give employment to natives at rates never before even dreamed of by them."

This statement elicited the following comment from the Japan Chronicle:—

"But we should like to ask the Editor of our Seoul contemporary, What would he say if this process, even as described by him, were going on in Japan,—that aliens with capital were settling in Japanese villages and displacing the natives? Would he as a Japanese regard it with equanimity? Why, it was partly the dread of some such possibility that prevented the right to own land being granted to aliens in Japan when the Treaties were revised, and we are convinced that no amount of money spent in Japanese villages by aliens would condone the conversion of Japanese farmers into farm labourers."

From this it is obvious that our contemporary takes for granted that the soil is generally owned in Korea by those who till it. Unfortunately for Korea and for the Kobe journal, this is not the case, and there is, consequently, no occasion in Korea to talk about the danger of farmers being converted into farm labourers. That danger has long since come to pass, and as things now stand, the majority, say ninety per cent., of those working in the field do not own the land they work on. The farms they cultivate are the property of ~~landlords~~ and merchants in the provincial, or more frequently, national, capital. It is a well-known fact that transactions in lands situated in remote corners of the country are constantly taking place in Seoul, where reside a large number, if not the majority, of the great landlords of Korea. Under these circumstances it is seldom in the power of Japanese settlers, even if they desired, to convert the Korean farmers into farm labourers. The conversion had practically been completed long before the Japanese farmer ever thought of settling in Korea. What actually takes place when a Japanese buys an estate in Korea, is this. He chooses one of two courses, either to live in the nearest Japanese colony and let the farms to the original Korean tenants, or to settle in the village where the property is located, in which case he usually reserves a small piece of land to raise vegetables for his domestic consumption, renting the remainder to Korean tenants. The former course was more generally followed until lately, but now the latter seems to be coming more into favour. But in neither case does the passing of the property from Korean to Japanese hands affect the actual tillers of the soil in any injurious way, for the Japanese farmer invariably follows the custom of the country in the matter of rent, and as for the treatment of tenants nobody could be more exacting than the Korean landlord.

We have thus far considered the case where the Japanese settler buys cultivated land. But there is a still larger number of cases in which successful plantations have been or are being created out of lands which, until the advent of enterprising Japanese settlers, lay waste and unproductive. Such is true of the reclamations undertaken in various parts of Southern Korea by men like Baron Iwasaki, Mr. Murai, and a score of others. On these plantations, apart from the overseers who are Japanese, the labour employed is mostly Korean. Mr. S. Shiga, the prominent traveller and author, who recently travelled throughout Southern Korea and visited some of these plantations and from whom we obtained some interesting information, told us that he was much struck by the air of newly acquired contentment and prosperity shown by the Korean population in the immediate neighbourhood of these Japanese plantations. It is not difficult to conceive why that should be so, for the Koreans working there get wages on a scale beyond precedent. This certainly does not look as if the Japanese settlers were living upon the poverty-stricken natives.

The Japan Herald is another of the foreign papers in Japan which has undertaken to impugn our recent statement concerning the increasing tide of Japanese agricultural immigration into Korea. Our contemporary can quote no fact nor authority to the contrary, but that by no means prevents it from discrediting what we wrote from our personal knowledge. It says:—

"Again, if the people visiting Korea are Japanese farmers who are burning with a desire to invest their money, surely they could find districts in the Hokkaido awaiting development,—fields which would compensate for the outlay of capital as much as the districts of Korea. By this means they would permanently benefit their own country, while in Korea the investment can only be temporary, seeing that Korea does not belong to Japan, which nation is only acting as a 'protector' until the time is ripe for Korea to again regain her former status."

This reveals an utter ignorance of the circumstances under which the immigration of Japanese farmers is taking place in this country—an ignorance which, unfortunately, is probably shared by the great majority of other foreign journals in Japan, and which, therefore, it is worth while to try to dispel. The Japanese farmers who are beginning to settle in Korea come from the northern part of Kyushu, such as the Prefectures of Fukuoka, Oita, Saga and Kumamoto, and from the western half of Chugoku, especially the Prefectures of Yamaguchi, Hiroshima, Shimane and Tottori. They come to Korea in preference to going to Hokkaido, because in the first place this country, especially its southern provinces where they mostly conduct their operations, is very much nearer to the localities from which they come than our northern island is. Ten hours of sailing in well-appointed steamers from Shimomoseki land them on the Korean shore, whereas at least eight times that length of time would have to be spent in uncomfortable railway travelling in going to Hokkaido. Suppose an agricultural colonist from Fukuoka settled at say, Milyang or some other point along the railway and not far from Fusan—there are a number of successful colonies in that region—wants to pay a visit to his relatives at home. He can easily take the night express from Seoul which passes that region in the morning, and boarding the day boat at Fusan, he will be with his people some time that same afternoon. And if so desirous, he can take the same night's steamer to Fusan and be back at his farm by noon the following day, that is to say about thirty hours from the moment he left there. This is a somewhat extreme case, and does not apply to the settlers at Mokpo, Kusan and their hinterlands, which at present absorb the greater part of the agricultural immigrants. But even there the distance from their old folks is comparably shorter than it would be were they settled in Hokkaido. This proximity to their old homes, besides enabling the immigrants to effect considerable saving in initial expenses, means to them a great deal from a sentimental point of view, the Japanese farmers being most conservative and peculiarly attached to the soil on which they were born.

Apart from geographical propinquity, there is yet another consideration, probably of a more irresistible character, that directs the tide of Japanese agricultural immigration to the Korean peninsula. We mean the extreme profitability of investment in farm lands in Korea. The price of farm land has of late considerably increased, especially in the southern provinces. But it is still easy to get first class rice fields in convenient localities at, or less than, forty yen a tan ( $\frac{1}{4}$  acre), or about one-fifth or one-sixth of the value of land of corresponding class in Japan. Paddies of medium quality may be had for twenty to thirty yen a tan. Under these circumstances, farming is very profitable. By rearing the land to Korean tenants, as most settlers do, the money invested yields a net profit at rates ranging between eight and twenty per cent. per annum. We know a Japanese nobleman who possesses a tract of rice fields about a hundred miles south of Seoul. He leaves the management of the estate to a Japanese agent living in Seoul, and yet the profit has never fallen below eight per cent. per annum. If it were owned by a farmer who lived on the estate or in its neighbourhood and personally attended to its management, the profit would certainly be considerably larger. We also know of lands near Milyang, which were bought some years ago when prices were still very low in Korea, and which, being now rented to tobacco growers, yield to the lucky proprietor a profit of over thirty per cent. per annum. This is, however, an extreme case, and it is not given to the settlers nowadays to expect such abnormally big returns from their investments in the soil. But with reasonable care and foresight, it is still very easy for agricultural settlers to get ten to fifteen per cent. In any case the profits obtainable here are larger than in Hokkaido, and, moreover, profits are realised in Korea from the first year of investment, whereas the settlers in Hokkaido, opening up the virgin soil, have to wait some years before they can expect to get returns from their investment, and even then their profits would probably be lower than here. And as for available land in Korea, there is any quantity in every part of the country, so that when a Japanese new arrival desiring to buy land appears in any locality he is at once literally besieged with offers for sale. This state of things will doubtless continue for a long time to come, for the great majority of Korean landowners are in debt, many of them hopelessly so.

This subject is a very interesting one, and there remains a great deal more to be said about it. But we believe we have said enough to show that the immigration of Japanese farmers into Korea is in obedience to impulses of the strongest character, and that consequently, the movement is bound to continue with irresistible force until a state of equilibrium is established in agricultural industry between Japan and Korea.—Seoul Press.

A new case of cholera was reported on July 28th in Atsuta, Yamaguchi prefecture.

TELEGRAMS.

(REUTER'S SERVICE.)

OLYMPIC WINNERS.

London, July 23.

At the Olympic Games in London, Walker, the South African sprinter, won the 100 metres in 10  $\frac{1}{4}$  seconds defeating Rector, the American crack. The cheers of an enthusiastic crowd of fifty thousand are stated to have lasted five minutes. Prince Arthur of Connaught summoned Walker to the royal box and warmly congratulated him on his feat.

TURKISH AFFAIRS.

It is reported from Constantinople that Said Pasha replaces the Grand Vizier (Ferid Pasha, who has been dismissed. Enmerushdi Pasha has been appointed Minister of War.

KING EDWARD AND THE KAISER.

Later.

A telegram states that King Edward is to meet the Kaiser at Cronberg in Germany on August 11th.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT AND THE NAVY.

President Roosevelt addressing several prominent naval officers and others at Newport stated that what America wanted was a first class navy or none. He added that a purely defensive navy would be worthless. The cruise of the battleship fleet was one of the most instructive lessons as to the reality of the Monroe doctrine. The American people must be prepared to uphold their right of saying who should be allowed to enter the country in case any one challenges it.

MACEDONIA.

Later.

The Times has a telegram from Sofia stating that Niaz Bey, the leader of the Young Turkey rebels, has established his headquarters at Scarova and Okhrida, where the rebels have captured a military depot. Four hundred armed Mahomedans have joined the rebels. The insurrection has spread to Dibra, where arms have been distributed to the Christians.

TROUBLE AT THE OLYMPIC GAMES.

There was a great row in the Olympic stadium over the 400 metres final race owing to a foul between the leading couple, Carpenter (American) and Halswell (British.) The former was disqualified by the umpires, who ordered the race to be re-run. The Americans protested that the race was fair, and declared that they would not run it again. The general feeling is that a blow has been given to Anglo-American athletics.

THE QUEBEC CELEBRATIONS.

London, July 23.

The celebrations at Quebec included a reproduction of the landing of Champlain and a great procession illustrative of the history of Canada.

The Mayor afterwards presented the Prince of Wales with an address in French, his Royal Highness replying in the same language.

Admiral Jaureguiberry and the Vice-President of the United States also spoke, the latter dwelling on the common aims of Canada and the United States, and eloquently pleading for international arbitration.

A TURKISH PARLIAMENT.

London, July 24.

Reuter's Constantinople correspondent reports that an Imperial Irade ordains the assembling of a chamber of deputies. Orders have been issued to hold elections, and there are great rejoicings at Salonika and other centres where the Constitution has been proclaimed.

Prior to the issue of the Irade insurgents occupied Monastir and kidnapped Osman Fezi into the mountains. The garrison fraternised with the insurgents.

Fresh outbreaks are occurring in all directions and the Young Turks are winning the confidence and support of the Christians.

A Belgrade telegram states that a report from Uskub says the entire garrison has mutinied, and Albanians from the surrounding country are marching to Uskub presumably to join the revolt.

THE MARATHON RACE.

London, July 25.

The Marathon Race, a distance of 26 miles, from Windsor to the Stadium, the culminating event in the Olympic Games, was won by Hayes, American, on the ground that Dorando, Italian, was exhausted on reaching the Stadium and had to be assisted in, Hefferon, South African, second, and Forsham, American, third. The Queen, who was present, will give Dorando a special cup. Fifty-seven competitors ran.

CHINESE EMPEROR'S BIRTHDAY.

The Chinese Minister in London gave a dinner in honour of the Emperor's Birthday. Mr. Gladstone, Lord E. Fitzmaurice, Sir Robert Hart, the Lord Mayor and many diplomats were present.

TROUBLE AT BOMBAY.

A telegram states that all the markets are closed in Bombay and that yesterday the work-people employed at all the mills struck. A severe riot broke out in the afternoon, several collisions taking place between the military and strikers, and many being severely injured.

THE QUEBEC TERCENTENARY.

The Prince of Wales reviewed 13,000 troops on the Plains of Abraham, headed by Lord Roberts and including French, American and British Naval detachments. The Prince afterward handed to Earl Grey, Governor-General, the title-deeds of the battlefields, purchased by the whole empire.

MR. LLOYD GEORGE SCOFFS.

Later.

In the House of Commons the Irish University Bill and the Finance Bill passed their third reading. In the course of the debate on the latter Mr. Austen Chamberlain condemned the Government's financial policy and warned them of the necessity of providing for a possible European conflict, Mr. Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, scoffed at the perpetual talk about the menace of war. "It would be far better for all of us not to spend the four hundred millions we are spending on armaments. I believe our resources are ample to defend ourselves."

THE TURKISH REFORMS.

London, July 26.

Constantinople.—Crowds marched in procession to the Ministries acclaiming the Constitution and cheering the Sultan. The press has sent to his Majesty a special telegram of thanks. At Monastir and Salonika the Mussulmans and Christians mingled in the rejoicings over the Constitution. The speeches emphasized their unity of interests. Four spies were shot yesterday at Salonika. Perfect order prevails. The leader of the Young Turks has addressed a letter to the Neue Freie Press from Salonika, saying that the whole population of Turks and Bulgarians, Servians and others, joined in celebrating the first day of liberty. He adds "if the Sultan refuses to grant our demands we will go to Constantinople."

THE OLYMPIC GAMES.

London, July 27.
The Queen presented the gold medals at the Stadium, Dorando, who received a tremendous ovation, being presented with a special cup. Halswell re-ran the 400 metres alone, the Americans having withdrawn. The whole affair has caused much illfeeling on both sides.

REJOICING IN CONSTANTINOPLE.

Later.
A procession of ten thousand went to the Yildiz Kiosk on Sunday to cheer the Sultan. Neither police nor troops were present and the order was perfect. The Trade abolishes the system of Government spies. The most remarkable effect of the proclamation of the Constitution is the general fraternization of Mussulmen hitherto mutually hostile and Christian nationalities and the disappearance of the Macedonian bands.

THE NEW YORK-PARIS RACE.

The German car, which has led throughout the race, arrived at Paris on July 21st.

OPIUM IN HONGKONG.

Later.
Colonel Seely in the House of Commons stated that Lord Crewe, Secretary of the Colonies, was considering the whole question of opium at Hongkong, including compensation if any.

FALLIERES.

President Fallieres has arrived at Reval.

KOMURA.

Count Komura has left London; representatives of the Foreign Office were present to bid him farewell.

ROOSEVELT AND THE STANDARD OIL DECISION.

President Roosevelt's action in criticising the decision of the Appeal Court in the Standard Oil Co., ordering an immediate retrial and declaring the guilt of the Standard Oil Co., clearly proved, has aroused keen disapproval as an unwarrantable attack on the judiciary.

TSAR AND PRESIDENT.

The Tsar and President Fallieres exchanged visits on their respective ships. M. Iswolsky had an hour's interview with M. Pichon. At a dinner on board the Tsar's yacht there were most cordial toasts emphasizing the strength and peaceful purpose of the alliance.

BRITISH FOREIGN POLICY.

London, July 28.
Speaking on the Foreign Office vote in Parliament, Sir Edward Grey, Secretary for Foreign Affairs, welcomed the promulgation of the Turkish Constitution. If the Turks were going to improve their whole government the Macedonian question would be settled better thus than by pressing partial reforms on the unwilling authorities. While unrelaxing in its watchfulness and its desire for the improvement of Macedonia, the British Government would for the present preserve a sympathetic and expectant attitude towards her. He deplored the misrepresentations of British policy as being aimed at the isolation of Germany and alluded to the former constant friction with France and Russia involving danger of a breach of the peace, which Britain's agreements removed. There was no more reason to suppose that Britain's agreements were aimed at Germany than that the Triple Alliance was aimed at Britain.

THE MEETING AT REVAL.

Later.
There have been prolonged conferences between President Fallieres and the Tsar, and the Foreign Ministers.

THE REJOICINGS IN TURKEY.

A feature of the rejoicing at Constantinople has been the outburst of strong pro-British feeling, due to a belief that the change in the regime is largely the outcome of British institutions.

BRITISH WARSHIPS TO VISIT SOUTH AFRICA.

London, July 29.
A squadron of four first class cruisers under Admiral Sir Percy Scott is to visit South Africa this autumn, during the national convention. In the Colonial Office debate Colonel Seely stated that the Government would take every step to render due dignity to the occasion.

THE OPIUM QUESTION IN HONGKONG.

Colonel Seely, speaking in the House of Commons, and referring to the criticisms of the Government's action concerning opium in Hongkong, said the Government did its best to get the views of those conversant with the questions in England, but it was quite impossible to obtain anything like reasoned opinions. The authorities in Hongkong, before the announcement of the Government's policy, in the carrying out of which the Government would act throughout with the advice of the Governor, trusted they would be able to satisfy the House that the best opinion in Hongkong and the Governor's coincided with the Government's.

TURKEY.

A telegram states that the Sultan has sworn allegiance on the Korean to the new Constitution in the presence of the Sheikh-ul-Islam.

THE TURKISH PARLIAMENT.

Later.
The Turkish Parliament will be convened on Nov. 1st.

THE OLD AGE PENSIONS BILL.

The Houses of Lords has adopted the amendment of Lord Cromer with regard to pensions, limiting their operation to seven years on the ground of the liability entailed upon the country.

THE INDEPENDENT DEMOCRATS.

At Chicago the Convention of Hearst's Independent Party nominated Hisgen for the Presidency in opposition to Taft and Bryan.

FATAL MOTOR-CAR ACCIDENT.

Later.
Georges Sand's stepson William Vanderbilt was pinned down by an overturned motor-car at Poissy in France and was burned alive.

CRICKET.

The Leicestershire v. Notts cricket match at Leicester has been postponed.

(BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH THE "TOKYO ASAHI SHIMBUN.")

THE SITUATION AT TABRIZ.

London, July 24.
Special telegrams from Tabriz say that the fighting has been lulled. The anti-Royalists are using armed persuasion to collect funds. The last part of the Shah's infantry has left for Telieran. They are destitute of travelling expenses and are raising them by charitable subscriptions.

THE BRITISH FORCES.

Mr. Haldane, Secretary for War, speaking with regard to the new territorial army, declared that the country possessed a proportionate and complete machine. England would shortly have 30 divisions to defend the empire, independently of her colonial forces. The navy would be still stronger in 1909 for reasons which it was not desirable to dwell on. A powerful navy was also necessary in the second line.

THE TURKISH REFORMS.

London, July 25.
In connexion with the granting of a constitution by the Sultan, a well-informed Constantinople correspondent states that the provincial authorities have been invited to elect deputies, in accordance with the decree of 1876 providing a responsible ministry, a senate, and a chamber, freedom to the press and to public meeting, life judges and compulsory primary education.

FALLIERES AT STOCKHOLM.

The French President has arrived on a battleship and was received as on a full state visit. This is regarded as indicating French approval of Swedish policy with regard to neutrality.

THE SULTAN'S SHREWDSNESS.

The Times points out the shrewdness of the Sultan who, seeing the revolutionary Young Turkey movement spreading in the army and realising his own helplessness, suddenly grants a constitution. The immediate consequence is a complication of the Macedonian problem, since the new Administration must be given time.

THE QUEBEC CELEBRATIONS.

London, July 26.
A special from Quebec says the tercentenary celebrations continue. On Saturday there was a grand review of the British, French and American warships by the Prince of Wales, and a historical pageant on the Plains of Abraham. At a state dinner speeches were delivered emphasizing the loyalty of the colonies to the mother country, and the unity of the Empire.

FALLIERES AT REVAL.

St. Petersburg.—The entire press acclaims the arrival of the French President at Reval. On Monday he inspected the battleships and cruisers assembled in his honour.

A RUSSIAN IDEA OF TURKEY'S REFORMS.

The Russian Ambassador at Constantinople doubts the sincerity of the Sultan's concessions. He is convinced that the new Constitution does not imply any serious reform.

THE REVAL MEETING.

London, July 27.
A special telegram to The Times states that the Reval meeting between the Tsar and President Fallieres was characterised by a long private conference on board the French warship Verité. It is understood that it was largely concerned with the relations between England, France and Russia on one hand and Germany on the other. The meeting constituted a re-affirmation of the Dual Alliance.

QUEBEC.

The Prince of Wales, in a conversation with The Times special correspondent at Quebec, declared that the visit made him feel the absolute necessity of increased effort to make the people at home understand the greatness and the opportunities of Canada and England's other big colonies.

GERMAN AERIAL LEAGUE.

Berlin.—An Aerial League has been founded in Germany, with objects similar to those of the Naval League, for the purpose of aero-motor construction, and the acquisition of air ships for the defence of German interests at home and abroad.

THE TURKISH SITUATION.

London, July 30.
Constantinople.—There is general satis-

saction at the announcement that the Sultan has sworn fidelity to the Constitution. The reformers recognise the Government's difficulties and are urging the people to cease demonstrations.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

Japanese stocks are supported on the London market.

HEARST'S PARTY.

New York.—The Independent Party at Chicago has nominated Hisgen, the oil refiner, for President after an unsuccessful attempt to stampede the Convention in Bryan's favour.

(RECEIVED AT THE FOREIGN OFFICE)

FLOODS IN MANCHURIA.

The Vice-Consul at Tieling telegraphs:—"The rainy season prevails at Tieling now. From 10 a.m. on the 25th for more than two hours there was a violent downpour. The region without the south gate to the west gate was completely flooded; the houses were inundated and the whole district became a river. Quantities of timber floated down. The wall was broken through a length of 8 yards at the west gate and the water flowed into the city. There were no casualties to men or beasts. The Chinese officials are consulting about the necessary steps.

THE HONGKONG STORM.

The casualties in the great storm at Hongkong were as follows:—

Steamers blown ashore and injured...	12
Steamers sunk or injured (at their moorings?) including one belonging to Mitsui Company.....	20
British torpedo driven ashore .....	1
Cargo-boats and lighter sunk or injured .....	41
Junks sunk .....	100 (about).
Lives lost .....	1,000 (about).

One steamer bound for Canton wrecked, and the greater part of her 300 passengers lost.

(FROM THE "ASAHI SHIMBUN.")

PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION.

New York, July 22.

Mr. Bryan has become more and more popular. All the labourers are eagerly endeavouring to elect him. Their representatives have been conducting negotiations with him at his residence for some days past.

Mr. Bryan has proposed to the Republican Party to publish at once the names of those who contribute money to the election expenses. The Republican Party replied that the names should be published after the election.

AMERICAN NAVAL MEETING.

President Roosevelt, with his family, left Oyster Bay by the yacht Mayflower on the evening of July 21st, arriving at Newport at 9 a.m. on the following day. President Roosevelt at once attended a meeting of American naval officers and made a speech. At the meeting, various proposals with regard to the designs and construction of warships and other important naval affairs were considered. The President will return to Oyster Bay on the morning of July 23rd.

MR. ASANO.

Mr. S. Asano, President of the Toyo Kisen Kaisha, left New York on July 22nd for England.

AMERICAN BUSINESS MEN TO VISIT JAPAN.

San Francisco, July 23.

American business men belonging to the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce have decided to visit Japan on invitation of the five prominent Chambers of Commerce in Japan. They will leave San Francisco Sept. 25th, and intend to leave Japan on or about Nov. 4th.

AMERICA AND CHINA.

Negotiations between America and China to form an arbitration treaty are in good progress. The proposed convention will be signed in the near future. The nature of the treaty resembles that between America and Japan.

TROUBLE IN BELGIUM.

A plot to assassinate the King of Belgium has been discovered, a number of persons being arrested. There are said to be many accomplices still unarrested.

THE AMERICAN FLEET.

The American fleet left Honolulu at 6 p.m. on July 22nd for New Zealand.

MR. TAFT.

President Roosevelt has approved the draft of Mr. Taft's speech containing 12,000 words accepting his nomination as a candidate. The draft refers to home administration and foreign affairs.

THE AMERICAN NAVY.

New York, July 22.

President Roosevelt delivered a speech at the meeting of high American naval officers in the Newport Naval College. The essential features of the address were as follows:

We wish for the sake of peace that the American navy, from officers to bluejackets, shall be always ready for emergency. The United States does not like war, but in the event of war she must inflict on the enemy such a blow that he will surrender with the white flag. Some persons think that the navy is sufficiently strong if it can defend the coast. But this view should not be admitted. If a navy has no surplus strength beyond that required for defending the coast line, then it is a useless navy. Coast defence requires a complete line of fortifications and the ships must be given a free hand. That is, they must enjoy the freedom of pursuing and over-hauling the enemy's vessels, without the distraction of defending the coast. This is an effective way of using the navy. If we had not acquired the Philippines then there would have been no defect in the present condition of the navy. Moreover, if we want to retain effectively the maintenance of Panama and Alaska we must have a strong navy. The Monroe doctrine is in disgrace to-day. Unless the United States has a strong navy, the Monroe doctrine will have no value at all. America is still young and progresses by day and by month. The Powers of the world are therefore envious and suspicious towards us. But the right to restrain or check foreign malicious hate lies in our hands. We must protect our labourers, and in order to do so, we must have a strong naval force.

MR. TAFT.

New York, July 23.

Mr. Taft visited President Roosevelt to day at Oyster Bay in company with three or four Representatives, in order to have a consultation with him with regard to the commencement of the election campaign and the publication of the platform. The first speech of Mr. Taft will be made on July 27th at Cincinnati.

MR. BRYAN AND MR. HEARST.

The Independent Democrats under the leadership of Mr. Hearst have declared that they will not support Mr. W. J. Bryan but will nominate another candidate.

STANDARD OIL CO.

San Francisco, July 24.

The law case of the Standard Oil Company, in which the firm was sentenced to a fine of $29,000,000 will be re-tried. President Roosevelt, who is of the view that the firm is guilty, has ordered the Attorney-General to make an investigation of the case.

MR. SHERMAN.

Mr. Sherman who has been nominated by the Republican Party as candidate for Vice-President is severely ill. Probably he will resign the nomination.

PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION.

San Francisco, July 25.

The Independent Democrats, it seems, intend to appoint Mr. Hearst as candidate. Nevertheless, Mr. Hearst who arrived in New York to-day from his visit to Europe declared that he would not accept the nomination. If the party does not appoint a candidate, it will be regarded as a gain to Mr. Bryan.

Mr. Hughes, Governor of New York, is willing to accept re-election as he has work which he intends to accomplish during a longer term of his office.

JAPANESE FISHERY IN ALASKA.

San Francisco, July 26.

According to a report from the American gunboat Yorktown, watching the neighbourhood of the Pribylow group, to the American Naval Department, the areas of the fishery are generally quiet. Five Japanese fishing vessels in the neighbourhood of St. Paul isle are about to come into the zone of prohibition. Consequently there is anxiety lest a dispute should occur between the Japanese and Americans.

THE PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION.

San Francisco, July 27.

The Independent Democrats under the leadership of Mr. Hearst held a meeting on the evening of July 27th at Chicago. They decided to adopt a radical view on the question with regard to injunctions. The Democrats have asked them to support Mr. W. J. Bryan. The Independent Democrats, however, refused. Probably they will appoint a candidate from among themselves.

THE VENEZUELA AFFAIR.

The Dutch Government has ordered its warships in American waters to proceed at once to Venezuela in order to bombard the coasts of that country if President Castro refuses to apologise to the Dutch Government. The strong step taken by Holland is being appreciated in America. It is expected that President Castro will at length change his obstinate attitude.

EUROPEAN POLITICS.

London, July 29.

The denial by the British Foreign Secretary, Sir Edward Grey, that the friendship of England with France and Russia is intended to isolate Germany, leads The Times to declare that the real danger to Great Britain exists in the aspirations held in some influential quarters. Germany's national duty is to watch and make all needful preparations.

TAFT'S SPEECH.

Washington.—Mr. Taft's speech in reply to the deputation announcing his nomination has produced an excellent effect, because of his crisp treatment of current problems and his well-reasoned attack upon the Democratic platform.

THE INDEPENDENT DEMOCRATS.

New York, July 28.

Mr. Hearst made a speech on July 28th at a meeting of the Independent Democrats in Chicago, and declared that the party should maintain its independent attitude for the forthcoming presidential election, adding that the Republican Party was always supporting the Trusts and most of their principles were against the general views of the nation. The attitude of the Democratic Party seemed to be impartial and also to be better than the Republican Party though there was no special distinction between them. Finally he said that he would support neither the Democrats nor Republicans. Mr. Hearst's Inches	4½ me. Yen.	5 me. Yen.	5½ me. Yen.	6 me. Yen.

19½"	—	—	—	—
22½"	8.40	8.00	8.00	—
27"	9.00	8.50	8.30	—
36"	8.65	8.10	8.10	—

KAWAMATA.

Inches.	3 me.	3 1/2 me.	4 me.	4 1/2 me.
19 1/2	8.70	9.50	10.60	11.20
22 1/2	10.10	10.70	11.40	12.00
27	10.70	11.80	12.60	14.00
36	14.20	15.20	16.50	18.20

SILK HANDKERCHIEFS.

There is no alteration; yet prices are firm as a slight rise has taken place in habutaye.

Plain Habutae (Hem stitched.)	Yen.
20" x 1 1/2" 6	3.25-3.37
22" x 1 1/2" 7	4.25-4.52
24" x 1 1/2" 7 1/2	5.10-5.40
Figured Habutae (Hem stitched.)	Yen.
20" x 1 1/2" 9	4.30-4.50
22" x 1 1/2" 10	5.30-5.60
24" x 1 1/2" 12	7.20-7.40
Figured Habutae (scalloped).—	Yen.
10" x 1 corner embroidered	0.95-1.00
12" x 4	1.15-1.20

COPPER.

The Market is still unsettled through recent London telegrams reported that business had become brisk. It is reported from Kobe that stocks of electric refined copper are scarce.

According to a London telegram under date July 27th, the quotation was £60.0.0.
Refined per 100 kin. ... Yen 45-49
Lessemer per 100 kin. ... 52-50
Electric refined per 100 kin. ... 53-57

TEA.

The third crop of tea has been brought to the market. The quality is relatively better than that of the first and second. Generally speaking, the business in this line has been successful this year.

From the first offering of new tea in Yokohama up to July 28th 6,749,300 kin were sold and the stock on Thursday aggregated 411,800 kin.

QUOTATIONS.

Choice	Y.	65	upward
Choice	60	10	65
Finest	55	10	60
Fine	50	10	55
Good Medium	45	10	50
Medium	32	10	34
Good Common	29	10	32
Common	26	10	29

RICE.

The market is quiet owing to the favourable weather.

	koku .
Domestic rice in Fukagawa	537.675
Foreign rice in Fukagawa	154.479
Delivery.	Closing Price.
July	Yen. 16.73
August	16.95
September	16.95

RICE AT WHOLESALE: STANDARD PRICE.

	(Tokyo)	per koku .
Superior	Yen 17.80
Medium	16.90
Common	16.00
Average	16.90
	(Osaka.)	(Kobe.)
July	16.60	16.24
August	16.68	16.55
September	16.70	16.65

EXCHANGE.

Yokohama July 31
London silver, lower and China sterling quotations not yet received but no change has been made in local rates for the mail via Siberia. To-morrow all the Banks will be closed to Exchange and on Monday for the Summer Holiday.

London—Bank T.T.	1/4 3/4
— " Bills on demand	1/4 1/2
— " 4 months' sight	1/4 1/2
— " Private 4 months' sight	1/4 1/2
— " 6 months' sight	1/4 3/4
Paris & Lyons—Bank sight	1/5 1/2
— " Private 4 months' sight	1/5 1/2
— " 6 months' sight	1/5 1/2
Hongkong—Bank sight	per $100 88 1/2
— " Private 10 days' sight	86 1/2
Shanghai—Bank sight	84 1/2
— " Private 10 days' sight	84 1/2
India—Bank sight	15 1/2
— " Private 30 days' sight	15 1/2
America—Bank sight	49 1/2
— " Private 30 days' sight	50 1/2
— " Private 4 months' sight	51 1/2
Germany—Bank sight	207
— " Private 4 months' sight	211 1/2
Bar Silver (London)	24 1/2

* Nominal.

FUKUSHIMA & Co., BROKERS & DEALERS IN BONDS & SHARES, FINANCIAL AGENTS, &c.
Tokyo, July 21st, 1908.

BONDS AND STOCKS.	Face Value.	Paid Up.	Dividend Per Annum.	Dividend Payable.	Average Quotations.	Remarks.
Bonds and Debentures.
EXCHEQUER BONDS 1st	100	100	5	June to December	99.80
EXCHEQUER BONDS 2nd	100	100	5	March to September	96.80
EXCHEQUER BONDS 3rd	100	100	5	March to September	96.00
NEW IMPERIAL BONDS ISSUED 1906	100	100	5	June to December	83.80
Tobacco Monopoly Bonds (Mark 2=E)	100	100	5	June to December	94.50
Tobacco Monopoly Bonds (Mark 2=E)	100	100	5	June to December	92.50
* Tobacco Monopoly Bonds (Mark 2=H)	100	100	5	June to December	84.20
CONSOLIDATION LOAN BONDS (SEIRI)	100	100	5	June to December	82.90
WAR LOAN BONDS (GUNJI)	100	100	5	June to December	82.90
5% IMPERIAL LOAN BONDS (GOBURI)	100	100	5	March to September	83.10
Yokohama Water Works Bonds	100	100	6	June to December	91.50
Yokohama City Works Bonds	100	100	6	June to December	90.50
Osaka Harbour Construction Bonds	100	100	6	June to December	88.30
Kobe Water Works Bonds	100	100	6	June to December	94.00
Kawasaki Shipbuilding Yard's Debentures	100	100	6	June to December	90.00
Osaka Steam Ship Co.'s Debentures	100	100	6	June to December	91.00
Banks.
Nippon Ginko (Bank of Japan)	200	200	12	February to August	529.00
Kogyo Ginko (First class)	50	50	7 1/2	June to December	55.32
(Second class)	50	37.50	7 1/2	June to December	41.52
YOKOHAMA SPECIE BANK	100	100	12	February to August	199.12
Taiwan Ginko (Bank of Formosa)	100	100	10	February to August	135.00
Railway &amp; Electric Tramway Co.'s
Nippon Railway Co.	50	50	11 1/2	June to December	87.50	E.D.
3rd Issue New	50	35	11 1/2	June to December	61.20	"
Sanyo Railway Co.	50	50	11	March to September	74.62
Kwansai Railway Co.	50	50	5.9	March to September	42.60
Kyushu Railway Co.	50	50	9.7	March to September	69.45
Hokkaido Tanko Steamship Co.	50	50	14	June to December	80.52	E.D.
(New Issue)	50	12.50	14	June to December	20.00	"
Tokio Railway Co.	50	50	7	May to November	56.52
New	50	25	7	May to November	27.30
KEIHIN ELECTRIC TRAMWAY CO.	50	50	10	May to November	63.52
YOKOHAMA ELECTRIC TRAMWAY CO.	50	50	6	May to November	36.00
Hanshin Electric Tramway Co.	50	50	12	April to October	90.00
Electric Light and Gas Co.'s.
TOKYO ELECTRIC LIGHT CO.	50	50	10	May to November	63.50
New	50	25	10	May to November	31.80
YOKOHAMA ELECTRIC LIGHT CO.	50	50	14	May to November	63.00	E.D.
New	50	20	14	May to November	28.80	"
Osaka Electric Light Co.	50	50	15	June to December	103.00
Kobe Electric Light Co.	50	50	13	June to December	68.50	E.D.
Uji-gawa Electric Co.	50	12 1/2	10.	March to September	6.20
TOKYO GAS CO.	50	50	13	June to December	78.30	E.D.
New, 2nd Issue	50	12.50	13	June to December	26.70	E.D.
Osaka Gas Co.	50	50	8	June to December	77.50	E.D.
Steamship and Dockyard Co.'s.
Japan Mail Steam Ship Co. (N.Y.K.K.)	50	50	12	April to October	77.10
Oriental Steam Ship Co. (T.K.K.K.)	50	50	12	February to August	32.80
Osaka Steamship Co. (Osaka Shosen K.K.)	25	25	6	June to December	14.10	E.D.
YOKOHAMA DOCK CO.	50	33	12	May to November	48.00	"
Uruga Dock Co.	50	50	10.	June to December	10.00
Kawasaki Ship Building Yard	50	50	12 1/2	May to November	51.52
Spinning and Weaving Co.'s.
KANEGAFUCHI COTTON SPINNING CO.	50	50	16	June to December	81.80	E.D.
News	50	12 1/2	16	June to December	24.30	"
Tokyo Cotton Spinning Co.	50	50	8	June to December	31.52	"
FUJI GASIAN COTTON SPINNING CO.	50	50	18	June to December	80.80	"
Imperial Hemp Weaving Co.	50	50	12	June to December	51.00	"
New	50	25	12	June to December	25.30	"
Nisshin Spinning Co.	50	12.50	10.	May to November	7.70
Exchange.
TOKYO STOCK EXCHANGE	50	50	10	May to November	108.52
Tokyo Rice Exchange	50	50	15	May to November	60.00
Osaka Stock Exchange	50	50	9	May to November	97.50
Osaka Rice Exchange	50	50	9 1/2	June to December	62.00	E.D.
Brewery Co.'s.
DAI NIPPON BEER BREWERY CO.	50	50	15	June to December	23.52	E.D.
Japan Beer Brewery Co. (Kirin)	50	50	8	June to December	60.00	"
Godown Companies.
YOKOHAMA CHIUO GODOWN CO., LTD.	50	50	12	June to December	50.50
Yokohama Boeki Godown Co., Lt.	20	20	15	June to December	26.50	E.D.
Fire Insurance Co.'s.
Tokyo Fire Insurance Co., Ltd.	50	12	10.	June	11.50	E.D.
YOKOHAMA FIRE & TRANS. INS. CO. LTD.	50	12	16	May	16.80	"
Meiji Fire Insurance Co., Ltd.	50	50	20	March	220.00
Oil Co.'s.
Hoden Oil Co.	50	50	36	March to September	99.20
Nippon Oil Co.	50	50	24	June to December	81.52	E.D.
Nanboku Oil Co.	50	50	8.8	June to December	36.50	"
Sugar Manufacturing Co.'s.
* Dai-Nippon Sugar Refinery Co.	50	50	15	April to October	67.70
New	50	12 1/2	15	April to October	19.52
Taiwan Sugar Manufacturing Co.	50	50	10	June	55.00	E.D.
New	50	25	10	June	25.50	"
Ensuikow Sugar Manufacturing Co.	50	12 1/2	20	June	15.60	"

S. Sellers, B. Buyers, St. Steady, N. Nominal, E.D. Ex dividend. † Ex New ‡ Cannot be held by foreigners in their own names.

MAIL STEAMERS.

NEXT MAIL IS DUE

From	Line	Steamer	Date
Hongkong	C. P. R.	Em. of China	M. Aug. 3
Hongkong	B. T.	Suvaric	Tu. Aug. 4
Seattle	N. Y. K.	Iyo Maru 1	Th. Aug. 6
Europe	N. D. L.	P. R. Luipold 2	F. Aug. 7
America	P. M.	Korea 3	Su. Aug. 9
Hongkong	O. & O.	Asia	Tu. Aug. 11
Europe	M. M.	Yarra	W. Aug. 12
Tacoma	B. T.	Shawmut	Th. Aug. 13
Hongkong	P. & A.	Numantia	Sa. Aug. 15
America	T. K. K.	America Maru	W. Aug. 19
Vancouver	C. P. R.	Em. of Japan	W. Aug. 19
Hongkong	P. M.	Mongolia	Tu. Aug. 18
Hongkong	C. P. R.	Glenfarg	Th. Aug. 20
Portland	P. & A.	Nicomedia	Sa. Aug. 22
Hongkong	T. K. K.	Hongkong Maru	Su. Aug. 22
America	P. M.	Siberia	F. Aug. 23
Hongkong	T. K. K.	Tenyo Maru	Th. Aug. 28
Vancouver	C. P. R.	Monteagle	M. Aug. 31
America	P. M.	China	Th. Sept. 3
Hongkong	P. M.	Korea	W. Sept. 9

1 Left Seattle on the 21st inst.
 1 Left Hongkong on the 29th inst.
 3 Left San Francisco on the 23rd inst.

NEXT MAIL LEAVES

For	Line	Steamer	Date
Europe	N. D. L.	Scharnhorst	Sa. Aug. 1
Shanghai	N. Y. K.	Chikugo Maru	Su. Aug. 2
Vancouver	C. P. R.	Em. of China	M. Aug. 3
Europe	N. Y. K.	Kawachi Maru	W. Aug. 5
Seattle	N. Y. K.	Shinano Maru	W. Aug. 5
Europe	M. M.	Armand Behic	Sa. Aug. 8
Hongkong	N. Y. K.	Iyo Maru	M. Aug. 10
Hongkong	P. M.	Korea	M. Aug. 10
America	O. & O.	Asia	Su. Aug. 13
Hongkong	B. T.	Shawmut	F. Aug. 14
Tacoma	B. T.	Suvaric	F. Aug. 14
Portland	P. & A.	Numantia	Su. Aug. 16
Hongkong	C. P. R.	Em. of Japan	W. Aug. 19
America	P. M.	Mongolia	W. Aug. 19
Vancouver	C. P. R.	Glenfarg	Th. Aug. 20
Hongkong	T. K. K.	America Maru	Th. Aug. 20
Australia	N. Y. K.	Yawata Maru	Sa. Aug. 22
Hongkong	P. & A.	Nicomedia	Su. Aug. 23
America	T. K. K.	Hongkong Maru	M. Aug. 24
Hongkong	P. M.	Siberia	Sa. Aug. 29
America	T. K. K.	Tenyo Maru	Su. Aug. 30
Hongkong	C. P. R.	Monteagle	M. Aug. 31
Hongkong	P. M.	China	Sa. Sept. 5

LATEST SHIPPING.

ARRIVALS.

Matilda Korner, German steamer, 1,847, M. D. Clere, 24th July.—Saigon, Rice —
Peleus, British steamer, 4,800, W. T. Hannah, 25th July.—Tacoma and Victoria, Mails and General.—Butterfield & Swire.
Minnesota, American steamer, 13,323, Chas. Austin, 26th July.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—G. N. S. S. Co.
Kagoshima Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,731, N. Teranaka, 26th July.—Otaru via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Scharnhorst, German steamer, 5,058, L. Maass, 25th July.—Hamburg via ports, Mails and General.—H. Ahrens & Co., Nachf.
Franklyn, British steamer, 3,161, S. Pratt, 26th July.—New York via Yokkaichi, Kerosene Oil.—Standard Oil Co.
Nippon Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,437, Green, 26th July.—Hongkong, Mails and General.—Toyo Kisen Kaisha.
Chinghai, British steamer, 1,459, Brown, 27th July.—Australian ports via Hongkong, General.—Butterfield & Swire.
Finna, British tank steamer, 4,100, Fairfield, 27th July.—Gaviota, Kerosene Oil.—Toyo Kisen Kaisha.
Tenyo Maru, Japanese steamer, 6,670, P. H. Going, 28th July.—San Francisco via Honolulu, Mails and General.—Toyo Kisen Kaisha.
Higo Maru, Japanese steamer, 882, Asakawa, 28th July.—Bonin Island, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Riojan Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,980, Tibbals, 28th July.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Zanoni, British steamer, 2,477, S. Driver, 28th July.—Christmas Island, Phosphate.—Cormes & Co.
Katei Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,155, S. Oumi, 28th July.—Takao, General.—Osaka Shosen Kaisha.
Colombo Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,920, 28th July.—Middlesbro, Antwerp and London via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Chikugo Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,458, W. A. Evans, 29th July.—Shanghai via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Empress of India, British steamer, 3,003, E. Beetham

Lea and Perrins' Sauce.

By Royal Warrant
to
His Majesty the King.

THE ORIGINAL AND GENUINE WORCESTERSHIRE.

29th July.—Vancouver, B.C., Mails and General.—C. P. R. Co.

Armand Behic, French steamer, 2,819, Guionnet, 29th July.—Marseilles via ports, Mails and General.—M. M. Co.

Hazel Dellar, British steamer, 2,804, M. Ridley, 30th July.—Shanghai via ports, General.—Samuel & Co.

Mennon, British steamer, 2,046, Jones, 30th July.—Saigon, Rice.—Samuel & Co.

Chenau, British steamer, 1,350, H. E. Laver, 30th July.—Shanghai via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.

Manchuria, American steamer, 8,750, J. W. Saunders, 30th July.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—P. M. S. S. Co.

Marchona, British steamer, 2,665, H. D. Tarver, 30th July.—Muroran, Sale and Frazer.

Silasia, Austrian steamer, 3,340, Radonicich, 30th July.—Fiume and Trieste via ports, General.—Heller Bros.

DEPARTURES.

Tijikong, Dutch steamer, 3,052, N. V. W. Jurriaanse, 23rd July.—Macassar via ports, General.—Ed. L. van Nierop & Co.

Touraine, French steamer, 2,338, Lancelin, 25th July.—Marseilles via ports, Mails and General.—M. M. Co.

Mikawa Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,853, E. Combes, 25th July.—Otaru via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Dacre Castle, British steamer, 2,655, Smith, 25th July.—New York via ports, General.—Dodwell & Co., Ltd.

Anhui, British steamer, 1,350, A. H. Harris, 25th July.—Shanghai via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.

Kumano Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,147, N. Mathieson, 25th July.—Sydney and Melbourne via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Peleus, British steamer, 4,800, W. T. Hannah, 26th July.—Hongkong via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.

Chikusan Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,458, N. Shimizu, 26th July.—Shanghai via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Yamashiro Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,519, M. Abe, 26th July.—Kobe, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Kagoshima Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,731, N. Teranaka, 26th July.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Benlurg, British steamer, 2,510, A. Wallace, 26th July.—Koh-si-ching, Ballast.—Cormes & Co.

Aki Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,995, M. Yagi, 27th July.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Carvellus, French steamer, 1,971, Le Clere, 27th July.—Hongkong via Kobe, General.—Chargeurs Reunis.

Mendacus, British steamer, 3,006, R. G. Woodget, 28th July.—London, Amsterdam and Antwerp via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.

Katsang, British steamer, 3,110, R. E. Bradley, 28th July.—Calcutta via ports, General.—Jardine Matheson & Co.

Nubia, British steamer, 3,824, F. J. Fox, 29th July.—London and Antwerp via ports, General.—P. & O. S. N. Co.

Matilda Korner, German steamer, 1,847, Brenner, 29th July.—Mojito.—Japanese.

Kamo Maru, Japanese steamer, 5,284, F. L. Sommer, 29th July.—London, Antwerp and Middlesbro via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Minnesota, American steamer, 13,323, Chas. Austin, 29th July.—Seattle, Wash., Mails and General.—G. N. S. S. Co.

Sakata Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,369, K. Sato, 29th July.—Newchwang via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Empress of India, British steamer, 3,003, E. Beetham, 29th July.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—C. P. R. Co.

Tenyo Maru, Japanese steamer, 6,670, P. H. Going, 30th July.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—Toyo Kisen Kaisha.

Hakuai Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,434, T. Sekine, 30th July.—Shanghai via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Riojan Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,980, T. Tibbals, 30th July.—Otaru via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Colombo Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,920, R. Takeda, 30th July.—Muroran.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

BOVRIL

gives you Strength.

(毎土曜日一回發行)
 總發行人 兼 支店 兼 代理人 エフ・アイングラー
 支店 兼 代理人 ロバート・ヘー
 發行所 橫濱市山下町五十五番
 〇ヤツバシメール新聞社

The Japan Weekly Mail

毎土曜日 A REVIEW OF JAPANESE COMMERCE, POLITICS, LITERATURE, AND ART. 一週刊行

No. 61

REGISTERED AT THE G.P.O.
AS A NEWSPAPER.

YOKOHAMA, AUG. 8TH, 1908.

明治廿五年三月廿日
第三種郵便物認可

VOL. L.

CONTENTS.

Summary of News .....	140
The Mercantile Marine of Japan .....	150
The Question of the Trans-Pacific Trade .....	151
Korea .....	151
Finance .....	151
China .....	151
"Miye Maru" .....	151
The Cleaning Houses .....	151
Official Secrecy .....	151
The Hokkaido Railway .....	151
Manchuria .....	151
Chientao .....	151
The Tokyo Municipality .....	151
The Eastern Colonization Company .....	151
Business Notes .....	151
The "Novoe Vremya" .....	151
The Tokyo Stock Exchange .....	151
Notes on Current Events .....	151
Hanari Yama .....	151
The Priests of Race Clubs .....	151
The Boatswain .....	151
Yachting .....	151
Mr. Yasumoto Kumpei on Universal Suffrage in Japan .....	151
British and Foreign Navies .....	151
Baseball .....	151
Girls' Club Evening Fête .....	151
The Grand Hotel, Limited .....	151
Yokohama Amateur Rowing Club .....	151
Messrs. Samuel Samuel & Co.'s New Building .....	151
The Tokyo Industrial Bank .....	151
The Imperial Court .....	151
Yokohama .....	151
Y.A.R.C. Open Air Concert .....	151
P. & O. Service .....	151
News of the Week .....	151
The Island of Encshima .....	151
Telegrams .....	151
Latest Commercial .....	151
Latest Shipping .....	151

"FAIS CE QUE DOIS: ADVIENNE QUE POURRA!"

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

No notice will be taken of anonymous correspondence. What is intended for insertion in the "JAPAN WEEKLY MAIL" must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer, not for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

It is particularly requested that all letters on business be addressed to the MANAGER, and cheques be made payable to same; and that literary contributions be addressed to the EDITOR.

YOKOHAMA: SATURDAY, AUG. 8TH, 1908.

BIRTH.

On August 1st, at 166, Bluff, Yokohama, the wife of WILLIOTT HARSANT LEWIS, of a Daughter.

SUMMARY OF NEWS.

A TORPEDO has been found by fishermen off the district of Hodzu, Mikawa province.

THE volcano Asama, Nagano prefecture, is said to have been active during the past few days.

It is rumoured that Mr. Son Yat-Sen, the leader of the Chinese revolutionaries, has arrived in Nagasaki.

Y. SUZUKI, a farmer, sentenced to death for robbery and murder, was executed on Aug. 4th in the Tokyo Gaol.

THE steamer Kosho Maru (561 tons) has gone ashore at Nikolaisk and was subsequently wrecked. The crew was saved.

THE Emperor of Korea has decorated Princess Ito, the consort of the Resident-General, with the First Order of the Sacred Phoenix.

MR. CARPENTIER has been appointed French Vice-Consul in Kobe. On July 31st, the Japanese Foreign Office issued his exequatur.

MR. T. NOSSE, Japanese Consul General in Ottawa, now in Tokyo on leave, has been released from his consular duties and appointed to the Foreign Office.

ON the morning of Aug. 3rd a farmer living in the district of North Tama not far from Tokyo attempted to murder another farmer and his wife, inflicting severe injuries with a cooking knife. The offender committed suicide at once with a revolver. No reports are to hand as to the cause.

DR. ROBERT KOCH, now in Kyoto, is said to be slightly ill, being unable to appear at an entertainment given by the Japanese doctors of the city in his honour.

A PASSENGER train collided with a locomotive at the Kumamoto Station on the Kyushu Railway. Both locomotives were damaged and a passenger was slightly injured.

ON Aug. 5th, two bags of new rice were brought from the district of North Katsushika, Saitama prefecture, to Tokyo. The complimentary price was yen 21 per koku.

A SAPPORO telegram under date of Aug. 4th says that owing to dense fog, a steamer was wrecked off Kushiro. Of the crew, five were drowned and one is missing.

BARON HAYASHI, Ambassador to the Royal Italian Court, will leave on Sept. 16th for his post. Baron Chinda, Ambassador to Berlin, will leave at the beginning of the same month for Germany.

SOME workmen employed at the Tashiro coal mine in Fukushima prefecture struck work on Aug. 4th asking for an increase of wages. A number of policemen were sent from Fukushima to deal with the affair.

MR. SUGIRANI, Assistant General Manager of the Mitsu Bishi Dockyard and Engine Works, has been appointed Manager of the Mitsu Bishi's Kobe yard and will be succeeded at Nagasaki by Mr. Shiota from Kobe.

ACCORDING to latest investigations, the population of Yokohama and other places in Kanagawa prefecture is as follows: Yokohama, 378,884; Yokosuka, 62,876; Odawara, 18,615; Uraga, 17,471; and Urago, 12,185.

THE steamer Ono Maru V. (438 tons) went ashore at Naihō, Etorofu, at 2 p.m. on Aug. 4th, being subsequently wrecked. The cause is not yet reported. She was insured with the Nippon Marine Insurance Co. for yen 13,000.

A TELEGRAM from Uwajima says that at 10.30 p.m. on July 31st a large comet was observed, with an apparent motion from south to north. When it first appeared, its refulgence was equal to that of the moon, then little past the new.

COUNT KOMURA, Japanese Ambassador in London, arrived in St. Petersburg at 8.25 a.m. on August 1st. The same afternoon he visited the Russian Minister for Foreign Affairs. On Aug. 4th, he will leave for Dairen on his way home.

S. KOSAKA, a well-known raw silk manufacturer living in the district of Ina, Shinshu, committed suicide at the office of the Shinyei-Kaishi, Kobe, by fatally injuring himself in the throat with a revolver. The cause is said to have been failure in business.

A HONGKONG telegram to the Shanghai Mercury on July 24 said that Mr. Charles Collett, manager in Hongkong of Messrs. Wallen and Co., shipping brokers, etc., whose head office is in Shanghai, had committed suicide by shooting himself with a revolver early the same morning.

THE Privy Council held a conference at 9 a.m. on July 30th at which meeting Count Higashi Kuze presided. The protocols of the proposed treaty with regard to the mutual protection of American and Japanese patents, trade-marks and copy rights in China, and Korea, were passed after Viscount Terauchi, Minister for War, and Baron Hirata, Minister for Home Affairs delivered short addresses on the bills.

ACCORDING to a telegram from Mr. Funakoshi, Japanese Chargé d'Affaires in Berlin, the Kaiser returned on July 29th from his visit to the northern provinces. His Majesty left on Aug. 1st for Sweden in company with the Kaiserin and the Minister for Foreign Affairs in order to return the recent visit of the King and Queen of that country.

A LARGE body of influential and wealthy gentry and merchants of Kirin are determined to get back into Chinese hands the control of the Changchun-Kirin Railway; and for this purpose the sum of Tls. 1,760,000 has been subscribed. Mr. Han Tingchi, a leading notable of Huatien district, Kirin, has subscribed Tls. 300,000 and offered to give more if more were needed for the patriotic object in view.

THE supply of water in Yokohama has been stopped during three hours from 8 to 11 a.m., every day. Officials of the Yokohama Water Works say that the supply in the reservoirs has been somewhat reduced owing to the continued hot weather. So long as this lasts, the time during which the supply will be stopped is likely to be extended. The demand for water amounts to about 6,400,000 gallons every day while the supply from source to reservoir is 5,500,000 gallons, making a shortage of 900,000 gallons every day.

FURTHER reports have been received in Yokohama with regard to the movements of the American Fleet. As already reported, the fleet will arrive at Yokohama on Oct. 17th, and will stay till the 24th. Subsequently the fleet will be divided into squadrons, namely the First and Second. The First Squadron will proceed to Manila, arriving there on Oct. 31st and the Second is due at Amoy on the 29th. The whole fleet will leave Manila on Nov. 7th for home via Suez. When the fleet will once again reach home waters is not yet known.

THE Specie Bank, the Yokohama branch of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha and eight other prominent firms of Yokohama have published a joint notification asking the citizens to subscribe money—not less than yen 10 each—to the American Fleet reception committee. The notification states that fifty years have elapsed since Yokohama was opened for foreign trade after the visit of the predecessors of the present Fleet, and therefore Yokohama citizens should be grateful to the Americans. This is the best opportunity for the citizens to return thanks by welcoming the visitors in every possible way. The reception committee have provided an office in the Yokohama Bank Club.

THE Yokohama Specie Bank will shortly hold a semi-annual general meeting where the detailed report of business done during the first half of this year will be presented to the shareholders. It is said that business in Manchuria was generally unsuccessful. The branches in Antung and Port Arthur sustained a loss. In consequence of the failure of some foreign firms in Yokohama and Kobe, and also in Tientsin, a certain degree of stringency was felt by the bank. The London business, however, was considerably more prosperous, realizing a profit substantially in excess of that for the previous half-year. The net profit was almost similar to that of the preceding year. The usual legal and special reserves will be made and an interim dividend declared at the previous rate—10 per cent per annum.

THE MERCANTILE MARINE OF JAPAN.

At the close of this fiscal year the State's subsidies to the mercantile marine's officially-ordered services will come up for renewal, and according to the Mainichi Shimbun there is some idea of cutting down the amount considerably. The critics allege that no country except France grants such generous subsidies to its mercantile marine as Japan does, and that although this course might be proper were the national finances in a flourishing condition, it is not consistent with present circumstances. They point out that there are three sources of subsidy, namely, grants in aid of special services and encouragement funds on account of navigation and of shipbuilding. These various forms of subvention seem to overlap somewhat, and there will evidently be an agitation for effecting a reduction. So far as we (Japan Mail) can see, the mercantile marine of Japan and the army are indissolubly related. The Japanese Government has to choose between one of two things. Either it must have a special service of military transports or it must dictate to its mercantile marine terms such as shall render the latter competent to furnish transports at any moment. The former method is largely though not wholly adopted in England. There is a fleet of military transports flying the Union Jack, and there are subsidised steamship companies whose vessels always hold themselves in readiness to act as transports. Besides, there is the enormous congeries of vessels plying to and from all parts of the world under the English flag, and upon these it is possible to make heavy drafts in case of need, without dislocating the regular services. But it is not competent for Japan to adopt the English system, yet at all events, England can use a fleet of military transports with advantage because she has troops stationed in the four quarters of the globe, and the duty of carrying exchanges and reliefs as well as munitions of war gives full employment to a number of ships. But with the exception of Formosa, Manchuria and Korea, which places may be said to be almost within a stone's throw of her shores, there are no over-sea localities where Japan is required to maintain a military force, and it would therefore be most uneconomical for her to adopt the system of military transports. She has to trust entirely to her mercantile marine, and it behoves her to consider very seriously whether she is prepared to cripple the continental efficiency of her army by a cheese-paring policy in the matter of her mercantile marine. Without the aid which the latter was able to furnish in 1904 and 1905 the war could never have been conducted to a successful issue, and if Japan, forgetful of that fact, adopts a parsimonious policy for the sake of saving 3 or 4 hundred thousand pounds annually out of the assistance granted to her mercantile marine, she must either reduce her army or incur the reproach of short-sightedness.

THE QUESTION OF THE TRANS-PACIFIC TRADE.

Friday, July 31.

The news transmitted this morning by Reuter with reference to the action of the Railways communicating with the western coast of America may lead to very important consequences. This complication is entirely due in the first place to a decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission in the sense that all railways carrying exports or imports must clearly state their rates of freight. To understand what this means one has to note that the practice hitherto has been to charge through rates on such goods. A through rate in this case means that a railway's charge and a steamship's charge are lumped together, the two carriers agreeing between themselves as to the manner of dividing this money between them, but not taking the public into their confidence with regard to the mode of division. Of course the prime object of such an arrangement is to facilitate competition with the Suez route, which is already handicapped by the greater length of time goods travelling by it take to reach their destination. It fell out, however, that out of the total sum collected the part allotted to the Railways was discovered to be less than the prices charged by them in interstate traffic. That is to say, the Railways were carrying over-sea goods to and from the coast at rates cheaper than they charged on inland goods. This differentiation was considered improper by the Interstate Commerce Commission, and consequently it ordered that the rates actually charged for the railway carriage of over-sea goods should be published. This involved one of two things, namely, either that the Railways must get a greatly increased share of the through rates or that they must appear before the public as differentiating largely in favour of over-sea merchandise. An exceedingly difficult situation was thus created. Of course in the case of railways which owned or had a large share in steamship companies, it did not matter at all what mode was adopted in apportioning the charge, for if the steamers' share became small that of the railways was correspondingly increased and the net result was the same. But where no such connexion existed between the ocean-carrier and the land-carrier, one or the other had to suffer disproportionately. Apparently the Railways have now adopted an extreme course. They have notified their determination, as we read the telegram, to limit themselves strictly to land transport and to abandon their connecting steamship services altogether. How much effect all this may have in hampering trade, it is impossible to foresee, but it certainly does appear to outsiders that, during the past year and a half, officialdom in the United States has been interfering somewhat unduly with freedom of trade. One telegram says that a probable consequence of the action now taken by the Railways will be the transfer of all the Pacific steamship lines to Japanese hands. But we fail to see what benefit the Japanese could derive from such ownership. The Pacific route has hitherto been enabled to compete with the Suez Canal solely by judicious cooperation between the steamers and the railways. So soon as that cooperation ceases, the business of ocean transport, so far as the Pacific is concerned, becomes a very doubtful enterprise, and the steamship lines would be white elephants in Japanese hands.

We are by no means sure, however, that Reuter's telegram is correct. What seems to us more probable is that the Railway Companies have merely announced their intention of not carrying any merchandise at through rates after Nov. 1st. That would be natural, since all the advantages of the through rate are annulled so soon as the method of dividing it is published. Very likely this announcement has been misconstrued into an intimation of a resolve to have no further direct relations with the steamship companies.

Saturday, August 1.

Confused reports are still sent across the wires with regard to the action taken by the Railway Companies carrying goods to and from the Pacific coast. It is difficult to reconcile these stories with the suggestions of common sense. The Railway Companies are represented as having announced their determination not to carry imports from the Pacific coast or exports to that coast. But the railways are public carriers, and if goods are offered for transport at duly scheduled rates, it is difficult to see how railway companies can refuse to carry them. We can conceive the Railway Companies taking up the position that, if they are obliged to equalise their charges on the carriage of domestic goods and on that of foreign, so little will remain for the connecting steamers on the Pacific that these over-sea services must be abandoned. That would be another method of bidding for a Government subsidy, and might also have the effect of forcing the Interstate Commerce Commission to modify its opinions. But it is useless to discuss the question until clearer details are at hand.

Sunday, August 2.

The latest news officially received with reference to the action of the Trans-Continental American Railways is to the effect that, as we conjectured at the time, the Railways have not made any declaration of the kind attributed to them. It is true that they will be unable to carry merchandise at through rates after the 1st of November, but they have not announced any intention whatever of abandoning their trans-ocean services. These facts are said to have been telegraphed by Mr. Midzuno, Japanese Consul-General in New York. It comes to this, therefore, that the programme of abandonment is a newspaper invention, but there are shrewd suspicions that it was prompted in the first place by the Railway Companies, who think that they see in the present situation a powerful argument in support of their often-repeated demand for the subsidizing of their over-sea services. If these services did not pay even in the absence of official interference as to revision of rates, their position will be still worse when a portion of the goods hitherto carried by them is diverted to the Suez route. Many people will sympathise with the Railway Companies and will be disposed to arrive at the conclusion that this meddling with private business, which has distinguished the policy of the United States Government under President Roosevelt's direction, is not in the best interests of American prosperity.

Monday, August 3.

Mr. Hill, President of the Great Northern Railway, is telegraphically quoted by the New York correspondent of the Asahi Shimbun as saying that the steamship lines on the Pacific, owned partly or wholly by the Railway Companies, have hitherto proved a source of loss, and if the new system of allotting the proportionate rates be carried out, the loss will become greater than ever. It is on this account that the Railway Companies are adopting their present attitude. Unless the Treasury comes to the rescue, it will be necessary either to sell these steamship lines or to lay up the steamers, and in either case the United States flag will disappear from the Pacific Ocean. Meanwhile another telegram says that the raising of rates by the Railways on trans continental goods means a great appreciation in the price of American cereals carried to the European market, and that something like consternation has been created. All this is supposed to be the outcome of the extensive watering of railway stocks which has taken place in America during recent years. The earnings of the lines ceased to be sufficient to pay good dividends on the inflated capital, and it became necessary to raise fares.

KOREA.

Friday, July 31.

The excitement continues to grow in vehemence with reference to the substitution of official nominations for popular elections in the matter of municipal headmen in the Japanese settlements in Korea. Mr. Resident Miura has issued a notification declaring that the unique purpose of the change is to secure administrative uniformity and to correct abuses. He calls upon the people not to be misled by agitators, and he threatens that the law will be invoked against newspapers which write in an intemperate strain. This notification has had anything but a calming effect and the commotion threatens to reach a crisis.

Saturday, August 1.

The adherents of municipal autonomy in Korea continue their agitation. They have decided that if the Residency-General insists on substituting official nomination for election in the case of mayors, all the municipal officials shall resign en masse. They have also denounced the newspaper called the Keijo Nippo for writing in a strain which they considered insulting.

The Korean delegate, Mr. Kim, President of the Privy Council, is the bearer of several high Orders which have been presented by the Korean Prince Imperial to the Empress of Japan, to the Crown Princess, and to Princess Ito. These presentations were attended with considerable ceremony and were of course made the occasion of grand banquets.

Sunday, August 2.

As might have been expected, a Committee appointed to represent the Japanese Municipalities in Korea has been informed by Viscount Sone that without reference to Prince Ito no change can be made in the recent announcement that the Mayors of Municipalities should henceforward be official nominees.

On the 1st inst. the ceremony of opening the Law Courts organised in conformity with the new codes took place in Korea. There were 28 of these courts in all; namely, a Supreme Court in Seoul; Courts of Appeal in Seoul, Pyongyang and Taiku; eight Provincial Courts and 16 District Courts. In all these Tribunals Japanese legal experts occupy a prominent place.

The Seoul-Wiju Railway has been again injured by floods. It had just been re-opened to traffic, when another downpour caused fresh damage on the 30th ultimo.

By the exertions of the police a riot which threatened to assume serious proportions has been checked at the Unsan Mine, which is situated in the north of Pyongando. It appears that there are some 700 Chinese employed at this mine, and that they are a very unruly lot, greatly addicted to gambling and drinking. The necessity of arresting the most prominent of them was recognised, and a party of Japanese police accompanied by the Chinese Consul repaired to the mine. After due investigation seven arrests were made, whereupon the comrades of the incriminated men assembled for the purpose of attempting a rescue, and were confronted by the Korean miners who strongly approved of the arrest. A serious collision was with difficulty averted and the prisoners were marched away under escort.

Tuesday, August 4.

There is a curious telegram to the Jiji Shimpō from Seoul. It says that the police have collected information showing that certain American citizens and German subjects, acting in collusion with Koreans, have been making a practice of inveigling the sons of wealthy Koreans into foreign houses and winning large sums from them by gambling. The police accordingly lay in wait outside one of these houses, and arrested several of the gamblers as they were emerging. The perplexing feature of this story is that as the arrests were made outside the house, one does not see how any proof of the gambling offence can have been obtained.

The Nichi Nichi Shimbun's Seoul correspondent wires that the investigation with regard to the alleged embezzlement of the Debt Redemption Fund has been proceeding steadily for some days, and that, according to present appearances, the editor of the Daihan Mai-Il Shimpō will be remanded for trial on a charge of embezzling property consigned to his care. The telegram says nothing about Mr. Bethell, but it is commonly rumoured that large blocks of the money were lent or deposited by him here and there, in some cases without sufficient security. If this be true, it would seem that the full control of the fund was in Mr. Bethell's hand.

According to Mr. Tsurubara, who has been interviewed by a member of the Hochi Shimbun's staff in Tokyo, there are excellent reasons for adopting the system of official nomination in lieu of that of election in appointing mayors of Japanese Municipalities in Korea. The election method has proved a conspicuous failure, for the elections are effectually controlled by cliques who represent the natives of special provinces of Japan. These contrive that their own nominees shall be chosen and, when that is accomplished, they devote to the remuneration of these officials large sums of money which ought to be employed for the public benefit. Road-making, sanitation, education, and such matters occupy an entirely secondary place in the vista of these electors, and there are even instances of a community numbering 10,000 which relies on the assistance of the Residency-General for the maintenance of a solitary children's school. In fact, while collecting considerable sums from the local inhabitants, the Municipalities squander the money on official emoluments, and the only remedy lies in depriving them of competence to mismanage affairs.

FINANCE.

An anonymous informant of the Nippon, who is described as well versed in the views of the Katsura Cabinet, says that the mere question of the amount actually saved by postponing public enterprises is not at all so important as the nature of the postponements. The Ministry's aim will be to carry out all works of obvious advisability and to postpone those which are less pressing. Thus it may very well happen that work which the Saionji Cabinet proposed to postpone will be taken up vigorously by the Katsura Ministry, while, on the contrary, enterprises which the last Cabinet was inclined to push will be relegated to the second or third rank by the statesmen now in power. This sounds very like the preface to an announcement that on the whole the saving effected in this direction by the Katsura Cabinet will not be much greater than that provided for by its predecessor. And indeed it is stated that in this matter of postponements the utmost that can be effected will be a saving of 5 million yen.

As to the abolition of objectionable taxes, namely, those on salt, on woven stuffs and on communications, we read in the Chuo Shimbun that the matter has received mature consideration at the Ministry's hands, but that the possibility of abolishing these imposts is not apparent. The three taxes now yield a revenue of about 25 million yen and that they are expected to produce 32 million yen next year, namely, salt 9,700,000, textile fabrics 20 millions and communications tax 2,200,000. If this large slice were cut out of the revenue, it would be absolutely necessary to provide some substituted sources of income. That would entail a tax on houses or on fixed property, or on something else even more objectionable than the incriminated imposts. It would of course be easy to abolish the communications tax, which is a comparatively small item. But the Cabinet regards such a step as mere cheese-paring. Hence the three taxes will be retained in the Budget.

The argument with regard to the Communications tax strikes us as peculiarly forceless. If the impost yielded a large revenue, there might be some excuse for continuing it, and indeed that is precisely the defence set up in behalf of the taxes on textile fabrics and on salt. But to say that a tax, however obnoxious, need not be abolished because the amount it produces is insignificant, seems not only contradictory but fatuous. We do not believe that the Cabinet entertains any such view.

The two great sources of financial trouble in Japan at present are the large appropriations on account of the Army and Navy and the difficulty of solving the railway problem. As time goes by, it does not seem to bring us any nearer to the period when the bonds representing the purchase price of the railways can be safely transferred to the hands of the old shareholders, and in view of this dilemma a theory appears to be gaining ground that the railways ought to be converted into a hybrid enterprise, half official and half private, or that they should be entirely restored to their original owners. The Mainichi Dempo says that this question is greatly complicating the choice of an official to take the portfolio of Finance. In point of high ability and the enjoyment of public confidence nobody more suitable could be selected than Mr. Kato Takaaki. But Mr. Kato actually resigned his portfolio in the last Katsura Ministry on the explicit ground of inability to agree with the plan for the nationalization of the private railways. Hence as a Katsura Ministry was originally responsible for that plan, it cannot now place the portfolio of Finance in Mr. Kato's hands. Baron Sakatani is similarly disqualified, for although in his official capacity he agreed to nationalization, he was always privately opposed to it. Our contemporary seems to think that the filling of the Chair of Finance is a pressing necessity. But surely that is not the case? Things can go on very well in their present groove for a few months longer at all events.

The fourth or final day of the meeting of the Toyo Race Club came off on July 30th at Tohato near Fukuoka. In the second race of the new country bred horses, the pari mutuel paid yen 1,820. The total sale of chances for the four days amounted to yen 977,070.

CHINA.

Friday, July 31.

A Chinese paper published in Shanghai, whose name we can not decipher from the telegrams, appears to be writing in a very incendiary strain against Japan. It is much incensed about the action recently taken by the Viceroy of Min-Chih in the matter of forging Japanese banknotes. It appears that for some time past forged notes have been largely circulated in Formosa, and in spite of the vigilance exercised by the police the forgers could not be discovered. At last their base of operations was found to be Foochow, where a number of Chinese subjects were acting in collusion with some Formosan Chinese to forge and utter the notes. The Viceroy of Formosa sent an official to submit the facts direct to the Viceroy of Min-Chih, and the latter immediately took up the question. The scene of the forgers' operations was discovered and surrounded by a body of Chinese soldiers and policemen. The forgers appear to have attempted armed resistance but they were overcome without any casualties to life or limb and seven of their number were arrested. Naturally this incident created some commotion and the Shanghai paper referred above seems to think that Japan's action was in some unexplained manner a violation of Chinese sovereignty. If the relations between the two Eastern Empires are to be judged by such tribunals, both Occidental and Chinese, as those which undertook to adjudicate the Tatsu Maru affair and as the Shanghai journal quoted above, there can be only one ending.

It appears to have been premature to say that the Yalu Timber Felling affair had been virtually settled. There are still several points in dispute. One relates to the compulsory sale of timber to the Chinese authorities for the purposes of railway building and river conservation. The Japanese desire to have a limit set to such purchases; the Chinese desire them to be unlimited. Then there is a difficulty about the powers vested in the Tung-Pien Taotai at Antung. The Chinese are said to be asking for greater powers than the Treaty warrants whereas the Japanese insist that there shall be no such extension. Then again there is a dispute with reference to the price that shall be asked in the event of transferring the enterprise to private hands a year hence, if such a course should be deemed desirable. The Japanese wish to fix the price now whereas the Chinese propose to defer that measure until the time comes.

The bandits of South Manchuria seem to be taking advantage of the state of the millet which now stands several feet high and affords cover as well as concealment. Parties of them have made their appearance in the neighbourhood of Pitzewo and have carried off two local headmen whom they are holding for ransom.

Saturday, August 1.

Two Chinese high officials have been dismissed from office for continuing the practice of opium smoking in the face of all the strenuous orders issued on the subject. The Throne has also been memorialized to expedite the enforcement of the veto upon poppy-growing throughout the Empire. Further it has been decided that all persons injecting morphine as an alternative to opium smoking, and all persons manufacturing implements for that purpose, shall be severely dealt with.

It is stated that the typhoon on the 27th ultimo at Canton was the most severe by which the city had been visited during the past 30 or 40 years. The rain, although it lasted only a few hours, came down in such deluges that there was a fresh calamity of inundation and further districts were devastated.

The new Chinese Representative to Tokyo, Mr. Hu Weitchi, reached Tokyo on the 31st ultimo at 4 o'clock in the afternoon and proceeded at once to the Legation.

Sunday, August 2.

The news arriving daily from Peking shows that the agitation in favour of speedily convening a national assembly grows steadily stronger. It may be that the example of Turkey has produced an effect, but, at all events, the Reform Party appears to be gaining ground. It is pointed out that the Emperor's malady is chronic, that it is now aggravated by dyspepsia, and that altogether his Majesty's condition must be described as precarious. As for the Empress Dowager, she is in her 74th year and shows plain symptoms of declining vitality. Should both these figures be removed from the scene before the National Assembly has been opened, very serious results might ensue. We are reminded in some respects of the state of affairs that existed in Japan 28 years ago, when a strong party of politicians were agitating for the speedy opening of the National Assembly. But in Japan the leaders of the nation were able to proceed with much greater deliberation than the Chinese agitators seem willing to contemplate. Thus the Japanese local assemblies had been in actual existence for some years before the date was fixed for the promulgation of the Constitution, and moreover an interval of 10 years was allowed between the official fixing of that date and the actual promulgation. In China, on the contrary, the provincial assemblies have not yet come into existence and will not do so for some months longer at soonest, yet we find an already impatient demand for a national assembly. No wonder that the cautious statesmen in the Middle Kingdom are unwilling to move with such precipitancy.

The problem of dealing with the disbanded Manchu Banner Troops appears to be inconveniently pressing in China. It has been suggested that the plan pursued in Japan should be adopted, namely, to commute into pension bonds the salaries hitherto received by these men. But there are said to be 2 million persons in the category, and many of them are not only without resources but also have no capacity for earning money. On the other hand, the Treasury shrinks from imposing any new tax for the purpose of pensioning these men. No feasible solution of the problem is yet suggested.

The Nichi Nichi has a telegram from Peking which says that it is proposed to make the possession of the minimum sum of a million dollars a qualification for membership of the National Assembly.

Monday, August 3.

The Central Bank of China was only very recently established yet it is said to be already threatened with forgery of its notes. The fact that notes are in process of forgery at Singapore has been discovered and the authorities are on their guard.

Shanghai publishes a telegram from Peking to the effect that certain foreign projectors are endeavouring to bribe the Governor of Shansi to grant them extensive mining concessions. It is a far cry to Shansi, and inasmuch as the Governor of a Chinese province has no competence to grant mining concessions without reference to the Central Authorities, the story seems hardly entitled to credence.

A telegram to the Asahi Shimbun from Harbin says that the attempt to postpone the opening of the frontier customs stations has failed and that they were to be opened on the 3rd inst.

Somewhat vague news comes from Peking, nominally emanating from the Chinese Legation in St. Petersburg. It refers to a decision said to have been taken by the Russian Authorities not to employ any Chinese labourers on the Amur Railway. A number of these men were, until recently, engaged on the work, and being discharged in consequence of the above decision, they took to brigandage. The Chinese Minister in the Russian capital advises therefore that steps be taken to prevent any further exodus of Chinese labourers to the Amur district, and that arrangements be effected for the return of those who are already there.

Some of the Chinese provinces, as for example Fukkien and Yunnan, have voluntarily shortened the period officially fixed for the cessation of poppy growing, and have arranged that this industry shall cease within three years at latest. In consequence of this the Throne has been memorialized in the sense that the originally determined period of ten years shall be reduced to three for the whole Empire. Certainly according to present appearances it would seem that the Chinese are about to succeed in their anti-opium crusade. The task seemed almost hopeless at first, but difficulties often disappear when they are resolutely grappled with.

It appears that six Chinese students who recently returned to their country having mastered the printing art in Japan, have been taken into the Government service, three of them being employed by the Department of Education. This is noted as the first instance of official positions being given to students educated in this accomplishment abroad.

Tuesday, August 4.

The Viceroy of Manchuria has employed two American citizens at the instance of Governor Tang for the purposes of a model cattle-breeding and agricultural farm. One of the two appears to be a Mr. Parker, but we can not decipher the name of the other in its romanized disguise.

Lieut. General Baron Fukushima and Major-General Aoki have reached Nanking and are reported to have received a hearty welcome from all classes. They are to return to Shanghai on the 5th inst. and will leave that place for Japan by the Hakui Maru on the 8th.

The Peking correspondent of the North China Daily News writing under date of the 22nd ultimo has the following:—

Governor Tang Shao-yi, special Imperial Commissioner to offer the thanks of the Chinese Government to the United States Government for the restoration of Tls. 24,000,000 of the 1900 Boxer indemnity to China, will probably start for Shanghai in a few days and then sail by a mail steamer for the United States in company with his private secretary and three other officials. The chief object of the Peking Government in sending such an able and high official as H. E. Tang to thank the Washington Government is to show to the other Christian countries in the West that China feels greatly gratified with the action of President Roosevelt and that as money is so scarce in every part of the Chinese Empire at the present moment and the people are so poor, the Chinese Government will feel equally gratified if other countries will follow the good example set by America. Moreover it is believed in Chinese official circles in North China that H. E. Tang's mission has also something to do with the development of industrial enterprises in the Three Eastern Provinces of Manchuria. In view of the high-handed action of the Tokio Government in the Fakumén, Chientao and other questions still pending between China and Japan in Manchuria, it is the intention of the Chinese Government to invite American capitalists to invest their money in mining and other industries in Fêngtien, Kirin and Heilungkiang, especially in Fêngtien the richest of the three provinces. As H. E. Tang is one of the very few foreign-educated Chinese officials who are holding high and important positions in China and as he is also perfectly acquainted with the conditions of life in America on account of his long residence at Yale, it is hoped that his visit will effect more than merely to cement the existing friendly relations between China and America. During his absence Viceroy Hsü Shih-chang will act for him at Mukden. H. E. Tang has now been given the brevet rank of a President of one of the larger Ministries, and it is possible that he will be promoted actual President on his return from America. In this case the appointment of the Governorship of Fêngtien would be abolished as suggested by His Excellency some time ago. The Empress-Dowager first intended to send Liang Tun-ven, Junior Vice-President of the Waiwupai, to the United States for this important purpose as he was also a Yale graduate, but he declined.

The negotiations with the Japanese Legation here about the Fakumén, Chi-ntao and other question will be discontinued until the return of Governor Tang from America, and Mr. Ijimi, the new Japanese Minister to China, is not expected in Peking for some time.

Nothing is easier than to apply such adjectives as "high-handed" to the action of a foreign State, but to us it appears, and we think that the majority of calm observers will endorse our view, that so far as the Fakumen Railway is concerned the epithet "high-handed" belongs to China's action solely, since it was she who proceeded to deliberately violate her Convention with Japan by contracting for the construction of a railway parallel to the South Manchuria line. Again, with what pretence of justice can Japan's procedure in Chientao be called "high-handed"? All that Japan did was to send a company of gendarmes to protect the lives and properties of Korean subjects in a district which Korea has long claimed as her own. Then again, on which side was the high-handed action in the Tatsu Maru affair? Even if the Tatsu Maru had been lying in the harbour at Shanghai, the Chinese authorities would not have been justified in seizing her so long as the system of extra-territorial jurisdiction prevails in the Middle Kingdom. Yet China seized the ship and hauled down the Japanese flag without giving a moment's thought to the lawless character of her action. And in the face of all these facts we are told that Japan's action is "high handed." We are very sure that if the Tatsu Maru had been a British ship, if British subjects had been the concessionaries of the South Manchuria Railway, and if the lives and properties of Englishmen were imperilled for want of sufficient protection in Chientao, the verdict of the foreign press would be very different.

There has been a serious catastrophe in Peking. On the 2nd inst. fire broke out in the canteen of the German barracks and the whole building seems to have been destroyed. A major, a non-commissioned officer, and ten men were killed and 20 injured. It is stated that the other troops, especially the Chinese, rendered full assistance. There is no suggestion that the fire was anything but accidental, unless we so interpret a telegram saying that the origin is unknown and that considerable excitement prevails. It is stated that some French soldiers were included amongst those killed, and the presumption is that they were attempting to extinguish the fire when they were caught under a falling building.

Wednesday, August 5.

The Peking Government, it is alleged, has received information to the effect that the anti-dynastic conspirators in the provinces are planning a general outbreak for the time when the United States Squadron arrives in Eastern waters. They are collecting arms and ammunition at Amoy for the purposes of the insurrection, and instructions have been accordingly issued to the authorities of that place to be specially on their guard. One wonders whether the time will ever come when peace and quiet will be restored throughout the huge Empire of China. Even Russia, disturbed as are its internal conditions and various as are the races whose affairs it administers, enjoys calm and tranquillity compared with China.

Delegations charged with the duty of urging the rapid convocation of a national assembly have reached Peking from Canton and Kilin, which two places are about as far apart as they well could be, and although it is not at all likely that the Cantonese and the Kilinese have put their heads together to devise a dramatic effect, the simultaneous arrival of two such delegations in the Chinese capital certainly suggests something of the kind. Meanwhile all this commotion seems to be having an effect, for it is said that the Provincial Assemblies will probably be opened in November next.

There has been quite a commotion at the Shimbū Gakko in Tokyo. This is a school specially established under the auspices of Lieut. General Baron Fukushima to prepare Chinese students for admission to the Military College. Recently some uneasiness was caused at the School by rumours that, owing to deficient accommodation, it would be necessary to limit the number of lads admitted from the School to the Military College. General Fukushima was communicated with by telegram on this subject—he was then travelling in China—and he replied that the students need not have any apprehension inasmuch as no restriction would be imposed on the number of admissions to the college. The students were thus partially satisfied, but it appears that simultaneously with raising this question they had addressed to Mr. Chu, Superintendent of Chinese education in Japan, a request that the Chinese Government should defray their travelling expenses while in Japan and also their hospital fees in the event of illness. The Chinese Government refused to grant this request, and accordingly 93 of the students went on strike, threatening to leave the School permanently. The Faculty of the School decided that the wisest course in the circumstances would be to intimate to the strikers that their names had been struck altogether off the roll of the School. Since then the expelled students have been paying repeated visits to the residence of Mr. Chu, and some apprehensions are entertained for the latter's safety. The School had 280 students at the time of the incident, so that its roll is now reduced to 187.

Thursday, August 6.

A telegram from Peking quotes the Chungwan Jihpao as saying that a Japanese officer named Kawakita has been convicted of selling to the Chinese Department of War and to the Russians certain secret documents belonging to the Japanese War Office. It will be remembered that a short time ago some secret papers describing the operations against Port Arthur from the Japanese point of view were found to be missing from the archives of the Governor-General in Kwantung, and that an officer was punished for carelessness in guarding these papers. It is now supposed that the documents sold by Kawakita, who had the Chinese name of Chang, were the papers missing at Kwantung.

On the night of the 4th inst. somebody effected an entrance into the sleeping-room of the Russian Consul at Tientsin and stabbed him in the stomach. It will be remembered that the predecessor of this Consul was shot with a pistol and this second outrage has naturally created some excitement. Happily the wound is not dangerous.

The Mainichi Dempo says that an important treaty has been concluded between France and China. Its cardinal provisions are, first, that France shall have confidence to adopt suitable measures in the event of any Chinese subjects attempting to smuggle arms, ammunition or other war material across the frontier into China; secondly, that the Viceroy and Governors of Yunnan, Kwangtung and Kwangsi shall have competence to communicate directly with the French authorities at Hanoi with respect to any Chinese insurgents or rioters who may be lying concealed in French territory; thirdly, that Chinese detectives may cross the frontier into Chinese territory for the purpose of tracing conspirators or insurgents but that no attempt to arrest or deal with such law breakers shall be made without previous appeal to the French authorities; fourthly, that in no circumstances shall Chinese troops be permitted to cross the frontier and operate in French dominions; fifthly, that in the event of Chinese insurgents or conspirators escaping across the frontier into French territory, the Chinese Government may make application to the French authorities for their arrest and extradition, but these active steps must never be taken by the Chinese themselves; and, finally, that should Chinese subjects combine with French subjects for illegal purposes within French territory, the French authorities shall be competent to arrest the former and duly punish them.

We take the following from the America Report of the China Association for 1907-8:—

Complaints were made during the year with reference to alleged discrimination by the Japanese in the freight charges on the South Manchurian Railway. An examination of the allegations showed that the discrimination was rather between ports than peoples. It was said, and not without reason, that the freight charges on the railway had been so arranged that it was cheaper to send goods to Kwangcheng via Dairen than via Newchwang which is about 130 miles nearer. The basis of that complaint has since been removed by the issue of new regulations which make the charge per ton for goods sent by either route to Kwangcheng the same.

"MIYE MARU."

Friday, July 31.

There appears to be very little doubt that a satisfactory settlement will be reached in the affair of the Mye Maru. Generally these incidents are very difficult to adjudicate justly, as more or less doubt attaches to the exact position where the seizure of a fishing vessel is made. But in the case of the Mye Maru no doubt is said to exist, inasmuch as a Japanese warship, which happened to be upon the scene, obtained from the Russian ship making the seizure clear evidence of the exact locality. This evidence is said to show that at the time of her capture the Mye Maru was fishing in a place fully  $7\frac{1}{2}$  miles from the Commander Islands, and was consequently far outside the limit of territorial waters. It follows therefore, assuming these statements to be correct, that the Russians were not justified in treating the Japanese as malefactors, and still less were they warranted in trying them by court martial. All this is so very patent that one can not imagine any perplexity on the side of the Russians, and therefore, pending receipt of their version of the affair, judgment must be suspended. Meanwhile communications having been opened between the two Governments, there is no probability that the death sentence will be carried out until the matter has received the fullest investigation. It is of course just conceivable though not at all probable that the Russian man-of-war may have acted on the supposition that the Behring Sea limit of territorial waters, namely, 30 miles, was applicable to Japanese fishing in northern waters. But the Behring Sea limit is a special arrangement between America, Russia and England, and Japan not having adhered to it, is in no way bound by its provisions.

Saturday, August 1.

The Asahi Shinbun has a long telegram from Tsuruga giving the particulars of the Miye Maru affair. From this account we gather that the owner of the Miye Maru is a Mr. Yoneda who, when the fishing stations in the Northern Seas were put up to auction last spring, tendered for three stations and was successful in obtaining the right to fish there. The Miye Maru accordingly proceeded to a place which he believed to be the first of these stations. Navigation proved to be a difficult matter in consequence of fogs, but her master finally concluded that he had reached his destination and proceeded to land the essential implements. While the Miye Maru was thus engaged, a Russian warship came in sight and signalled the master of the schooner to come on board. This signal having been obeyed and the master having explained his identification of the ground and exhibited his permit, the Russian officers informed him that his identification erred by one nautical mile, and that he must be treated as a poacher. All attempts to dispute this ruling proved futile, as did also the master's repeated requests to be allowed to land fishing implements at the other two stations for which they were destined. The Russians required the master to put up 250 roubles as security, and on his refusal to do so, he and three others of the schooner's officers were taken ashore under escort and imprisoned. Thereafter the schooner is said to have been stripped of all her valuables, which were sold then and there, and the prisoners, having been released, were put on board their vessel and ordered to accompany the warship to Vladivostok. Arriving at Nicolaïvsk, the Russian officers made a change of programme, for they ordered all the crew of the Miye Maru, with the exception of five men, to leave the ship at once and to find their way home as best they could. Here a sharp dispute seems to have occurred. The crew refused to leave the Miye Maru as long as the Japanese flag was flying over her and the Russians hesitated to lower the flag. Finally a party of bluejackets under arms were brought from the Russian ship and the Japanese were forced to land at the point of the bayonet. Here the Asahi Shinbun's account becomes unintelligible, but we learn from a Russian official report that while the Japanese crew were being escorted through Nicolaïvsk, they disobeyed an order not to walk on the trottoir, and when the escort attempted to enforce the order, the Japanese picked up stones and used them with such effect that the skull of the officer commanding the escort was fractured. Nicolaïvsk being under martial law the offenders were immediately tried by court martial and six of them were condemned to death. These six men appear to be still detained in prison at Nicolaïvsk, but the rest of the crew of the Miye Maru were taken to Vladivostok.

It will be seen from the above that the affair is very unfortunate. The action of the Russian ship cannot but be considered harsh if it be true that the Japanese were able to show a proper permit, and if there was credible evidence that the Miye Maru's position erred by only one mile. As to the fracas at Nicolaïvsk, it is impossible to form a definite opinion without fuller details, but if the Japanese story be at all credible, the treatment extended to the crew of the Miye Maru would appear to have been unduly harsh. Here too, however, judgment must be reserved, and whatever the facts of the incident may be, there is no reason to apprehend that it will not receive fair and friendly treatment at Russia's hands.

Sunday, August 2.

In the Nichi Nichi Shinbun it is stated that the Foreign Office in Tokyo having telegraphed to the office of the Shimada Company in Nicolaïvsk for information about the Miye Maru affair, received an answer which reflects very seriously upon the Russian side of the question. It appears that according to Russian regulations no criminals or suspected criminals are permitted to walk upon the trottoirs. In Nicolaïvsk, however, not only are the roads very bad, but also owing to a recent fall of rain they were reduced to a sea of mud at the time of the passing of the Miye Maru's crew, and anyone keeping the road must have sunk over the ankles. In these circumstances some of the Japanese sailors innocently attempted to march along the sidewalk, which manoeuvre the Russian escort prevented by free recourse to the butts of their rifles. The Japanese, ignorant of the cause of this roughness and being unable in the absence of an interpreter to communicate intelligibly with the Russians, had recourse to stones. A fracas ensued with the result that one of the Japanese and one of the Russians were injured. A court martial was then held with the result already known. If these facts be authenticated, we have no doubt whatever that the men will be released. There was nothing to justify their treatment as criminals, and if such special regulations exist, the butt of a rifle is not the proper way to make them intelligible. Above all, the offence was insignificant. That six men should be condemned to death for such doings outrages every sense of proportion between crime and punishment.

A later telegram says that the Russian Government has agreed to remit the death penalty, but insists that the two questions shall be kept separate, namely, the legality of the ship's seizure and the act of violence committed by her crew. The Japanese Government is naturally unwilling to make this differentiation inasmuch as the treatment to which the crew were entitled depends directly on the nature of their offence and ultimately on the legality of their vessel's seizure.

Wednesday, August 5.

On the 3rd inst. the crew of the Miye Maru—less of course the six men condemned to death—arrived at Vladivostok. One of their number had died of sickness on the way from Nicolaïvsk so that only 30 remained. The men condemned to death are receiving all possible attention from the office of the Shimada Company in Nicolaïvsk and are reported to be behaving with much intrepidity. These attentions on the part of the Shimada

Company are necessitated by the fact that some of the Japanese were wounded in the fracas. Nobody doubts that the Appeal Court in St. Petersburg, to which this case has been carried, will pronounce a just judgment. It was of course contrary to all reason or right that the court-martial at Nicolaïvsk should condemn six men to the death penalty for such a paltry offence as throwing stones. Even a drum-head court-martial convened to try mutineers in the face of an enemy would hesitate to pass such a sentence. Very likely the Japanese deserve some punishment for their turbulence, but it would be quite monstrous to put them to death for such a peccadillo. The Russian authorities may be trusted to see this as clearly as anybody could see it, and therefore this particular affair will certainly be satisfactorily settled. But Japanese newspapers wisely suggest that the occasion should be seized by Japan for entering the Union concluded some time ago between Russia, America and England for the protection of seals and sea-otters in northern waters. Japan, since she came into possession of the southern part of Saghalien and its adjacent islands, has acquired a direct interest in this question of pelagic game preservation, and it would be distinctly to her advantage to unite with the above three Powers for the purpose of preventing the extermination of valuable animals.

In this context the Hochi Shinbun calls attention to the case of the Kompira Maru, a schooner of 52 tons, which was boarded by the Russian cruiser Silka last year and had 15 stand of small arms confiscated. In the document given at the time by the Commander of the Silka to the Master of the Kompira Maru, the place where the incident occurred was described as 17 miles from the Siberian shore, and it was frankly stated that the confiscation of the rifles was not on account of any offence actually committed, but was purely a preventive measure, taken in view of the fact that if the arms were left in the schooner's possession they might possibly be used for some illegal purposes at some future date. The Kompira Maru was perfectly within her right in carrying these small arms. Indeed her action was in compliance with the requirements of Japanese law, as without such equipment she would not have been eligible for bounty. This procedure on the part of the Silka has been under discussion ever since, as have also been the affairs of the schooners Taiyo Maru and Daijuku Maru which were confiscated by the Russians.

Of course there is not the slightest symptom of impatience or resentment on the part of the Japanese in connexion with any of these matters, especially in the case of the Miye Maru. The Jiji Shimpō doubtless interprets public opinion quite justly when it says that such petty incidents are to be regarded as mere accidents, quite incapable of affecting the general situation between two nations which have learned to regard each other with respect and genuine affection.

THE CLEARING HOUSES.

The much talked of conference of representatives of the five Clearing Houses of Tokyo, Osaka, Kyoto, Nagoya and Kobe took place in the Bankers' Assembly Hall Nihonbashi, Tokyo on the 3rd inst. There were 25 representatives present, and Mr. Toyokawa Ryohei of the Mitsu Bishi Bank acted as chairman. The views formulated by each Clearing House were read in order, and were found so nearly unanimous that it was decided to take the Tokyo document for basis of discussion, and to amend it if necessary in accordance with the opinions of the majority. This Tokyo pronouncement consists of 7 articles, which have already been translated in these columns. The gist of them may be here repeated, namely, that all new enterprises or extension of existing enterprises requiring recourse to loans shall be abandoned; that enterprises already sanctioned by the Diet shall be prosecuted with funds obtained by economising administrative expenses; that all contemplated loans shall be desisted from; that, without recourse to increased taxation, a sum of 50 million yen at least shall be devoted annually to the redemption of the National Debt; that the process of the yearly redemptions shall be by lot, except in cases where conversion can be effected on advantageous terms; and that, finally, a finance supervisory committee shall be organised, consisting of the Chief of the Bureau of Audit, members of both Houses of the Diet and representatives of the business men.

The above document was discussed, clause by clause, and accepted by the meeting with some petty amendments of phraseology, and with one important change, namely, that the sum appropriated annually for redemption of the National Debt shall not be less than 60 million yen. The Osaka Clearing House advocated 70 millions, and 60 millions was chosen as a compromise between the Osaka and the Tokyo figures.

The Osaka delegates presented also a proposal with reference to amending the time for payment of taxes. The delegates decided to hold another meeting on the 4th inst.

The second meeting of representatives of the Clearing Houses took place in Tokyo on the 4th inst. The first business on the programme was to discuss a bill presented by Osaka for changing the time for paying the last instalment of the saké tax from March to April. This change was recommended on the ground that money is generally tight in March and that the brewing of new saké is only just completed during that month, so that the immediate collection of the tax is a hardship. The meeting approved this proposal without dissent. It was next decided that the resolutions adopted on the preceding day with regard to the adjustment of the national finances should be embodied in a representation to the Government, and a committee was appointed for the purpose of drawing up the document.

The representatives of the five Clearing Houses now assembled in Tokyo held their third meeting on the 5th inst., and unanimously adopted for presentation to the Government a memorial embodying the seven recommendations which have already been detailed in these columns. It will be remembered that the duty of preparing this memorial had been entrusted to the members of the Tokyo Clearing Houses, who do not appear to have made any alteration but merely to have added a preface of a somewhat academical character.

The meeting then took up the proposal made by the Osaka Clearing House as to changing the period for collecting the tax on saké. This proposed change is based on the fact that under the present system exceptionally large sums are drawn from circulation in the months of February and March on account of taxes, and stringency is thus invariably produced in the money market. The tax on saké is prominent amongst the collections, and there is in the case of this staple a special consideration, namely, that the dealers lay in their stocks of new saké just at that time, and that they are consequently obliged to pay a heavy sum on account of taxation before they have recouped their outlay by sales. The memorialists admit that to defer the period of collection until April would be somewhat inconvenient for the Government, since the fiscal year ends in March, but the embarrassment on that score would be felt only on the first occasion. The meeting unanimously adopted this memorial and instructed the chairman to arrange for its submission to the Government.

If we may judge from the almost identical utterances of leading Tokyo journals, the Government is disposed to adopt a somewhat critical attitude towards the resolutions of the Clearing-Houses with reference to financial adjustment. The special point of criticism is that the representatives of the Clearing Houses seem to advocate nothing less than redemption of the entire national debt. That, however, is an unreasonable project. Every country in the world has a national debt, just as every merchant or manufacturer works with more than his own individual capital. The only question to be considered is whether equilibrium exists between the amount of the debt and the country's capacity to bear it. In Japan's case her liabilities were suddenly and largely increased during the years 1904 and 1905, and she was required to swallow at short notice a bigger volume of obligations than she could conveniently digest. That is the sole reason of her present embarrassment, and it is only a temporarily effective reason. If she gets rid of the undigested surplus, she can easily carry the remainder without any trouble. What are the dimensions of the surplus? The estimate framed by the authorities is about 1000 million yen; namely from 3 to 4 hundred millions of domestic debt, 500 millions of foreign debt in London and 100 millions in Paris. Were this reduction effected, everything would move smoothly and satisfactorily.

OFFICIAL SECRECY.

We observe that the Japan Times devotes a tolerably long leading article to refuting the Japan Gazette's charges of secrecy on the part of Japanese officials in Korea, and to rebutting its indictment of the Japan Times, the Seoul Press and the Japan Mail as aiding and abetting that secrecy, and thus proving false to the noble traditions of the Fourth Estate as well as sinning again various other splendid ideals. There are not many people, we imagine—at least not many sane people—who take the Japan Gazette seriously. They are mildly amused by it no doubt, for there is something decidedly comic in the spectacle of an editor who habitually mistakes a molehill for a mountain and confounds sesquipedalian silliness with common sense. In this particular instance the quaint feature is that the Japan Gazette does not even know whether any secrecy has been, or is being, practised. The whole question relates to the campaign against the insurgents in Korea. The leading events of that campaign are briefly described in published official reports, but nothing is stated as to the losses, if any, on the Japanese side, and because of that solitary omission the Yokohama journal fills the air with fulminations about "a conspiracy against the liberties of the people and the press" and about other stupendous catastrophes. How does the Japan Gazette know that secrecy is practised? What scintilla of information does it possess upon the subject? Not the most infinitesimally small. It may be that at rare intervals a Japanese soldier is wounded or even killed. The thing is possible. But if so, what then? Is it beyond the scope of the Japan Gazette's intelligence to comprehend or of its information to know that such incidents ought to be shrouded in the most inviolable silence, because humanity demands that everything calculated to impart confidence to the unhappy and misguided insurgents should be carefully concealed from them? We say most emphatically that there cannot be too much secrecy in such matters, and that to talk of the dignity of the Fourth Estate or of the liberties of the people and the press, when the other side of the account shows such items as the restoration of peace to a much harassed nation and the saving of the lives of hundreds of men, women and children, is more worthy of Stigginses and Pecksniffs than of discerning men. The joke of the thing, too, is that the Japan Gazette, while lashing itself into a fine frenzy about a purely hypothetical state of affairs, loses sight altogether of its own responsibility as a member of the Fourth Estate. Why should it gird against other journals for not making disclosures which it does not itself take any steps to make? It in the Korean Peninsula things are happening which warrant the Gazette's tirades, why does it not despatch a reporter on its own account to pierce the heinous veil of secrecy and set the wires flashing in the interests of the grand Fourth Estate and the splendid liberties of the people and the press. It is all flim-flam—to use a vulgar expression. Nothing is wanting except a cap and bells to punctuate the Japan Gazette's platitudes.

THE FAKUMEN RAILWAY.

The Shanghai Mercury has again received from London telegrams embodying the gist of articles published by several English leading journals with regard to the Fakumen Railway. Not one of the journals quoted pauses to consider that the very Syndicate in whose financial interest this campaign is carried on itself obtained from China in 1907 a limiting engagement precisely analogous to that which is now made the subject of such keen attack. The fact is that the sentimental cry of the open door and equal opportunities has been exploited with much adroitness by the representatives of the Anglo-Chinese Corporation, who naturally play their hand for all that it is worth. It is quite plain that the newspapers quoted by the Shanghai Mercury's correspondent, namely the Economist, the Financial Times, the Standard and the Daily News, have not troubled themselves to consider the practical issues of this case but have allowed themselves to be carried away by emotional talk about equality of opportunity and sovereign rights. It is easy to conjure with such stock in trade, but one thing may be asserted with absolute confidence, namely, that were the most moral of all the European Powers placed in the same position as that occupied by Japan in Manchuria, it would treat with ridicule the idea of agreeing to a violation of treaty so flagrant as the building of the Fakumen Railway would be. On the other hand, as we have before stated, Japan in the face of all this outcry may be wise to consider whether some concession is not possible. Arbitration seems the only feasible alternative to insisting upon the strict enforcement of treaty rights.

MANCHURIA.

The steamer Sarushima Maru, which has been engaged searching for the ships sunk in the operations at Port Arthur, is reported to have located the Yashima at a point 40 nautical leagues from the entrance to Port Arthur, and the Sebastopol at a point 30 leagues distant from Liaotsh-shan. She has also found the place approximately where the Takasago sank. But whether it will be worth while to attempt to raise these vessels remains to be determined. We hear nothing, however, as to the second battleship which Japan lost on that disastrous day, namely the Hatsuse. It was subsequently related by Russian officers that the sinking of the Yashima and the Hatsuse was the result of observations made by the garrison of Port Arthur. The Japanese vessels, in their daily cruises in the vicinity of the beleaguered fortress, were seen to constantly traverse the same ground, and the Russians very cleverly laid a field of mines across the course which they expected the ships to take on their next cruise.

News from Harbin is to the effect that a Russian syndicate has been formed to monopolise the flour milling industry in that region, and that the Russo-Chinese-Bank is to give assistance to the extent of 5 million yen. It is of course expected that the enterprise will prove profitable, but our readers will remember that in one of his able reports Mr. Sutor, Commissioner in the East for the Government of New South Wales, speaks rather disparagingly of the quality of the flour produced at the Harbin mills. It was quite good enough to make bread for troops on campaign, but whether it can compete with American flour, is another question.

Viceroy Hsu is stated to be getting two steamers via Yinkow for the purposes of carrier business on the Sungari River. The vessels have to be carried overland from Newchwang, and his Excellency has applied to the South Manchuria Railway authorities for a rebate of fare. The reply, however, has been that although the Railway is prepared to carry all warlike material at half cost, it cannot undertake to extend that indulgence to steamers intended for the ordinary carrying trade on an inland river.

The Mainichi Dempo has a telegram from Changchun saying that the Chinese Government, recognising the fruitlessness of continuing to discuss the Chientao problem, has decided to organise full administrative machinery for the so-called Middle Island. With that object the whole region will be divided into two districts, each having its own administrative officials and its own military force. This, if it be true, is undoubtedly taking the bull by the horns. We do not suppose that Japan, who is acting solely as Korea's representative in this matter, is imperatively desirous of obtaining official recognition as to Korea's right of possession in Chientao. The main point is that Koreans must enjoy perfect liberty of settlement in that district and must be able to count on security of life and property.

CHIENTAO.

It is of course always possible and even probable that so long as the present dual administration exists in Chientao complications may arise of an unforeseen character. The recent veto upon the exportation of grain from Chientao is a case in point. North-western Korea has long drawn its supplies of grain from Chientao, and this has become more necessary than ever of late owing to the increase of the population of Hamyongdo.

The Chinese authorities, in assuming and exercising the right to issue orders affecting the whole population of Chientao, Korean as well as Chinese, have given a practical demonstration of their resolve to ignore Korea's claims altogether. Their excuse is understood to be that although the harvest last year was normal and consequently no scarcity is to be apprehended on that score, the increasing inflow of immigrants and the developing wants of the former inhabitants have produced a sharp appreciation of price, which threatens to assume serious dimensions unless some measure be adopted to check it. Korea could of course retaliate by forbidding the export of salt from Hamyongdo whence the people of Chientao derive their principal supply of that necessary. This would probably be a very effective measure, for owing to the exhaustion of the supply of firewood in north-eastern Korea the process of manufacturing salt has become much more expensive than it used to be, and already the Chientao folks are somewhat embarrassed on that account. But a retaliatory measure of that kind would be to meet violence with violence, and the Koreans, acting under Japanese advice, are unwilling to take that step. Meanwhile a protest was duly formulated by Colonel Saito on the 20th of July, but it does not yet seem to have produced any effects. Until the question of administration is finally settled between China and Korea, the Chinese, if they have any desire to show moderation, should not attempt to enforce their authority in such matters over the Korean settlers in Chientao, whatever they may do with regard to their own people.

According to the Mainichi Dempo, the Chinese Government is thinking of referring the Chientao question to the Hague Tribunal, and with that idea in view is about to take the practical steps described in our last issue, namely, to divide Chientao into two administrative districts, organising the necessary offices for that purpose, posting suitable military forces and establishing a place where complaints may be preferred. If Japan objects to this arrangement, China will then propose reference to the Hague Tribunal.

THE TOKYO MUNICIPALITY.

The Tokyo Municipality seems to be a good deal perplexed to make the frayed ends of its finances meet. The papers of the Metropolis state that the City's normal expenditures amount to 2,400,000 yen yearly, in addition to which it has to pay one million for interest and sinking fund of its foreign debt. Finally it is pledged to find 10 millions on account of the great Exhibition. In these circumstances it recently levied a new tax upon sales of lands, houses, and boats, but this source of revenue does not promise to give more than 200,000 annually. A project was then discussed for increasing the rent of the buildings owned by the City and for augmenting the water rate. But owing to the very depressed state of the times a large number of the above buildings are lying vacant. Any attempt to increase the rent would therefore have the effect of driving out more tenants, and this would re-act upon the revenue derived from the waterworks since it would reduce the number of users of water. Recourse to additional taxes upon electric lighting and gas was talked of, and it was hoped that a substantial revenue would be obtained from the Tokyo Railway. But those interested in electric lighting and gas have objected so strenuously to any increase of imposts that the idea has had to be abandoned, and as for the Tokyo Railway, the revenue accruing from it has diminished by 200,000 yen instead of increasing. Apparently therefore the Municipality are in a very tight place.

The question of the election of the Mayor of Tokyo presents one somewhat complicated feature. The opponents of Mr. Ozaki do not desire to oust him from the mayoralty at once. What they seek to do is to induce him to withdraw his resignation and to serve for the remainder of his six-year period, which will expire next June. The idea of these Aldermen is that they will then elect Baron Senge to succeed Mr. Ozaki. But Mr. Ozaki's friends insist that he shall not withdraw his resignation, and that he should challenge the issue of the election whatever it may be. If elected now, he will be entitled to serve for a further period of six years. Strenuous efforts are being made to break down the opposition of the Senge Party, and apparently these efforts will be successful.

THE EASTERN COLONIZATION COMPANY.

Public opinion seems to be assured that Lieut.-General Baron Usagawa will be the President of the Eastern Colonization Company. He has had considerable experience in Korea, is believed to be possessed of great organising ability and is a persona grata with the Koreans, as his forefather is said to have been a native of Kudara, naturalized in Japan. The Baron has been interviewed by a member of the Asahi's staff. He says that he has not yet had any official intimation as to his appointment, but he will accept the office if he is asked to do so. The trouble, he points out, is that whenever a Japanese enterprise in Korea is spoken of, the Koreans immediately conclude that something essentially disadvantageous to themselves is on the tapis. This is one of the main causes of the present disturbance in the Peninsula, and it must be the first object of the Colonization Company to remove such a false impression. For that purpose the Company will afford assistance of every reasonable kind to Korean agriculturalists, supplying them with seed, with plants and with instruction, and will also engage in works of reclamation and afforestation such as shall be manifestly for the benefit of Korea. It follows that with this programme the Company must not look for any large gains at the outset. It must be actuated rather by the spirit of the peasant who is content to receive for his daily work a ball of rice and a dried plum. When one speaks of a capital of 10 million yen, the idea of a very big enterprise is suggested, but it is to be observed that only one fourth of that amount will be paid up and that the Company will receive from the Government comparatively small assistance, namely, a grant of 300,000 yen for 8 years. Economy and patience must therefore be the order of the day, and the Company must look to a distant future for the reward of its labours.

Mr. Frederic S. Isham, the American novelist, author of "The Lady of the Mount," "The Strollers," "Under the Rose," etc., is at the Oriental Palace Hotel. Mr. and Mrs. Isham came to the East, via Siberia, and have been two months in China and the Philippines. The novelist has not decided how long he will remain in Japan; when he does leave, he will probably go to Australia, where his last novel, "The Lady of the Mount" has been well received.

BUSINESS NOTES.

Friday, July 31.

It has been finally announced that the fifth installment of the First War Loan will be repaid by the system of lots in October next. The amount of this installment will be 20 million yen; the lots will be drawn on the 1st of October; the money will be repaid on the 15th of that month, and two months' interest will be deducted as the period of legal maturity is the 15th of December. Tokyo newspapers state that the Governor of the Bank of Japan and the Heads of Bureau in the Finance Department were all in favour of continuing the discount system, but Marquis Katsura put down his foot, and declared that lots must be employed and that he would take upon his own shoulders the responsibility of the whole change. Doubtless the Governor of the Bank of Japan and the Heads of Bureau in the Department of Finance base their approval of the discount system on the fact that folks who have need of money are reached thus, whereas the method of lots brings money into the hands of people who might prefer to leave it as originally invested. That argument is indisputable as far as it goes, but, on the other hand, the Treasury is now faced by the consideration that if the discount system be continued and if it produces only a few hundred applicants, as was the case on the last occasion, the whole remaining sum, namely 43 million yen, will have to be returned at the end of December, and considerable financial disturbance might thus be caused. We observe that in an interview between a member of the Asahi's staff and Mr. Mizumachi, Vice-Minister of Finance, the latter spoke of the method of redemption by lot as the normal plan and described as exceptional the device of purchasing in the open market. We sincerely hope that this foreshadows reversion to the former system in all future payments. The present case is of small moment, for as between the discount system and the lottery system there is very little to choose: each is alike powerless to influence the market price of the bonds. But when it comes to the Government buying its own securities at the cheapest possible price in the open market, on the one hand, and redeeming them at par by lot, on the other, there is, as the Japanese themselves would put it, the difference between mud and clouds. We need hardly say that the Cabinet's opponents condemn its action at this juncture on the ground that the change to lots affects only one installment of the Loan and is therefore comparatively powerless to win popularity. We have not the slightest doubt, however, that had the Government persisted in maintaining the discount system in this final instance, these very critics would have denounced it for indifference to popular sentiment and for following the example of the last Cabinet.

Settling day on the Tokyo Stock Exchange was a very simple matter. The total number of shares dealt in was only 38,040 as against 46,000 in June; their aggregate price being 1,660,700 yen, and their average price 43,659. So far as the Stock Exchange is concerned, the decision of the Cabinet about re-payment by lot is said to have produced an excellent effect since it shows that the Government is determined as far as possible to act in accordance with public sentiment. It remains to be seen whether this feeling will exercise any buoyant effect upon the market. There is certainly ample room for improvement seeing that the number of shares dealt in on final settlement last month was only about one third of the transactions recorded in a single day during the period of the boom.

Saturday, August 1.

The heads of the principal banks do not attach any great importance to the Government's change from the method of discounts to that of lots in redeeming the remaining portion of the First War Loan. They appear to think that had the lots system been adopted from the outset, a very considerable effect would have been exercised, but at this time of day, the change matters comparatively little. As usual, Mr. Sonoda, President of the Fifteenth Bank, goes to the root of the affair. He says that between discounts and lots there is very little to choose. Incomparably more important is it that the Government should strictly discharge its obligations as a borrower. When an exchequer bill is issued with a declaration on its face that it represents 100 yen lent to the Treasury, the holder of the bill ought to be able to feel assured that he possesses an infallible security for the re-payment of that sum at some future date. So long as the Government redeemed a portion of these bills at fixed intervals by lot, the lender had nothing to complain of. But so soon as the Government abandoned the lot system and went into the market to purchase its own I. O. Us. at the cheapest price possible, it virtually disavowed all obligation to pay back in full the money it had borrowed, and the inevitable result was that the loan bonds, ceasing to be valid security, tumbled down to any price that people were willing to pay for them. The gain to the Treasury was a mere bagatelle, whereas its loss of credit was incalculable, and the effect upon all Japan's national securities was disastrous. To the same category of unwise finance belonged the Treasury's recent proposal to rewrite exchequer bills at a rate of interest which amounted to over 8 per cent. Such finance was simply ruinous, and it did more harm than anything which had happened within the past two years.

The Committee of experts to which the banks of Japan entrusted the duty of considering the question of financial adjustment has presented its report after much deliberation. The document formulates seven decisions. First, that all public works depending on loans shall be discontinued. This refers to works already contemplated. Secondly, that no loans shall be raised in the future for any increase of old enterprises or undertaking of new. Thirdly, that all enterprises which have received the approval of the Diet shall be financed with the proceeds of administrative economies. Fourthly, that all domestic loans not yet issued shall be abandoned. Fifthly, that so far as is possible without recourse to increased taxation, the sum devoted to the redemption of national debts shall be augmented, that such sum shall not fall short of 50 million yen annually, and that it shall be paid in ready money not by the method of re-writing. Sixthly, that all future redemptions of national debts shall be effected by lots at the period of maturity, except in such cases as the conversion of a debt may be possible on advantageous terms. And, seventhly, that a committee shall be appointed to supervise the Government's adjustment of the national debts, such committee to comprise the Chief of the Audit Bureau, and members selected from the two Houses of the Diet and from business men in general. It will be observed that the above recommendations seem to err on the side of repetition, but we imagine that form has been sacrificed to explicitness. It is certain that if such a programme could be carried out, the effect upon the national credit would be immense. Notable also is the fact that the committee makes no direct allusion to cutting down unproductive expenditures.

Japanese newspapers speak with much satisfaction of the renewed activity in the silk market. After long months of waiting signs of returning prosperity are beginning to be visible in Yokohama.

Reports from Formosa indicate that the advance of the Aiyu lines in the Shinshiku district has brought into Japanese possession extensive camphor fields. One has been already worked but still possesses large resources. The other is altogether virgin, and is said to be exceedingly rich, many of the trees having a circumference of 20 ft. or upwards.

The section of the Central West Railway between Nakatsu and Sakashita, a distance of six miles, was opened to traffic on the 1st inst. So far as distance is concerned, the line is insignificant, but as it runs through the celebrated valley of the Kiso River and as it crosses an iron bridge thrown over that turbulent stream, the enterprise attracts much attention. The region tapped by this line is proverbially rich in granite.

On the 31st ultimo the ratifications were exchanged in Tokyo of a Convention between the Netherlands and Japan for posting a Japanese Consul in Batavia.

Sunday, August 2.

Again the Customs returns show an excess of imports. The figures for the ten days ended the 31st ultimo are as follow:—

	Last ten days of July.	Totals since Jan. 1st.	Differences
	yen.	yen.	yen.
Exports .....	12,065,000	204,657,000	30,788,000
Imports .....	13,111,000	238,364,000	16,519,000
Excess of Imports .....	1,046,000	84,307,000

In the line of Exports there was an increase of 9 per cent. in raw silk, cotton yarns, habutaye, and tea; while on the side of Imports there was an increase of 7 per cent. in sugar, rice and kerosene.

Our readers doubtless remember that some time ago a union was effected between the S.S. Companies in the Yangtze valley, Japanese and foreign. This concord was disturbed however by the apparition of a Chinese Company, the Lih Shing, which arranged to put seven steamers on the river between Shanghai and Hanchow from the 1st of August. Competitive rates at once began to be charged in anticipation of this event and heavy losses resulted. Finally, however, a compact was made for buying off the Chinese Company in consideration of a payment of 500 dollars monthly and some minor compensation. This compact is to remain in operation until the opening of the railway, which is expected to take place about a year hence and which will certainly not improve the situation for the steamship companies.

In accordance with the result of representations recently made to the Government by the Agricultural and Industrial Banks throughout the Empire, it has been decided that the Treasury will take up two million yen worth of debentures of the Hypothec Bank, which latter will place the money at the disposal of the Agricultural and Industrial Banks. The debentures are to be taken at their face value, 1,000 yen, and they will carry interest at the rate of 6½ per cent. The period of redemption is to be 10 years. The Treasury has also agreed to lend half a million yen to the Colonization Bank of Hokkaido at an interest of 7½ per cent., the other conditions being identical with those for the debentures of the Agricultural and Industrial Banks.

The Asahi Shimbun has a paragraph saying that the Prime Minister has intimated to the Tokyo Railway Company that a change of morals must precede an application for a change of fares. This somewhat enigmatical utterance is alleged to be causing perplexity. At the recent meeting of the principal shareholders and the directors it appears to have been decided that Baron Shibusawa and Mr. Kondo Rempei should undertake to supervise the affairs of the Company, and that so soon as things were thus brought into complete order the directors should resign of their own free will. Possibly it is for the result of this supervision and for the subsequent resignation that Marquis Katsura is disposed to wait. Our contemporary adds that Baron Shibusawa no longer holds any shares in the Company, but that in consideration of his former relations with it he has consented to discharge the duties of supervisor in conjunction with Mr. Kondo. We give this rumour for what it may be worth.

Monday, August 3.

The Hochi Shimbun quotes an anonymous politician as saying that the Katsura Cabinet is not at all likely to run the risk of alienating popular favour by agreeing to a rise of fares for the Tokyo Railway. On the other hand, we (Japan Mail) venture to doubt whether Marquis Katsura is likely to curry the applause of the lower classes by means of a manifest injustice. He will judge the question of the Tokyo Railway on its own merits quite apart from what the roughs of the City may think.

In connexion with this, Mr. Amenomiya is quoted as nominally adhering to the uniform fare for which he is primarily responsible, but as insisting that an additional sen should be charged for every change of cars. How that would be a uniform fare we do not quite see, but we merely quote. Mr. Amenomiya points out that when he proposed the uniform fare, a mile of railway cost only 15,000 yen to build, whereas it now costs 30,000 yen or 60,000 for the double line. Therefore it is impossible to maintain the old rate consistently with a reasonable profit. What must be done is to charge a sen extra for every change of cars, and further to modify the agreement with the City. Under the present agreement the City receives one third of all the profits above 7 per cent., but Mr. Amenomiya would make the City's participation begin after 10 per cent., and be represented then by one half, not one third. He also suggests that the double line of over-head wires be converted into a single line and that water-power be substituted for steam as a generator of electricity.

The 3rd instant was the day fixed for the representatives of the Clearing Houses and their associated banks throughout the Empire to carry to Tokyo the decisions arrived at by those bodies with regard to financial adjustment. We have already reproduced the views of Tokyo and Yokohama. Those of Kyoto are now published and are found to be practically identical with the recommendations of Tokyo and Yokohama. A meeting will be held in Tokyo to collate the whole, and the result will doubtless be known in a few days.

Tuesday, August 4.

There is a serious dispute between the five great Fire Insurance companies of Japan and the Warehousing Companies. It is a question of rates. The Insurance Companies insist upon raising from 6 mo to 1 rin (an increase of 4 mo) the rate paid by the Warehousing Companies, and as the latter's policies aggregate more than 100 million yen annually, this increase of rates becomes a very serious question. The Insurance Companies claim, however, that nothing less can be remunerative, and it appears probable that the Warehouse Companies will have recourse to foreign Insurance Agencies, who are said to be ready to undertake the work at a smaller charge. There is also a report that the Warehouse Companies are not unlikely to become their own insurers. At all events this is another illustration of the advantages that the business world of Japan derives from the presence of foreign merchants.

The affairs of the Imperial Commercial Bank are said to be creating much anxiety. It will be remembered that a committee was appointed some time ago to investigate the condition of this Bank, and that by writing off a loss of 2,700,000 yen the possibility of completely adjusting the Bank's affairs was anticipated. But when the Committee came to examine the books—and it seems to have had considerable difficulty in getting access to them—it found that the Bank was including among its assets a sum of over 6 million yen lent on the security of shares. This discovery seems to have caused something like consternation, and it is thought that a considerable time will be needed before anything like a satisfactory report can be submitted to the shareholders. Meanwhile the Bank's shares—yen 35.00 paid up—are quoted at less than yen 15 in the open market.

According to present appearances Mr. Ozaki Yukio will be re-elected Mayor of Tokyo, but there is no knowing that things may not assume a different complexion tomorrow.

Wednesday, August 5.

Tokyo newspapers publish the text of the resolutions adopted by the five Chambers of Commerce of Tokyo, Yokohama, Nagoya, Kyoto and Osaka with regard to inviting American men of business to visit Japan. The choice of time is left to the invited, but the inviters suggest that some date between the 20th of October and the end of November would be most suitable. Yokohama is to be the port of debarkation and the visitors will be received there by delegates from the five Chambers of Commerce. The detailed programme to be pursued after the arrival of the visitors remains still to be decided, but that they will be treated with the utmost hospitality goes without saying. We observe that they are to receive presents illustrating the manufactures and productions of the various places visited.

On the 4th inst. the chief promoters of the Oigawa water power electricity scheme invited the editors of the principal newspapers of Tokyo to an entertainment and made them acquainted with the details of the scheme. Thus far 70,000 shares have been subscribed in Japan, and it is desired to raise the number to 90,000 at least.

Hitherto subscriptions have not been invited from the general public, but we interpret this incident as suggesting that such a course is now contemplated.

Thursday, August 6.

The Jiji Shimpō does not think that a satisfactory scheme of adjustment can possibly be elaborated by the 10th inst. when a general meeting of the shareholders of the Imperial Commercial Bank is to be held. The question at issue, so far as we can see is, whether certain sums shall be written off as losses or whether they shall be entered as possible assets. It is believed in well-informed circles that if a resolute scheme of adjustment be adopted, the Bank has a most hopeful future, but unquestionably heroic measures are necessary at this juncture.

It is expected, according to Tokyo newspapers, that the money market will gradually become easier during the next 3 or 4 months. There is certainly plenty of room for improvement in this respect, for the rate of interest in the open market is now ruling at nearly 10 per cent.

THE "NOVOE VREMYA."

We do not know how far the Novoe Vremya may be taken as expressing public opinion in Russia. It is at all events the organ of the Chauvinist Party, and it may be interpreted as setting forth their views. Nothing could well be plainer than its language about the Amur Railway, as quoted in an article which the Jiji Shimpō translates. Russian statesmen have been assiduously telling the world that the Amur Railway is purely an instrument of colonization, but the Novoe Vremya alleges with almost brutal frankness that Russia is not sinking 300 million roubles of capital and saddling herself with maintenance outlays of 20 millions a year merely to facilitate colonization. She is undertaking this great work for the sake of her military prestige in Eastern Asia, and when the Railway is finished, the Japanese will no longer be able to lord it in Korea; the Chinese will have to change their countenance in Harbin, and the Americans and Japanese must cease to meddle with Mongolia. In short the Railway is to be a potent instrument for establishing Russia's over-lordship in Central and Eastern Asia. The Novoe Vremya goes on to insist that not a single Chinese or Japanese labourer must be employed upon the line, since to give them work there would be simply to facilitate the coming of spies. There is more in the same strain, and such writing is much to be regretted, for the Russians can hardly expect the Japanese not to take them at their own estimate of themselves. We do not for our own part see that the building of the Amur Railway will add so very much to the strength of Russia's military position in the East, for although it will greatly facilitate land operations, it can not correct the effacement under which she still suffers at sea.

THE TOKYO STOCK EXCHANGE.

Saturday, August 1.

The 31st ultimo saw considerable activity on the Tokyo Stock Exchange. Owing to the Treasury's announcement with regard to the repayment of the next installment of the War Loan by lot, which announcement is taken as indicating the Government's general policy, a feeling of buoyancy asserted itself and this, supplemented by the fine weather, led to a general rise of prices. At the closing quotations for September delivery, the various shares yield the following returns to investors:—Tanko, 8.47; Tokyo Railway, 6.09; Yusen K., 7.52; Tokyo Gas, 8.02; Fuji Gas, 10.65; Kanegafuchi Spinning, 9.12; Beer, 9.77; Sugar, 10.63; Stock Exchange, 4.43. On the other hand, the banks' rate of interest is 9.30.

Monday, August 3.

The buoyant feeling manifested on the 31st ultimo was somewhat checked on the 1st instant by the fact that once again the result of the foreign trade for the 10 days ended July 31st showed an unfavourable balance. Nevertheless prices moved up a little and, on the whole, the general feeling was firm.

Tuesday, August 4.

Monday was another day of depression on the Tokyo Stock Exchange. People seem to be alarmed about the action of the American Railway Companies, and its possible effect on Japanese trade, especially the maritime carrying business. Hence the shares of the Yusen Kaisha and the Toyo Kisen Kaisha tumbled down 2 points and 3 points respectively, and all other shares were dragged downwards in their wake. Apparently there is another period of debacle in sight. Holders are selling and buyers are abstaining.

Wednesday, August 5.

The market opened dull on Tuesday. There was no ostensible reason for depression, the action of the American Railways having exhausted its evil effect the previous day. But buyers had received so many blows that they hesitated to incur new risks, and the forenoon session closed flat. In the afternoon, however, a rumour was circulated that the Bank of Japan was about to lower its daily rate of interest by 2 rin, and this infused some vigour into the situation. Prices rose appreciably, but did not in any case reach the level at which they had stood on Saturday. On the whole it would seem that the rumour about the Bank was regarded as premature.

Thursday, August 6.

The 5th instant was an exceedingly dull day on the Tokyo Stock Exchange. The rumour of a lowering of rate by the Bank of Japan was found to be untrue, and no other incentive offering, buyers desisted almost entirely. August is always a depressed month and there will evidently be no exception to that rule this year.

Friday, August 7.

Thursday was an absolutely dead day on the Tokyo Stock Exchange. There were practically no transactions. It was what the Japanese call a "dog-day market." Quotations either remained without change, or varied within petty fractional limits. We append the figures for October delivery:—

	Aug. 5th.	Aug. 6th.
Tanko Kisen .....	82.90	—	—
Tokyo Railway .....	57.60	57.60	—
Kei-Hin Railway .....	—	—	—
Yusen Kaisha .....	78.75	78.65	— .10
Toyo Kisen .....	29.20	29.90	+ .70
Tokyo Gas .....	—	—	—
Tokyo Dento .....	—	65.00	—
Fuji Gas Spinning .....	84.50	84.65	+ .15
Tokyo Spinning .....	32.80	32.80	—
Kanegafuchi Spinning .....	87.45	87.10	— .35
Beer .....	76.90	—	—
Sugar .....	72.25	72.60	+ .35
Takarada (Hoden) Oil .....	—	—	—
Nippon Oil .....	—	—	—
Namboku .....	—	—	—
Stock Exchange .....	111.60	111.55	— .05

NOTES ON CURRENT EVENTS.

The American-Japanese Convention for the Protection of Trademarks and Patents was duly examined and approved by the Privy Council on the 30th ultimo and now awaits Imperial sanction. It will doubtless be published in a few days. Meanwhile rumour says that it provides full mutual protection for the trade-marks, patents, designs and copyrights of the subjects and citizens of the high contracting Parties. With regard to Korea, the United States Government agrees that complaints of infringement preferred by American citizens shall be adjudicated by Japanese tribunals.

All the Tokyo newspapers publish intelligence that the Dakota Authorities recently decided to deny residential privileges to Japanese subjects. In consequence of this decision orders were issued that all Japanese residing with the territory must withdraw by the 10th of July. Naturally this at once provoked a vehement protest from Baron Takahira, Japanese Ambassador in Washington, and the United States Government issued instructions for postponing the operation of the order. Meanwhile Mr. Matsubara, Japanese Consul in Chicago, has been commissioned to investigate the matter locally, and he set out for that purpose on the 31st of July. It is a singular incident, for as the Treaty between Japan and America distinctly confers residential privileges for either nationals within the territories of the other, the Dakota Authorities are obviously incompetent to enforce any such veto as the above.

In the year 1905 the number of Indian students in Tokyo totalled as much as from 70 to 80, but they now aggregate less than one half of that figure. Three reasons are assigned for this falling off. The first is that owing to lack of accommodation the students find great difficulty in obtaining access to the technical schools where they are specially desirous of conducting their studies. Nearly all that come to Japan do so, not for purposes of general education, but to develop some practical speciality. The second reason is that Japanese factories do not open their doors very liberally to foreign visitors. So it is journalistically reported, at all events. The third reason, which we believe to be the real one, is the language difficulty. These Indian students are generally pretty well versed in English before they come to Japan, but in order to conduct their studies profitably at Japanese technical schools, they must of necessity study the Japanese language, and although they show great quickness in acquiring it, everybody who has made the attempt knows what an arduous task it involves. We cannot wonder that the Indian students are discouraged.

A centre of depression is reported to be moving up in a northwesterly direction from the Riukiu Islands, and the Kyushu district has been warned. The 8th inst. will be the doyo-aki or break-up of the dog-days. In other words, the autumn is supposed to set in from that date. On the whole the weather this season has been very regular. The anxious time will come at the close of this month when the rice is flowering.

The centre of depression which declared itself in the neighbourhood of the Riukiu Archipelago on the 4th inst., was then heading to the northwest, a course which would have carried it to the Continent. But it subsequently changed its direction to the north and thereafter to the northeast, so that it seems likely to strike the west part of Japan, including portions of Kyushu and of Shikoku. There is also a small centre of depression off Kadzusa.

HANARI YAMA.

THE LONELY MOUNTAIN.

She stands alone upon the crowded plain
Silent, impassive, all her forests shorn,
A nun apart from the caressing hills.
Yet legend says that in that calm form lurks
A fire, which like a mighty passion nursed
Throughout long years will break to life at length.
Around her feet are winding flower-edged lanes,
Where summer lovers whisper tender vows,
And raspberries grow thick which children pluck
And with still empty baskets scramble home.
Climb up that straight unlovely breast of hers,
And reach the summit where 'neath treacherous grass,
A crater seethed in far-forgotten times,
Towards the West, like some chained Titan, sprawls
Purple Asama who in helpless rage
Growls at himself and all the trembling world.
And to the South there gleam the far blue heights
Enchanted mountains of a land of dreams.
And all across the plains are clustering hills
Where unheard cuckoos call to spirit loves
And nightingales trill songs to unseen flowers.
O wondrous world of distant mountain tops!
A world of spacious visions, lofty thoughts;
A world of clouds, blue mornings and of God.
But yet how many souls there are who stand
Hanari-like upon the crowded plain.

M.K.

THE PROFITS OF RACE CLUBS.

The Kwansai Bahitsu Kairyo Kaisha (The Kwansai Horse Improvement Company) held its half-yearly meeting on July 30th at the Osaka Chamber of Commerce, when the following accounts were submitted and adopted:—

	yen
Net Profit .....	34,729.000
Placed to Legal Reserve .....	2,000.000
Placed to Special Reserve .....	2,000.000
Placed to Reserve for the establishment of a Stud .....	250.000
Bounty for the Improvement of Horses .....	250.000
Dividend at the rate of 12 per cent. annum .....	30,000.000
Carried forward .....	229.003

The Naruo Bahitsu Kairyo Kaisha (the Naruo Horse Improvement Company) held its half-yearly general meeting on July at the Kobe Chamber of Commerce, when the following account were adopted:—

	yen
Net Profit .....	32,086.100
Placed to Legal Reserve .....	1,700.000
Placed to Special Reserve .....	1,700.000
Establishment Expenditure .....	998.880
Placed to Reserve for the purchase of Lands and Buildings .....	1,500.000
Placed to Reserve for the establishment of a Stud .....	500.000
Bounty for the improvement of horses .....	500.000
Placed to Reserve for the repayment of Loans .....	10,000.000
Bonuses to officials .....	1,600.000
Dividend at the rate of 15 per cent. per annum .....	12,500.000
Carried Forward .....	1,087.120

—Kobe Herald.

An ordinary conference of the Cabinet was held at 9 a.m. on Aug. 4th. Baron Goto, Minister for Communications, was absent in consequence of illness.

THE BOOKSHELF.

The Forewarners, by GIOVANNI CENA, translated from the Italian by OLIVIA AGRESTI ROSSETTI. London, George Bell and Sons.

FROM the physical hardships of a babyhood and a youth passed in sordid penury, or from the struggle for existence amid sorrows and trials to which the bravest often succumb, there are born many unbalanced minds, morbidly sensitive and incapable of viewing anything with wholesome eyes. The world knows little about the moral state of these unhappy beings. The conditions of their life incapacitate them for telling their own stories intelligently. They do not write biographies of themselves. If they had the talent to do so, they would not be the waifs and strays that they are. Yet, as they are the materials out of which anarchists, nihilists, socialists and all the distraught denizens of the submerged classes are constructed, it would be infinitely valuable to the administrator and the reformer could he obtain a photograph of their outlook upon life. Probably Giovanni Cena entertained the project of producing such a photograph when he sat down to write "The Forewarners." And certainly he has succeeded in drawing a picture of infinite sadness. One seems to be listening to the notes of over-strung harps struck by trembling hands, and to a libretto which deals only with pathetic and dramatic motives. It may be so, in fact, for he himself cannot but have felt what he writes, and that others have felt similarly we know from the works of such men as Ibsen, Bakunin, Tolstoi, and their fellows. But are there even in the most sombre stratum of society many men to whom every incident of life and every adjunct of existence presents itself in such disturbed proportions and amid such a mist of tears? Probably few lives have been without moments when even the joyous warbling of birds and the bright glint of the sunshine have inflicted or suggested intolerable pain. But to how very few has this distraught condition been perpetual? Stanga, as Cena portrays him, is not a type; he is rather a freak. He speaks from the verge of the grave, his intention—defeated by accident—being to die for the sake of bringing his memorial to public notice, just as the samurai of old Japan, and occasionally some of their modern successors, killed themselves to give weight to their last testament. A memorialist writing in the shadow of the tomb—could he be other than dejected and distraught? Nevertheless, while Stanga's memorial is essentially a threnody, it also depicts a deeply interesting phase of Italian life which probably exists more or less as Cena describes it, though largely free from the pall of melancholy despair in which he wraps it. That is doubtless the thought which induced Mrs. Humphry Ward to say of "The Forewarners":—"In this little book we have at last a voice from this unknown world—the world of the Italian working class—a voice of singular sincerity, expressing an intimate and first-hand knowledge." Mrs. Humphry Ward is confident. She vouches for the sincerity and the truth of the picture. But would her voice have been equally assured had she been writing a criticism instead of a preface? It is for the individual reader to judge. For our own part, while accepting the incidents as historical, we are inclined to regard the tone as morbid and fanciful. At all events the book is intensely interesting.

The Orchard Close; by ALICE and CLAUDE ASKEW. London, "George Bell and Company.

As to the style in which this book is written, a few extracts will be more convincing than any analysis:—

He bent his head down and kissed her lips, shivering himself with a fine ecstasy.

The very swish of Lady Cecilia's short skirts as she settled herself on the sofa conveyed a warning to the woman who had studied her sex carefully in the Simla text-book.

The three women drank diluted hot water out of delicate Sèvres cups and discussed the latest novel, the latest play.

Joy noticed the beauty of her hips; the lithe exquisite grace of her whole form; the superb air of abandonment.

How well he recollected the soft fashion Vanessa had of trailing her skirts, the way she held her long, slender body and the thick waves of her ebony hair framing her low brow.

Our readers will be prepared to hear that the main elements of the plot consist of love, jealousy and sordid intrigue; perhaps a wise choice of material, for it does not elude the manipulation of the fair authoresses. They do not attempt to swim out of their depth, and they are perfectly frank about their identity, for to a woman only is it given to discourse of chiffons as they discourse. But we are not to be understood as depreciating the book. It is a well told story, and, though showing no remarkable originality of plot or description, it holds the reader's interest throughout. There are some pathetic scenes and some dramatic, so that, on the whole, the "Orchard Close" can not be denied a place among works which will have their vogue, though innocent of any claim to immortality.

The Moth and the Flame, by ALICE MAUD MEADOWS; John Milne's Colonial Series, London.

A WOMAN of compelling beauty with exceedingly small prudery is the central figure of Miss Meadows' interesting romance. She is loved passionately by two men—which involves an abundant accompaniment of very whole-hearted kissing and embracing—and she returns the love of one, who, however, is not rich enough to marry her, whereas she is comparatively indifferent to the other though she consents to marry him for his wealth. Of the former's affection she has wearied, but her coldness only inflames his ardour, and he declines to be thrust out of her life. The tragedy is built upon these foundations and is carried through all its stages, with much skill, to a denouement as shocking as it is dramatic. Cora Westwood and Jose Navaro's characters are cleverly drawn. If there be any criticism it is that the catastrophe of their lives casts its shadow too much into the foreground. Cora shares the stage in only a little greater prominence than Margret Lumley, whose jealousy is almost too passionate to be consistent with sanity though she is depicted so as to retain the reader's sympathy even in her moments of least self-restraint. Miss Meadows is already known to the public as the authoress of "A million of Money," "I Charge You Both" and "Cut by Society." This new work of hers will certainly enhance her reputation.

The Angel and the Author and Others, by JEROME K. JEROME. London, T. Fisher Unwin.

SOME pages of Jerome Jerome's work remind us of Artemus Ward; some have a more vivid likeness to Mark Twain; some savour a little of Max Adeler; and some are almost exact replicas of Thackeray. Possibly this last resemblance has not occurred to all Mr. Jerome's readers. We invite them, in that case, to peruse the following extract:—

I do not believe in the "Darby and Joan" of the song. They belong to song-land. To accept them I need a piano, a sympathetic contralto voice, a firelight effect, and that sentimental mood in myself, the foundation of which is a good dinner well digested. But there are Darbys and Joans of real flesh and blood to be met with—God bless them, and send more for our example—wholesome living men and women, brave, struggling, souls with commonsense. Ah, yes! they have quarrelled; had their dark house of bitterness, of hate, when he wished to heaven he had never met her, and told her so. How could he have guessed those sweet lips could utter such cruel words: those tender eyes, he loved to kiss, flash with scorn and anger?

And she, had she known what lay behind; those days when he knelt before her, swore that his only dream was to save her from all pain. Passion lies dead; it is a flame that burns out quickly. The most beautiful face in the world grows indifferent to us when we have sat opposite it every morning at breakfast, every evening at supper, for a brief year or two. Passion is the seed. Love grows from it, a tender sapling, beautiful to look upon, but wondrous frail, easily broken, easily trampled on during those first years of wedded life. Only by much nursing, by long caring-for, watered with tears, shall it grow into a sturdy tree, defiant of the winds, beneath which Darby and Joan shall sit sheltered in old age.

But Mr. Jerome never wears cap and bells merely to provoke laughter—at least not in the pages of "The Angel and the Author and Others," whatever he may have done in "Three Men on the Bummel." Indeed to us the two books are not comparable. The one is mere humour, seldom rising to the level of wit and hardly ever showing indications of a serious purpose; the other is a satire of the ways of the 20th century; keen, penetrating and redolent of deep thought. It should do much good, for it holds up to comical view many of the fads and follies of the day, and by the time we have done looking at them in Mr. Jerome's company, we want to see them obliterated altogether. Take Mrs. Wilkins, for example, on Sandowism and appendicitis:—

"There was a gent in Middle Temple Lane," said Mrs. Wilkins, "as I used to do for. It's my belief as 'e killed 'imself worrying twenty-four hours a day over what 'e called 'is 'ygiene. Leastways 'e's dead and buried now, which must be a comfort to 'imself, feeling as at last 'e's out of danger. All 'is time 'e spent taking care of 'imself—didn't seem to 'ave a leisure moment in which to live. For 'alf an hour every morning 'e'd lie on 'is back on the floor, which is a draughty place, I always 'old, at the best of times, with nothing on but 'is pyjamas, waving 'is arms and legs about, and twisting 'imself into shapes unnatural to a Christian. Then 'e found out that everything 'e'd been doing on 'is back was just all wrong, so 'e turned over and did tricks on 'is stomach—begging your pardon for using the word—that you'd 'ave thought more fit and proper to a worm than to a man. Then all that was discovered to be a mistake. There don't seem nothing certain in these matters. That's the awkward part of it, so it seems to me. 'E got 'imself a machine, by means of which 'e'd ang 'imself up to the wall, and behave for all the world like a beetle with a pin stuck through 'im, poor thing. It used to give me the shudders to catch sight of 'im through the 'alf-open door. For that was part of the game: you 'ad to 'ave a current of air through the room, the result of which was that for six months out of the year 'e'd be coughing and blowing 'is nose from morning to night. It was the new treatment, so 'e'd explain to me. You got yourself accustomed to draughts so that they didn't 'urt you, and if you died in the process that only proved that you never ought to 'ave been born.

"Then there came in this new Japanese business, and 'e'd 'ire a little smiling 'eathen to chuck 'im about 'is room for 'alf an hour every morning after breakfast. It got on my nerves after a while 'earing 'im being bumped on the floor every minute, or flung with 'is 'ead into the fire-place. But 'e always said it was doing 'im good. 'E'd argue that it freshened up 'is liver. It was 'is liver that 'e seemed to live for—didn't appear to 'ave any other interest in life. It was the same with 'is food. One year it would be nothing but meat, and next door to raw at that. One of them medical papers 'ad suddenly discovered that we were intended to be a sort of wild beast. The wonder to me is that 'e didn't go out 'unting chickens with a club, and bring 'em 'ome and eat 'em on the mat without any further fuss. For drink it would be boiling water that burnt my fingers merely 'andling the glass. Then some other crank came out with the information that every other crank was wrong—which, taken by itself, sounds natural enough—that meat was fatal to the human system. Upon that 'e becomes all at once a raging, tearing vegetarian, and trouble enough I 'ad learning twenty different ways of cooking beans, which didn't make, so far as I could ever see, the slightest difference—beans they were, and beans they tasted like, whether you called them engout il la maison, or cuteis à la Pompadour. But it seemed to please 'im.

"On this subject of health we are much too ready to follow advice," I agreed. "A cousin of mine, Mrs. Wilkins, had a wife who suffered occasionally from headaches. No medicine relieved her of them—not altogether. And one day by chance she met a friend who said: 'Come straight with me to Dr. Blank,' who happened to be a specialist famous for having invented a new disease that nobody until the year before had ever heard of. She accompanied her friend to Dr. Blank, and in less than ten minutes he had persuaded her that she had got this new disease, and got it badly; and that her only chance was to let him cut her open and have it out. She was a tolerably healthy woman, with the exception of these occasional headaches, but from what that specialist said it was doubtful whether she would get home alive, unless she let him operate on her then and there, and her friend, who appeared delighted, urged her not to commit suicide, as it were by missing her turn.

"The result was she consented, and afterwards went home in a four-wheeled cab, and put herself to bed. Her husband, when he returned in the evening and was told, was furious. He said it was all humbug, and by this time she was ready to agree with him. He put on his hat, and started to go to that specialist a bit of his mind. The specialist was out, and he had to bottle up his rage until the morning. By then, his wife now really ill for the first time in her life, his indignation had reached boiling point. He was at that specialist's door at half-past nine o'clock. At half-past eleven he came back, also in a four-wheeled cab, and day and night nurses for both of them were wired for. He also, it appeared, had arrived at that specialist's door only just in time."

These selections are fairly typical. The book is delightful. One reads it with avidity from cover to cover, and hopes that the Author is only on the threshold of production.

Milly and Olly, by MRS. HUMPHRY WARD.
London. T. Fisher Unwin.

MRS. WARD calls this "a story for children," and says that it was written twenty-seven years ago. We do not interpret her to mean that the book is now re-published, for had it been given to the world twenty-seven years ago, it would have made itself remembered. A story of children it certainly is, but not a story for children, if by the latter term we are to understand a tale fit to entertain little ears only. "Milly and Olly" is a description of a holiday passed among the mountains by two children and their parents, and from first to last there is not a single lapse into pen-painting nor a moment's departure from the natural and the simple. One lives with the children, visits in their company mountains and vales trodden by their little feet, and seems to hear the sound of their baby voices. That is a pleasure for the grown-up, and perhaps a still greater pleasure for the aged.

Shooting in China, by T. R. JERNIGAN;
Methodist Publishing House, Shanghai.

THIS is a handsome volume of 305 pages by the distinguished author of "China in Law and Commerce." It contains 12 illustrations, all of the greatest interest. Mr. Jernigan has a refreshingly straightforward style. He lays himself out to supply information, and since he has supplemented his own very large stock by wide research and careful observation in the subjects to which this volume is devoted, the book is veritably exhaustive. It seems to tell everything that a foreign sportsman in China needs to know. Even the language and the currency are lucidly discussed, though truly there is not much to choose between them in point of perplexity. Two chapters are devoted to accurate descriptions of the small and big game of China, and if the house-boat, the gun and the dog are discussed—most useful advice as to costume being appended—so also are Chinese sportsmen and weapons, and to anyone familiar with the history of field-sport as practised in Japan in ancient and mediæval days, it will not be surprising to learn that as far back as the 13th century the Emperors of the Yuan dynasty of Mongols had their parks and preserves when they used to hunt every winter in company with their nobles. Quantum mutati ab illis may be applied to their modern representatives, who will not feel proud if they read Mr. Jernigan's pages. The author further takes us with him into the Yangtze, the Chientang and the Ningpo Lakes, and lest any one should imagine that China of to-day no longer offers inducements to sportsmen, we quote Mr. Jernigan's statement of the best authenticated mixed bags since 1900:—

At Kashing, 70 miles W. of Shanghai, for one gun in 9 days, 96 pheasants, 11 woodcock, 5 hare and 9 partridges.

At Wuhu, 2 guns, 21 1/2 days' shooting, 1316 head, made up of 889 pheasants, 27 deer, 254 teal, 24 duck, 26 woodcock, 32 hares, 18 partridges, 9 geese, 32 snipes, 1 bittern, 2 foxes, 1 wild cat, 1 ground hog.

Hangchow district, 3 guns, 3 days' shooting, 150 head, made up of 39 pheasants, 27 partridges, 50 woodcock, 9 hares, 1 goose, 10 teal, 4 snipes, 10 quail.

On the Tsien-Tang river, near Hangchow, in 1903, 5 guns, 14 days' shooting, 640 head of a very mixed nature, 334 pheasants, 115 partridges, 86 quail, 29 snipes, 15 woodcock, 11 hares, 2 deer, 1 goose, 3 duck, 8 teal, 26 pigeon, 1 plover, 2 foxes, 1 corn-crake, 1 civet cat, 1 wild cat, 1 coon dog.

The Author devotes a chapter to discussing some special Chinese customs which are distinctly quaint from an Occidental point of view, though doubtless to a Chinaman there are a thousand similar oddities in Western ways. We cannot doubt that Mr. Jernigan's work will monopolise the field, so far as sport in China is concerned, for many a year to come. It concludes with extracts from the diary of Mr. H. T. Wade, who made his first shooting trip from Shanghai in 1866.

Social Psychology. By EDWARD ALSWORTH ROSS.
New York, The Macmillan Company, 1908.

PROFESSOR ROSS fills the chair of Sociology at the University of Wisconsin, and has already written several books upon subjects that are closely akin to that which he has given to this last one; and yet he claims by imputation that this is "the pioneer treatise professing to deal systematically with the subject of social psychology." That is hardly ingenious, for it cannot be held technically that a book which is simply a compilation of more or less strange events, personal or communal, that have been recorded by others, no matter how incisive may be the running comments upon them, or how fresh and strong the warp which binds them together, is in reality anything like a pioneer. Indeed, we are quite unable to see what there is in this book that is new. Nevertheless it is interesting and remarkably useful, if for no other reason than that it gives us, in a most convenient form a lot of curious bits of information that often cause the waste of a good deal of time when we wish to track them back to their authoritative source. We begin with those in the second chapter, "Suggestibility," where the story is told of the professor of chemistry who tricked his audience with distilled water which he said was "a chemical with a strong and peculiar odor," and by the end of a minute had three-fourths of the people in the room declaring they detected the "peculiar odor," and we find others culled from scientific works, magazines, popular books, essays, and the like; Shakespeare is drawn upon, and so are a hundred so-called standard works, while even the uncertain newspaper does duty. The volume is designed, manifestly, for use as a text-book, for at the end of each chapter we find a summary and an outline of questions for exercises, which are supposed to be written by the student.

It often happens that an author, in his Preface, gives us a clear clue to his motive and method, and we find something of these in the present case, although, except in name, we hesitate about concurring in Mr. Ross' statement that he is launching a new vessel upon the sea of literature. Later, he tries to define "Social Psychology" as a study of psychic planes and currents that come into existence among men in consequence of their associations. Is not this precisely what all teachers and lecturers have been claiming for many years? Is there anything new in the statement "No two persons have just the same endowment?" It is rather rude to say this is trite; but the declaration is truthful, and, we are sorry to admit it, yet the major part of the contents of this volume, whether citation or conclusion, is open to the same charge. The marginal subtitles indicate clearly what the author aims at in his demonstration, and these do not give us much that is new, although they will be found extremely useful by students. The table of contents, too, is lacking altogether in novel features; but it is most conveniently arranged. It is very probable that careful readers who are in the habit of making notes in their commonplace books, or who jot down interesting items on cards for future reference, will be grateful to Mr. Ross for his assistance. By way of example in this direction; it is likely that a good many people will be glad to make note of the story which tells us why a bottle of wine is usually broken on the bow of a ship at the time of launching: "Our pagan ancestors, when they launched a ship, bound a captive to the rollers to propitiate the god of the sea. The bottle of wine broken on the ship's prow to day is our way of 'reddening the keel' of a vessel to be launched and insuring her good luck. The old form is kept, but what a change in the spirit!" If, then, there are several hundred of just such suggestions, surely it would be ungracious to say that the book has been written for naught. Teachers of psychology will quickly decide for themselves as to the merits of the volume as a textbook to be used in their classrooms, still we are very strongly of the opinion that all these will concur in a vote of thanks to Mr. Ross for the trouble he has taken to put his material into such a conveniently accessible shape.

YACHTING.

The weather for yachtsmen on Saturday afternoon while not altogether satisfactory was on the whole fairly good.

The big boats started on a cruising race to Uraga, only four going out, and they crossed the line as follows: Nanivva 1.15.20, Wanderer 1.15.20, Rieter 1.15.15, Aborigine 1.15.42. When they went out of sight Rieter seemed to be in the lead with Nanivva not far off. The race resulted in a win for Nanivva.

Six 22-raters raced over the Tachibana course, Sunbeam having at one time a good lead but being overhauled and passed by Pele about halfway between Tachibana and the Mandarin Bluff marks. Elsa, which was in a good position, burst her peak halliards, and had to return when close to the latter mark. Times:—

	Start. h.m.s.	Finish. h.m.s.
Valkyrien .....	2.15.30	4.07.20
Elsa .....	2.15.30	Retd.
Pele .....	2.15.50	4.04.20
Winsome .....	2.15.23	4.11.10
Edna .....	2.15.33	4.13.30
Sunbeam .....	2.15.33	4.06.46

Nine Larks raced, four of which were disqualified presumably for not casting off from their moorings in time, and one returned. Of the others No. 11 finished at 4.13.43 and No. 12 at 4.17.52.

MF. MATSUMOTO KUMPEI ON UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE IN JAPAN.

As Mr. Matsumoto's views on universal suffrage have lately been discussed by certain Japanese newspapers, I have taken the trouble to make a literal translation of an open letter addressed by him to the members of the House of Representatives in the fall of 1906. This letter is well worth preserving not only for its eloquence but as tending to show how far the spirit of democracy prevails among a small circle of Japanese politicians. Mr. Matsumoto is not likely to attract many followers for some years to come. He lost his seat at the last Election. The magazine which was regarded as his organ the Dai Nihon has ceased to appear. One or two other enterprises which he started have failed to realize his expectations. He was partly educated in America, and he seems to labour under the impression that Japan is ready for the adoption of democratic institutions such as exist in America. Some people say that Mr. Matsumoto is half a century ahead of the times in which his lot is cast. This may be so. Anyhow he is in earnest. He has a good command of language and is fearless in his exposure of the weaknesses, the corruption and the inefficiency of the present form of government in this country. Here is a translation of the letter which attracted considerable attention at the time of its appearance, the purport of which only was then given in these columns:—

GENTLEMEN OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, Memphis, the famous Capital of ancient Egypt, lies buried many feet beneath the earth. Thebes, once so opulent and magnificent, is now covered by the sand of the desert. But the pyramids remain as firm and immovable as ever. Five thousand years of wind and rain have beaten against them in vain. There, by the side of Egypt's great river they rear their lofty heads to the sky, constituting an abiding monument, and an adequate proof, of the greatness of the civilisation of ancient Egypt. To what do these gigantic structures owe their marvellous stability? To nothing but the breadth and firmness of their foundations.

It is the same with all human institutions and structures. They are all subject to one fundamental physical law. There are many influences which contribute to the rise and fall of nations and empires. There are laws that determine their destiny from which there is no escape, but it is true to say that in all things connected with man where the base on which a structure rests is narrow, weak and lacking in depth, rapid destruction is sure to be its fate.

Monarchy declined and gave place to an Oligarchy of Princes; and this again, waxing weak, was replaced by Aristocracy; which in its turn had to make way for Democracy. This was brought about by the working of natural forces (which caused the fittest to survive)*. A civilisation which centres in an aristocracy is not equal to a civilisation that makes a whole nation its foundation. The time comes when armies composed of hereditary warriors belonging to a special class have to bow the knee to armies composed of ordinary citizens (militia men). This principle can be applied to all the political systems that the world has known. How was it that the Greek Democracy which was evolved in an age of great enlightenment in less than two centuries fell to pieces? How was it that the Great Roman Republic, whose armies brought the whole known world under its dominion, after a life of only 300 years perished (ignominiously), a victim to corruption and decrepitude? Those who have read Montesquieu's history of the greatness and the decline of Rome (Les causes de la Grandeur des Romains et de leur Décadence) will understand thoroughly what were the sources of her prosperity and her decline, of her gains and her losses, without waiting for my explanation. They will perceive on how slender, superficial and insecure a basis the Roman democracy was erected.

We do not need to be told by learned men that England's strength and wealth to-day are largely owing to her democratic government. The reason why after hundreds of years this form of government ever shows signs of new life, still goes on adding to the country's strength and wealth and developing its civilisation, must be clear to everybody without demonstration.

* The clauses in brackets are not in the original.

The Russo-Japan war in a number of significant ways revealed some strange contrasts. One peculiar characteristic of the late war which has attracted the attention of the whole world is the fact that it was a war between a very old and big despotically ruled country and a country that has only recently adopted democracy. As in the war between Persia and Greece, so in the Russo-Japanese war the comparative merits and advantages of democracy and absolutism were tested and determined; the result being that Japan showed to the whole world in the clearest and most dazzling manner the great superiority of democracy. When we come to consider the matter, we perceive that there are a great many post-bellum measures that need to be carried out to day, but there is not one that is greater or more urgent than the reform and extension of our parliamentary system in a fundamental manner by granting universal suffrage to the nation. The present is a most suitable time for you gentlemen to exert yourselves to the utmost to render our democracy stable to all time by making its basis as broad as the nation itself. Thus can you erect a political pyramid that nothing can destroy. Though no long time has elapsed since parliamentary government was first established in this country, during the ten odd years that it has been in existence, thanks to the development of intelligence and integrity among our people, it may be said that its working has been such as to leave nothing to regret. But the power to vote for members of the Diet, which forms the basis of our democratic form of government, is still only granted to a very small number of people. Though bearing the name of "popular government," our political system is in fact nothing more than a form of aristocracy. The majority of our people are not allowed to enjoy the privilege of participating in the government of the country. Only a small minority is favoured by our system of government. The future of a democracy erected on such a weak foundation, with nothing but one class of citizens as its basis, cannot but be regarded with grave anxiety. If the day should come when it is assailed by stormy winds and violent rain, such a political structure could hardly avoid a sudden and thorough collapse. Unless it is decided to make the whole nation the basis of our democracy there is no knowing what its destiny may be (its fate will be sealed.)

Ancient Rome when her far-famed wealth and power were at their height had conferred the franchise on one fourth of the whole nation. But Athens when at the zenith of her greatness had only given it to one twentieth part of her population. Montesquieu, in discussing the comparative greatness of the two countries, says that Rome's power and wealth compared to those of Greece were in the proportion of 20 to 4; that is, Rome was five times as prosperous as Greece. In this, indeed, lay the cause of the rapidity of the decline and fall of Greece as compared with Rome. Still even the foundation of the Roman Constitution was extremely narrow and quite inadequate to form the basis of a Republic whose dominion extended to the four quarters of the globe. Perceiving that owing to this Roman democracy was threatened with destruction Julius Caesar proposed to give new life to the dying State by conferring the Roman citizens' right to elect representatives—a right which formed the basis of the Roman system of government—on all the subjects of the Empire. But, alas! this projected reform was opposed in every way possible by a set of narrow minded, timid conservatives, who, misunderstanding the spirit of the times, regarded the measure as calculated to undermine and overthrow the Roman Constitution. And so it happened that the great political reform movement met with the same fate as Julius Caesar himself. And this subsequently caused the death of Roman democracy. It has been plainly shown by history, ancient and modern, that the conferring of political power on all subjects has the effect of increasing the strength of States to an enormous degree. Though there have been cases of nations displaying a large amount of energy without possessing much political power, the wealth, strength and glory of such nations has had nothing permanent about them, their existence being as brief as that of the convolvulus which blooms in the morning and fades before night. This is very clearly illustrated by the history of the most enlightened, powerful and wealthy modern states.

Unless political power is given to a whole nation by the establishment of universal suffrage, it is quite impossible to develop civilisation, wealth and strength as they ought to be developed. It is not necessary that I should enlarge much here on the general benefits which accompany the political power which universal suffrage confers, because I believe that the question of broadening the basis of democracy so that it shall include the whole nation is not a mere academic question over which men can dispute. It is a practical question, for in this lies the secret of national strength and national wealth. When a State has universal suffrage it is established on a thoroughly stable foundation. Then alone can we be sure that we are pursuing the proper course for the preservation of a great nation from destruction. In this lies the real significance of popular government, and on the attainment of this the new spirit of the Meiji era is bent.

While this is so, at present the franchise, which constitutes the basis of our parliamentary government, is limited to one small class of people, and the majority of the subjects of the empire are not allowed to participate in the enjoyment of this political privilege in any way whatever. Yet when there comes a crisis, according to the law of the land, the Government can force the whole nation to sacrifice itself in the defence of the empire and the throne. If I may be allowed to make use of the words of Montesquieu, I should say that the majority of our people are still unable to free themselves from the state of slavery in which they lived in feudal times. Though in the industrial, commercial and financial worlds the system of slavery has been entirely abolished as inhuman (人道ノ敵トシテ), political slavery exists openly in full strength to-day. Is it not one of the saddest of spectacles to see men trying to uphold this detestable system?

Even though the majority of our people are backward in demanding the privilege of voting, and are content to remain in a state of slavery because they are too ignorant to know even what political power means, how can we who know to a certain extent what humanity implies, who recognize that justice is the only sure guarantee of the existence of states bring ourselves to refuse to grant them the franchise?

Looking back over the 2,600 years of our history, never has there been a time when our country was in a more flourishing state than she is now; never have loyalty to the throne and love of country displayed themselves more conspicuously than they did in the late war. When that war broke out the country seemed to be on the verge of ruin, but the whole nation resolved to sacrifice itself to the last man rather than suffer defeat, and so we were able to pour troops by the myriad into the neighbouring continent—troops that nothing could daunt, who went through fire and water, who cared not a straw for frost or snow, who courted death for the sake of king and country, and thus it happened that we were able to win a glorious victory. And yet the State is reluctant to grant political power to the majority of these brave and loyal patriots. Can anything more heartless be imagined than the refusal to allow men who have defended their native land by facing death on the battlefield to have a voice in government affairs? If it be maintained that the franchise is not granted to the majority of His Majesty's subjects because to give political power to ignorant and wicked people would constitute a danger to the State, what is this but ignoring the existence of a large number of men who by the burning patriotism they have displayed, by their eagerness to die for their sovereign and their kinsmen, have won for themselves the implicit confidence of the whole nation? (These men at any rate are neither ignorant nor wicked).

If the mere devotion of a portion of their wealth to the service of the State (in the form of taxes) by property holders (and nothing else) is deemed a sufficient reason (qualification) for receiving special political rights, what is this but overlooking the fact that there is nothing so valuable to a State as a readiness on the part of subjects to sacrifice their lives for their sovereign and their country? If there existed a State that attached great weight to property and little weight to the sacrifice of life in the country's cause, that State could not hold together for a single day.

The question of granting political power to the whole nation by establishing universal suffrage is among necessary political reforms one of the most urgent, and it is impossible to discover any reason for not taking this step, regard the matter from what point of view we may, either theoretically or practically. Does not the position you gentlemen occupy make it obligatory on you to take the lead in pressing reforms on your fellow-countrymen? If you refuse to respond to this reasonable demand made on you by the nation, if you object to carry out this political reform, then you are no true representatives of the people and I fear very much that the unanswered voice of the people will seal your fate—that it will prove to be your death-knell.

I am, Respectfully yours,

MATSUMOTO KUMPEI.

The style of the original, though somewhat high flown, as the translation indicates, is full of verve and beauty. The subject could hardly have been presented in a more attractive way and the occasion chosen for bringing it forward was most suitable. The proposal produced little effect on the men to whom it was addressed, as might have been expected. But fifty years hence publicists who take the trouble to go back over the history of political development in this country may be very interested to find a copy of Mr. Matsumoto's earnest appeal to his fellow-countryman in favour of universal suffrage in the thirty-ninth year of Meiji. Posthumous notoriety Mr. Matsumoto is sure to obtain.

W.D.

BRITISH AND FOREIGN NAVIES.

In the first part of the Naval Annual the editor, Mr. T. A. Brassey, deals with the British Navy and writes the chapter on Comparative Strength and Comparative Tables, while for the chapter on Foreign Navies both the editor and Mr. Leyland are jointly responsible. Writing on New Construction Mr. Brassey says fewer ships than usual have been completed during the year under review, labour disputes delaying the work on contract-built ships. The only important vessels completed were the armoured cruisers Minotaur and Shannon. The battleships Agamemnon and Lord Nelson were among those delayed in completion; three battleships of the Dreadnought type, three armoured cruisers of the Invincible class and the armoured cruiser Defence have been launched; and three battleships have been laid down. We may note here that the armament of the Lord Nelson and Agamemnon, of which Lord Brassey speaks so favourably in his introduction to the Annual, (already noticed) is four 12-in. and ten 9.2-in. guns; and their estimated speed 18 knots. They are of 16,500 tons displacement. The Dreadnought underwent extensive trials for the purpose of experimenting with different propellers, and in her more recent tests attained a maximum speed of 20.7 knots with 26,400 I.H.P., as against 21.8 knots with 27,500 horsepower on her original trials. An objection to the Dreadnoughts for operations in the North Sea is their great draught, which is well over 30 feet when in seagoing trim, and should one of them be injured on one side to such an extent as to give her several degrees of heel the draught would be greatly increased. How many ports or docks could she enter in her injured condition? Of the three improved Dreadnoughts (Bellerophon, Temeraire and Sperb) launched, the chief details procurable have already been published, but it may be noted on the authority of the Annual that they are 700 tons bigger than their original, of 20.75 knots estimated speed, with similar armament, and turbine engines, the guns so disposed, however, that the centre turret instead of being on the upper deck will be raised to the same level as the fore-castle turret, thus obtaining for its pieces a greater arc of fire aft. Also 4 in. guns have been substituted for 12-pdrs. in the anti-torpedo boat armament. We may add that the Temeraire and Bellerophon will probably run their trials in September and October. The three battleships laid down are the St. Vincent, Collingwood and Vanguard (1,250 tons larger than the Dreadnought) of 21 knots estimated speed.

Coming to cruisers, the progress made with the Minotaur class is described, and, as in last year's volume, they are compared with other British and foreign ships, with the result that Mr. Brassey declares they will certainly be better able to fight their guns in a seaway than the Duke of Edinburgh or Black Prince. The Japanese cruisers Tsukuba and Kurama, he says, each carry four 12-in. guns in addition to a good secondary battery but their speed is 1 to 2 knots less than that of the British *Minotaur*s. He adds: "The Japanese sacrifice speed to offensive power, which is after all the most important quality in a ship of war, though the tendency in our own and other navies seems to be to rather exaggerate the value of speed." He repeats his unfavourable criticism of the Invincible class, the latest launched of which, the Inflexible, is undergoing her trials this month. This class, he says, are far too large and too costly for the ordinary duties of cruisers. From a recent speech by the First Lord it appears reasonable to conclude that the intention is to utilise them as battleships. It may be recalled that the Indomitable maintained 28 knots for five hours on the Clyde while running her full power trials—at several stretches, it is said, touching 29 knots. The Boadicea, which Mr. Brassey says can be best described as a "scout" (though according to the Naval League Journal, naval men are asking: "What really is the role of this type of ship?") has been launched. She is of 3,300 tons and is to have a speed of 25 knots. Ships of the Boadicea type, whether called third-class cruisers or "scouts," are very costly in comparison with their fighting qualities. The Boadicea will, it is said, carry three 4 in. guns and cost £333,067. These remarks apply equally to the Swift, launched last year, of 1,800 tons, carrying four 4 in. guns, with an estimated speed of 36 knots.

Among new ocean-going destroyers the Tartar is specially mentioned in connexion with the remarkable speed that she attained. Four of this class were completed during the year, and on six hours run, they made the following: Cossack 33.1, Glurka 33.91, Mohawak 34.25, and Tartar 35.36. Eight other vessels of this class are under construction and all will burn liquid fuel. It is added that vessels of this type are in fact destroyers of destroyers and should more properly be classed as torpedo gunboats. Ten torpedo boats of the coastal destroyer type (240-250 tons) have been completed or are completing and 22 others will be completed in 1908-9.

Nine submarines have been completed by Vickers; twelve of the large (C) type will be completed by this firm in 1908-9; one of a new design is to be laid down, and four (C 17 to 20) are building at Chatham; these are of 313 tons and are to have a surface speed of 13 knots.

We pass over the lists of ships struck off or to be discarded and the references to the Lusitania and Mauretania, and note under the heading of torpedo improvements that by heating the air used for propulsion, speed has been much increased. Engineering published a table some months ago showing the speeds obtained by the latest Whitehead torpedo:

Yards.	With Cold Air.	With Hot Air.
At 1,000.....	35	43
.. 1,500.....	30	40
.. 2,000.....	28½	38
.. 3,000.....	23¼	32
.. 4,000.....	18-20	28

A further improvement in the gunnery of the Navy has taken place, as is shown by the following table:—

	1905 Target.	1907 Target.
	1906.	1907.
Number of hits .....	5,733	7,547
Number of misses .....	2,328	1,991
Total rounds fired .....	8,061	9,538
Percentage of hits to rounds fired .....	71.12	79.13

A smaller target was used in 1907 than in 1906 and while on the 1907 target the percentage of hits to rounds fired was only 41.7 on the 1906 target they were 71.12 and 79.13 for 1906 and 1907. It is interesting to read in late papers of the fine shooting in the gunlayers' test by the Good Hope, Sir Percy Scott's flagship and by the cruiser Argonaut, both scores being reported as records. We forbear reference to the paragraphs relating to the Naval Estimates, personnel, and new construction, beyond noting that the Vote for 1908-9 stands at £7,545,202 as compared with £8,100,000 in the previous year, and £11,654,176 in 1904-5, the year of maximum naval expenditure. It is proposed to lay down in 1908-9 only one battleship and one large armoured cruiser (both in H.M. dockyards), a very large reduction on the programme of armoured construction which the Admiralty considered necessary two years ago. In addition to the above there are to be commenced six fast protected cruisers, sixteen torpedo-boat destroyers, and a number of submarines, of which one cruiser and two submarines will be built in the dockyards and the remainder by contract.

Under new works details are given with regard to the new naval depot at Rosyth, on the Firth of Forth, showing the extent and nature of the accommodation to be provided as summarized in an official statement, yet only the other day we learned that the Rosyth scheme is to be abandoned! To meet the new conditions of increased speed and range of the latest torpedoes a new range is to be established on Loch Long in the Firth of Clyde.

BASEBALL.

The return match "Cricketers" v. "Baseballers" was played on Saturday at 3.35 and resulted in an easy win for the "Baseballers" by 23 runs to 3. The "Cricketers" did not play as good a game as they did in the last match, many easy catches being dropped. Mollison pitched a good game for the "Cricketers" striking several men out. For the "Baseballers" McClesney and Lo-on played the best all round game.

The line up was as follows:—

"Cricketers."	"Baseballers."
Mollison .....	p. .... Nicholl
Walker .....	c. .... Lo-on
Cox .....	ss. .... Becker
Wheeler .....	1b. .... McClesney
Bell .....	2b. .... O'Connor
Drummond .....	3b. .... Gray
Reed .....	1f. .... Gibbs
Shannon .....	c.f. .... Gonzales
Bell (junior) .....	r.f. .... Worden

Scorer H. S. Stetson. Umpire E. G. Babbitt.

GIRLS' CLUB EVENING FÊTE.

Perfect weather conditions contributed largely to the success of the Evening Fête held under the auspices of the Girls' Club on Tuesday evening. The Bluff Gardens, kindly placed at the disposal of the Committee by the Ladies' Lawn Tennis and Croquet Club were tastefully decorated with coloured lanterns arranged in festoons among the trees, and presented a pretty spectacle. The old band-stand formed the stage for the singers, Mr. Hardt and Mr. Somerton, whose songs were received with much enthusiasm. Refreshments were provided during the evening, and in between whiles the Grand Hotel Band played selections which were greatly appreciated. Much praise is due to the President of the Club, Miss Strain, assisted by the rest of the members, for the able manner in which the arrangements for the fête were planned and carried out.

A new case of cholera was reported on Aug. 2nd at Tokushima. The patient died the same night.

THE GRAND HOTEL, LIMITED.

The ordinary half yearly meeting of the shareholders of this hotel was held at the offices of the Company on the afternoon of July 30th. The chair was occupied by Dr. C. H. Hall and there were also present Messrs. C. F. Heinlein, B. C. Howard, A. M. Knapp, G. W. Colton, C. F. Rhine (acting Secretary), A. S. Pearson (Auditor), M. Dentici, M. Dentici, Jr., F. Dietz, B. Martinnelli, E. Andreis and T. Tanabe.

The first part of the proceedings at this meeting appeared in our last issue.

The remaining part of the proceedings is as follows:—

Mr. HEINLEIN said:

I would like to make a few remarks before the motion is put to the Meeting.

At the general meeting last January I questioned certain items in the accounts and the action of the Board in appointing a Managing Director. This was done in good faith, and I thought I was right in calling attention to what seemed to be contrary to some of our Rules to which my attention had been drawn. But since that time, I have had an opportunity to make a fuller acquaintance with our Rules and with the work and responsibilities of the Directors, and I want to say that it seems justly due to all concerned that that information should be made known to all of the shareholders. I wish, therefore, to request that the Chairman would communicate to this meeting the substance of the reports he made to the Board one or two years ago relating to the working of the hotel both with and without a Managing Director.

Dr. Hall, in reply, said:—

It is well, perhaps, that this subject has been brought forward, if for no other reason than that it gives opportunity to correct the misapprehension and misrepresentation that have become current in certain quarters regarding the duties and responsibilities of directors and the work done in discharge of them. The personal element in the case may be disregarded, but the interests of the Company seem to require an exposition of facts which have been known hitherto only to the directors and certain officers of the Company.

All the world knows that successful direction of a large hotel involves careful and constant regard for many details, and that while the satisfaction of guests by personal and material attentions should be as nearly complete as circumstances will permit the benefit of such care may be wholly lost to the owners if the details relating to supplies and control are not methodically supervised. It is combination of these functions of personal service and efficient control of incoming and outgoing supplies that secures the earning power for which the business is conducted.

You are aware that the Articles of Association vest the management of our business in the Board of Directors and to that end give it certain general and special powers to be exercised by it as occasion arises. For the more efficient discharge of this responsibility, which the peculiar nature of hotel business makes difficult and constant, your directors were many years ago distributed among supervisory committees, a Finance Committee, a House Committee, and a Supplies Committee, with instructions to inspect and report upon the work of their respective departments from time to time. This was the simplest, and it was thought a sufficient provision for the object in mind, but after several years of nominal trial, owing to lack of time on the part of the members of the committees to attend to the duties, the discharge of these gradually fell by tacit consent upon the Chairman of the Board, and so continued for several years. Those of you, however, who are familiar with certain conditions here will not be surprised to know that such exercise of responsibility by one person, who must bear the whole burden of doing what he sees ought to be done for the protection of the Company, is attended with trials which no one would willingly assume or long submit to without unusual reasons, and that even these reasons would sooner or later become inadequate. After a considerable period of this irregularly delegated work, the Chairman was compelled, for the protection of his private interests, to ask the Board to make other provision. This was done by giving the manager a free hand in the management, the Chairman reporting the results to the Board from time to time. After several months' trial of this method, the Chairman reported the results as very unsatisfactory and gave details in support of the statement. The formal appointment of a member of the Board to supervise the details of the management was advised and authority for the appointment shown in the Articles of Association.

One of the directors was accordingly appointed a committee of one to supervise the details of the management, and compensation was offered him for the discharge of this special service. He declined payment temporarily on the ground that the financial state of the Company would not easily bear additional expense, and the directors then offered him their own fees. This generous offer was of course declined at once with appreciative thanks. On undertaking the work of supervision by direction for the Board, the Chairman voluntarily assumed financial responsibility for the results to be obtained.

At that time, the working of the business for the preceding three months showed a loss of more than 9,000 yen and an overdraft at bank of more than 7,000 yen, both unprecedented for that period.

In the following January, nine months later, the Chairman laid before the Board a formal report showing the results of direct supervision for those months. This report is here before me and all who wish may read it, but as it is too long to be presented entire only a summary of it is given. This shows the following results:—

Restoration of normal rates for board and lodging, which had become capricious and a cause of complaint by those discriminated against.

Reform of methods at the Bar, stoppage of waste and speculation, and large increase of gross profit.

Lower rates and better qualities for supplies.

Reform of kitchen management and stoppage of waste and speculation.

Reduction of cost of music and improvement of its quality.

Improved service throughout the house.

The financial results of these measures amounted at the end of the nine months to 38,898.00 yen, saved.

As the dividend for that year aggregated 40,000 yen, it will be seen that direct supervision of the management during the nine months mentioned carried the Company over a miry spot in its way, for the audits for that year show that but for these results the available funds for distribution would not have exceeded a five per cent dividend for the whole year.

The work of supervision was continued for three months longer with improving results, but by that time the strain upon the private income of the supervising director had become intolerable owing to various causes incidental to such work, so he requested the Board of Directors to relieve him from it. This was done, and as conditions had changed and an efficient regime had been established, it was decided to discontinue direct supervision by a member of the Board. Large travel and the momentum of a good regime during the following three months enabled the Company to declare a dividend of 12 per cent. for that half year and to carry forward a net cash balance of yen 26,286.00.

The records for the next succeeding half year show, however, that although travel continued good and rates remained unchanged the net earnings for that period were less than half of what they should have been, the shortage being about yen 26,000, and the audit for that period shows that but for the yen 26,286.00 brought forward from the preceding half year and a sum of yen 6,312.00 received from outside, the cash available without overdrawing would not have been enough for a three per cent. dividend. Examination of the working of the bar showed, too, a return to former methods and results, waste, speculation, and loss.

These unsatisfactory results of working without direct supervision were laid before the Board of Directors in another formal report which also is here and open to your inspection. In this report the Chairman asked to be relieved from the chairmanship, whose duties he was unable to discharge, under the circumstances, with justice to himself. This relief being impracticable because of the demands of private affairs upon the other directors, the latter proposed that they should resign their seats in favour of others to be selected by the Chairman. This was done, the retiring directors approving and voting for their successors before tendering their own resignations.

I trust this statement of fact will correct an impression that the change of directors was an arbitrary act of the Chairman.

After acquainting themselves with the working of the hotel both with and without supervision, and after examination of the Articles of Association for authority to appoint a supervising director and remunerate him for special services, the members of the new Board decided unanimously that direct supervision by a member of the Board was necessary and that this appointment and the payment for special services were authorized by our Rules. Each of the directors in turn was invited to undertake the work but was unable to do so for lack of time; the Chairman then accepted the invitation with the understanding that payment for the special services involved was offered and accepted as reimbursement for personal loss to be incurred which former experience had shown to be incidental to the discharge of such services.

Reform measures were again instituted and pushed on as circumstances would permit; new checks were placed upon the working of the bar which have greatly increased the gross profit by diminishing waste and other irregularities, and arrangements for supplies are made and making which alone will defray the cost of supervision. Control is more difficult now than it was two years ago when it was given up, for irregularities were encouraged by so doing, but there is no reason to doubt that it will become fully effective.

It is regrettable, gentlemen, to have to lay before you facts which are disturbing to us as shareholders, but if you will consider the conditions in the past with which you are now somewhat acquainted, you will find much for encouragement as to the future, if all is done that ought to be done. If, as is true, the Grand Hotel has been able to distribute to its shareholders for nearly nineteen years an average dividend of sixteen per cent. per annum on the original capital while carrying a heavy load due to lack of methodical care, what, we may well ask ourselves, may it not do for us if that load is wholly and permanently removed and all of the legitimate profit of the business realized and devoted to its proper ends?

The report of Messrs. Miller, Pearson, and Mackie was then read by the Acting Secretary as follows:—

In compliance with our Certificate attached to the half yearly Accounts ending 30th June last, of your Company, we respectfully beg to report thereon as follows:—

We have examined and audited the Accounts in question and find everything in order, with the following exceptions:—

(1) The sum of yen 53,087.91 appearing as an asset under the heading of New Buildings is in our opinion worthless, and should have been written off as a Loss to the debit of Profit and Loss Account, and had this been done no dividend could have been recommended by the board of Directors. We are informed that all there is to show for this amount is a plan for the erection of New Buildings on a very large scale.

(2) The sum of yen 31,042.82, includes a monthly payment of yen 250, drawn by the Managing Director as Salary. The Chairman of the Board of Directors is the Managing Director, and he receives both the fee as a Director and the Salary as Managing Director, attached to these two positions. In our opinion this is contrary to Article No. 89 (A) of the Company's Articles of Association.

(3) The sum of yen 31,042.82 also includes an amount of yen 1,270.33 expended by Dr. Hall (the Chairman of the Board of Directors) while travelling in America.

(4) In addition to the monthly salary of yen 250.00 and Director's half yearly fee of yen 250.00, Dr. Hall also receives free board.

Mr. HOWARD:—Does that yen 53,000 cover anything more than actual cost of the plans of the new building?

The CHAIRMAN:—The excess above the yen 53,000, which is some yen 3,000 and more, is the amount paid to Mr. Hewitt. The payment for the plans is quite complete.

Mr. HOWARD:—We paid for the plans only? The CHAIRMAN:—We have paid for the plans, and we have them.

Mr. HOWARD:—Would they be an asset?

The CHAIRMAN:—What would you call them?

Mr. HOWARD:—I agree with the suggestion of the auditors that it should be put to Profit and Loss Account. I don't see how it is an asset.

Mr. DIETZ:—If you could build the new buildings with these plans it would make a difference, but I believe you can't do that.

Mr. HOWARD:—You have plans that may or may not be used.

The CHAIRMAN:—I may say for your information that a great many years ago—it was very shortly after I joined the Board—I should say it must be fifteen years ago—it was suggested to the Board of Directors that in view of the big risks to which hotels are liable, and in view of the fact that some number of months—probably six months—would be spent in the discussion and preparation of new plans, that it would be well if we were to have a complete set of plans prepared to cover the whole of our ground, these plans to be placed with the bank and held for any emergency that might arise. At that time we were not insuring our rent, and the saving to be effected and the advantage of having these plans to hand in case of any accident would be that we would be able, all other things being equal, to have the new buildings ready for occupation about six months sooner than if we had to start discussing and haggling about plans and specifications before we could start in to build. There was thus a gain of six months, which would have meant six months earlier use of the hotel as a money-earning investment. Later, however, and now for some years past, the rent of the hotel has been insured for a certain sum covering an eighteen months period, which at that time was thought would be required for the rebuilding of the hotel. One of the sources of value of the plans we have at the present time is that in case of loss of the building we would have to wait no longer than was necessary to clear away the debris. We should put these plans and specifications in the hands of the contractors, and at the expiration of eighteen months over which our rent is insured we would be able to have quite as large accommodation and everything in running order. The gain of six months' time by having these plans ready would mean a good many thousand yen. For that one reason the present possession of these plans and specifications fits in with the views entertained by the Board for a good many years, views which have been re-expressed within a very short time in the Board Room, when the Directors were in agreement that it was desirable we should have plans at hand in order to save time without waiting six months.

Mr. HOWARD:—How would it do to wipe it out? You still have the plans as an asset. Who holds the duplicate plans?

The CHAIRMAN:—There are four different sets.

Continuing, the CHAIRMAN said: As the members do not seem to have anything further to say about the accounts it is quite appropriate I should reply to the objections made by the auditors on several points. In the first place, the auditors have objected to the payment which has been made to Dr. Hall of yen 250 a month, and have objected that there was no voucher received for that. The reason no voucher was received was that Dr. Hall's name, like that of others receiving regular monthly payments was borne on the payroll and no voucher has ever yet been given or asked for in connection with the names on the pay-roll, all payments being made by cheques signed by two directors, and these are their own vouchers. The question of the validity of this payment was touched upon in the course of my previous remarks. However, perhaps I had better go into it a little more in detail. If you will refer to the Articles of Association you will find that Article 88 authorises the Directors to make contracts with a director. There are no limits in the Article as to the nature or quality of the contract. Article 106 specifies that the Directors may delegate any of their powers to a committee consisting of a member or members of their body as they think fit. It conforms entirely to the practice of English companies, where the same rule is valid. The view of the directors is that it authorises them to appoint a director for the direct supervision of the management. Article 110 authorises the Directors to do all of such acts and things as are not expressly directed to be done at a general meeting. That article is quite as clear as the English language can make it. Everything that is not specified to be done in general meeting the Board of Directors have the power to do under Article 110, Article 111, section 3, authorises the Directors to pay at their discretion for services rendered to the Company; Article 111, section 5, authorises the Directors to appoint such officials, etc., as they may think fit and to determine their duties and fix their salaries; Article 111, section 13, authorises the Directors to enter into negotiations and contract for services rendered to the Company; while Article 86, to which attention has been drawn, and because attention was exclusively directed to it the Article has been subject to misinterpretation, reads that the Directors shall be paid for their services a sum not exceeding yen 500 per annum. That is the ground upon which the payment to the Supervising director was made by the Board, and the ground upon which the disbursements are made to reimburse the Supervising director for the loss incidental to his services. The travelling expenses were authorised by the Board of Directors, and at the time the Auditor was invited to the Board meeting to go over this matter with him, a minute of the Board meeting was shown him, in which it was decided the Chairman of the Board should visit the United States for the purpose of examining into the methods of hotel management, checking, furnishing, etc. Although there was a general impression I went to America for financial purposes, that had nothing to do with it; it was not discussed. At the time the Auditor was before the meeting it was suggested to him that these expenses were merely a matter of bulk; that if his objections held good the directors could not send one of their number or anyone to the United States on the business of the Company, and neither could they send one of their number to Tokyo at the expense of the Company. To our surprise the auditor said he believed it could not be done. It seems to the Directors that an objection of that kind is sufficient to reduce the whole question raised by the auditors to an absolute absurdity. If the objection which is there made is true the Directors have no authority whatever to expend anything. The whole business of the Company is paralysed. Fortunately this is only the view of the auditors, and has nothing whatever to do with the administration of the Company. Another objection made in the original letter which has now been modified, and does not appear in the same way in this letter, is that Dr. Hall is in receipt of free board in the hotel. He is and for this reason. A very important part of the duty of the Supervising Director is to keep himself acquainted with the quality and efficiency of the service and supplies to the dining room, which he can do only by taking his meals there; and as he is receiving only reimbursement, not compensation, for his services, if he paid for doing the work of the Company the amount would have to be added to the amount of the reimbursement. The final item, I believe, is one of yen 50,000 expended for plans and specifications, of which there are four complete sets in hand. The sum was expended in pursuance of a special resolution of the Company in general meeting and in order to give effect to that resolution. The plans are worth all they cost the Company and in case of accidental destruction of the present building the cost of these plans and specifications would be recovered in the saving of time—about six months—which would be required to agree upon and prepare them, our rent being insured for eighteen months. If one-third of that time were occupied in the preparation of building plans we would virtually lose one-third of the rental. This is the conclusion of two successive boards of our Directors. As the auditors, like the Directors are officers of the Company, and are employed for the purpose of rendering it service, it is the right of the Company of course when the auditor gives his opinion on a subject that the shareholders should know the reasons for these opinions especially if they happen to run counter to known experience and what many think wise discretion. This expenditure being necessary for carrying out the wishes of the shareholders the objection is incomprehensible if made in good faith. I should like, therefore, and I am speaking as a shareholder and not as the Chairman of the Board,—to address a few enquiries to the auditor in order that we may bring out the basis of statements made here. The first is:—

Was your advice to the Board based upon professional reasons, and if so will you kindly tell the shareholders what those reasons were?

Mr. PEARSON:—I think, gentlemen, before making any remarks I would like to state that I am not a shareholder of the Company, but am present by invitation of the Directors to answer any questions arising with regard to the accounts and report we have made. In answer to the question Mr. Hall has put, I would like to say the reason I have in saying the item should have been written off is because it stands for plans for an hotel which in my opinion cannot be used, and therefore are of no use to the hotel, and in that case cannot appear as an asset.

Dr. HALL:—Is the advice given as your professional opinion?

Mr. PEARSON:—It is our professional opinion. The CHAIRMAN:—The reason I ask is because in the Board-room you told us it was your private opinion.

Mr. PEARSON:—It is my professional opinion as well as my private opinion.

The CHAIRMAN:—Before forming this professional opinion, did you make inquiries of the Board as to the prospects of financing the undertaking or making good use of the plans?

Mr. PEARSON:—Yes, I asked the Board, and I could see from the papers, that nothing had been done in the way of increasing the capital. In view of this these plans are of no use for the purpose for which they are intended, and as such cannot be used.

The CHAIRMAN:—When did you make this inquiry of the Board?

Mr. PEARSON:—It was the meeting at which you were present.

The CHAIRMAN:—Before that time we already had your report. If you had known there was expectation of using the plans within a reasonable period, what would you have advised as to writing off?

Mr. PEARSON:—I don't think it is a question that can be answered now. I should still have reported to the shareholders that the sum was taken in as an asset, and I should put it to them whether they considered it good.

The CHAIRMAN:—If you had known the cost of the plans was to be defrayed by an issue of bonds, and these were to be paid by means of a sinking fund, would you advise that the cost of these plans be written off?

Mr. PEARSON:—That is a point that would take some consideration. I am not prepared to answer the question now.

The CHAIRMAN:—If the plans and specifications under these conditions were written off now, and then we could raise funds by means of bonds, these bonds being all paid off later, would not it amount to a double writing off of the same item?

Mr. PEARSON:—I think not. An item like that cannot be debited to an item, called new buildings, and representing nothing.

The CHAIRMAN:—As building plans are part of the cost of the structure, is it customary to begin writing off the cost of the structure, is it customary to begin writing off the cost of the building before it is begun, if construction is begun within a reasonable time?

Mr. PEARSON:—No, it could then be considered as part of the cost.

The CHAIRMAN:—That is if construction is begun within a reasonable time?

Mr. PEARSON:—Yes.

The CHAIRMAN:—Is it not the custom of joint-stock companies to distribute over a considerable period large disbursements for permanent improvements in order that the whole expense may not fall on the shareholders for one or two dividend periods?

Mr. PEARSON:—Yes, that might be done.

The CHAIRMAN:—Is it not the duty of an auditor to use circumspection in giving out intimations which, if misunderstood, might do unmerited harm to the interests of his clients.

Mr. PEARSON:—I am only here to report what I see of the accounts, and leave it to the shareholders to decide what they shall do. I cannot do more than this, but it is my duty to do what I have done.

Mr. DIETZ:—Whether the auditors are right or wrong in their opinion, it was certainly their duty to report what they thought. You cannot blame them; on the contrary they ought to be congratulated.

The CHAIRMAN:—The directors are not questioning the matter at all. On the contrary they have informed the auditors that they will be very pleased at all times to put them in possession of anything which will enable them to discharge their duties.

Mr. HOWARD:—Is there a prospect of carrying out the new building according to the plans?

The CHAIRMAN:—The matter is under negotiation, and I can say no more about it.

Mr. HOWARD:—What is a reasonable time?

The CHAIRMAN:—It is impossible to say, because it depends on the information we may receive at any time. With reference to this I should like again to take the opportunity of expressing to you all the views of the Directors about the question of rebuilding. There is no intention whatever of pushing on in an obstinate positive way to carry out a plan that has been formed, and to carry out that plan simply because it has been formed. The Directors are among the larger shareholders, and they stand to lose just as much as any shareholder, and they know a great deal more what the business will stand. When the question of rebuilding comes before us in a more practical form by the financing of bonds, even the question of how much will be built, if left to the Directors, will be determined entirely by the outlook before us. It is practically agreed by all, I think, that the foundation of the new building along Water Street should be done anyhow, and that will most certainly be done if funds are forthcoming. Whether anything more will be done will depend entirely on the outlook for the future. The plans are so drawn that we can build one, two, three or four sections just as we like.

Mr. HOWARD:—My question was to see whether there was any prospect of raising funds. You cannot go to work unless there is a prospect.

The CHAIRMAN:—That subject is not in a condition to be laid before you. As soon as it is we shall have much pleasure in answering the inquiry.

Mr. Dietz asked if there were not former plans.

The CHAIRMAN:—There were some outline plans, but nothing was ever done with them.

Mr. Dietz:—By a Japanese?

The CHAIRMAN:—Yes. You will probably remember that Mr. Hewitt let us have some plans for carrying the main brick building to four stories, but we have never had plans for covering the whole ground such as we have now.

Mr. Dietz:—If you can give us nothing definite about negotiations, it is of no use to talk more.

The CHAIRMAN:—I have simply to reply that the Directors are not in a position to answer such inquiries because the matter is under negotiation and is not subject to discussion at an open meeting. I think you ought to keep in mind these plans are very valuable to us, regardless of whether we are going to make present use of them or not. Mr. Howard is familiar with the discussions we had in the Board-room about it, and it certainly seems to me to be wise to have such things at hand.

Answering a question by Mr. Dietz, the CHAIRMAN said:—The plans are to be written down if we are not going to make immediate use of them.

We can gradually write them off just as we do with any other large expense. We are doing with these plans exactly as we did when we put up the new suite of rooms.

Replying to a further question of Mr. Dietz as to the profits, the CHAIRMAN said:—There is a great deal of complaint this year, and it is one of the matters that have been anxiously thought over that there is a tendency to "bleed" the traveller at every turn. We hear of petty hotels in the interior conducted in native fashion with sleeping accommodation on the floor, and supplying Japanese food, charging as much as yen 7 a day. People are going away outraged by this fact, and they are going to tell their friends. This will seriously affect future travel unless it is corrected. These are important indications to us who are considering the question of erecting new hotel buildings.

The resolution adopting the report and accounts was then put to the meeting and carried without dissent.

The CHAIRMAN:—The accounts are passed as submitted. This, gentlemen, completes the business of the day, and I thank you very much for so large an attendance.

YOKOHAMA AMATEUR ROWING CLUB.

A special meeting of members of the Yokohama Amateur Rowing Club was held at the Boat House on Wednesday, Mr. F. J. Hall, President, in the chair. There was a good attendance.

In laying the Committee's draft rules before the members Mr. Hall said the meeting was called in accordance with a resolution passed at the annual meeting held last January. At that time Mr. Robinson pointed out that it was felt to be necessary to revise the rules of the Club, strengthen them in a few details and generally bring them up to date, and in accordance with the present needs of the Club. Messrs. Pollard, Robinson and Hall were appointed a sub-committee to prepare a draft of a new set of rules. The principal points to which he drew attention were:—I. The re-arrangement of the order of the rules. II. Sundry new rules and additions to others. III. The former bye-laws, some of which have been dropped and others incorporated in the rules. About the new arrangement he had nothing much to say except that they had tried to put the various rules in better order, so that rules bearing on the same subject had been brought together. New rules and additions: Some of these were intended, and he thought rightly so, to give the committee they elected annually greater power in dealing with those members who unfortunately cause trouble either by not paying their dues or by misbehaviour. It was, he considered, only right that the rules should enable those members of the Club who are entrusted with the management and the upholding of its good name to deal promptly and effectively with those who offend. Under the existing rule (17) an offender can only be dealt with by the cumbersome unnecessary publicity of an extraordinary meeting. There have been only this year two occasions when the Committee would have liked to have been able to deal promptly with offences against the good name of the Club. New rules to which he would here draw attention were those (No. 6) which extend the liability of proposers and seconders to all dues incurred by their candidates or visitors, and others to which Mr. Hall referred seriatim. Some amendments were suggested by members of the Club and adopted, and at length the proposed rules were duly passed on the motion of the Chairman, seconded by Mr. Franklyn.

The proposal was adopted.

On the motion of Mr. P. E. Nicolle a cordial vote of thanks was passed to the Committee and the meeting separated.

The team of the Keio Gijuku played a baseball match with the Kamehame Club on Aug. 1st at Honolulu. The Japanese were successful, with 5 runs to 3. On Aug. 2nd the team of the Keio Gijuku played a baseball match with the St. Louis College. The Japanese were victorious by 8 runs to 7.

MESSRS. SAMUEL SAMUEL & CO.'S NEW BUILDINGS.

Messrs. Samuel Samuel and Co.'s new offices and godowns at No. 27 Yamashita-cho were thrown open for inspection on Saturday morning, when a number of visitors were hospitably entertained. The new building contains several interesting features. The contract for erection of the building was entered into with the Union Estate and Investment Co., Ltd., last November, an old stone faced godown which stood on the site being removed. The work of erection was carried out with much promptitude, occupying in all 7 months, while the entire premises were in use in less than 8 months from the signing of the contract. The building has been very substantially built of brick, having bands of stone at the level of the window sills. It has a frontage of 58 ft. on Biwa-machi. This frontage is entirely occupied by the office portion of the building, and contains an entrance in the centre, and 20 large windows arranged symmetrically in three tiers. The depth of the building is 75 ft., one-third of this being taken by the offices and the remainder by the godown, the two parts being separated by a thick unbroken party wall of brick. For several reasons it was found advantageous to give the godown 4 stories. It is interesting to notice how effectively communication can be made with the godown from the stories of the office, without once piercing the party wall. The staircase of the offices is arranged against the party wall at one side of the building, so that each half of the landing is on a level with the floor of the godown. Three short external iron balconies give the communication required. Thus the Dept. in the top floor of the offices, having control over the two top floors of the godown, has only a few steps up or down to arrive at either floor of the godown. The godown floors have about 9,500 sq. ft., of total area, while the offices, aggregate about 3,900 sq. ft. of floor space. The lowest story of the godown, a few inches above the ground, has a concrete floor laid on gravel, and finished in cement. A large entrance for goods is arranged opposite the Water St. gates, to the compound. On the left of this entrance there is another, external tier to a staircase leading to the upper floor of the godown, while to the right is the tier to the momban's room, which is constructed entirely of fireproof materials. Alternating with these three tiers are contrived the only two windows which were possible in the lowest story of the godown. The hoist which serves the three upper floors is close to the goods entrance. Beyond the momban's room is another door which is the side entrance to the offices from the compound. Each floor of the godown is supported by four stout wooden posts, there being no other encumbrance to the large floor area. Each post carries a large double cantilever, the ends of which support two of the four main beams of the floor above. The top floor has an unbroken area, the trusses of the roof being designed to take the whole span of 52 ft. The roofs of the godown and offices are at the same height, and are separated by the continuation upwards of the party wall. The two upper stories of the godown are fitted with large cupboards or "bins" for storing silk or linen in a handy manner, these bins being fitted with plain wood sliding shoji. Two of the walls are utilised in this way, the other two being frequently pierced for large windows. The offices are unusually well finished, having polished pine floors, while the entrance door, hall, panelling, staircase, mantelpieces and other fittings, are of oak. The floor of the lowest story is some 4 ft. above the pavement. This story has four rooms, the two upper stories having a small and one large room each. To each story there is a strong room, having a patent safe door with combination lock. Opening from each half-landing staircase are 4 lavatories, fitted with modern appliances. The electric wiring is all arranged for day and night current, and fans are provided in all the rooms. The building was designed and its construction supervised throughout by Mr. B. M. Ward, A.R.I.B.A., Architect to the Union Estate and Investment Co., Ltd.

THE TOKYO INDUSTRIAL BANK.

On Aug. 3rd the Tokyo Industrial Bank held a general meeting. Mr. K. Yoshida of the Imperial Household Mr. K. Hashimoto of the Department of Finance and a large number of the shareholders were present.

Mr. J. Soyeda, President of the bank, presided, and made the following speech.

GENTLEMEN,—At the 13th semi-annual general meeting of the Industrial Bank now held, I heartily thank you for your attendance in spite of this exceedingly hot weather.

The present business period includes 6 months commencing Jan. 1st and ending June 30th. The detailed reports with regard to the business done during that period are to be found in the statement attached to the accounts. I will here-with make a general explanatory statement. During the above mentioned period, our financial condition remained inactive owing to the re-action consequent on the sudden appearance of various enterprises after the war. As a result of this there is no special improvement to be recorded as attained by our bank during the first half of this year. Yet in spite of the general stringency in all markets, the bank accomplished through your valuable assistance a rather considerable amount of work.

I will take this opportunity of giving a brief account of the loan raised by the South Manchurian Railway Company. The proposed loan amounted to yen 4,000,000 apart from that raised in London, in July of last year. Our bank authorities, who were instructed by the Company to raise the loan abroad gave constant attention to the foreign money markets, expecting the appearance of a favourable opportunity. Fortunately, during the period under review the money market in Europe and America to some extent revived. Availing ourselves of this chance we approached some foreign capitalists for the loan. A special circumstance had to be taken into consideration viz, that the proposed loans from several foreign countries which were abandoned last year on account of the unfavourable market conditions, were again brought forward during the first half of this year. For the foregoing reasons, a large loan with a long term for redemption was found to be quite impracticable. After close investigations, it was decided to float a loan of £2,000,000 instead of £4,000,000. Our agents in London, Messrs. Panmure, Golden and Co., accepted the whole amount—£2,000,000—without employing public means. Through the London representatives, the loan was allotted to Parr's Bank, and the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation in London, the Yokohama Specie Bank, and Messrs. Kuhn, Robe and Co. in New York. On June 1st, all the business in connection with the raising of the loan was successfully accomplished. I gladly avail myself of this opportunity of expressing my sincere thanks to Messrs. Panmure, Gordon and Co., and the other firms concerned, as well as those official and private persons who assisted us in the business of the loan.

Some reference should be made to the general conditions of business during the account period. The bank invested yen 20,390,029 in national and local loans; yen 4,525,969 in the debentures of various mercantile associations; yen 9,647,489 in several industries; yen 1,802,550 in gold and silver mining securities; and yen 5,390,000 in Korea; making a total of yen 41,757,037. The gross income during the period was yen 1,809,718 including a balance brought down from previous accounts. Having paid from the foregoing total the expenditures incurred, there remains the sum of yen 867,860 as net profit.

During the present financial period, some difficulties were experienced in employing the funds. Nevertheless we are able to pay a dividend at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum. The detailed accounts are now submitted to you for your approval.

The term of office of Baron E. Shibusawa and Messrs. K. Okura and K. Otani who were elected as auditors in August 1906 has expired. At the present meeting, an election will be made for the vacant places.

On March 26th the government approved the appointment of Messrs. O. Banno, T. Inouye, N. Kaneko, and J. Saito, who were elected as directors at the extraordinary general meeting held in February.

While, broadly speaking, there was no special business accomplished by the bank during the first half of this year it is, nevertheless the fact that the bank was always viewed with confidence at home and abroad. The directors and other employees of the bank will make further endeavours for the development of the bank's interests. In conclusion, I request, on behalf of the bank, your continued patronage and support.

The accounts of the business done during the period was as follows:

	Yen.
Gross income.....	1,747,987.86
Balance brought from the previous accounts .....	61 730.92
	1,809,718.78
Expenditures .....	941,858.36
Net profit .....	867,860.42
From the foregoing net profit, the following allotments were made:—
	Yen.
Reserve to make losses good .....	104,000.00
Reserve for equalizing dividends .....	26,000.00
Ordinary dividend.....	406,250.00
Special dividend .....	243,750.00
Bonus to Directors .....	25,000.00

The balance, yen 62,860.42, was carried forward to next account.

Subsequently, on an election taking place for auditors, Baron E. Shibusawa, and Messrs. K. Okura and K. Otani were re-elected for the positions.

THE IMPERIAL COURT.

The Prince and Princess Imperial will leave on Aug. 4th for their villa in Tamosawa, near Nikko, where they will stay during the summer.

General Prince Fushimi, who recently returned from his visit to western districts proceeded to the Palace at 10.30 a.m. on July 30th, where he had audience of the Emperor.

Viscount Okabe, Minister for Justice, who has been ill since his recent appointment to office is reported to have recovered. At 10.20 a.m. on Aug. 1st, he proceeded to the Palace and had audience of the Emperor.

The Crown Prince of Korea will visit the villa of Prince Ito in Kanazawa, Sagami province, on Aug. 3rd. He will spend the night there.

In spite of the abnormal temperature of Sunday last the Emperor was present at the Ogaku-monsho, (the Imperial Offices) at 9 a.m. on Aug. 2nd, and attended to government affairs, as there was some urgent business awaiting his sanction.

Aug. 7th being the 18th anniversary of the birthday of Princess Fumi, a daughter of the Emperor, now in Miyanoshta, the usual celebration will be held. A dinner will be given to some of the officials of the Imperial Household.

The 100th day's religious service for the late Prince Yamashina was held on Aug. 6th at the cemetery in Toyoshima-ga-oka. Representatives of the Emperor and Empress, the Prince and Princess Imperial, as well as the Princes of the Blood now in Tokyo were present at the rites.

Prince and Princess Kayo and their two daughters left Kyoto on Aug. 1st for Suma, not far from Kobe, where they will spend the hot season.

The Prince Imperial visited the Shinjiku Botanical Gardens at 2.30 p.m. on Aug. 2nd. Count Fukuda, superintendent of the garden, gave an explanation as to the improvement and development carried out there. His Highness spent about two hours in the Gardens.

On Aug. 3rd, the Crown Prince of Korea visited Yokosuka in company with Prince Ito and a number of Korean officials. His Highness arrived in Yokohama at 9.55 a.m., and at once drove to the English Hatoba where they embarked by the destroyer Hatsushino, escorted by the destroyer Kamikaze. He visited the various docks, and the Training Squadron, consisting of the Itsukushima and Hashidate which had returned on the previous day from its cruise in foreign seas. He spent the night at Kanazawa. To day, Aug. 4th, he will return to Tokyo.

Aug. 3rd being the anniversary of the birthday of King Haakon VII. of Norway, the usual celebration was held at the Norwegian Legation. The Emperor of Japan sent a congratulatory telegram to his Norwegian Majesty.

The Prince and Princess Imperial will proceed to their villa in Tamosawa near Nikko on Aug. 6th leaving Ueno by the 7.55 a.m. train. Their Highnesses will stay there until the middle of September.

Prince and Princess Arisugawa left Tokyo on Aug. 4th for Nikko.

Prince Kan-in, Commander-in-Chief of the First Division visited the 66th regiment of infantry in Utsunomiya on Aug. 3rd. He carried out an interim inspection.

Prince and Princess Higashi Fushimi, now at Shuzenji, Idzu province, visited the villa of Prince Komatsu at Mishima, Shizuoka prefecture, on Aug. 4th. On the same evening, they returned to Shuzenji.

The Empress leaving the Palace at 10.30 a.m. paid a visit to the Shinjiku Botanical Gardens on Aug. 4th and spent the day there.

Viscount Sakuma, Governor-General of Formosa, who arrived in Tokyo last Saturday, proceeded to the Palace at 10.30 a.m. on Aug. 3rd. In the course of an audience granted him by the Emperor he made a statement explanatory of the conditions at present prevailing on the island.

A wedding has been arranged between Princess Miye Arisugawa, the only daughter of Prince Arisugawa, and Prince Tokugawa, son of the ex-Shogun, and will take place in October.

On Aug. 3rd, the Emperor promoted Mr. K. Tsudzuki to the rank of Baron. The new Baron was the plenipotentiary to the second peace conference at the Hague.

Princess Kan-in, President of the Ladies' Patriotic Society, was present at a meeting held on Aug. 4th at Shizuoka.

It is alleged by the Asahi that Viscount Sone, Vice-Resident General, will be appointed Minister for Finance, and that Viscount Ito will succeed him in Korea. The change will probably take place after the return of Count Komura.

The recent rumour that Count Tanaka, Minister for the Imperial Household, will resign in consequence of his health, is declared by a Tokyo paper to be groundless.

Count Komura, Ambassador to the Court of St. James, now on his way home, is expected to arrive in Tokyo on Aug. 26th. The Hochi says that on Aug. 27th or 28th, he will be appointed Minister for Foreign Affairs.

Baron S. Nishi and Commander T. Chisaka, aide-de-camp to the Emperor and the Prince Imperial respectively, visited the Training Squadron at Yokosuka on Aug. 4th.

Mr. S. Nagasaki, a secretary of the Imperial Household, will proceed to Europe this autumn. The object of his visit, it is said, is to make certain purchases in London and Paris for the wedding between Princess Kane, a daughter of the Emperor, and Prince Kita Shirakawa, which is expected to take place next spring.

Generals Prince Fushimi, Count Kuroki and Viscount Kawamura who recently returned from their tour of their respective divisions, will have audience of the Emperor on Aug. 8th and will lay before him the results of their observations.

The Prince and Princess Imperial proceeded to Tamosawa, in the Nikko district on Aug. 6th leaving Ueno by the 7.55 a.m. train and arriving at Nikko at 12.20 a.m.

The Crown Prince of Korea will leave for Kure on Aug. 10th. He will embark on the cruiser Manshu at Yokosuka. His party will consist of Prince Ito, Viscount Suyematsu, Major-General Iwasaki, Mr. Kuryu, confidential Secretary to the Resident-General, and a number of Korean officials.

On Aug. 5th Prince Higashi Kuni returned from Narashino, Chiba prefecture, where he participated in the manoeuvres of the third regiment belonging to the First Division.

YOKOHAMA.

The improvements on the Yokohama Gas Works are expected to be completed before the end of this year.

A building belonging to the Yokohama High Female School in Okano-cho, which is under construction, collapsed owing to a strong wind on July 30th. Three carpenters were injured.

Fire broke out in a factory of the Namboku Kerosene Oil Co, Hodogaya, about 2 p.m. on July 29th. The flames were extinguished before much damage was done.

Four cases of rinderpest are reported among the cows in the Takeuchi Dairy, South Ota-machi.

Mr. Hu Wei-tieh, new Chinese Minister to the Imperial Japanese Court, arrived at Yokohama by the Kasuga Maru on July 31st. He left for Tokyo on the same day.

Messrs. S. Saito, T. Kashima, and S. Tsurumine have been appointed Public Procurators in the Yokohama Local Court.

The leading bankers of Yokohama held a meeting on July 30th at the Bankers' Club and considered the loans which had been raised during and after the Russo-Japanese war. They decided to ask the Government as follows:—(1) not to raise further loans either at home or abroad, except to replace the present loans with lower interest; (2) to redeem the loans every year by not less than fifty million yen; and (3) in order to make good the shortage in the national income which defect is expected to arise from the enforcement of the foregoing two items, the government expenditures to be economized and unproductive enterprises to be deferred.

During 11 days ended July 31st, the foreign trade of Yokohama was: Exports, yen 7,929,996; and imports, yen 4,411,570. During the period gold to the value of yen 40,000 was sent to Hongkong.

A child was drowned while swimming in the creek near Nakamura-machi, on July 31st. The corpse was found an hour later.

Fire broke out at 2.15 a.m. on Aug. 1st in the house of Mr. Osawa, an official of the Yokohama Water Works, South Ota-machi, Yokohama. Two houses were destroyed and three damaged. The cause is not reported.

A woman, about 20 years old, was found crushed to death on the railway near Kanagawa on the night of July 31st. She is believed to have committed suicide by laying herself on the line.

Rinderpest is virulent in Yokohama. On July 31st, 16 new cases appeared.

Hydrophobia seems to be prevalent in Yokohama. On Aug. 1st and 2nd respectively, two cases were reported. Four persons were injured in Moto-machi and Negishi. At an interview with our representative, Mr. Ishida, Chief of the Prefectural Sanitary Bureau, said that the epidemic seemed to have appeared in consequence of the change of the weather. The authorities have appointed a number of men to kill dogs suffering from the disease. Owners are warned to keep their dogs chained up in order to obviate the risk of attack by those suffering from the epidemic. Mr. Ishida added that the local government intends to issue a notification as to the treatment of dogs in general.

An attempted suicide took place on the evening of Aug. 1st at a bath-house, No. 125 Yamashita-cho, Yokohama. It appears that A. Makkerlitch (60) a Russian sausage manufacturer, living at No. 152, Yamashita-cho, attempted to commit suicide by cutting a vital part of his left arm with a razor. The keeper of the bath-house about 30 minutes later found the Russian in an unconscious condition on account of the heavy loss of blood. He at once gave information of the tragedy to the Kaga-cho Police Office. It is reported by Julia Makkerlitch, his wife, that he has been suffering from brain complaint for some weeks past.

An old farmer was run over by a car on the Keihin Electric Railway at Tsurumi on the evening of Aug. 1st while trying to pass a crossing. He sustained fatal injuries from which he died about two hours later.

A number of coolies were arrested at 3 p.m. on Sunday while gambling at a house in Horai-cho. On Monday morning, they were removed to the office of the Public Procurator in the District Court.

A man was drowned in the creek near the Senshu bridge, South Ota-machi, on Aug. 2nd while swimming there.

About 7.30 a.m. on Aug. 4th, a number of coolies quarrelled among themselves at Kanagawa, some of them being severely injured with revolvers. They were at once arrested by the Kanagawa police. The cause is reported to have been a trivial dispute.

Raw silk and waste silk markets in Yokohama have become brisk. On Aug. 3rd, a special transaction in raw silk was carried out. Enquiries for reels have appeared from America and a good business has been done. Waste silk is generally steady as the stocks still remain scarce. The tea market is quiet. Some of the exporters have suspended their purchases as there have been no enquiries from abroad. Business is being done with an inferior quality on a small scale.

About 5.30 p.m. on Aug. 3rd, fire broke out in a billiard saloon, the Choyoken, Minato-cho. The flames were put out before much damage was done. A defective kitchen chimney was the cause.

At 4.23 p.m. on Aug. 3rd, a slight shock of earthquake was felt in Yokohama. The duration was 2 minutes and 51 seconds and the direction was from east and west.

On Aug. 3rd, Baron Suifu, Governor of Kanagawa prefecture, visited several factories in Shidzuoka.

A workman employed at the Yokosuka Dock Yard was found on Aug. 4th strangled to death in a wood near the town. The affair is still under investigation by the Yokosuka police.

T. Maeda, the proprietor of a periodical called the Risai Shimpō, of Tokyo, has lodged a suit in the Yokohama District Court against the directors of the Specie Bank. According to the complaint one of the employees of the bank had sold certain goods found in the waiting-rooms some time ago. The proceeds of the sale were included in the sundry credits of the bank. Some misunderstanding, however, seems to exist regarding the affair.

Leading Chinese merchants of Yokohama will hold a Theatrical and Dramatic Exhibition on Aug. 7th, 8th, and 6th at the Ta-tung School with a view to raising funds for the relief of those in South China who are in distress by reason of the recent inundation.

The health returns of Kanagawa prefecture during the week ended Aug. 2nd are as follows:—

	Cholera.	Dysentery.	Typhus.	Diphtheria.	Scarlet fever.	Small pox.
Yokohama—
New cases ...	13	10	2	—	—	—
Died .....	—	5	—	—	—	—
Other Districts—
New cases.....	16	112	7	—	—	—
Died .....	8	13	2	—	—	—

A youth was drowned on Aug. 4th while swimming in the sea near Negishi. The corpse was found washed ashore on the following day at Sugita.

The Yokohama money market has considerably eased since the beginning of this month, as business in raw silk is going on without impediment. Still, as enquiries have not been wanting from silk manufacturers in the provinces, the interest rate has been between sen 2.6 and 2.7

on an average. According to a banker, funds are needed by the manufacturers in view of the silk crop of the summer.

The coolies employed by the Ijima-gumi and Ota-gumi, contractors, who quarrelled among themselves at Kanagawa on Aug. 4th, as already reported, renewed the trouble on the following day, twenty of them being at once arrested by the Kanagawa police.

Fire broke out in the house of a Chinaman living at No. 152, Yamashita-cho, Yokohama, on the evening of Aug. 4th. The flames were soon extinguished. A lamp is said to have been the cause.

A report received at the Yokohama Chief Police Office states that a young workman employed at the Yokosuka Naval Station was found on Aug. 4th strangled to death in a forest near the village of Kinngasa. On Wednesday a young man was arrested at Yokosuka in connexion with the crime.

Y.A.R.C. OPEN AIR CONCERT.

The Open Air Concert given by the Yokohama Amateur Rowing Club on Wednesday evening deserves to rank among the most successful functions of the season. The weather, to begin with, was faultless. All praise is due to the Committee—Messrs. R. C. Bowden, C. von Fallot, J. L. Graham and W. Graham—for the general arrangements of the evening. The bathing-barge, brought close in, was utilized as a stage, and, lit up with lanterns and electric lights, presented a charming appearance. The water area in front of the Club premises was fairly well filled, many of the audience accommodating themselves in boats. An excellent programme had been provided, and an enthusiastic audience called for, and received, encores all the way through. Refreshments occupied the attention of the audience during the interval, which was also enlivened by selections from the Town Band.

The second part of the programme was productive of even more boisterous applause than the first—Mr. Windett, for example, not satisfying the audience till he had given three songs, while the violinists, Messrs. H. A. Poole and P. E. Bousfield were twice recalled. Messrs. W. H. Lewis and W. E. Gooch being unable to take part in the entertainment, Messrs. Foster, Smith and Windett stepped into the breach with several "extras."

PROGRAMME.

PART I.

Song ..... "The Windmill" ..... Herbert H. Nelson.
Mr. B. C. Foster.
Song.....Selected.....
Mr. W. E. Gooch.
Violin Duet .....Dance.
Messrs. H. A. Poole and P. E. Bousfield.
Song....."I love a lassie".....
Mr. Allan Smith.
Song....."Myra".....Clutsam.
Mr. G. G. Franklin.
Interval of half an hour.

PART II.

Songs ... (a) "The Temple Bell" } Amy Wood-
(b) "Less than the dust" } forde Finden.
Mr. A. F. Cooper.
Song ..... "Isn't it like a Man" .....
Mr. A. H. Windett.
Cello Solo .....Melody of Massenet.....
Mr. E. Salinger.
Accompanied by Mr. Seidel
Song .....Selected.....
Mr. W. H. Lewis.
Song....."The Lass o' Killiecrankie" .....
Mr. Allan Smith.
Accompanist's: Messrs. G. G. Franklin, A. E.
Cooper and W. E. Gooch.

A Foochow despatch states that H.E. Sung Shon, Viceroy of the Min-Ché provinces, has informed the Throne that he has ordered the cultivators of the 27,500 mow of land which comprise the entire area upon which poppy is planted in Fukien province, to begin sowing cereals on it early in the autumn, under pain of confiscation to Government if the poppy plant is still cultivated there.

P. &amp; O. SERVICE.

Commencing on the 8th October the P. & O. S. N. Co., will run a special service steamer between Japan and Shanghai to connect every fortnight with their Homeward Mail Line from the latter port. This steamer will be the S. S. Oriental of 5,284 tons and 6,000 H.P. having exceedingly good accommodation for passengers, first and second saloon. The programme to be maintained will be as follows:—

Leave Yokohama 4 p.m. Thursday, 8th October.
Arrive Shanghai Monday, 12th "

Connecting there with the mail steamer Delta.

Leave Shanghai Wednesday, 14th October.
Arrive Moji Friday, 16th "
Arrive Kobe Saturday, 17th "
Leave Kobe Tuesday, 20th "
Arrive Yokohama Wednesday, 21st "

And fortnightly thereafter.

The Oriental connecting with the Company's mail steamer at Shanghai will land passengers and silk from Yokohama in Marseilles in 36 days, and London one week later.

This innovation will render the Company's present intermediate service of steamers independent of the mail connection at Shanghai, but their departure from Japan will be at regular fortnightly intervals as hitherto.

The Oriental is now a favourite passenger vessel on the London-Bombay service and should become popular between Japan-Shanghai.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

The prices of American kerosene oil have risen by sen 3, says a Nagasaki telegram.

The Mikasa left Yokosuka on Aug. 1st for Ominato to join the First Squadron there.

A clerk of the Shimabashi Railway Station has absconded with yen 1,543 belonging to the office.

M. Charpentier has been appointed French Vice-Consul in Kobe. On July 31st, the Japanese Foreign Office issued his exequatur.

The despatch vessel Mogami has been completed for sea at Nagasaki and was to be handed over to the Naval authorities on July 29th.

The Training Squadron, consisting of the Itsukushima and Hashidate, arrived on Aug. 2nd at Yokosuka from a cruise in foreign waters.

The Nichi Nichi reports that Baron Vamano-uchi, Commander-in-chief of the Kure Naval Station, will shortly resign and join a commercial business.

According to a London telegram under date of July 31st, a slight rise has been noted in copper making a quotation of £60.5.0, and the market is steady.

A telegram has been received in Tokyo to the effect that the American Government has purchased 100,000 ounces of silver in order to strike auxiliary coins.

The Foreign Office has decided to provide for a consulate at Tsitsihar. Mr. Sakai, Vice-Consul-General in Mukden, will be appointed to the new office.

About 20 firemen and sailors employed on the German steamer Tiberius at Nagasaki struck for an increase of their wages on July 30th, the police finally arresting six of them.

Four wagons of a freight train were derailed on Aug. 1st at 1.32 p.m. at Osaka, causing some damage to the line. Traffic throughout the section was stopped for about two hours.

On July 30th, a man attacked and severely injured a female servant of a public house in Nihonbashi, Tokyo, and then escaped. The cause is reported to have been jealousy.

A bluejacket on the destroyer Kisaragi now at Yokosuka, and a female servant of a public house attempted to commit suicide with a short sword. The woman succumbed a little later. As to the cause, it is said that they found themselves unable to carry out their intention of marrying.

H. Sakamoto, the master of the Hino Station on the Kōbu Railway, has been prosecuted on a charge of having misappropriated goods belonging to the office.

Mr. K. Hara, formerly Minister for Home Affairs, will leave Yokohama on Aug. 24th for Vancouver. He will visit America and Europe, returning via Siberia.

Captain J. Terauchi, first son of the Minister for War, is to be married in November to Miss Yuri Tokuno, third daughter of Mr. M. Tokuno, a member of the House of Peers.

A Sapporo telegram reports that abnormal temperature was experienced there on Aug. 1st. During the hour from 2 to 3 p.m. the thermometer read 91.4 deg. F. Such heat has not been felt for 30 years past.

Owing to dense fog, the steamer Seishi Maru III. (773 tons) went ashore at Karuka near Reibun Island, Hokkaido, on July 26th. The ship is insured with the Nippon Marine Insurance Company for yen 80,000.

A report is to hand by telegram that the fishermen of 200 boats at sea off Miyasaki, Toyama prefecture, made trouble among themselves which resulted in injuries more or less severe for a considerable number.

The Foreign Office has decided to establish an emigration office in the Bureau of Commercial Affairs. Mr. M. Saito, Consul-General in Honolulu, now on his way home will be appointed to the control of the new office.

Two freight trains collided early on the morning of Aug. 1st at Sanuki Station on the Nippon Railway destroying four wagons and damaging both locomotives. Negligence on the part of an employee of the station was the cause.

An armed man about 30 years of age broke into the house of a merchant in Kyobashi, Tokyo, early on the morning of Aug. 5th, inflicting severe injuries on two employees, a policeman and an employee of an adjoining house, who appeared on hearing the cries of the occupants. The offender escaped and is still at large.

By the steamer Prins Sigismund on Friday morning there arrived, shipped by the Kiss firm, 22 Australian griffins out of a total of 25, three having died on the voyage. They are for the Meguro club. They have been landed in fine condition, being indeed one of the best lots of such horses brought here. There was also landed a carriage mare for a private owner.

THE ISLAND OF ENOSHIMA.

By J. E. DE BECKER.

Enoshima is the name of a small island situated in the southern extremity of the Sagami-nada (sea) off the coast of Kawaguchi-mura, Kamakura county, Sagami province. The island is very small, being but 24 cho 38 ken (8820 feet) in circumference and having an area of 18 cho 183 tsubo (64,263 tsubo or about 53 acres). It is to cho (over half a mile) from the nearest shore—the sandspit of Katase-mura—and 2 ri (5 miles) from Yuki-no-shita in Kamakura. Although called an island it might be more properly described as a peninsula, for it is only at very high tide that it is entirely surrounded by the sea. Enoshima is famous throughout the entire Japanese Empire for the beauty of its scenery and the delightful views of sea and land which are obtainable in its locality and which attract crowds of visitors to the spot. Its climate is similar to that of Kamakura. The shape of the island, which rises boldly out of the sea, is very remarkable with its yawning precipices, its jutting headlands and its wave-washed rocks overhanging the green foliage of ancient trees. On the east it faces Shichiriga-hama and the distant mountain peaks of Kadzusa and Awa, on the west the Hakone range and Mount Fuji, on the south Oshima (Vies Island) in Izu, and on the north the mountain of Oyama and the Tanzawa range.

The origin and meaning of the name "Enoshima" is not clear, and it has been written in many different ways, among which may be mentioned 柄島 "Handle Island," 荏島 "Oil-bean Island," 榎島 "Enoki Island," 繪島 "Picture Island," and 畫島 "Picture Island." It is now officially written 江島 "Inlet Island," but poets invariably use one of the forms translatable as "Picture Island." Enoshima is also known as "Kin-ki" (金龜) "The Golden Tortoise."

The "Sagami Fu-do-ki" (相模風土記) says that there is no true history of the island available, but in a manuscript book called "Enoshima Fu" (江嶋譜) or "Record of Enoshima," it is stated that the island is said to have risen out of the sea in a single night in the 4th month of the 6th year of the reign of the Emperor Kwaiwa (152 B.C.). In the "Enoshima Engi" (江嶋縁起) or "Historical Record of Enoshima," however it states that in days of yore there lived in the sea where the island now is a wicked dragon who used to inflict cruel injuries on the people in the neighbourhood. In the 13th year of the reign of the Emperor Kimmie (552), a great earthquake shook the place, continuing from the 12th to the 23rd day of the 4th month, and at the same time an angel appeared in the heavens. An island then suddenly arose up out of the sea, and the angel descended upon it and subdued the dragon. The island was Enoshima and the angel Benten. Thus Benten became the guardian of Enoshima. This marvellous story was, without doubt the invention of some ancient ecclesiastic, but superstitions die hard and the legend still survives. With regard to that part of the story which avers that the island spontaneously arose, or "gushed up" (tsuki-deru) out of the ocean, the statement may be credible, because other islands appear to have come into existence in this manner,* and one who has seen the effect of the great earthquake of July 15th 1888 on the geographical conformation of the neighborhood of Bandai san will not be over-positive in denying the possibility of Enoshima having been formed by a convulsion of nature.

In the 4th year of the reign of the human Emperor Mōmu (700), the celebrated pilgrim mountaineer and saint Enō Shōkaku visited this island, and in the first year of Jō-ei (1182) Shōgun Minamoto Yoritomo installed an image of Benten in the cave of the island. Since the installation of the image, the island has been visited by a constant stream of pilgrims and sightseers.

In the 9th month of the 1st year of Ryaku-o (October 1338), when Prince Yoshinaga and Kasuga Akinobu were on their way to invade Mutsu province, their fleet encountered a terrible storm after they had left the port of Ominato in Ise province, and many ships were driven out of their course and wrecked. On that occasion the ship carrying Seki Hachiro Saemon-no-jō drifted on to the rocks at Enoshima when Seki was put to death by the people of the island.

In the 4th month of the 2nd year of Hotoku (May 14, 60) Ota Sukekiyo and Nagao Kagenaga, the old and faithful servants of Uesugi Noritada, invaded Kamakura, and the then Kwanryo, having obtained early intelligence of the proposed attack, escaped to Enoshima under the cover of night.

In the 3rd month of the 4th year of Eiroku (March 1561) Hojo Yasunari, considering that the island was of strategic importance in case of sudden invasion, gave orders for precautions to be taken in the way of fortifying the place and keeping a force of soldiers stationed there.

In the 1st month of the 6th year of Eiroku (January 1563) Ninagawa Tatewaki built a barrier gate at the entrance of the island and levied toll on all passers-by.

In the 7th year of Tensho (1579) Hojo Ujiteru, Lord of Mutsu, issued an ordinance relative to the island containing five articles.

In the 18th year of Tensho (1592), at the time of the battle of Odawara, Hojo Ujikatsu gave strict orders to the guards of Enoshima to report immediately to him in case of invasion.

In the 6th month of the 5th year of Kei-cho (1600) Tokugawa Ieyasu visited the island when on his way to attack Uesugi Kagekatsu.

After the Restoration of the Meiji era, the island became a resort for pleasure-seekers only; but there are not wanting indications that the War Office has its greedy eyes upon Enoshima, and would like nothing better than to turn the beautiful rock into a fortress bristling with the most approved appliances for wholesale murder invented by our twentieth century "civilized" savages. It is to be sincerely hoped that the artistic sense of the Japanese people will prevent such vandalism on the part of the military authorities and preserve the island as it is for many a long day.

THE SHRINE OF ENOSHIMA.

The shrine (jinja) on the island is dedicated to the * E. g. Sakura-jima in Osumi province, and Kamitsu in Izu province.

worship of Ta-kiri-hime-no-Mikoto (Her Augustness Torrent-Mist-Princess), Ichiki-shima-Hime-no-Mikoto (Her Augustness Princess-of-the-Island-of-the-Offing), and Tagi-tsu-hime-no-Mikoto (Her Augustness-Princess-of-the-Torrent). The "jinja" is classed as of the second rank of shrines (Koku-hei-chu-sha) and consists of three small buildings known as the "Hetsu-jinja," the "Nakatsu-jinja," and the "Oku-tsu-jinja." The origin of these names is given in the "Ko-jiki" as follows:—

(1) Hetsu-jinja: Her-Augustness-Princess-of-the-torrent lives in the Hetsu-no-miya;

(2) Nakatsu-jinja: Her-Augustness-lovely-island-Princess lives in Nakatsu-no-miya;

(3) Oku-tsu-jinja: Her-Augustness-Torrent-Mist-Princess lives in the island of the offing;

In ancient times the shrine was known as the "Benten-sha" (Shrine of the Goddess Benten) and was also called "Kinki-zan Yogan-ji" (The Temple of granting prayers at the mountain of the Golden Tortoise). It was considered as one of the three principal Benten shrines in the Empire.*

With regard to the legend of the island, we have no true data, and as to chronological accuracy, this it is impossible to attain. Whereas the "Enoshima Fu" (江島譜) says that the island was formed in the 4th month of the 6th year of the 9th human Emperor Kwaikwa (152 B.C.) the "Enoshima Engi" (江島縁起) says that it came into existence in the 4th month of the 13th year of the Emperor Kimmuei (May 552)—a difference of over 700 years! However, be that as it may, the "Adzuma Kagami" says that on the 5th day of the 4th month of the first year of Ju-ei (9th May 1182) an image of Benzai-ten was enshrined in Enoshima by the Shogun Minamoto Yoritomo while Mongaku Shonin was staying in that island, and further that a torii was erected on the same day. In other parts of the "Adzuma Kagami" the image is alluded to as "Enoshima Myojin" (The Bright and Luminous God of Enoshima).

We are told in the "Tai-hei-ki" that after Hojo Tokimasa, Yoritomo's father-in-law, had visited the shrine and offered up prayers for the future prosperity of his family he had a dream in which he thought a majestic and very beautiful woman, dressed in scarlet hakama and garments of the finest silk, appeared and foretold to him the greatness of his descendants, warning him, however, that if they misconducted themselves their power should pass away with the seventh generation†. The woman was then transformed into a great dragon which plunged into the sea and disappeared. He then noticed that the woman had left three scales (uruko san mai) behind, and these three scales he afterwards arranged and adopted as his family crest.

The second Minamoto Shogun Yoriei, the wife of the third Shogun Sanetomo, and the Shogun Yoritomo, visited the shrine in the 6th month of the 1st year of Kennin (July 1201), in the third month of the fourth year of Kempo (March 1216) and in the fourth month of the second year of An-ei (May 1228), respectively.

About the 2nd year of Koshu (1456) Ota Mochisuke (Ota Dokwan) visited the shrine, and on his way home a fish sprang out of the sea into his boat, and he, looking upon this as a most auspicious sign, started to build the castles of Kawagoe and Edo in Musashi province.

During the 8th month of the 2nd year of Keian (September 1649) the Tokugawa Government granted a special charter to Enoshima, exempting the islanders from supplying trees and bamboos.

In the Meiji era the term "Benzai-ten" was abolished, and the name of the shrine changed to that of "Enoshima-jinja."

The present Hetsu-jinja, which was formerly called the "Shimeno-Miya" is built of unpainted wood with a copper roof. On the shrine hangs a tablet inscribed with the four characters "江島神社" ("Enoshima Jinja") and the building is surrounded by white curtains, bearing the three dragon scales crest of the H. Jos. In front of the shrine are placed six stone lanterns.

The Shamu-sho (shrine office) stands to the right of the Hetsu-jinja, and on the left stands the "Rei-fu-jyusho" (Place for Supplying Sacred Charms and Amulets).

The shrine was originally built in the 1st year of Ken-ei (1206) by a priest named Ryoshin, to whom permission had been granted by the then Shogun Sanetomo. In the 7th month of the 18th year of Tembun (July 1549) Hojo Ujijyasu presented 20 kin of white silk to defray the expense of repairing the building.

In the 5th year of Genroku (1692) the Tokugawa Government presented certain glebe lands for * (1) Itakushima in Aki province, (2) Chikubujima in Omi province, and (3) Enoshima in Sagami province.

† This prediction was fulfilled, because if Tokiwa he omitted, as is sometimes done, there were only seven regents (shikken) after Tokimasa.

the support of the shrine. The site of this land is the present Ryoshin-machi now inhabited by fishermen.

The shrine of Yasaka-jinja is situated near the Hetsu-jinja, and here on the 13th and 14th July every year a festival is held on quite a grand scale. On this occasion the influx of visitors is very great, whole families coming to the island to witness the ceremonies.

Formerly the shrine stood at Tatsuno-Kuchii in Katase, but owing to a tidal wave it was washed away and drifted to Enoshima where it was picked up by the islanders and erected near the Hetsu-jinja. For this reason the annual festival is observed both in Enoshima and Tatsuno-Kuchii. It is said that the chorus sung by the people to the accompaniment of various musical instruments at festival time is of very ancient origin, and quite unlike anything to be heard elsewhere. According to tradition, an ancient priest of whom none knew, but who was dressed in white and was of a noble appearance, suddenly appeared and taught the islanders the chorus, after which he disappeared as mysteriously as he had come—none knew whither. On festival days, the fishermen divide themselves into two companies—one being the "Eastern Band," and the other being the "Western Band"—who play drums, fifes, samisen (a kind of banjo), bells, gongs and trumpets, the whole making a most curious orchestra.

The sacred palanquin borne on this occasion is of a uniform vermilion colour, and is surmounted by the representation of a phoenix. On the evening of the 13th July it is taken to a temporary shrine and on the 14th it is carried around the shrine. It is then carried through Nishi-machi to the sea and right into the waters of the ocean, and finally brought back to Higashi-machi; and during the whole of this time the chorus goes on with an incessant din, the excitement of the merry-makers being so great that many of them entirely divest themselves of their clothing and run round howling and gesticulating like maniacs in puris naturalibus.

The Nakatsu Jinja is situated in the middle part of the island and was formerly called the Kami-no-Miya. It is a gabled building with a copper roof, and inside the ceiling is panelled and ornamented with carvings, the general scheme of coloring being vermilion. In the building are kept a mikoshi (sacred palanquin) and certain sacred treasures. The latter include:—(1) Suits of armour belonging to Hojo Ujijyasu and Toyama Shinkuro (2) A drum belonging to Hojo Ujitsuna; (3) a jewel of Masako the wife of Yoritomo; (4) a long spear of Hojo Ujitsuna; (5) a sword of Tokugawa Ieyasu; (6) an Imperial tablet written by the Emperor Kanemeyama; (7) a helmet of Nitano-no-Shiro; (8) a mask of Ujitsuna (9) a tablet written by the priest Mongaku; (10) a looking glass known as "Yatsu-hana no Kagami"; (11) a tablet written by the priest Ippen; (12) a document written by Hojo Ujijyasu; (13) a document written by Nichiren; (14) an image of a lion carved by Kobo Daishi (15) a mandarin (a sacred picture) made out of lotus threads; (16) an image of Minamoto Yoritomo; (17) an arrow of Muraoka Kagemasa; (18) a jim-baori (war surcoat) and a banner Hojo Tokimasa; (19) a brittle bit of foreign iron belonging to Nitano-no-Shiro Tadatsune; (20) image of a lion carved by Unkei; (21) trophies of the China-Japan War, etc., etc. All these articles are open to the inspection of the public.

This shrine was founded by Kakui Daishi in the 3rd year of Ninju (853) and in the 10th month of the 3rd year of Hoei the Tokugawa Government set apart certain lands for its maintenance.

The "Okutsu-jinja" is situated to the south-west at the summit of the island, and was formerly called Hongu no mi tabisho (temporary resting place of the sacred palanquin of the main shrine). It is made of unpainted wood and is surrounded by a rail fence. On the ceiling of the haiden (oratory) is painted a representation of a happo-mirami no kame (tortoise of the eight quarters, because his glance is directed to every point of the circle) and in the corner the painting is dated the 3rd year of Kyowa (1803) and signed "Ho-itsu" (Sakai Ho-itsu was an artist of the Kunit school, 1761-1828). Every year on the first day of the snake in the month of April, the mikoshi is brought from the Hongu (main shrine) to this building, where it stays for six months, or until the first day of the boar in the tenth month (October). The date of the erection of this shrine is uncertain, but tradition says that it was originally situated in front of the Iwamoto-in, one of the subordinate chapels. The Iwamoto-in has now been changed into a hostelry under the name of the Iwamoto-ro.

The "Ryu-Kutsu" (Dragon Cave) in which the goddess Benten is enshrined, was formerly the "Hon-gu" or "True Temple" of the Goddess Benten, and is supposed to be the holy cave where the angel first descended. The term "dragon cave" appears in the "Adzuma Kagami," and in the "Annen-Ki" (one of the historical records of the island) the cave is called "Kin-Kutsu" (Golden-cave); while in the "Hokoku-Kiko" the characters 蓬萊洞 (Horai-do=Elysian cave) appear. According to one tradition, the cave came into existence by reason of gold-mining operations having been conducted at this spot in ancient times, but in a certain historical record called the "Sho-chu Kiko" it is stated that—"in ancient days the cave was inhabited by a dragon and an angel lived upon the island. Since the priest Kobo installed the image of the angel in the cave it was called the 'Ten-nyo no Kutsu' (Angel's cave). In the palmy days of Kamakura, as we see in the 'Adzuma Kagami,' it was the invariable custom to pray for rain in this cave. As a rule, where rocky cliffs jut out into the sea, caves will be found at the foot of the rocks; but it is said that this cave was made by persons who were seeking after gold and iron in days of yore, and we have no grounds for saying that such a statement is opposed to fact. Whether the cave be considered a sacred and wonderful place or not entirely depends on the minds of they who view it, and why the place should be filled with so many images of Buddha is a mystery!" In the reign of the Emperor Mommu (697-708) En Otsuno, a Buddhist ascetic and pilgrim, was exiled to the island of Oshima. Here he became aware that a divine spirit inhabited the waters of the North, and on searching discovered that the exact place of abode was a cavern in the island of Enoshima. He therefore proceeded there, saw and worshipped the angel and presented her with a sword as a voice offering, chanted prayers, and meditated on hidden secrets with great zeal, and at midnight on an appointed day he had revealed to him many mysteries. Hence many eminent priests were attracted to the spot, and coming there chanted prayers, and likewise acquired esoteric knowledge. In this manner the cave acquired the odor of sanctity, and is therefore still visited by myriads of people down to this very day.

In the 5th month of the 7th year of Yoro (October 723) a priest named Taicho saw the angel Benten, and in the Jinki-Tenbyo eras (724-766) a priest called Dochi visited the cave, and after reading the scriptures saw the angel appear in human semblance. In the 2nd month of the 5th year of Konin (February 814) Kukai (better known as Kobo Daishi) came to the cave and installed therein wooden images of Tensho-Dajin (the Sun-Goddess), Kasuga-Dajin (Take-mika-dzuchi no mikoto) and Hachiman (the God of War), and on this occasion he buried a precious gem under the pedestal whereon the statues stood. For this reason Kukai was called the chief promoter of the restoration of the shrine. In the 3rd month of the 3rd year of Ninju (April 853) the priest Jikaku was favored in beholding the angel, when he at once made an image of her and preparing a Kongo-sho (a sacred pestle) in which was placed a ho-ken (precious sword) offered these instruments to the shrine. In the 2nd month of the 5th year of Gwangyo (March 881) a priest named Amnen came to the cave for the purpose of searching for relics of Jikaku, and stayed there for some time. In the 4th month of the 1st year of Ju-ei (May 1182), the priest Mongaku offered up prayers to Benzai-ten on behalf of Minamoto Yoritomo, performing a fast and vigil for one and twenty days. In the same year Hojo Tokimasa prayed in the cave and received the dragon scales already mentioned. In the 2nd year of Jogen (1208) in consequence of a long drought, the priests of Tsutsu-ga-oka prayed for rain with great success in this cave. In the 12th month of the 1st year of Katei (January 1236) when Yoritomo was ill with small pox, a certain person called Shigenji offered up prayers here for his recovery. In the 18th year of Tembun (1549) Hojo Ujijyasu restored the shrine in the cave. In the 6th month of the 5th year of Keicho (July 1600), Tokugawa Ieyasu visited the cave, and in the 10th month of the 3rd year of Hoei (November 1706), the Tokugawa Government presented the shrine with glebe lands worth fifteen koku per annum.

The mouth of the cave fronts the beach towards Oshima (Vies Island) and as the tide enters the passage for about forty yards, a bridge has been erected for the use of visitors. The cave is said to be 146 yards in depth, the height being about 48 feet, but the last two measurements are those taken at the entrance and the passage diminishes gradually in size as its recesses are penetrated. About 50 yards from the entrance is the hon-gu or main chapel dedicated to Takiri-hime. Beyond this shrine the cave is so dark that visitors are provided with candles to enable them to see their way. About 24 yards from the hon-gu is a spring known as Kaji-sui (water of Kaji: Kaji is a form of incantation performed by the Shingon sect of Buddhists) the water of which is said to have been used by Kobo Daishi in purifying himself prior to performing the rite of Kaji. Some 18 yards beyond the Kaji-sui the road forks out into two directions, the one to the right being called the Takizo-ku* and the other on the left the Kongo-Kaifu†.

† Garbha-dhatu or "womb element."

* Vajra-dhatu or "diamond element." Both these terms are used in the mystic doctrines of the Shingon sect of Buddhists.

the Tai zo-kai road is a little pond crossed by a small bridge, and about 15 yards beyond there is a small shrine of Benien. By the side of the Kongo-Kai road is shown (1) a stone upon which Nichiren Shonin once sat, (2) a stone on which Koho Daishi slept and (3) a brazier prepared for the goma rite. A little further on is a small shrine dedicated to "Ten-sho-Daijin (The Sun Goddess).

"Chigo-ga-Fuchi" (The child's gulf) is the name of a deep pool of water beneath a yawning precipice on the road to the Dragon's cave, which is celebrated on account of a love tragedy said to have been enacted there in days of yore. A certain priest of the "Kotoku" hermitage on the premises of the "Kencho-ji" temple in Kamakura—a native of Mutsu province named "Jikyu"—once came to the island to pray for a hundred days. It so happened that a girl from Yuki-no-shima, named Shiragiku, (the White Chrysanthemum), was also visiting the shrines of the island, and the pair having met "Jikyu" fell desperately in love with the maiden, but she turned a deaf ear to his solicitations and entreaties. Her coldness only added fuel to the fire of his passion, and Shiragiku, driven to desperation by his importunity, determined to commit suicide. One dark night she wrote two poems on a fan, and giving it to the ferryman of the island said to him:—"Should any person enquire after me, please hand this fan to him," and then, hurrying to the brink of the frightful abyss above the eddying pool, she flung herself headlong into the sea. Jikyu, having missed the girl, made enquiries as to her whereabouts, when Shiragiku's fan was brought to him and he read thereon:—

Should he come and ask Overcome with grief and in secret sorrow,
"Where is Shiragiku There's no faltering now;
now?" Far beneath the waves I Tell him that she stays go forever Of the Enoshima isle.
On the Enoshima isle.

Filled with the most dreadful remorse, Jikyu made preparations to follow his loved one to the land of shades, and composed the following poems:—

(1)

Who doth the evening bell call home tonight?
How can the dead one hear his warning tones?
Does not the maiden lie beneath the rocks,
Bruised and crushed like a withered flower,
Her young life taken in the bloom of youth?
The gentle eyes of her I loved so well
Are closed in death and mingled with the dust.
I gaze upon the fan she left behind,
And read the poems she wrote upon its face;
But what are they to me now she is gone;
The world is dark and dear—a weary place
When a heart's sick with anguish and with woe;
And when I think upon the dreadful scene,
Reflecting on her sorrow and her pain,
My cup of misery is full indeed!
Yet am I dumb, for words must ever fail
The wretch whose grief consumes him as doth mine.
The unbidden tears course down my cheeks,
Wetting my vestments as with evening dew;
The Sun of happiness has set for aye
Behind the clouds of darkness and despair,
For life is sad and lone when love is gone.

(2)

Shiragiku's love is boundless,
Deep as is the rolling sea,
Gladly we will pass together
In the waters of the ocean
Of the Enoshima isle. *

Leaving the poems behind him, the miserable priest proceeded to the precipice, and in the delirium of his agony plunged downwards into the fearful chasm and was swallowed up in the grinding waters of the ocean. A stone monument now marks the very spot where Shiragiku lost her life.

Shoden-jima is the name of an island situated off the eastern shore of Enoshima, which it is said was once visited by an angel in ancient times. According to the "Enoshima Engi" (江島縁記) a priest named Ryoshin visited this island and stayed there for more than one thousand days practising religious austerities, and on the night of the 15th day of the 7th month of the 2nd year of Kenmin (4th August 1202) a purple cloud appeared in the sky which was illuminated by three thousand sacred lights of exceeding brilliancy and effulgence, and at the same time an extraordinary fragrance pervaded the atmosphere. Presently an angel, attended by two celestial youths, appeared hovering over the altar, and the heavenly being addressing Ryoshin in dulcet and enchanting tones revealed unto him many mysteries. The spot is called Shoden-iwa (the rock of the Brahmanic deity Ganesa, god of prudence and remover of obstacles); also Biakko-ishi (stone of the white fox), and Ippon-matsu (Single pine tree). It was also called "Sui-ten-jima" (Varuna-the deva of waters) because upon the approach of rain the island shook and rumbled. According to the "Annen-ki":—"On the eastern coast of the island of Enoshima, there is a rocky island which is in truth the living form of the God Shoden. Now on the isle lives a white dragon eighty feet in length with great red lips. Whenever it threatens to rain the isle shakes and rumbles, so it is called Sui-ten-jima." In a cave in this island an image of Ryoshin is installed.

* NOTE.—The original Japanese cannot well be translated into English, so I have contended myself by giving an idea of the poems in other words.

Near the Hetsu-jinja stands a stone slab known as the byobu-ishi. It is about 5 feet high and 2 ft. 9 inches in width, and is said to have been presented to Ryoshin by the Chinese priest Keinin on the occasion of Ryoshin's visit to China in the reign of the Emperor Tsuchi-Mikado. The top of the stone is engraved with clouds and dragons, and an inscription in Chinese characters reading "Dai-Nihon-Koku Enoshima rei-seki Kenji no Ki" (Record of the erection of temples at the holy place of Enoshima in Great Japan). As to the record beneath, only five characters are now visible, and even they have no connected sense.

The famous gama-ishi (load-stone) stands near the Hetsu-jinja, and about this stone a strange tradition exists. When the priest Ryoshin came to Enoshima, a huge load obstructed his progress; whereupon the saintly man offered up prayers and performed incantations, with the result that the unhappy reptile was changed into stone.

Not far from the gama-ishi is another stone known as the fuku-ishi (lucky stone), which is associated with the name of Sugiyama Waichi, the well known founder of the Sugiyama school of acupuncture. Sugiyama having visited the island to pray to the gods to give him skill in the art of massage, and fasted for seven days, tripped and fell over this stone in a faint. When he came to himself he found that he was grasping in his hand a slender bamboo tube containing a needle. With this needle he made several experiments in acupuncture, and finally became so skilful in his profession that he was called in to operate on the Shogun Ietsuna, whom he cured. This led to his becoming famous as an operator, and resulted in his being appointed so-kenjo or chief of the blind shamponers guild in Yedo and amassing a considerable fortune. It is therefore said that any person who happens to pick up anything in the neighborhood of this stone will become lucky and a hieve success.

TELEGRAMS.

(REUTER'S SERVICE.)

SERIOUS SHIPPING SITUATION.

London, July 30.

New York newspapers state that owing to the new regulations of the Interstate Commerce Commission, all the great railways, including the Canadian Pacific, having steamship services on the Pacific have notified shippers that they are abandoning the export and practically abandoning the import trade with the Orient and Australasia. The newspapers anticipate that the steamship lines concerned will be sold.

BRITISH ARMAMENTS.

A memorial signed by 144 members of the House of Commons has been presented to Mr. Asquith, the Premier, demanding a reduction of the expenditure on armaments. On the other hand, a non-political navy committee is being formed in the House of Commons to advocate a strong navy.

OLD AGE PENSIONS.

Later.

The Old Age Pensions Bill has passed the third reading in the House of Lords.

THE SIEVIER CASE.

The Sievier case, which has excited the greatest interest, ended in an acquittal.

PRO-BRITISH DEMONSTRATION AT CONSTANTINOPLE.

When Sir Gerard Lowther, the new British Ambassador, arrived at Constantinople, a crowd of Liberal Turks at the station shouted "Long Live England, Liberty and the Constitution!" They escorted the Ambassador's carriage.

GERMAN AND ENGLISH WORKERS.

London, July 30.

The Labour party will visit Germany next Whitsuntide with a view to promoting an understanding between British and German workers.

REACTIONARY TURKISH OFFICIALS DISMISSED.

The dismissal of obnoxious palace officials at Constantinople has begun. These officials are being hooted in the streets, and many others are fleeing without waiting for dismissal.

LABOUR TROUBLES IN FRANCE.

Serious labour riots have occurred at Dravelvigneux, Villeneuve, near Paris. The rioters barricaded the streets, pelted the troops with cobblestones, and used revolvers freely, wounding several of the troops. At length the troops fired upon and stormed the barricades, being received by showers of cobble-stones, bottles, syphons, café chairs, and revolver shots from the barricades, windows and roofs. The strikers finally fled to the fields pursued by the cavalry, whom they re-pelted from the railway embankment. The horses being unable to scale this, the troops dismounted and carried the position with their swords. Many more were injured here on both sides.

The outbreak yesterday in the environs of Paris was practically a revolutionary skirmish preceded by a manifesto of the Confederation of Labour ordering a universal strike in 24 hours as a means of bringing capitalists to their knees.

The troops behaved with the greatest forbearance and the day ended in the complete discomfiture of the rioters.

OLD AGE PENSIONS.

The House of Commons has rejected the amendments of the House of Lords on the Old Age Pensions Bill, some on the ground of breach of privilege and others on their merits.

Lord Lansdowne has vigorously protested declaring that the action of the Commons will prevent the Lords from discussing any measure of social reform.

OLYMPIA GAMES.

London, August 1.

Great Britain won all the events. In the Olympia regatta held at Henley Leander defeated the Belgians in the final heats by 29½ lengths in 7 minutes 52 seconds—a triumph for the long British stroke over the foreign short.

TURKEY.

In Constantinople much disquietude prevails, owing to the release of 950 criminals. Including amnestied political refugees, the amnesty affects 200,000 Armenians in America alone.

THE FRENCH RIOTS

Sixty-nine officers and soldiers were injured in the riots at Dravelvigneux near Paris. A number of the rioters received sentences of imprisonment varying from one week to four months. The secretary of the labour confederation and a leading member of the party have been arrested.

THE OLD AGE PENSIONS BILL.

The House of Lords has passed the Old Age Pensions Bill, but with a view to preventing the establishment of precedent passed a resolution declining to acquiesce in the Speaker's ruling their amendments a breach of privilege.

THE TURKISH REFORMS.

Later.

Driving to the Selamlik on Friday, the Sultan stood in his carriage all the way acknowledging the cheers of the people and the troops. Afterwards His Majesty received the whole diplomatic body, to whom he said that he hoped for the support of the Powers. He assured them of his firm resolve to respect the Constitution.

There is a strong anti-Sultan feeling at Adrianople, where are the headquarters of the second army corps. Loyal placards have been torn down, and a meeting in the public gardens protested against cheering the Sultan. Messages were sent to Constantinople declaring that the army will not tolerate any trifling with the Constitution.

THE LABOUR TROUBLES IN FRANCE.

London, August 2.

The Trades Unions in Paris are arranging for a general strike to protest against the killing of strikers on Thursday last. A resolution published by the Socialist party accuses the Government of designing the murder of workmen, brands the Government as their executioners, and affirms the solidarity of the militant workers.

PERSIA.

The granting of the Turkish Constitution has caused excitement in Teheran. A fresh outbreak is feared. Over 100 persons, mostly merchants, have taken refuge in the Turkish Embassy. They demand the immediate summoning of Parliament.

THE FRENCH PRESIDENT.

London, August 3.

President Fallières has left Christiania.

UNIONIST VICTORY.

The contest for the Haggerston division, to replace Sir W. R. Cremer, deceased, has resulted in the election of the Hon. Rupert Guinness, C.M.G., Unionist. The figures are as follows—Guinness (Unionist) 2867; Warren (Liberal) 1724; Burrows (Socialist) 986.

THE TURKISH GOVERNMENT GETS OVER ITS DIFFICULTIES.

The Ottoman Bank is advancing funds to the Turkish Government to enable it to tide over its difficulties pending the negotiation of the loan. This device obviates the necessity of obtaining the ratification of parliament, as laid down by the Constitution.

FRENCH REVERSE IN TONGKING.

A French detachment, while pursuing the Chinese bands in Tongking was ambuscaded, the captain and a lieutenant being killed. The Chinese losses for the past fortnight are said to have been 149 killed and 117 captured.

PRINTERS' STRIKE IN PARIS.

The bulk of the printers in Paris have begun a twenty-four hours strike. Yesterday evening over half the papers were therefore unable to appear.

GREAT BUSH FIRE IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.

London, August 4.

A bush fire has swept a hundred square miles in the region of Crow's Nest Pass, in British Columbia, destroying several townships. One thousand persons are homeless, and 170 are dead or missing.

HONGKONG AND OPIUM.

In a long letter Sir Henry Blake severely criticises the closing of the opium dens at Hongkong without investigation on the spot. He dwells on the serious loss of revenue at a time of languishing trade and increased estimates for the Hongkong and Canton Railway. He says that Hongkong will not kick; therefore the Imperial Government is always stern except when trouble comes. It will probably not remit an equal amount of the compulsory military contribution, though the justice of such remission has to be granted.

THE FRENCH LABOUR RIOTS.

Yesterday passed quietly at Paris. The orders for a strike were generally disregarded.

THE PRINCE MAKES A RECORD PASSAGE.

London, August 5.

The armoured cruiser Indomitable, with the Prince of Wales on board, has arrived at Cowes having made the transatlantic warship record of 5 days 18 hours 40 minutes.

THE STRIKE IN PARIS.

Though in general the strike has proved a fiasco, several collisions have taken place between the rioters and the police, and a number of the latter have been injured.

THE KAISER IN SWEDEN.

The German Emperor, with the Kaiserin, has arrived at Stockholm, where they were received by the King and Queen.

THE TROUBLES IN PERSIA.

Firing has been going on at Tabriz since Monday morning. The Turkish Consul has demanded the immediate cessation of the civil war, failing which his Government would find it necessary to intervene to protect injured Turkish subjects.

Advices are to hand from Teheran to the effect that the Shah has lodged a protest with the Turkish Embassy against the receiving of crowds of refugees without due reason. The Embassy has ordered the refugees to leave, but they refuse to do so.

CHURCHILL ON FREE TRADE.

London, August 5.

The Right Hon. Winston Churchill, President of the Board of Trade, speaking at the Free Trade Congress, dwelt on the injurious effects of tariffs. They fostered jealousy and suspicion among the nations. Free Trade had helped Britain to secure loyal and prosperous colonies.

THE FRENCH PRESIDENT.

M. Fallières has returned to Paris.

ADMINISTRATIVE UNREST IN TURKEY.

The Turkish Minister of Marine has resigned his portfolio. The nation is in an excited state, impatiently insisting on the withdrawal from office of the whole cabinet and the formation of a homogeneous liberal ministry. Four other ministers are reported to have resigned.

ANOTHER AIRSHIP ACCIDENT.

Later.

Zeppelin's airship broke from its moorings in a gale at Stuttgart, caught fire and disappeared in the air. Zeppelin is safe, but several were injured.

OBITUARY.

Lavino, The Times correspondent at Paris, is dead.

(BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH THE "TOKYO ASAHI SHIMBUN.")

A SEDITIONARY NEWSPAPER.

London, July 31.

A special telegram from Vancouver says that the Indian League, of the Pacific Coast, publishes violently seditious articles against the British administration in India. It is alleged that the League receives money from enemies of Great Britain in the United States.

MORE FIGHTING IN PERSIA.

London, August 3.

A special telegram from Tabriz says that fighting between the Shah's troops and the anti-Monarchists has recommenced. Shells are bursting in the European quarters. Both parties are blackmailing the merchants and the villagers.

THE ORIENTAL TRADE.

Washington.—The Trans-Continental railways will abandon the Oriental trade after November. The agitation for a shipping subsidy will probably be renewed in order to enable the American lines to compete with the subsidised Japanese service.

BRITISH POLITICS.

London, August 4.

The close of the Parliamentary session has been marked by another defeat in the Metropolitan election, added to the numerous indications that the electorate is tiring of the Liberal representatives.

The Times regards the Premier's conduct as unsatisfactory. Only two important bills have been carried, namely the Irish Universities and the Old Age Pensions Bills. The latter is a case of reckless legislation intended to secure the support of the working classes. The whole of the Session has been marked by much business friction.

TURKEY.

While the Sultan's attitude and the deposition of several palace favourites encourages the reformers, full precaution are taken to prevent a re-action. Twenty thousand troops are posted at Adrianople. Under the eyes of the Central Committee 9,000 troops at Constantinople have declared that they will support the Constitution.

RUSSIA AND FINLAND.

London, August 4.

St. Petersburg.—The new Finnish Diet has met. The parties are united in defence of the Constitution, which is menaced by Stolypin's measure for higher reference of legislation to the Russian Council of Ministers. The deputies recognise the necessity for caution in order to avoid another solution.

ROJDESTVENSKY.

Admiral Rojdestvensky has returned to St. Petersburg. He is going to his country house. His health has considerably improved.

THE PARIS STRIKE FALLS THROUGH.

Paris.—The general strike threatened individually by the Labour Confederation has proved an utter fiasco. The majority of the workmen have refused to listen to incendiary measures of the confederation. The Government is prosecuting the leaders individually and they thus become liable to more severe punishment than if they were tried collectively.

THE GREAT FIRE IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Ottawa.—The vast fire in southern British Columbia has devastated a hundred square miles. Several hundreds have been killed and 6,000 are homeless. The fire is still burning.

TURKEY.

August 5.

Constantinople.—The Sheik Hulusi resigned on Sunday after a heated discussion at the meeting of the Council of Ministers. He resigned under protest against the fact that in an Imperial Rescript the appointment of the Ministers of War and Marine is reserved to the Sultan. Naoum and Torkhan Pashas have also resigned. The formation of a new ministry is expected.

FRENCH LABOUR TROUBLES.

Paris.—French labour troubles are threatened. The directors of the great public works announce a lockout and an ultimatum to the navvies who have struck work for some weeks.

THE TURKISH NATIONAL MOVEMENT.

St. Petersburg.—The Turkish Nationalist movement is reported to be spreading to Bosnia and Herzegovina. Austria is flooding the provinces with troops and is reverting to wholesale measures of suppression.

THE INDUSTRIAL POSITION IN CANADA.

London, August 6.

Ottawa.—The industrial position has suffered a serious set-back. Eight thousand mechanics of the Canadian Pacific Railway have struck.

THE GREAT FIRE.

Vast supplies are going to the fire-stricken regions. There is little disorder. Cases of theft, mostly by foreigners, are promptly settled by thrashing, as no prison is available.

TURKEY.

The new Premier is said to have resigned. The Ministers of the Interior and of Marine have been arrested. It is believed that they are charged with malversation of funds.

FRANCE AND STEERABLE BALLOONS.

Paris.—The War Office has acquired a large site meant for an aerostatic park. Work will be immediately begun there on an immense iron shed costing over £5,000, in which 3,000 cubic metres of steerable balloons will be constructed.

(RECEIVED AT THE FOREIGN OFFICE)

TYPHOON AT CANTON.

Canton and its neighbourhood was visited on the afternoon of the 27th of July by a severe typhoon which did great damage on the water and on the land. In the harbour at Canton above 500 junks were sunk, and owing to the loss of many ships in which beans, Nankin mame and various kinds of oil were stored, about 6,000 boxes of oil (valued at 20 taels per box) were lost. On shore, as the rice harvest was for the most part over, no very serious damage was suffered in this item, but immense injury was caused to fruit of all kinds. This is specially true of lychees, pears, and oranges, 70 per cent. of which are said to have been destroyed. In the foreign settlement many large trees were blown down, and 14 steam-launches went to the bottom.

FIRE ON A JAPANESE SCHOONER.

The schooner Ukiyo Maru, while lying at anchor in the harbour at Nikolaisk, took fire at 3 a.m. on the 28th ultimo, and burned to the water's edge. The crew were all saved, but there is no hope of saving the cargo namely, 1,000 koku of sake and 500 koku of sugar. The fire originated in the coal bunkers. The Russian authorities were at once asked to render assistance.

THE "MIYE MARU."

The men of the Miye Maru, who were condemned to death at Nikolaisk, have appealed, and all the documents connected with the case have been sent from Nikolaisk to St. Petersburg.

FREE PORT TO BE CLOSED.

(From the Japanese Consul at Harbin.)

A telegram from Mr. Chilikin, a member of the Duma, to a member of the Blagovestchensk Town Assembly and published by a Harbin journal, says that according to an assertion made by the Minister of Commerce and Industry, the Far Eastern free port will be closed from the 1st of the 7th month.

CHINA'S INDEMNITY TO THE U.S.

The amount of the indemnity to be received by the United States in connexion with the Boxer affair was $24,400,000 (gold), out of which she takes $13,655,492 and returns the remainder to China.

(FROM THE "ASASHI SHIMBUN.")

RAILWAY FREIGHT RATES IN AMERICA.

San Francisco, July 29.

The Canadian Pacific, Great Northern, North Pacific, Union Pacific, South Pacific,

Santa Fe, and Oregon Short-Line Railway Companies have informed traders that they will not take after Nov. 1st for transportation goods exported to or imported from Japan, China and New Zealand.

Previous to the foregoing information, the Commercial Committee (? Interstate Commission) consisting of representatives from various States asked the railway companies to publish their freight rates for goods exported and imported, and at the same time, publish the regulations regarding the lowering of the freight rates three days before its enforcement and those of the raised rates ten days before, otherwise the alterations would not be entertained. The railway companies stated in reply that they were not willing to disclose their freight rates, as they must keep them private for competing with the Suez liners which were constantly changing their freight rates. Otherwise they could not maintain their business with Asia.

In connexion with the foregoing affair, it is generally believed that Mr. Harriman's San Francisco service, Mr. Hill's Seattle line, the Canadian Pacific Railroad Company's Vancouver line and other steamship services will be abandoned, and probably the liners will be purchased by Japanese. Thus the shipping industry in the Pacific will be monopolized by Japanese.

MR. TAFT.

Mr. Taft's recent speech delivered in Cincinnati is said to be very conservative, and therefore has been warmly received in Wall Street, where prices of stocks have gone up.

PRESIDENT FALLIERES.

Immediately after a dinner with the Tsar on July 28th, President Fallieres left Reval (? for home). Mr. Iswolsky, Russian Minister for Foreign Affairs, is reported to have said that at the interview between the Tsar and the President an understanding was formed in connexion with international affairs in Europe, and especially with Persian and Morocco affairs.

TTH INDEPENDENT DEMOCRATS.

New York, July 29.

The Independent Democrats now in convention in Chicago declared themselves on July 28th a new political party and decided to elect their President and Vice-President. Mr. Thomas Hisgen was nominated as candidate for President and Mr. John Graves for Vice-President. Mr. Hearst declined to be Presidential candidate. As a result of Mr. Hearst's resignation from the Democrats, Mr. Bryan will lose five or six hundred thousand of his expected votes. The new party are principally labourers. The main feature of the Independent Democrats' platform was that telegraphic works were to be laid under government control; postal savings banks to be provided; the Senators to be elected by the people; Federal and State Judges to be appointed by the Government; Asiatic labourers to be excluded, etc. The party expects to have about a million votes at the forthcoming election.

RAILWAY FREIGHT AFFAIRS.

The proprietors of various factories and traders oppose the proposed rise of the freight rates, and the Federal Government also takes a similar view.

The New York Herald of July 29th published a Chicago telegram to the effect that nine great railway companies have decided not to carry goods exported to and imported from the Orient.

AMERICAN RAILWAYS.

New York, July 30.

The question relating to the abolition of the Pacific steamship services, published by the New York Herald on July 29th, is being discussed by the newspapers to-day. The abolition was promoted by the Canadian Pacific, Great Northern, Northern Pacific, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, and Oregon Shortline Railways. These companies have repeatedly asked the Government for shipping subsidy and been vetoed by Congress. Each time, the companies assumed a threatening attitude. The present move seems to be due to a stronger resolution than before. It is not yet decided whether the ships will be sold or not. The companies have informed their customers that the abolition of the shipping services will be enforced on November 1st. The conflict to take place between Mr. Harriman, Mr. Hill and other railway owners on one side, and the Government on the other, will be spectacular. Many newspapers state that Japan will in the near future realize her cherished desire to control the Pacific trade. Some of the railways have already raised their freight rates for domestic trade. The raising of the freightage is chiefly for the purpose of raising the wages and to relieve the distress arising from the trade depression. In the event of the wholesale raising being put into force, the proposal to increase the freightage on Japanese goods, postponed till October 1st, will also be enforced.

AMERICAN COMMISSION TO JAPANESE EXHIBITION.

Mr. Loomis of the Japanese Grand Exhibition who will shortly leave for Japan, visited President Roosevelt on July 29th at Oyster Bay to bid farewell and also to have a consultation on the exhibition.

GOVERNOR OF NEW YORK.

The election will take place in November for the governorship of New York. A campaign has commenced between the supporters of Mr. Hughes, the present governor, and another candidate.

RAILWAY FREIGHT AFFAIR.

San Francisco, July 30.

Though the attitude adopted by the American railways to stop the transportation of Oriental, Australian and other import and export goods has surprised the Interstate Commerce Commission, and is considered a very grave matter, still the Interstate Commerce Commission is not likely to alter its resolution. The Commission believes that the only method to prevent the arbitrariness of the railways is to restrain them with its resolution, and that a partial suspension of the freight traffic cannot be helped. The Chicago Commercial Association considers the matter to be a severe blow to American trade and is making investigations to arrive at a satisfactory solution. The Association believes that the existence of a difference of 40 or 50 per cent. between the freight rates of the goods for domestic and foreign transportation is unavoidable.

AMERICAN BUSINESS MEN TO VISIT JAPAN.

San Francisco, July 31.

The members of certain Chambers of Commerce in the eastern states have brought forward a proposal to accompany the business men whom the Tokyo and other four Chambers of Commerce invited to visit Japan. Some of the American delegates, however, suggested postponement of the visit until next spring, as the presidential election will take place in November. The San Francisco Chamber of Commerce will hold a conference on Aug. 2nd to fix the day of departure for Japan.

THE RAILWAY AFFAIR.

In accordance with the Trust Law a commission of the Federal Government now in Chicago is collecting evidence with a view to dealing with the amalgamation of the railways under Mr. Harriman.

INDEPENDENT DEMOCRATS.

New York, July 31.

The platform of the new Independent Democratic party is almost the same as that of the Democrats. Mr. Bryan has been credited with the utterance that the new party was organized with a view to supporting the Republican Party.

SHIPPING SERVICES IN THE PACIFIC.

If the Pacific Mail Steamship Company decide to stop their service in the Pacific, as has been rumoured, the Norddeutscher Lloyd will at once open a service between San Francisco and Yokohama. American sentiment is not in favour of delivering the service entirely into the hands of the Japanese.

AMERICAN SHIPPING SERVICES IN THE PACIFIC.

New York, August 1.

In reply to an interviewer, Mr. Hill, President of the Great Northern Railway Company, is reported to have said that the American shipping services in the Pacific were unprofitable every year. Nevertheless, if the services were stopped in consequence of the loss, the American flag would disappear from the Pacific. Under these circumstances, the continuance of the American services was regarded as desirable.

THE RAILWAY FREIGHT AFFAIR.

As the result of the rise of the railway freight rates in America, those of the steamship lines between America and Europe have also been raised—to a figure almost double the former average rates. Business in cereals, cotton, etc. was much affected. The traders interested in the foregoing goods are jointly opposing the railway companies and shipping firms.

AMERICAN NAVAL PREPARATIONS IN THE PACIFIC.

San Francisco, August 3.

The United States Government has been recommended by the Naval Department to establish a first-class naval base at Pearl Harbour in Hawaii, and also to establish a shipbuilding yard there.

A proposal to improve the harbour was passed in the last session of Congress. The American Government now intends to introduce a bill providing for the further expenditure required to convert the harbour into the largest naval station in the Pacific.

ABNORMAL HEAT IN CHICAGO.

An unusually high temperature is being felt in Chicago. It is said that on an average, 29 children under 10 years of age are dying daily.

PORTUGAL AND VENEZUELA.

A Portuguese cruiser has been prevented from communicating with the land while at Guayra. On Aug. 2nd, she arrived at Willensted. According to the officer commanding the ship, the Venezuelans were engaged in making warlike preparations.

It is generally believed that the Portuguese Government will take decided action against Venezuela.

DISASTROUS FIRE IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Fire has occurred in a south-eastern district of British Columbia. The flames spread for a hundred miles around. Whole villages in the district were destroyed or abandoned. According to investigations still in progress when this telegraphic information was despatched, two hundred persons have been burned to death, six thousand are homeless and the damage to crops, buildings, etc., is estimated at ten million dollars.

JAPANESE NAVY.

San Francisco, August 4.

According to information published by the German Navy League, Japan intends to build an additional number of warships, in spite of her financial difficulties. In 1911 she intends to be the third naval Power.

THE RAILWAY FREIGHT QUESTION.

Mr. Harriman, now in Chicago, is reported to have said that the raising of railway freight rates was unavoidable. All the railway owners must increase their income in order to extend their lines yet further for the benefit of the public. In reply to a question whether it was a proper time to raise the rates Mr. Harriman said that there was no alternative as to the time.

AMERICAN BUSINESS MEN AND JAPAN.

A number of American business men held a meeting to-day, Aug. 4th, at the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce. They appointed a committee consisting of five to make the necessary preparations for visiting Japan in response to the joint invitation from the Yokohama, Tokyo and other Chambers of Commerce. The majority of the Americans are anxious to return from Japan before Nov. 3rd, the date of the presidential election. Their departure for Japan will therefore probably take place earlier than anticipated.

COUNT KOMURA.

St. Petersburg, August 4.

Count Komura, Japanese Ambassador, left here at 1 p.m. on Aug. 4th on his way home from London via Siberia. The Russian Government supplied a special car in his honour. The Count is due to arrive in Tokyo on the 26th inst.

MAIL STEAMERS.

NEXT MAIL IS DUE

From	Line	Steamer	Date
Europe	N. D. L.	P. R. Luitpold	F. Aug. 7
America	P. M.	Korea	Su. Aug. 9
Hongkong	O. & O.	Asia	Tu. Aug. 11
Hongkong	B. T.	Suvero	Tu. Aug. 11
Europe	M. M.	Yarra	W. Aug. 12
Tacoma	B. T.	Shawmut	Th. Aug. 13
Hongkong	P. & A.	Numantia	Sa. Aug. 15
America	T. K. K.	America Maru	W. Aug. 19
Vancouver	C. P. R.	Em. of Japan	W. Aug. 19
Hongkong	P. M.	Mongolia	Tu. Aug. 18
Portland	P. & A.	Nicomedia	Th. Aug. 20
Hongkong	C. P. R.	Glenfarg	Th. Aug. 20
Seattle	N. Y. K.	Kaga Maru	Th. Aug. 20
America	P. M.	Siberia	F. Aug. 23
Hongkong	C. P. R.	Em. of India	M. Aug. 24
Hongkong	T. K. K.	Tenyo Maru	Th. Aug. 28
Vancouver	C. P. R.	Monteagle	M. Aug. 31
America	P. M.	China	Th. Sept. 3

- 1 Left Shanghai on the 2nd inst.
- 2 Left San Francisco on the 23d ult.
- 3 Left Hongkong on the 1st inst.
- 4 Left Hongkong on the 31st ult.
- 5 Left San Francisco on the 1st inst.
- 6 Left Astoria on the 29th ult.

NEXT MAIL LEAVES

For	Line	Steamer	Date
Europe	M. M.	Armand Behic	Sa. Aug. 8
Shanghai	N. Y. K.	Yamaguchi M.	Su. Aug. 9
Hongkong	N. Y. K.	Iyo Maru	M. Aug. 10
Hongkong	P. M.	Korea	M. Aug. 10
Tacoma	B. T.	Suvero	W. Aug. 12
America	O. & O.	Asia	Su. Aug. 13
Europe	N. D. L.	P. R. Luitpold	Sa. Aug. 15
Portland	P. & A.	Numantia	Su. Aug. 16
Hongkong	T. K. K.	Hongkong Maru	W. Aug. 17
Hongkong	G. N.	Minnesota	Sa. Sept. 17
Hongkong	B. T.	Inveric	Tu. Aug. 18
Europe	N. Y. K.	Sanuki Maru	W. Aug. 19
Seattle	N. Y. K.	Tango Maru	W. Aug. 19
Hongkong	C. P. R.	Em. of Japan	W. Aug. 19
America	P. M.	Mongolia	W. Aug. 19
Hongkong	P. & A.	Nicomedia	W. Aug. 19
Vancouver	C. P. R.	Glenfarg	Th. Aug. 20
Hongkong	T. K. K.	America Maru	Th. Aug. 20
Australia	N. Y. K.	Yawata Maru	Sa. Aug. 22
Vancouver	C. P. R.	Em. of India	M. Aug. 24
Hongkong	P. M.	Siberia	Sa. Aug. 29
America	T. K. K.	Tenyo Maru	Su. Aug. 30

ITCHING ALMOST UNBEARABLE

Eczema in Sore, Red Patches Like Ringworm Spread Over Body and Limbs—Physician No Help—Gradually Grew Worse—Could Not Work With Comfort—Relieved In One Day and At Last

IS PERFECTLY CURED BY CUTICURA REMEDIES

"About October of last year I noticed a small round red patch on each of my lower limbs, not unlike ringworm. It gradually got so large and irritating that I could not go on with my work in comfort. Finally, sores began to spread all over both of my limbs, and the itching and pain was so acute that I consulted a doctor, who said the complaint was eczema. He gave me some salve, which I used for several weeks. Instead of improving, however, they got gradually worse, and the sores and itching at last got almost unbearable. I tried all kinds of other ointments, which did me no good.

"One day I happened to see an account of how Cuticura Remedies had cured a case something like my own, and I determined to try them. The following day I had less discomfort, and after using the Cuticura Remedies awhile my skin began to heal. The itching and irritation died away and the skin itself assumed a healthier appearance, too. Perseverance with Cuticura has now resulted in a perfect cure. The quantity I required was two tablets of Cuticura Soap, two boxes of Cuticura Ointment, and one vial of Cuticura Pills. I will always recommend Cuticura to my friends." Daniel Stepien, 26, Barrymore Ave., Queenstown, Feb. 8, 1906."

SKIN HUMOURS

Eczemas, Tetter, Rashes, Itchings, Irritations and Chafings Cured by Cuticura.

Warm baths with Cuticura Soap, gentle anointings with Cuticura Ointment and mild doses of Cuticura Pills, afford immediate relief and point to a speedy cure of torturing, disfiguring humours of the skin, scalp and blood of infants, children and adults, when all else fails.

A Single Set often Cures. Sold throughout the world. Deposits: London, 27, Charterhouse St.; P. Towne & Co., Sydney; Lenoir, (U.S.), Cape Town, etc.; B. K. Paul, Calcutta; Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props. of Post-free, Cuticura Booklet.

LATEST SHIPPING.

ARRIVALS.

Kasuga Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,368, A. F. Moses, 31st July.—Shanghai via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Lauscha, German steamer, 2,056, Spertling 30th July.—Saigon, Rice.—Samuel Samuel & Co.

Prinz Sigismund, German steamer, 1,844, D. Lentz, 31st July.—Sydney via ports, General.—H. Ahrens & Co., Nachf.

Cyclops, British steamer, 5,748, H. Harris, 31st July, Liverpool via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.

Hongkong Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,437, W. C. T. S. Filmer, 2nd Aug.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—Toyo Kisen Kaisha.

Syria, British steamer, 4,191, D. C. Gregor, 2nd Aug.—London via ports, Mails and General.—P. & O. S. N. Co.

Empress of China, British steamer, 3,003, R. Archibald, 2nd Aug.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—C. P. R. Co.

Shanano Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,960, K. Kawahara, 3rd Aug.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Yamaguchi Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,059, Kamo-shita, 4th Aug.—Shanghai via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Chinhua, British steamer, 1,349, J. B. Harris, 5th Aug.—Shanghai via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.

Eryll, British steamer, 2,887, James, 6th Aug.—Liverpool via ports, General.—Dodwell & Co.

Jyo Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,918, Ishikawa, 6th Aug.—Seattle, Wash., Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Sibiria, German steamer, 4,212, Taeger, 6th Aug.—Hamburg via ports, General.—C. Illies & Co.
Awa Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,912, A. Keith, 6th Aug.—London and Antwerp via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

DEPARTURES.

Hazel Dollar, British steamer, 2,804, M. Ridley, 31st July.—Hakodate, General.—Samuel Samuel & Co.
Chenan, British steamer, 1,350, W. B. Brown, 31st July.—Hakodate, General.—Butterfield & Swire.
Manchuria, American steamer, 8,750, J. W. Saunders, 31st July.—San Francisco via Honolulu, Mails and General.—P. M. S. S. Co.
Chingtu, British steamer, 1,459, H. E. Laver, 1st Aug.—Shanghai via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.
Scharnhorst, German steamer, 5,058, L. Maass, 1st Aug.—Bremen and Hamburg via ports, Mails and General.—H. Ahrens & Co., Nachf.
Kotik, Russian steamer, 684, M. Bille, 2nd Aug.—Petrozavodsk.—Smith Baker & Co.
Kincraig, British steamer, 2,382, W. F. Cowrie, 2nd Aug.—Mojito, Ballast.—Samuel Samuel & Co.
Silesia, Austrian steamer, 3,340, Radonich, 2nd Aug.—Trieste and Fiume via ports, General.—Heller Bros.
Chikugo Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,458, W. A. Evans, 2nd Aug.—Shanghai via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Benelech, British steamer, 2,679, Geo. McMillan, 2nd Aug.—London via ports, General.—Corney & Co.
Priz Sigismund, German steamer, 1,844, D. Lenz, 2nd Aug.—Sydney via ports, General.—H. Ahrens Nachf. & Co.
Empress of China, British steamer, 3,003, R. Archibald, 3rd Aug.—Vancouver, B.C., Mails and General.—C. P. R. Co.
Finnia, British steamer, 4,100, Fairfield, 4th Aug.—Gaviota, Ballast.—Toyo Kisen Kaisha.
Montgomeryshire, British steamer, 3,689, Jackson, 4th Aug.—Macassar, General.—Samuel Samuel & Co.
Kawachi Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,782, H. Peterson, 5th Aug.—London and Antwerp via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Hongkong Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,437, W. C. T. S. Filmer, 5th Aug.—San Francisco via Honolulu, Mails and General.—Toyo Kisen Kaisha.
Higo Maru, Japanese steamer, 882, Asakawa, 5th Aug.—Bonin Island, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Shinano Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,960, K. Kawahara, 5th Aug.—Seattle, Wash., via Victoria, B.C., Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Cyclops, British steamer, 5,748, H. Harris, 6th Aug.—Glasgow via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.
Indramayo, British steamer, 3,370, Thirkell, 6th Aug.—Ouaru, General.—Corney & Co.
Kasuga Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,368, A. F. Moses, 6th Aug.—Shanghai via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Benelech, British steamer, 2,679, Geo. McMillan, 6th Aug.—Kuchinotsu, Ballast.—Corney & Co.
Sanschan, German steamer, 2,056, Sperling, 6th Aug.—Mojito, Ballast.—Samuel Samuel & Co.

PASSENGERS.

ARRIVED.

Per German steamer Prinz Sigismund from Sydney via ports:—Mr. Hemery, Mr. and Mrs. H. Robinson, Mr. Juenger, Mr. Volin Hall and servant and Sam Kai Yuen in cabin.

Per British steamer Empress of China from Hongkong via ports:—Mr. L. de Hayer, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Suterlie, Mr. G. B. Patterson, Mr. J. Furcke, Mr. H. L. Jones, Mr. A. G. Smith, Mr. G. K. Tott, Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Baill and infant, Mr. G. Abe, Miss Cuth Robinson, Miss Lambert, Mr. F. G. Rogers, Mr. A. Wright and Mr. and Mrs. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. H. Allyn, Mrs. Egan, Miss May and Master Jack, Mrs. M. Blakely, Mr. and Mrs. Patterson, Mr. Chin Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon and 2 children, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. de Canonville, Mr. E. B. de la Gerod and 8 children, Mr. F. R. Hearn, Miss Lewis, Mr. J. H. Kingsley, Miss L. Barnes, Miss Bodkin, Mr. W. H. Anderson, Mr. W. D. McClintock, Mr. H. Hall and Mr. and Mrs. and Miss Brown in cabin; 52 in second class; 364 in steerage.

DEPARTED.

Per American steamer Manchuria, for San Francisco via Honolulu:—Mrs. L. Y. Ahon, Mrs. M. C. Aldrich, Mr. J. K. Altes, Mr. F. L. Barry, Dr. A. Beattie, Mr. C. E. Beatty, Miss L. C. Benedict, Miss L. E. Benedict, Mr. C. M. Bigelow, Mr. J. D. Burks, Mrs. J. D. Burks, and child, Miss Florence Carpenter, Mr. A. Colledge, Mr. C. H. Coulson, Mr. F. Darlang, Mr. B. G. Dickey, Mr. H. F. De Puy, Mrs. H. F. De Puy, Mr. E. A. Douthitt, Mrs. E. A. Douthitt, Miss A. Eakle, Mr. J. M. C. Galletly, Mr. D. B. Gamble, Mrs. D. B. Gamble, Mr. C. J. Gamble, Mr. S. D. Gamble, Mr. M. E. Getz, Mr. John Gibson, Dr. A. P. Goff, D. W. Greif, Mrs. P. W. Haskins, Miss E. Hicks, Mr. W. S. H. Holmes, Mr. E. A. Jennings, Mrs. E. A. Jennings and infant, Miss Jennings, Mr. W. B. Kirkham, Miss M. Klein, Dr. Bentha Lewis, Mr. O. Lorenz, Mrs. E. H. R. Manley, Mr. E. W. McGinnis, Mr. Y. Mayumi, Lt. Comdr. M. G. Miller, U.S.M.C., Mr. H. Peters, Mrs. H. Peters, Master Otto Peters, Miss S. Picknell, Miss E. Pieters, Miss R. Pieters, Mr. D. J. Richards, Mr. C. A. Ruempol, Dr. J. Schmittmann, Mr. R. Seco, Mrs. R. Seco, Miss Maria Seco, Master Christiano Seco, Miss Carmen Seco, Miss Dolores Seco, Mrs. J. W. Sefton, Mr. J. W. Sefton Jr., Mrs. On Young Shee, Mr. Walter Siebel, Miss L. M. Silcox, Mr. E. I. Smead, Miss Maud Soper, Mr. J. R. Van Fossen, Mr. and Mrs. F. Van Praag, Miss M. F. Warner, Mrs. Andrew P. West, Miss N. L. White and Miss Anna Willett in cabin.

Per German steamer Scharnhorst for Bremen and Hamburg via ports:—Mr. James Gold, Mr. W. F. McLaughlin, Dr. J. Theodore Gribayedoff, Mr. V. Heyden, Mr. G. M. Rosenthal, Mr. W. A. Hirst, Mr. W. G. Fine, Mr. R. M. Stirling, Mr. S. C. Johnson, Mr. H. E. Menro, Mr. Donald Macdonald, Mr. T. Stark, Mrs. Emmy Reuter, Miss Eva Reuter, Mr. G. A. ino, Mr. Chang Jak Feig, Mr. G. Staeger, Miss H. N. kajima, Miss Reid, Mr. S. Kageyama, Prof. Dr. Joseph Schnitzer, Mr. J. Choi, Mr. Chan Ko Chin, Mr. Wong, Mr. J. Chin, Mr. and Mrs. Y. Yong and baby, Mr. S. Goug and servant of Mrs. James Cotto in cabin.

Per British steamer Empress of China for Vancouver, B.C.:—Mr. H. Allyn, Mr. W. H. Anderson, Miss E. Badnall, Miss G. Badnall, Miss Barnes, Lieut. R. D. Bennett, Mrs. Blakely, Miss Brown, Mr. G. Brown, Mrs. Brown, Miss N. H. Bodkin, Mr. J. P. Carter, Mr. W. G. Clarke, Mr. E. H. Davis, Mr. J. de Canonville, Mrs. de Canonville and 3 children, Mrs. Martin Egan, Mrs. Gerodly and 4 children, Miss Gerodly, Mr. Gordon, Mrs. Gordon and 2 children, Mr. S. Goto, Mrs. S. Goto and child, Mr. F. V. M. Guerreiro, Mr. Fred. W. Hagan, Mr. H. Hall, Mr. Hargraves, Mr. C. W. Henry, Mr. E. R. Hearne, Miss M. Jack, Master J. Jack, Mr. C. Johnson, Mr. T. P. H. Jose, Mrs. Jose, Mr. Josephson, Mr. T. H. Kingsley, Miss Miss Lewis, Mr. W. D. MacClintock, Dr. G. H. Munro-Horne, Mr. Patterson, Master Paterson, Mr. A. Rock, Mr. A. S. Rosenthal, Mrs. A. S. Rosenthal, Mr. C. Saito, Mr. R. Sturdy, Mr. C. Thorneville, Mr. J. Walker, Mrs. J. Walker, Mr. C. H. Webster and Mr. S. Weiss in cabin.

Per Japanese steamer Hongkong Maru for San Francisco via Honolulu:—Mr. H. Aldridge, Mr. Geo. F. Grindley, Mrs. Geo. F. Grindley, Miss F. M. Brindley, Mr. Carl Eichmann, Mr. S. K. Friedman, Mr. A. W. Hamilton, Mr. N. Hamilton and Mr. C. Ikuine in cabin.

LATEST COMMERCIAL.

IMPORTS.

There is no special change in American Cotton. A small business is being done with gassed yarn. No improvement has been noted in cotton piece goods, woollens and woollen mixtures.

RAW COTTON.

	PER PICH.
American Middling...	32 50 to 33 75
Egyptian Daniel...	42 00 to 42 50
Indian Broad...	26 50 to 28 00
Chinese (Old crop)...	—
Chinese (New crop)...	24 50 to 26 00

COTTON YARN.

	PER BALR.
Nos. 2/60, Gassed...	260 00 to 285 00
Nos. 2/80, Gassed...	360 00 to 385 00
Nos. 2/100, Gassed...	410 00 to 450 00

COTTON PIECE GOODS.

White Shirtings—{ 40 yds. 36 in. }	5 00 to 8 50
Grey Shirtings—{ 38 1/2 yds. 36 in. }	—
Common to Medium...	4 50 to 5 25
Grey Shirtings—{ 46-48 yds. 44-45 in. }	—
Ordinary to Medium...	4 60 to 6 00
Grey Shirtings—{ 46-48 yds. 44-45 in. }	—
Good to Best...	5 50 to 7 50
Grey Cambrics—{ 46-48 yds. 45 inches... }	7 00 to 9 50
Prints—{ 24 yards, 36 inches... }	3 10 to 3 60
Cotton Italians and Satteens—{ 32 in... }	0 25 to 0 35
Cotton Italians and Satteens—{ 36 in... }	0 30 to 0 45
Turkey Reds—{ 28 to 31 1/2 yds. 30 inch... }	1 90 to 2 25
Turkey Reds—{ 38 to 51 1/2 yds. 32 inches... }	2 50 to 3 65
Velvets—{ Black, 35 yards, 22 inches... }	10 00 to 16 00
Victoria Lawns, { 12 yards, 42 inches... }	0 95 to 1 50
Flannelette...	0 15 to 0 30
Cashmere...	0 85 to 0 90

WOOLLENS AND WOOLLEN MIXTURES.

Flannels...	... V. 0 50 to 0 70
Italian Cloth, 36 in...	0 40 to 0 60
Italian Cloth, 36-40 in...	0 40 to 0 55
Mousseline de Laine—{ 120-140 yards, 30-32 inches Common to Medium... }	0 20 to 0 28
Mousselines de Laine—{ 120-140 yards, 30-32 inches Good to Best... }	0 28 to 0 32
Cloths—{ Pilots, Presidents, and Union, 54 to 56 inches... }	0 50 to 1 35
Cloths—{ Army Cloth... }	0 85 to 1 50
Cloths—{ All other... }	1 25 to 3 00
Blankets—{ Assorted, per lb... }	0 70 to 0 80
Wool—{ Australian—No. 1 per lb... }	0 60 to 0 71
" " " " " " " " " " " "	0 58 to 0 64
" " " " " " " " " " " "	0 46 to 0 55
Wool, Tientsin—{ No. 1 per lb... }	0 40 to 0 44
" " " " " " " " " " " "	0 34 to 0 39
" " " " " " " " " " " "	0 25 to 0 30

METALS.

The market is quiet; yet it promises well for the future.

Iron or Mild Steel, Bar, flat, round and square...	... V. 3 80 to 4 50
Iron or Mild Steel, Plate...	4 40 to 5 35
Galvanized Iron Sheets Corrugated...	10 70 to 11 00
Wire Nails, Ordinary assortments...	11 50 to 11 75
Tin Plates, gallos. I.C.W...	6 60 to 8 50
Pig Iron, No. 3 "Redcar"...	6 75 to 7 00
" " " " " " " " " " " "	2 10 to 2 15

KEROSENE.

The market is weak. Prices in American oil have fallen slightly.

Chester...	... V. 3 65 to 3 87
Victory...	3 57 to 3 69
Borneo and Sumatra...	2 25 to 3 10
Hokuyetsu...	3 30 to 3 60
Nippon...	3 30 to 3 75
Ogura Hokuyetsu...	3 50 to 3 80
Tozai...	3 60 to 3 75

SUGAR.

The import of foreign sugar has continued, and the market remains brisk.

Brown Takao...	... V. 9 00 to 9 75
Brown Manila...	10 00 to 11 50
Brown China...	8 00 to 13 50
White Java and Penang...	14 50 to 17 50
White Refined (German)...	15 50 to 19 00
" (Hongkong)...	15 00 to 20 00

INDIGO.

Stocks are scarce; and naturally prices have gone up. Business in artificial dyes is active.

Calcutta first...	... Yen. 265
" second...	250
Java, first...	320
" second...	290
Madras, first...	160
" second...	145
Artificial "horse and lion" brand...	205
Artificial "Keushin"...	200

FLOUR.

A slight improvement has been noted. Enquiries are reported to have appeared from Manchuria.

Gold Drop...	4 sacks ... Yen. 9 80
Flag...	9 80
Royal...	9 80
Trophy...	9 80
Red Seal...	9 80
Lion...	10 90
Portland...	10 35
Premier...	10 25

Japanese:—
Rising Sun...	6 kwamme... 2 45
Takasago...	6 " " 2 41
Fuji...	6 " " 2 41
Pine...	6 " " 2 45

WHEAT.

The market which has remained lifeless for a long time is reported to have revived.

White Walla Walla, 100 kis...	4 80 — 4 90
Red " " " "	4 25 — 4 50
Blue Stem...	5 00 — 5 20

EXPORTS.

RAW SILK.

The market has continued brisk. Business in re-reels has been slightly impeded owing to a rise in price. Kakedas of "veiled woman" and "one horsehead" brand have been sold at good prices. The market is generally believed to be likely to show further improvement. According to an official telegram under date Aug. 4th from New York, a moderate business has been going on.

On Aug. 5th stocks were: filatures 10,784 bales; Re-reels, 1,454 bales; Orikaishi 552 bales; and Sundry, — bales.

QUOTATIONS.

Filature—Extra No. 1, Coarse...	1 120 to 1 130
Filature—Extra No. 2, Coarse...	1 090 to 1 100

Filature—Yojima Class, Coarse ...	1,070 to 1,080
Filature—No. 1, Coarse ...	950 to 960
Filature—No. 1½, Fine ...	1030 to 1040
Filature—No. 1½, 10-12 den. ...	970 to 1000
Filature—No. 1-1½, Coarse ...	940 to 950
Filature—No. 1½-2, 10-13 den. ...	960 to 970
Re-reels—Extra ...	1,000 to 1010
Re-reels—No. 1 ...	990 to 995
Re-reels—No. 1½ ...	965 to 970
Re-reels—No. 2 ...	935 to 940
Kakidas—Gold Cup Chop Extra ...	990 to 980
Kakidas—Veiled Woman Chop No. 1 ...	950 to 960
Kakidas—One Horsehead Chop No. 1½ ...	930 to 940
Kakidas—No. 2 ...	910 to 920
Kakidas—No. 2½ ...	890 to 990

QUOTATIONS ON THE EXCHANGE.

Aug.	Present delivery.	Aug. delivery.	Sept. delivery.	Oct. delivery.
1st	982	—	968	982
2nd	—	—	—	—
3rd	984	939	969	—
4th	974	—	960	—
5th	975	934	962	973
6th	983	—	972	983

WASTE SILK.

There is no special change to note. Yet the market remains steady, since there are enquiries.

On Aug. 5th stocks were: Noshi, 2,834 bales; Kibiso, 4,147 bales; and sundry 563 bales.

QUOTATIONS.

Noshi—Filatures, Best ...	135 to 140
Noshi—Filatures, Good ...	120 to 135
Noshi—Oshiu, Best ...	130 to 140
Noshi—Oshiu, Good ...	125 to 130
Noshi—Oshiu, Medium ...	100 to 120
Noshi—Shinshiu, Best ...	90 to 95
Noshi—Shinshiu, Good ...	55 to 60
Noshi—Bushin, (or Joshu) Best ...	75 to 85
Noshi—Bushin, (or Joshu) Good ...	70 to 80
Noshi—Bushin, (or Joshu) Medium ...	35 to 60
Kibiso—Filatures, Extra ...	105 to 115
Kibiso—Filatures, Best ...	100 to 105
Kibiso—Filatures, Second ...	85 to 90
Rereel—Fair ...	65 to 70
Rereel—Best ...	60 to 65
Rereel—Good ...	50 to 55
Rereel—Medium ...	30 to 35

HABUTAE.

Enquiries have appeared from America for the heavy quality. The figured habutae is being exported to India and Australia. The market is generally firm.

KANAZAWA.

Inches.	4 me.	4½ me.	5 me.	5½ me.
19½	—	9.40	8.85	—
22½	—	8.75	8.50	—
27	—	8.75	8.60	—

"PINE-LEAVES" MARK. (FUKUI.)

Inches.	6 me.	6½ me.	7 me.	7½ me.	8 me.
22½	9.30	8.90	8.85	8.90	8.75
27	9.35	8.95	8.85	8.60	8.70
36	9.35	8.95	8.95	8.80	8.70

"GOLD" MARK.

Inches.	4½ me.	5 me.	5½ me.	6 me.
19½	—	—	—	—
22½	8.40	8.00	8.00	—
27	9.00	8.50	8.30	—
36	8.65	8.10	8.10	—

KAWAMATA.

Inches.	3 me.	3½ me.	4 me.	4½ me.
19½	8.70	9.50	10.60	11.20
22½	10.10	10.70	11.40	12.00
27	10.70	11.80	12.60	14.00
36	14.20	15.20	16.50	18.20

SILK HANDKERCHIEFS.

The rise in habutae has naturally affected business in this line.

Plain Habutae (Hem stitched.)	Yen.
20" x 1½" 6 m/me.	doz. 3.25-3.37
22" x 1½" 7 "	" 4.25-4.52
24" x 1½" 7½ "	" 5.10-5.40
Figured Habutae (Hem stitched.)	Yen.
20" x 1½" 9 "	" 4.30-4.50
22" x 1½" 10 "	" 5.30-5.60
24" x 1½" 12 "	" 7.20-7.40
Figured Habutae (scallop):—	Yen.
10" x 1 corner embroidered	" 0.95-1.00
12" x 4 "	" 1.15-1.20

COPPER.

No improvement is noted. Owing to the fall in prices, some of the proprietors of the copper mines have stopped work. Prices remain nominal.

According to a London telegram under date Aug. 6th, the quotation was £61.15.0.

Refined per 100 km.	Yen 45-49
Bessener per 100 km.	" 52-50
Electric refined per 100 km.	" 53-57

LEA and PERRINS' SAUCE

Assis's digestion and gives a delightful piquancy and flavour to all

MEAT DISHES, SOUPS, FISH, CHEESE, CURRIES, GAME, POULTRY & SALADS.

The Original & Genuine Worcestershire.

RICE.

The markets in Tokyo, Osaka, and Kobe are weak owing to the favourable weather.

	koku.
Domestic rice in Fukagawa	511.578
Foreign rice in Fukagawa	144.875
Delivery.	Closing Price.
August	17.27
September	17.41
October	16.78

RICE AT WHOLESALE: STANDARD PRICE.

(Tokyo)		per koku.
Superior.....	Yen	18.30
Medium.....		17.37
Common.....		16.30
Average.....		17.30
<hr/>
(Osaka.)		(Kobe.)
August.....	16.57	August..... 16.52
September.....	16.80	September..... 16.81
October.....	16.25	October..... 16.20

EXCHANGE.

London silver ¼ lower and China sterling quotations not yet received but local rates on China are higher in anticipation, other rates being unaltered and closing for the mail via Siberia as under.

London—Bank T	4/0 3/4
— Bills on demand	2/0 1/2
— 4 months' sight	2/0 1/2
— Private 4 months' sight	2/0 1/2
— 6 months' sight	2/0 3/4
Paris & Lyons—Bank sight	2/5 1/2
— Private 4 months' sight	2/5 1/2
— 6 months' sight	2/1
Hongkong—Bank sight	per $100 88 1/2
— Private 10 days' sight	do 86 1/2
Shanghai—Bank sight	84 1/2
— Private 10 days' sight	86 1/2
India—Bank sight	153
— Private 30 days' sight	155
America—Bank sight	49 1/2
— Private 30 days' sight	50 1/2
— Private 4 months' sight	51
Germany—Bank sight	207
— Private 4 months' sight	211 1/2
Bar Silver—London	24 1/2

* Nominal.

TEA.

The season is about to be closed. The market is quiet.

From the first offering of new tea in Yokohama up to July 28th 6,749,300 kin were sold and the stock on Thursday aggregated 411,800 kin.

QUOTATIONS.

	Y.	—
Choicest	—	10
Choice	55	60
Finest	50	55
Fine	45	50
Good Medium	32	34
Medium	29	32
Good Common	26	29
Common	20	29

(毎土曜日一回發行)
 郵購人兼發行人 エフ・ブリンクリー
 支那人兼印刷人 ロバート・ヘン
 發行所 横濱市山下町五十五番
 のヤクザンビル新聞社

The Japan Weekly Mail

毎土曜 日 A REVIEW OF JAPANESE COMMERCE, POLITICS, LITERATURE, AND ART. 一回刊行

No. 71

REGISTERED AT THE G.P.O.
AS A NEWSPAPER.

YOKOHAMA, AUG. 15TH, 1908.

明治廿五年三月廿日
第三種郵便物認可

VOL. L.

CONTENTS.

Summary of News .....	177
China .....	178
The Government .....	180
America .....	181
Korea .....	182
The Malversations Case .....	183
Manchuria .....	184
Third International Congress on School Hygiene .....	185
The "Miye Maru" Affair .....	186
International Intercourse .....	187
Trans-Asian Communications .....	188
The Fukuoka Railway .....	189
Political .....	190
The Weather .....	191
Forestry in Japan .....	192
"The Japan Financial and Economic Monthly" .....	193
Baseball .....	194
Business Notes .....	195
Notes on Current Events .....	196
The Tokyo Stock Exchange .....	197
Hydrophobia .....	198
Educational Reaction in China .....	199
The Kanagawa Conlie Trouble .....	200
Leading Article: The Amur Railway .....	201
The Census as Taken in Tokyo .....	202
Dr. Koch .....	203
The Hookshelf .....	204
The Imperial Court .....	205
Monthly Summary of Japanese Current Literature .....	206
Convention Between Japan and the United States of America for the Protection in Korea of Inventions, Designs, Trade-Marks and Copyrights .....	207
Convention Between Japan and the United States of America for the Reciprocal Protection in China of Inventions, Designs, Trade-Marks and Copyrights .....	208
Yokohama .....	209
Yachting .....	210
Storm .....	211
Nippon Keiba Kwai, Meguro .....	212
The Law Courts .....	213
Correspondence .....	214
The "Comet" .....	215
Yokohama Yacht Club .....	216
Cricket .....	217
Viscount Enomoto .....	218
A Sporting Offer .....	219
Fires .....	220
News of the Week .....	221
Convention Consulaire Entre le Japon et les Possessions en Colonies Néerlandaises .....	222
The Stranding of the "Port Maria" .....	223
The Hongkong Typhoon .....	224
The New Law Courts of Korea .....	225
Telegrams .....	226
Latest Commercial .....	227
Latest Shipping .....	228

"FAIS CE QUE VOUS DEVEZ, ADVIENNE CE QUE VOUDRA"

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

No notice will be taken of anonymous correspondence. What is intended for insertion in the "JAPAN WEEKLY MAIL" must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer, not for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

It is particularly requested that all letters on business be addressed to the MANAGER, and Cheques be made payable to same; and that literary contributions be addressed to the EDITOR.

YOKOHAMA: SATURDAY, AUG. 15TH, 1908.

SUMMARY OF NEWS.

SOME excitement has been created at Ichang through a leopard having killed a Chinese girl within a mile of the city.

A SIAMESE destroyer and three torpedo-boats, built at the Kawasaki Shipbuilding Yard in Kobe, arrived at Bangkok on Aug. 10th.

ON Saturday morning Prince Ito had an audience with the Emperor, when he reported on the administration of Korea.

K. YAKURI, Manager of the Ribetsu branch of the Nemuro Bank in Sapporo, was murdered on Aug. 8th by one of his employees. The cause is not yet reported.

OWING to the recent heavy rains, the Keihin Electric Railway bridge across the Tama river in Kawasaki was slightly damaged. Repairs were completed on Aug. 13th, but traffic over the section is still impeded.

THE right of criticism, it is reported, is about to be granted by Imperial Edict to Chinese newspapers "that are the bona fide property of Chinese citizens." The acts of public officials may be criticized, but in a just and impartial manner, and "on no account will Government officials be permitted to withdraw the privilege or attempt to muzzle such of the Press as are respectable and conducted on honest and clean-handed lines."

MR. WAKATSUKI, Japanese special financial agent, left London on Aug. 10th for home. His duties in England will be performed by Mr. Midzumachi, Vice-Minister for Finance.

THE King's prize is reported by telegram to Hongkong to have been won at Bisley by Private Gray of the 5th Scottish. The winner last year was Lieut. Addison, of the South Australian Corps.

THE Alabama and Maine, the fore-runners of the American Fleet, are expected to arrive at Yokohama about Oct. 13th in order to make arrangements in connexion with the cruise of the battleships.

THE residence of Baron Takasaki, Kita-machi, Aoyama, Tokyo, was broken into by a burglar early on the morning of Aug. 5th, and a silver crane, presented by the Emperor, and four swords were stolen.

THE Secretary of the Nippon Race Club advises us that the proposed two days extra Race Meeting in October is now abandoned and the Regular Autumn Meeting will be held on 30th and 31st October, and 6th and 7th November.

THE location of the aquarium to be established in conjunction with the Grand Exhibition to be held in Tokyo in 1912 will in all probability be decided in favour of Kanagawa prefecture, the choice being Kamakura, Kanagawa, or Honmoku.

THE Nippon Yusen Kaisha's European liner Kamakura Maru, which went ashore in the Suez Canal on Aug. 7th was safely floated at 10 a.m. on Sunday, Aug. 9th. A portion of the cargo which was landed on account of the accident was re-shipped. On Monday she left for home.

MR. S. TOMOJI, well known in shooting circles, died from a complaint with which he had been suffering for a long time past. He was at one time a member of the House of Representatives, but afterwards retired from the political stage and devoted himself to encouraging the agricultural industry.

THE Chief Justice of Hongkong, Sir Francis Pigott, has been the victim of a burglary, a gold scarfpin set with four pearls, value unknown, and other pieces of jewellery with $8 in notes, having been stolen from a room in his residence on the night of July 27th or the morning of July 28th.

Two counterfeit 5 yen notes have been discovered at the Tokyo branch of the Kawasaki Bank and the Chukwa Bank respectively. The false notes were so ingeniously made that ordinary people would not be able to detect the difference. One of the false notes bore No. 680018, and another, 680846.

THE Department of Communications intends to abolish the lightship off Honmoku which has been so well-known as the aka fune and to moor a buoy in its place, about the middle of September. The buoy will be round in form, and will bear a cage. The height above the water will be about 15 feet. A gas light will be provided.

A TELEGRAM under date of Aug. 9th states that a baseball match played on Aug. 8th between the Keio Gijiku and the Santa Clara Club resulted in a victory for the latter by 9 runs to 5. Both sides had 4 runs each to their credit when Sasaki, the Japanese catcher, was injured and had to retire, his place being taken by Kameyama. A match between the Keio Gijiku and the Diamond Head Club on Aug. 9th was won by the Japanese by 8 runs to 1.

THE island located in 30.5 lat. and 154.2 long., (160 miles from Bonin Islands), which was discovered by Mr. T. Yamada in August last year, has been named Nakano-Tori-shima. The island is included in the jurisdiction of the Tokyo-Fu. The area of the new isle comprises covers 643,700 tsubo, and its circumference is about 4 miles.

THE Borneo Company in Singapore received information the other day of the murder of Mr. E. R. Naysmith, manager of the Sadong Coal Mines, Sarawak. The murder was committed by a cook in his employ. The man also rushed at Mrs. Naysmith, who tried to save her husband, but the lady was fortunately able to escape. The murderer fled into the jungle but was subsequently captured. Mr. and Mrs. Naysmith had been married only ten months.

ON the night of Aug. 8th a man, apparently a workman, threw himself before a train at Namanugi near Kanagawa, and was run over and killed. He was not identified. A man, about 25 years old, was found on the railway near Hirayama Station on the night of Aug. 7th crushed to death. His head was missing. It was inferred from some letters in his possession that he laid himself on the line with the intention of committing suicide. This man also was not identified.

IT is stated, says an exchange, that the Japanese Government has decided to honour Mr. Thomas Henry James, London manager of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha, by promoting him to the Second Class of the Sacred Treasure. Mr. James Blair, freight manager of the London branch, and Mr. F. Guy, manager of Messrs. Worms and Co., the company's Suez Canal agents, are to receive the 5th Order of the Rising Sun, all for special services rendered during the Russo-Japanese War.

THE Korean Government announces the defrayment of yen 14,014 this year, says the Seoul Press, as a supplementary budget for the cultivation of cotton. It is stated that since March last the authorities have established thirteen model cotton farms throughout the country. The enterprise, it seems, cost more money than was originally estimated and the appropriation granted in the Budget was found short of the real amount. Hence the defrayment of the sum above mentioned.

IT has been decided to establish a school in Peking for sons of Imperial clansmen and scions of high officials for the study of Constitutionalism. The idea, which emanates from the wise statesmanship of Grand Councillor Yuan Shih-kai, is to train up a number of young people for future government service. The graduates of the School will, it is reported, be drafted into the Tzschényuan, which is regarded as the future Parliament of China. As soon as the necessary regulations are drawn up the School will be opened.

THE Yokohama Electric Railway Company intends to make a reclamation about 14 yards in width along the Bund and to construct a railway thereon. The new line will be connected with the railway at the corner of the office of Messrs Jardine Matheson and Co., No. 1, Yamashita-cho. The enterprise is connected with the reception of the Yokohama Municipality to the American Fleet. The construction is expected to be completed towards the end of September. The Electric Railway Company has applied to the Home Office for permission.

CHINA.

Friday, August 7.

Mr. Haraguchi has just returned from China. Some months ago, there was a report that this Japanese engineer had been engaged by the Chinese in preference to an Englishman, and recently another piece of news was circulated, namely, that an Englishman had been preferred to Mr. Haraguchi. Interviewed by a representative of the Asahi Shimbun, Mr. Haraguchi totally denies these rumours. Nothing of the kind has occurred. It appears that a considerable number of Japanese experts were engaged originally by Viceroy Chang for surveying the route of the Chuan-Han Railway from Hankow to Szechuan. At that time an American Syndicate owned the concession of the Yeh-Han Railway; namely, the line 700 miles long from Hankow to Canton. It was at this period that the rights-recovery doctrine had its greatest vogue, and Viceroy Chang, anxious to recover the concession, approached British capitalists, and obtained from them the necessary money on such liberal terms that his Excellency decided to have recourse to Great Britain in all future financial transactions. This did not, however, mean that the Japanese experts were to be ousted. But it was found inconvenient to have them working under an English chief engineer, mainly because of the language difficulty. In order to facilitate matters, another Japanese engineer, Mr. Mago, who had had experience on the North China railways, was engaged to have direct control of such of his countrymen as were employed on these Yangtze valley lines. Mr. Haraguchi himself is acting in the capacity of adviser. He denies that there has been the slightest friction between his countrymen and their English colleagues. Both sides have worked with the best possible good will, as becomes the nationals of allied countries. Mr. Haraguchi adds that the railway to Szechuan is 1200 miles long and will of course be a correspondingly protracted undertaking. Work has already been commenced in the Canton end of the Yeh-Han Railway, and as about 50 miles on the Hankow end have been surveyed, work will probably begin there also in September.

Saturday, August 8.

It appears that the veto imposed by the Chinese local authorities on the export of grain from Chientao was suggested not by any actual scarcity but by apprehensions that the unfavourable weather of this season would be followed by bad crops, and the authorities were further influenced by the fact that the Chinese troops stationed in Chientao constitute an exceptional source of demand. It is stated, however, that in deference to Japan's protest on Korea's account the Peking Government has instructed the local authorities to endeavour to find some peaceful solution of the problem.

There are other telegrams which suggest that Viceroy Hsu has been moved to more active procedure in the matter of Chientao. His Excellency is said to have ordered that accurate investigations should be made into the conditions of the surrounding districts lest they too should be involved in similar complications, and he has also memorialized the Throne urging that no time should be lost in recovering possession of the Tienpau-shan mines.

From official reports published by the Seoul Press we learn that between the 5th and the 31st of July seventeen encounters took place between detachments of Japanese troops, gendarmes or police, and insurgents, with the result that 79 of the latter were killed and 13 taken prisoner, a quantity of arms and ammunition being also taken. It is observable that the assistant gendarmerie are spoken of in this report, so they have evidently got to work. Unincluded in the above list are the operations of the Songhwa garrison between June 22nd and July 12th. These operations resulted in the death of 157 insurgents. The report mentions that one Japanese cavalry officer was wounded slightly in a fight near Chonju.

Sunday, August 9.

His Excellency Ta Hsu, who recently visited Japan for the purpose of investigating parliamentary institutions, has returned to China and presented his report to the Throne. He is said to have stated that there need be no delay in promulgating a constitution for China, and that it is desirable that a responsible Cabinet should be organised for the sake of introducing uniformity in the administration of affairs.

Monday, August 10.

Telegrams from Mukden say that owing to increased administrative expenses in Manchuria considerable additions have to be made to the taxes. A supplementary business tax was recently imposed and the Viceroy now contemplates a house tax. The leading merchants, however, have held a meeting and passed a resolution in the sense that the supplementary business tax is already more than they can bear and that the house tax would be unendurable.

The celebrated Mr. Tsen, who made himself so conspicuous last year by refusing to take up appointments offered to him by the Throne, is now spoken of as likely to be nominated Viceroy of the Two Kiang, the present Viceroy, Mr. Twan, being removed to Peking. This Mr. Tsen is son of the late Viceroy Tsen Yuying.

The affairs of this important line are again attracting attention. China is under pledge to finance the road with Belgian capital, and to do so will cost her at least £400,000 annually for the next 30 years, the agreement being that the capitalists shall receive 20 per cent. of the net profits, which are said to be not less than 2 millions sterling annually with every prospect of increasing. The line can be redeemed, however, during the course of the present year, and the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank is believed to have undertaken to raise in London and Paris sufficient funds for the purpose on terms which would place the property completely in China's possession within 26 years at a cost of £225,000 yearly. But the Yuchuan pu—Board of Communications—has suddenly announced that there is no occasion to raise a foreign loan, as the Chinese Government has money enough for the purpose. These figures are given by the Peking and Tientsin Times, and that journal infers that China has abandoned all intention of redeeming the road. But does that necessarily follow?

In this context we quote the following from the Peking correspondence of the N.-C. Daily News, under date of July 28th:—

News from the Waiwupu is to the effect that Sir John Jordan, H. M. Minister to China, is now negotiating with Prince Ching and H. E. Yuan Shih-kai about the conclusion of a new agreement for the construction of the proposed Pukou-Hsingyang (Honan) railway with British funds. This is one of the five railway concessions granted to British capitalists in 1898—the others being the Tientsin-Pukow, the Canton-Kowloon, the Shanghai-Nanking, the Soochow-Hangchow and Ningpo (now Shanghai-Hangchow-Ningpo). It is believed here that the agreement for the construction of the proposed Pukou-Hsingyang line with British capital will be made on lines similar to the Tientsin-Pukow and the Shanghai-Hangchow-Ningpo agreements. The negotiations are proceeding smoothly and it is hoped that the matter will be settled with satisfaction to both parties in the near future. The concessionaires are the British and Chinese Corporation.

Viceroy Chang Chih-tung, Director-General of the proposed Canton-Hankow trunk line, is busily engaged in conferring by telegraph and letter with the representatives of the people of Kuangtung, Hunan and Hupeh about the raising of capital for the building of this important railway in South and Central China without further delay. Otherwise the concession will be taken back by the Chinese Government and built with Government money, that is to say, with a foreign loan. The natives of Szechuan, Kiangsu, Kiangsi, and other Provinces have been urged by the Government to bestir themselves and subscribe money to build the railways within the jurisdictions of their respective Provinces; otherwise similar high officials will be appointed as Directors-General for hastening matters. The appointment of H. E. Chan: Chih-tung as Director-General of the Yueh-Han trunk line will certainly stir up the people in other Provinces to do something effectively towards the building of their railways. In the interests of this important trunk line, which will connect South, Central and North China, H. E. Chang intends to pay a round visit to Kuangtung, Hunan and Hupeh in the coming autumn months, so as to ascertain the real condition of affairs in the three Provinces. But, as he is one of the important members of the Grand Council of State, it may be doubted whether the Empress-Dowager will allow him to leave the Capital. It is stated that either H. E. Chang or another high official will shortly be appointed Director-General of the proposed Szechuan-Hankow trunk line for similar reasons.

Telegrams recently received from China have made several references to Lieutenant-General Baron Fukushima, but the statements have not been very definite. We find the following in the Peking correspondence of the N.-C. Daily News:—

Major-General Fukushima, Vice-Chief of the Japanese Headquarters Staff office in Tokyo, who recently came to Peking and was decorated by the Chinese Government with the Double Dragon for the pains he has taken in training the Chinese military students in the Ché-an Military College in the Japanese Capital, left here for Hankow, via the Peking-Hankow railway, on the 20th instant. The Japanese General has been requested by the Ministry of War to visit the Viceroy's Wuchang and Nanking about the proposed combined Army Manœuvres of the Luchun troops of Kiangsu and Hupeh which will be held in the district of Taihu, Anhui, in October next, when the Powers will be asked to send representatives to witness them, as in 1905 and 1906 in Chihli and Honan. After his visit to Wuchang and Nanking, General Fukushima will return to Tokyo, via Shanghai. Mr. Katsukara of the Kawasaki Dockyards at Kobe, who came to Peking with General Fukushima some three weeks ago, has left for Japan; but it is still unknown whether he has secured any orders for men-of-war from the Ministry of War (which is temporarily in charge of the Naval Department).

Tuesday, August 11.

Representatives of a number of provinces are holding meetings in Peking for the purpose of preparing a petition for the speedy opening of a national assembly.

The Peking Government has decided to send 100 students to study in America, in consideration of the fact that the United States has restored a portion of the Boxer indemnity.

General Fukushima has returned from his trip to China—his 16th trip as it proves to be. He speaks enthusiastically of the improved communications in and about Peking, but his most interesting statement has reference to Hankow. When he last visited that place in 1897 he found a Japanese Consul and a Japanese community consisting of one person. On this occasion that diminutive community had grown to 1,500, and the expansion of Japanese enterprise in all directions astounded the General.

The Mainichi Dempo has an interesting paragraph embodying an interview with Mr. Hwang Hsing, who is described as the active leader of the insurrection in South China and as a man of much greater influence than the celebrated Dr. Sun. Hwang is quoted as saying that the revolution failed owing to an accident which has proved fatal to many insurrections in the past, want of co-ordination. As a matter of fact, the uprising at Hokou was only a feint, and was never meant to be anything more. The plan was to concentrate the attention of the authorities on this Hokou diversion, and then to make the principal rising in the Two Kwang Provinces. But the Hokou insurgents anticipated the time for their demonstration and took the field before preparations for the main movement had been completed. The public believes that Yunnan was the seat of the disturbance, whereas what happened there was only of secondary importance. Yet even the Hokou movement might have had a different result but for several adverse circumstances. The first was want of provisions. At that time of year provisions are always scarce in China, and the situation in this respect was accentuated by the action of the French in Annam, who stopped the transport of supplies across the border. The insurgents were reduced to living on Indian corn and had to pay an enormous price for it. Then again they were short of ammunition. The outbreak at Hokou having been intended merely as a secondary affair, no large provision of ammunition had been made there. The strategy of the leader, Ho Shun, was also very defective. He had 5,000 men under his command, and had he marched his whole force direct upon Mentz, which is easily accessible from Hokou, there can be little doubt that he would have reached the former place without difficulty, and he would have found there ample supplies of provisions and ammunition. But he divided his field force into three, and he further debilitated his fighting strength by leaving a garrison at Hokou, so that the fragments of his army fell an easy prey to the Imperialist troops. This leader further admits that the landing of troops at Kinchow in Kwangtung during the spring of 1907 was the act of insurgents under his orders. Their object was to relieve the people, who were said to be suffering much oppression at the hands of the local officials. Again, the capture of Chinnankwan in Kiangsi last winter was equally an enterprise by the same insurgents. They had been led to believe that a large quantity of arms and ammunition was stored there, and they desired to possess themselves of these essentials. But on seizing the place they found that the arms and ammunition had all been removed. Mr. Hwang concludes by saying that the future movements of the insurgents will be in the north of China. The south has the advantage of being far away from the seat of power and therefore less exposed to forceful attacks, but, on the other hand, the effect of anything happening in the south is not so much felt in Peking. The insurgents have at any rate demonstrated that their movements need not involve any international complications, and they will now demonstrate the truth of their motto "deeds not words."

Wednesday, August 12.

Two sailing vessels carrying 20,000 stand of small arms and a million rounds of ammunition are stated to have been seized by the Chinese authorities at Hsienchow in the province of Fukien. The owners are said to be Japanese and the goods were being smuggled from Formosa for the use of the insurgents.

Owing to need of funds a proposal was introduced by the Chinese Government for renewing the practice of selling offices, but because of the opposition of Chang Chihlung the project was abandoned.

The Asahi Shinbun publishes a rather incomprehensible telegram from Tientsin. It says that some Japanese subjects having applied for permission to open shops in the Chinese town, their application was refused on the ground that it is unlawful for foreigners to engage in trade outside the limits of the concession. The Japanese Consul is said to have lodged a strong protest against this decision.

We quoted in our last issue some utterances attributed to General Fukushima on the remarkable evidences that the Yangtze Valley affords of the development of Japanese enterprise. It is very interesting to read in that context certain passages from the consular report of Mr. E. H. Fraser, writing from the same place:—

All this development, however, is attended by a marked jealousy of foreign co-operation, which now extends even to the Japanese. Every new company's rules contains a stereotyped prohibition of alien shareholders. The authorities on their part seize every opportunity to cut down as low as possible the privileges granted by treaty, even maintaining with patient persistence that "treaty port" means no more than "foreign concession," and interpreting the permission to trade at the open ports into prohibition of any money-making occupation in Wuchang and of any industrial establishment beyond the literal environs of Hankow. The native Press reiterates the doctrine that the purchase of alien wares is a drain on China's wealth, and that to the Boxer indemnity is due the rise in the prices of the necessities of life. To foreign loans are attributed the loss of independence of Poland, India and Egypt, and the injustice of protective countries restricting China's customs duties to a bare 5 per cent. ad valorem is constantly harped upon. The recurrent failures of native industrial undertakings are never ascribed to want of technical knowledge on the part of passed student promoters who have spent a year or two in Japan, but to the unjust treaties which prohibit monopolies. In short, China's awakening to the value of Western science and industry takes as yet the form chiefly of irritation against her more advanced competitors and of a policy that in its essence is little removed from the anti-foreign isolation of her undisturbed prime.

This antagonism for the present postpones the danger of serious competition of local products with foreign imports. The advance of knowledge of foreign countries and markets and methods of business constitutes a more immediate menace to resident foreign merchants. Already the native dealer is well posted in the course of exchange as well as in the movements of the markets for the wares he wishes to buy or sell, and the foreigner tends more and more to become merely a commission agent.

Thursday, August 13.

In deference, partly to the representations of the Japanese Government, partly to the weather, which recently took a turn for the better so that the crop prospects brightened, the Chinese Authorities have removed the veto on the export of grain from Chengtao, and a quantity crossed the river safely on the 10th instant, its destination being Ham-yong-do.

It is stated that the Peking Government has made official representations to Tokyo on the ground that the Japanese force of gendarmes in Korea was recently increased by 20 men, and that a quantity of arms and ammunition has been imported in grain-carrying carts. The basis of the representations is that such proceedings are a violation of the status quo which the two Powers have agreed to maintain. The public was not aware that any such agreement existed. If it does, then certainly the recent issue of a Chinese veto on the export of grain was a very marked violation, being, in fact, an open assertion of full administrative authority by China.

A telegram from Peking says that the Chinese Government has definitely decided to open the national assembly in ten years from the present time. If this be true, it constitutes a striking resemblance to Japan's procedure. The announcement of the opening of the Diet was made in 1881 and the promise was implemented in 1891.

There are contradictory reports about the state of the Emperor of China's health. One story says that an official statement has been made in the Privy Council. This details his Majesty's symptoms and the nature of the treatment he has been receiving, and invites the provincial authorities to send to the capital medical experts who may be thought capable of prescribing. Another statement is that the Sovereign's health is quite satisfactory and that he is not under treatment at all.

Baron Fukushima gives quite a graphic account of his meeting with a number of his countrymen who are studying the economic and industrial conditions of China. The General was travelling by train from Peking to Hankow, and at a place en route—the name is not given—he observed a number of youths whom he took to be Chinese. They approached the station, where the train had stopped, and to his great astonishment introduced themselves as Japanese subjects, who, having graduated at the To a Dobun Sho in Shanghai, had been sent out to visit the provinces and report upon all important matters observed by them. They were clad in the plainest and most serviceable costume, and each carried an equipment necessary for cooking his own victuals. Hardships seemed to be treated by them with the greatest indifference, and they were evidently cheerful, self-reliant and zealous. General Fukushima was much moved at this unexpected encounter, which afforded practical demonstration of the work done by the East Asian Common Script Association. Evidently the Japanese are not letting the grass grow under their feet in China. They have an immense advantage over all other nationals in their ability to move about among the Chinese without any suggestion of alien origin. Doubtless they have full command of the language, and it goes without saying that in their costume and mode of living they are not to be distinguished from Chinese. In this way an invaluable knowledge of local conditions will be acquired, and of course ultimately utilized to extend Japanese commerce and create fields for Japanese enterprise.

THE TRADE-MARKS CONVENTION.

The new Convention between America and Japan for the mutual protection of trade-marks, patents, designs and copyrights has now been published. The Official Gazette further announces that in giving effect to this Convention the Japanese regulations will be applied in their integrity in Korea, the Korean Government being understood wherever the "Japanese Government" is spoken of and the Resident's Courts in Korea being substituted for the "Japanese Courts." So far as China is concerned, the rights created by this convention will be mutually protected by the Consular Courts of the high contracting parties. We may add that a patents bureau, to be organised in the Residency General, is also provided for by this Imperial Ordinance.

A body which was identified by means of a watch and chain, found on some Chinese who were lifting it, as that of Capt. Page of the wrecked steamer Ying King, was found on July 31st at Castle Peak near the scene of the wreck and brought to Hongkong. The funeral took place on Saturday night.

THE GOVERNMENT.

The Kokumin Shinbun, whose utterances have now special importance, says that next year's Budget for the Financial Department has been practically settled and that nothing now remains except to receive the Budgets relating to the other Departments of State. On the whole the General Budget for next year will not differ materially from that of the current year, but it is probable—here our contemporary uses double leaded type—that as the business-men of the country have clearly expressed their desire for a material increase of the appropriations on account of the redemption of the National Debts, the Government will contrive to devote at least 60 million yen to that purpose during next year. This will be effected by means of the surplus of ordinary revenue. The Treasury is now in a position to estimate with tolerable accuracy what the amount of that surplus will be, and it is evident that over 20 million yen can be added to the Debt Redemption Fund. The Kokumin adds significantly that it is not possible to augment the Redemption Fund by reducing the fixed expenditures of the Departments. It concludes by saying that the Cabinet programme with regard to this question will be announced in two or three weeks.

The Nichi Nichi Shinbun confirms this last assertion of the Kokumin, namely, that the Government will soon take some step to make known its line of policy. The probability is that it will summon delegations from the two Houses of the Diet for the purpose.

The Shogyo Shimpō has an interesting article on the above topic. It says that the public welcomed the advent of the Katsura Cabinet to power, especially when it learned that Marquis Katsura himself was to take the portfolio of Finance, and that his Lieutenant would be Mr. Wakatsuki, now serving as Financial Agent in Europe. But a cruel revulsion of feeling took place when it was learned that the former Vice-Minister, Mr. Mizumachi, was to be summoned from retirement and re-instated at the Finance Department. It is true that this measure was called temporary and that Mr. Mizumachi is to give place to Mr. Wakatsuki, so soon as the latter returns from London. But in the meanwhile Mr. Mizumachi will be carrying on business just at the time when the Cabinet's financial policy is being drafted, and the public cannot forget that Mr. Mizumachi's name is associated with all the misfortunes of the past 18 months. The Shogyo affirms that the re-call of this official to power, whether temporary or permanent, has shaken the confidence inspired by the accession of the Katsura Ministry, and that in these circumstances the Cabinet can not be too expeditious in definitely declaring its policy.

We find in the Nichi Nichi Shinbun an optimistic article about the financial policy of the present Cabinet. But our contemporary does not deal with actual arithmetic or go beyond rumours already circulated. The gist of the article is that in his capacity of Minister of Finance Marquis Katsura is not leaving things to his juniors, as has hitherto been a common custom, but is going into all the figures himself carefully. He has also set his face firmly against inter-departmental rivalry for appropriations. This habit of scrambling for funds without any united regard for the interests of national finance as a whole, has been a flagrant abuse and a great source of embarrassment, but the Premier will inaugurate a more wholesome system. Moreover his military position will enable him to deal drastically as well as intelligently with the outlays for the War Department. The Nichi Nichi adds that all the necessary adjustments have now been practically effected and that the compilation of the Budget for next year may be regarded as an accomplished fact. There is no longer any idea of carrying out in its entirety the post bellum programme of 1906.

At this moment, when the nation is watching eagerly for every indication of the new Cabinet's policy, an article in the Mainichi Dempo has considerable interest. It does not profess to embody the opinions of the editor himself, but it is attributed, according to the vicarious custom of Japanese journals, to an anonymous correspondent who is described as a prominent member of the House of Peers, said to be well versed in the views of the Prime Minister. This informant makes Marquis Katsura say, in effect, that the Government does not regard the House of Representatives as an infallible exponent of the wishes of the people. It is true that the members of the House are returned by the votes of the constituencies, but in view of party organisation, and taking account of the experiences of the past few years, it is tolerably plain that not all the men who win seats in the House are true exponents of the nation's wishes. That character belongs rather to the House of Peers, which, being independent of parties, can devote itself with an unbiased mind to the consideration of national problems. The import of these remarks is that the Cabinet does not intend to be shackled by the views of the majority in the Lower House. Still less will it follow the pernicious custom of making party leaders the arbiters of great problems before the latter have been submitted for the consideration of the Throne and of its trusted advisors. The Ministry will always be glad to hear the views of party politicians, but at the same time it will always reserve the right of adopting or rejecting them according to its own discretion. The last Cabinet worked very smoothly so far as the Lower House was concerned, inasmuch as the Premier was not only himself the leader of a great Party but also practically dictated that Party's attitude. The present Cabinet, however, will devote itself rather to interpreting as accurately as possible the wishes of the people.

If these utterances be trustworthy, they will doubtless evoke much hostile criticism from party leaders and party organs. But after all they contain nothing new. Everybody knows that the Katsura Ministry is not a party Cabinet, and since it cannot think of shaping its policy in accordance with the dictates of the Seiyū-kai or any similar organisation, the only practical course is to carefully feel the pulse of the people and be guided by the resulting diagnosis. Genuine party cabinets are still in the lap of the future, so far as Japan is concerned. But they must come. The fiat went forth on the day when the Constitution was proclaimed. All that can be reasonably looked for is that the final stage of preparation shall be prolonged sufficiently to insure the result against some of the worst abuses of the system. It is fortunate for the nation that it possesses men strong enough to hold the reins of power during the preparatory stage.

The Asahi Shimbun also has an article on the Cabinet's procedure, but not with reference to political parties. What our contemporary deals with is the actual programme of the Ministry. Again the origin of the statement is an anonymous politician said to be well versed in the Premier's views. There are, we read, three great problems facing the Ministry. One is the problem of finance, another the problem of treaty revision, and the third the problem of the great Exhibition. As for finance, the Government's intentions have already been interpreted with tolerable accuracy by the press. It will adopt the negative policy to which its predecessor had finally committed itself, but it will carry out that policy with increased resolution. Every possible postponement and retrenchment will be effected and administrative reforms will be carried into practice with the utmost thoroughness. As to increasing the sum set aside for annual redemptions of the National Debt, there can not yet be any assurance given with reference to a substantial increase, but seeing that the income of the State will be about 600 million yen, there should be no difficulty in making adjustments such as will enable an additional sum of 20 or 30 million yen to be made to the amortization fund. No effort will be spared also to amend or abolish the most objectionable of the special war taxes, but on that point there is not yet sufficient material to speak positively. With regard to tariff revision, we do not very clearly follow the views ascribed to the Cabinet. If these views be rightly represented, it would seem that considerable difficulty is anticipated in practically exercising the autonomy which Japan will recover three years hence. The Asahi's informant speaks of a new conventional tariff as well as a statutory, and appears to foresee that there will be no material change in existing conditions. Finally, speaking of the great Exhibition, this informant attributes to the Cabinet the view that the project was premature. The men who conceived it were carried away by the tide of enterprise which marked the moment. They should have waited at least 5 years longer so as to make sure that the time of the Exhibition would synchronise with the full adjustment of Japan's financial, industrial and commercial affairs after the War. However the die has been cast and no change can now be made. But it is natural that voices should already be raised asking for an extension of a programme whose original dimensions were too small for the occasion but not perhaps too small for the country's competence. It is also natural that foreign nations should be hastening to take advantage of the opportunity for advertising their wares in Japan, but this country, while heartily welcoming them, must take care that the result shall not be an illustration of the old proverb, "letting the eaves and losing the house."

There is in Tokyo an Association called the Tone Chisui-Kai which has for direct object the control and utilization of the waters of the great river Tone. Among the appropriations which have been removed from the Budget in deference to the cry for economy, there figures a sum of half a million yen on account of riverine works connected with the Tone, and on the 11th inst. the above Association sent a delegation to urge that the Prime Minister should take steps for restoring this item. Marquis Katsura showed himself sympathetic towards the petition and promised to bring the subject to the attention of the Home Department. The delegates seized the occasion to make inquiries about the Cabinet's financial policy. Marquis Katsura was not very explicit, but what he said may be regarded as eminently satisfactory. He pointed out that the responsibility for inflated Budgets of recent years did not rest with the late Cabinet alone, but must be borne equally by those who had coöperated with them. Retrenchment was certainly necessary, and investigations to that end were now in progress. Probably a sum of 50 or 60 million yen could be economised, but this did not mean that useful public undertakings were to be abandoned merely for the sake of saving money. Referring to the National Debt, his Excellency agreed that every effort should be made to redeem it, and that redemption was not compatible with the raising of fresh loans or the re-writing of old ones. In fact the Premier's statement, while it did not enter into any close arithmetical details, evinced a strong disposition to meet the wishes of the business world as expressed in the Representation recently drawn up by the five Clearing Houses.

The Niroku Shinbun writes confidently that the Cabinet has made up its mind to largely modify the three taxes to which so much exception has been taken by many publicists. Thus the communications tax will be changed in the sense that it will be leviable only for journeys of fifty miles or upwards. For the tax on textile fabrics will be substituted a kidai-zei, that is to say, a tax upon looms, and the salt monopoly will be changed for an enden-zei, that is to say a tax upon salt fields. Our contemporary does not undertake to say positively that this programme will be carried out in any case except that of the communications tax. This impost brings in only a little over 2 million yen annually, and therefore its abolition need not cause any special inconvenience. As for the tax on textile fabrics, it brings in nearly 20 million yen a year, and is therefore an item of considerable importance. But the cost of collection is very heavy, and there would be a large economy in this respect if a tax on looms were substituted, so that the net result to the Treasury would not be very different. The salt monopoly is the most troublesome of the three. It yields 13 millions approximately, and about two thirds of that amount would be lost if the proposed change were made. Moreover the salt producers of Japan would be exposed to the competition of the Kwantung fields, and an economic problem of some importance might present itself.

The Mainichi Dempo says that the great question now is the amount of postponements that can be effected in the expenditures on account of the Army and Navy. Marquis Katsura's idea is said to be that the programme should be extended to 10 years instead of 6, with a corresponding diminution of appropriations for each year. The Naval authorities apparently offer no serious objection, but on the side of the Army it is contended that while a postponement of 2 years is feasible, 4 or 5 years are out of the question. Until this is settled the Ministry's financial scheme can not be definitely formulated. We should have thought that a question of such importance would have been decided before the Cabinet took office. The Nippon writes in a very despondent strain about this question of the Army. It alleges that Prince Yamagata and Viscount Terauchi are both opposed to any radical change, and that the Premier has consequently been obliged to abandon the idea. The result is that the Cabinet will not be able to effect any economies of a striking nature.

THE KAWAKITA AFFAIR.

It appears, according to the latest news from Peking, that the Japanese officer suspected of selling documents to the Chinese and the Russians was a retired Captain, by name Kawakita. He arrived in Peking sometime ago, and having no ostensible employment, became an object of suspicion to the police. Then, from some source which is not mentioned, information was obtained which connected him with the sale of official documents. A gendarme was sent to arrest him, but the ex-Captain, having his sword by him, drew it and resisted violently. Finally the gendarme was obliged to have recourse to his pistol as his own life was in danger, and he shot the ex-Captain dead. It is further stated that although the documents in question had considerable importance, they did not come exactly under the category of secret papers.

A great deal of attention has been attracted in Japan by the treachery and death of Captain Kawakita. It appears that he was an officer of artillery who had received the highest possible technical and scientific education in Japan, and that he was regarded as a man of the greatest promise. He fought throughout the whole campaign of 1904 from the landing of the troops in Manchuria up to the Battle of Liaoyang, and subsequently he was employed by Viceroy Yuan as instructor at the Tientsin Military College. While there he was found to have embezzled some official funds belonging to the Viceroyalty. His Excellency Yuan hushed up this matter and confined himself to merely depriving Captain Kawakita of his post, but the Japanese War Office of course removed his name from the active list. He then disappeared for a time from public view, and a considerable period elapsed before it was discovered that he was living in China and constantly sending considerable sums of money through the post office to his wife in Japan. Suspicion being thus aroused, he was carefully watched with the result already known to our readers. Such documents as he was able to dispose of to the emissaries of foreign States are not regarded as possessing so much importance as the information he may have been able to give.

The Tokyo newspapers are taking this incident as a text for a severe criticism of the conduct of Army officers in general. There seem to be good reasons for this campaign. Several instances have lately occurred of the removal or retirement of junior officers in connexion with more or less flagrant scandals. It is even said that General Terauchi, Minister of War, has issued a stringent order on the subject. Count Nogi is quoted as stating characteristically that until the senior officers set a better example the junior cannot be expected to walk very straight. The newspapers, however, are disposed to regard this lapse from grace as a direct result of the recent war, which brought to military men rewards such as could hardly fail to inspire uneconomical ideas. One paper cites the case of Germany as illustrating the corrupting influences produced upon a great army by signal victories and refers to Chinese history also as furnishing similar illustrations. A Tokyo journal publishes a picture of a Masamune blade which has just been taken from its case and is found to be covered with rust. This apt idea appears to have appealed strongly to public fancy and to have suggested the suspicion that the country is spending immense sums on a force which will prove itself comparatively worthless in the hour of crisis. It is very possible that all this may be considerably exaggerated, but experience shows that the effects of great successes are always intoxicating.

It appears after all that the late Captain Kawakita was not guilty of embezzlement while serving in the Military School at Paoting. It is a case of the old adage "cherchez la femme." His dismissal from the Military College was at the instance of superior officers of his own nationality, who thought that his dissolute conduct would bring disgrace on his cloth. As to his having sold military secrets, however, there appears to be no manner of doubt. It was by him that a number of secret documents were abstracted some time ago from the archives at Hiroshima.

AMERICA.

It will be remembered that a telegram received three or four days ago said that a number of Japanese workmen had been employed by the authorities of the Canadian Pacific Railway to take the place of the strikers. The news created some uneasiness, for such an incident seemed more than likely to provoke a renewal of anti-Japanese demonstrations on the part of the American workmen. We now learn from a telegram to the Asahi Shinbun that no such substitution has occurred. Overtures on tempting terms were indeed made to the Japanese, but they declined to entertain the proposal and their refusal is said to have been marked up in white chalk by the strikers.

An anti-Asiatic association has been formed in Washington under the auspices of men who are said to be more or less distinguished in the political field. Its platform is frankly exclusive. The members bind themselves to labour to the utmost in the cause of America for the Americans, and on account of the great principle that by white men alone can the white man's civilization be maintained. It does not apparently occur to these exclusionists that they themselves and their bigoted doctrines constitute an indelible stain upon the escutcheon of the white man's civilization.

We read in the Hochi Shinbun that Mr. Consul-General Koike has started for the Rocky Mountain regions in pursuance of the mission entrusted to him by his Government to investigate and report upon the condition of the Japanese throughout the United States. He has already completed his researches in California, and their result is that he finds the agriculture of the province to be largely dependent on Japanese exertions. In fact in this Pacific State the Japanese are firmly and prosperously established, nor does the Consul-General think that there is anything like a universal desire to expel them. All that is wanted is to impose some limit upon their influx.

It may be here mentioned that Mr. Hughes is telegraphed as having offered excuses in the State Assembly for failure to carry the anti-Japanese bill through Congress this session, and as having assured the Assembly that it will duly be brought up next session. His explanations seem to have fallen rather flat, however, the general feeling in the Assembly being one of indifference if not hostility to the Bill. On the other hand news comes from British Columbia that in connexion with the election of members of Parliament a strong anti-Japanese Association has been organised.

KOREA.

Friday, August 7.

Viscount Sone, Vice-Resident General, has definitely refused the memorial presented by the Japanese residents, of the various settlements, asking for the rescinding of the recently issued order about the nomination of municipal officials. This refusal has augmented the excitement. The five Japanese newspapers published in Seoul and Fusan are concerting measures for a lecture meeting, and it is evident that the affair will not be easily disposed of. We observe that the Fiji Shimpō condemns the action of the Residency General in this matter. It admits that the system of election has resulted in many abuses, but it does not regard these as sufficient to warrant such a drastic step as that taken by the Residency General. Apparently the situation might be met, in the Fiji's opinion, by amending the regulations for the organisation of municipalities in Korea in the sense of adding a municipal council to the administrative machinery. Such bodies form part of the Municipal system in Japan proper, and their presence would probably correct many of the abuses now complained of in Korea. One is compelled to think, however, that the information by which the Residency General has been guided in this matter was much fuller than that obtainable by outsiders.

There is a movement on foot in Seoul to celebrate with great pomp the first anniversary (21st inst.) of the coronation of the reigning Emperor of Korea.

Major-General Akashi, who commands the gendarmerie in Korea, is to leave Fusan on the 10th inst. on a tour of inspection via Gensan, Songchin and Hoiryong to Chientao. We mention this because the incident is sure to be exaggerated into an increase of the Japanese force in Chientao.

The Nichi Nichi Shimbun says that 33 Koreans, who are to belong to the Committee for establishing the Colonization Company, will come to Japan during September.

Saturday, August 8.

There appears to have been quite a serious fracas in Unkwei Bay off the mouth of the Tumen River. A party of 18 Japanese fishermen were surrounded by a Korean mob of boats, and 11 of the Japanese were killed and three wounded. The remaining four are missing. The telegraph does not attempt any identification of the insurgents, but they are probably connected with the bandits who were recently reported as having crossed the Tumen from the Russian side. Another disturbance of a similar character is reported from the neighbourhood of Chemulpo, but in this latter case Korean subjects were the victims and their own nationals the assailants.

Nineteen out of the twenty officers constituting the municipal machinery of the Japanese settlement in Seoul have resigned office, in consequence of the rejection of their petition with reference to the manner of appointing Mayors of municipalities. The total number of these officers in Seoul is 20, but one being absent in Japan, did not join the demonstration. It is expected that the sanitary officers will take a similar step.

Meanwhile the Residency-General seems quite determined to persist in its policy. Another Seoul journal has been suspended for publishing intemperate articles with reference to this subject.

Those who have followed the Korean story with attention are aware that Japan has promised to assist her neighbour to the extent of 20 million yen, approximately, which sum is to be paid in six annual instalments commencing from the present year. The Mainichi Dempo states, however, that the expenditures incurred in connexion with the insurrection are not included in this money, and will have to be defrayed independently by Japan. Already about 5 million yen have been paid out, and there will be further outlays before order is completely restored. We read that in order to diminish the expenditures, it has been determined to extend the period of service with the colours to three years in the case of the troops in Korea. This will obviate the necessity of despatching thither some thousands of reliefs.

The Korean Prince Imperial is to pay a visit to Kure in company with Prince Ito. They leave Tokyo to day.

Sunday, August 9.

According to the Nichi Nichi Shimbun's telegrams, the agitation in Korea about the question of Mayors seems likely to evaporate without any practical results. The leaders of the movement in Seoul obtained the vehement support of several newspapers, and distributed a violently worded circular to the various Municipalities throughout the country, but only one of these bodies, that of Kunsan, has hitherto shown any disposition to support the agitation. In all other cases the circular is said to have been coldly received, and the resignation of the municipal officials in Seoul is regarded as premature.

It has been decided to open a patents bureau in the Residency General from the 16th inst. for the purpose of giving effect to the newly concluded Convention between the United States and Japan for the protection of designs, patents and trademarks.

We read in the Nichi Nichi Shimbun that a draft of law for the organisation of the Eastern Colonization Company has been presented by Viscount Sone to a meeting of counsellors in the Residency General. By this term "counsellors" is to be understood the Japanese officials who act in the capacity of Advisors to the various Korean Departments of State.

The Dai Han Mai Il Shimpō has been again getting itself into trouble. On the 8th inst. it published under the heading of "criminal courts of law" an article which was deemed subversive of public peace and good order and the newspaper was suspended.

Mr. Pak Yongho's term of exile to Quelpart expires on the 26th inst., but it is said that he intends to remain for the present in the island and to refrain from returning to Seoul, which place he regards as a hotbed of political intrigue. Mr. Pak's name has been more or less before the public since the celebrated Kim Okkyun affair 15 years ago. He was a refugee in Japan for many years and was permitted to return to his country shortly before the Hague incident. Before he had been many months in Seoul, however, he was convicted of intriguing to upset the existing order of things and was sentenced to a year's banishment.

There is a strange rumour in Seoul. The correspondent of the Kokumin Shimbun transmits it to Tokyo. It is to the effect that the Prime Minister, Mr. Yi Wanyong, has been engaged in a serious intrigue. He is said to have obtained from the Lady Om a large tract of Crown land under false pretences and when, the fraud having been discovered, a case was brought before the Supreme Court, the Prime Minister induced the Minister of Justice, Mr. Cho, to contrive that the appeal should be turned down.

This may be a mere canard but it is partially confirmed by a rumour in the Nichi Nichi Shimbun to the effect that the Il Ching-hoi have presented against the Prime Minister an indictment of many counts.

Monday, August 10.

The Mainichi Dempo has a telegram from Seoul saying that the whole country south of a line drawn from the north of the Province of Pyongando to Hamyongdo has now been reduced to order. Northward of that line there are still a few insurgents but they are insignificant. The latest list of incidents published by the Seoul press shows very clearly, what is indeed confirmed by our own information, namely, that the operations of the troops, gendarmes and the police are now practically limited to searching for and apprehending insurgents. There are no longer any encounters worthy of the name.

An unfortunate incident is reported from Chongjin. The facts as related are that several Japanese officers, wearing their country's costume, were out walking when a number of Korean sailors attacked them. A struggle ensued, and while it was going on a party of Japanese troops came to the rescue and shot 24 of the assailants. The affair is now being investigated and it is believed that several insurgents were among the Korean assailants.

Tuesday, August 11.

The Seoul Press in its usual column of intelligence with regard to the operations against the insurgents, shows that between the 16th and 30th of July there were 16 such operations, but the only case attended with large loss of life was at Kochang when 21 insurgents were killed out of a band of 60. The other incidents did not extend beyond the capture or killing of one or two men in each case and the seizure of firearms. It becomes more and more evident that the insurgents are abandoning all idea of concerted resistance, and that nothing remains to be done now except to search out and arrest their scattered remnants.

Proceedings with regard to alleged malversation of the National Debt Redemption Fund are going on slowly. The British Consul is now said to be investigating the matter so far as Mr. Bethell is concerned. There appears to be no doubt that the money has been scattered hither and thither, without much attention to the security obtained, but whether there has been any actual dishonesty is another question. The whole affair was a fiasco from the beginning. What could have been done with a pittance of 200,000 yen raised for the purpose of liquidating a debt of several millions? If the projectors of this madcap scheme could have afforded to wait for a century or two and could have placed the money out at good interest in the interval, they might have achieved a feat of the nature of the nails in the horse's shoe. Their most straightforward course in the circumstances would have been to return the money to the subscribers, but that would have been an immensely difficult if not an impossible task. Here there was an errant sum of 200,000 yen, a veritable waif and stray without any visible destination and not entailing any apparent responsibility upon those to whose custody it was entrusted. If it was treated with levity, who can be surprised?

Wednesday, August 12.

It will be remembered that some days ago a report was received from Gensan to the effect that a large body of pirates had collected in the neighbouring waters and were committing depredations. News now comes that a force of police, sent to attack these malefactors, found them mustering about 200 strong and dispersed them; inflicting heavy losses. The number of killed is put at 30 or 40 and at least twice as many were wounded.

In spite of the general supposition that the insurgents are too much weakened to assume the offensive on any considerable scale, news comes from Konju that on the 5th inst. a body of 65 attacked a force of 15 Japanese troopers. The attack was repulsed, the assailants leaving 11 of their number dead upon the field. This place, Konju, was one of the most disturbed regions at the outset of the insurrection. Intelligence has also been received of the shooting of a Japanese gendarme at Yongsan.

Yi Ponyun, who was recently heard of as endeavouring to create anti-Japanese disturbance in the regions immediately beyond the Tumen, is said to be strenuously carrying on his campaign. Many of the insurgents who find Korea too hot for them are believed to be crossing the border and joining Yi's standard. On the other hand the Russian local authorities are taking care that the law-breakers shall not receive stores of arms and ammunition, and thus the potentiality of the insurgents is much impaired.

The resignations of the Japanese Municipal officials of Seoul have been accepted by the Residency General which apparently attaches no importance to this demonstration. There is indeed every reason to think that the agitation against officially nominated mayors was fomented by a small coterie of men who find their account in the present system.

The Nichi Nichi Shimbun has a telegram from Seoul saying that on the 11th inst. a prima facie case was fully made out against the Korean editor of the Dai Han Mai-Il Shimpoo for malversation in the matter of the Debt Redemption Fund. His public trial is to commence on the 15th inst., and Mr. Bethell has been summoned as a witness. Much interest attaches to this affair, for if the crime of malversation be established, the malcontents in Korea will have their eyes opened in some degree at any rate to the nature of the motives which have actuated their instigators.

Thursday, August 13.

The Hochi Shimbun publishes a telegram from Seoul saying that between the 4th and the 7th inst. there were 23 encounters between Japanese troops and insurgents, resulting in the death of 157 of the latter and the capture of 31. We greatly doubt the accuracy of this telegram. Our readers will remember that similarly startling items of news were published a short time ago by certain Tokyo journals, but on subsequent comparison with official reports these newspaper tales turned out to be gross exaggerations. We ourselves have been informed on the highest authority that there seem to be practically no organised bodies of insurgents any longer in the Peninsula, and that the task of the soldiers, gendarmes and police is limited to searching out and apprehending the scattered fragments of the insurrection.

THE MALVERSION CASE.

A curious incident is reported by the Kokumin Shimbun as having occurred in Seoul on the 11th inst. The Korean editor of the Daihan Mai-Il Shimpoo, who had just been remanded for trial on a charge of malversation in connexion with the National Debt Redemption Fund, complained of illness and was sent under escort to visit a doctor. The escort, however, apparently one policeman, mistook his orders and allowed the prisoner to go free. The incriminated editor was not slow to take advantage of this error. He effected his escape to the house of Mr. Bethell, where he can not be arrested without a consular warrant, and the Consul declines to give this without reference to the Home authorities. It is a strange story in every respect, for in the first place one does not see why exit from the jail was necessary in order to consult a physician, and in the second place the idea that a constable could have blundered in such a manner about his orders is inexplicable, for the mere fact of his being attached to the prisoner should have prevented him from allowing the latter to go free. Altogether the Seoul police seem to have bungled this affair. They began by inveigling the editor away from his extraterritorial sanctum under false pretences, an undignified and unwise course. They should have gone about the matter openly and frankly, by making application to the British Consul. It is most unlikely that they would have been refused, and at any rate they would have placed themselves beyond the reach of censure. We presume that their object was to prevent the wilful destruction of proofs, but that difficulty ought not to have been conclusive if they already possessed sufficient evidence to make the arrest. At any rate this last phase of the matter greatly complicates the situation and will be open the way to all sorts of curious constructions. One thing which it illustrates is the abuses to which the extraterritorial system is liable.

Meanwhile the Dai Han Mai-Il Shimpoo has been either suspended or suppressed—the accounts differ. We gather that in its issue of the 8th inst., it published an article saying that the men punished as rebels in Korea are pronounced loyal subjects by the founders of the Korean dynasty from their places in heaven, and adding that it is because of the presence of officials who condemn these patriots that Korea is threatened with the loss of her independence. The telegraphic report of the paper's utterances is somewhat obscure. We learn independently that the circulation of the Dai Han Mai-Il Shimpoo has fallen off greatly since Mr. Bethell's sentence of imprisonment. After all, the Koreans have sense enough to perceive that a man upon whom such a sentence was passed by a British tribunal is not to be implicitly taken for guide.

MANCHURIA.

At 4 p.m. on the 10th inst. the Shanghai-Tairen service of the South Manchuria Railway was opened by the Nippon Yusen Kaisha's steamer Kobe Maru. The ship carried 21 passengers in the 1st and 2nd classes and one in the 3rd class, but she had no mails or cargo. Some time will doubtless be needed before this line wins a place in public favour.

The Chinese in Mukden seem to be agitating very resolutely against the proposed house tax. They have held a meeting and passed a resolution in the sense that the taxes are already too heavy considering the depressed condition of trade, and that if a house tax be added, they will close their stores rather than pay it.

Viceroy Hsu is directing attention to the question of afforestation in Manchuria. He is about to establish a dendrological school at Mukden and will engage a German professor.

There is also a project to transfer to private hands the fishing business now carried on under official auspices, and to devote to the establishment of a fishery school; the money obtained by selling licences.

General Fukushima is quoted as stating that so far as appearances go the feeling in China towards Japan is constantly improving. The General speaks with special enthusiasm of the work which is now being done throughout the country by students of the Common Script School in Shanghai. This school is under the direction of Mr. Nedzu, and its immediate object is to educate Japanese in the Chinese language and Chinese in the Japanese. In his travels through China Baron Fukushima found many graduates of this school earnestly carrying on investigations into Chinese commercial agricultural and industrial affairs. The investigators live in the most economical and self-denying manner. They seem not to shrink from any hardships and they apparently succeed in carrying on their task without at all ruffling Chinese susceptibilities. We do not doubt that the work of these youths will presently be described as secret-spying with a view to the future conquest of China by Japan. Formerly a man earned nothing but applause if he made his way into remote districts and studied their conditions, but international suspicion is so acute now-a-days that anyone who departs from the beaten track immediately becomes an object of misgiving.

THIRD INTERNATIONAL CONGRESS ON SCHOOL HYGIENE.

We take the following from a circular just issued, and we note that the Congress is represented in Japan by Professor Dr. M. Nishima:—

The first of the International Congresses on School Hygiene was held at Nuremberg in April, 1904, the second in London in August, 1907; the third will be held in Paris during the Easter holidays, from Tuesday, March 29th to Saturday April 2nd, 1910. In connection with it an International Exhibition of Hygiene in Schools and Education will be organised.

How profitable and necessary International Congresses on School Hygiene are, has been fully evidenced at the Nuremberg and London meetings by the large number of members and papers, by the importance of the addresses and the interest shown in the discussions, by the readiness of the Governments, as well as of private and public institutions, to send representatives.

The various civilised nations were able to compare their respective resources, methods, and needs in Hygiene and Education. Those interested in the physical, intellectual, and moral health of the rising generation were brought into contact with each other. These meetings not only resulted in a most promising emulation, but they originated a movement in public opinion towards promoting the necessary reforms not only by framing laws and regulations, but—what is most important—by carrying them out into effect.

Shortly after the Congress held in London, the organisation of the medical inspection of school-children was officially decided on by the English Government.

The honour of organising the third of these periodical Congresses has been offered to France. Thanks to the encouragement given by her Government, France will be able to perform this task in a worthy and dignified manner.

At a meeting held in London on August 8th, 1907, the Permanent Committee of International Congresses on School Hygiene had the pleasure of passing the following resolution, which at the closing of the Congress was received with enthusiasm by the general meeting:

"The Permanent Committee of the International Congresses on School Hygiene accept thankfully the proposal made to them by the Ministry of Public Instruction and Fine Arts of France and by the 'Ligue française d'Hygiène scolaire' to organise the third of these Congresses, with the help of all French Societies interested in the Hygiene of Schools."

"This Congress will meet in Paris in 1910, during the week after Easter, under the presidency of the French Minister of Public Instruction and Fine Arts."

THE "MIYE MARU" AFFAIR.

There are always two sides to every affair. The public has heard one side of the Miye Maru incident and must now hear the other side, as related by a Russian journal of Vladivostok. According to this paper's story, Japanese poachers were guilty of extreme excesses at the village of Kurinka on Medni Island. They found the village deserted, its population being absent on a fishing expedition and they took advantage of the fact not only to steal everything they could lay hands on but also to smash much of what they could not carry away. They are said to have pillaged all the stores of grain from 27 houses as well as 3 tons of coal and a quantity of nets and other articles from the warehouse of the Kamchatka Commercial and Manufacturing Company. It is not positively asserted that these outrages were committed by the crew of the Miye Maru, but the place and the time of her seizure by the Silka suggest that she was the guilty party. At all events, however exaggerated the Vladivostok's newspaper statement may be, we are bound to believe that there had been some acts of lawless spoliation on the part of Japanese poachers, and that the Russians were correspondingly indignant.

The Hochi Shimbun publishes a detailed account of the affair at Nicolaïsk which ended in the condemnation of six Japanese sailors to death. The account is given by an eye-witness but he is not identified. Of course the story is told in a manner eminently favourable to the Japanese, but whatever be the nature of the narration, the fact is undeniable that the offence committed by the Japanese was limited to stone-throwing. Entirely ignorant of the Russian rule that prisoners must not walk upon the trottoir, some of the Japanese made three several attempts to emerge from the muddy road to the footpath. Twice the Russian escort pushed these men down into the road and on the third occasion pounded them with the butts of their rifles. The Japanese regarded this as mere brutality and then the trouble began. The whole party of 30 odd men were thrown into a jail where the filth was so great and the food so bad that several of them fell ill of dysentery. Two of the number therefore decided to sacrifice themselves in the cause of their comrades, and accordingly declared themselves to have been the stone-throwers. At the trial which ensued no evidence was treated as trustworthy except that of the Russian escort. Anyone pointed out by them as having been engaged in the throwing of stones was pronounced guilty by the Court, though it seems certain that identification by the Russian escort must have been exceedingly difficult if not impossible in the circumstances. At any rate, the Japanese sailors were not the first to resort to violence, and the death-sentence assumes the character almost of a farce when the nature of the incident is carefully considered.

The Novoye Vremya, according to a Mainichi Dempo's telegram from St. Petersburg, writes in a highly eulogistic strain about the tone of the Japanese press with regard to the Miye Maru affair. The Russian journal regards this as a proof of the great change which has come over the sentiment of Japan towards Russia.

A case of cholera was reported on Aug. 10th in the village of Lower Kariuo near Shidzuoka, the patient being a child.

INTERNATIONAL INTERCOURSE.

The Asahi Shimbun has an able article on the importance of cultivating personal intercourse between representatives of different nationalities. It instances the case of England and France, where business men are now coming and going between the two countries, and every day that passes is bringing Paris and London closer together. If this state of affairs had existed a few years ago, there never had been a Fashoda incident, and it is hard now to conceive any problem incapable of friendly solution when the two nations are on such amicable terms. It is stated that the British Government, fully recognising the advantages of such intercourse, has created a special office to facilitate it and has granted the sum of 20,000 pounds to cover expenses for the first year. Japan should endeavour to follow this excellent example. If fuller and freer intercourse could be established between her people and the Americans and Russians, the belief now held in the United States as to Japan's belligerent intentions would soon be dispelled, and the minds of the Russians would be divested of the last remnants of ill feeling begotten of the War. There has unquestionably been an immense improvement in the sentiment of the Japanese and the Russians during the past year. The Miye Maru incident is a proof of this. Had such an affair occurred four or five years ago, it would certainly have created quite a commotion in Japan, whereas now the feeling is one of confidence that the Russian Government will see justice done. A good beginning has been made, but if it is to be crowned by a worthy end, individuals of the two nationalities must endeavour to form closer acquaintance with each other after the example now set by England and France. Thus the Asahi.

TRANS-ASIAN COMMUNICATIONS.

Mr. Tanaka, a managing Director of the South Manchurian Railway, has just returned from Shanghai, whither he went for purposes relating to the establishment of the Tairen-Shanghai line of steamers. He says that there will be one steamer weekly between the two ports. At present the Russian steamer leaves Shanghai every Tuesday for Vladivostok, but the Japanese steamer will leave three days later, namely, on Friday, and passengers by the Japanese steamer crossing to Tairen and entraining there will reach Harbin at the same time as the passengers who left by the Russian steamer on the previous Tuesday. There will in short be a clear gain of three days by the Japanese route, and, according to Mr. Tanaka, the journey to Europe by the latter will be accomplished in 16 days. Mr. Tanaka further states that at present three trains leave Vladivostok daily for Europe, but two of them being employed entirely on the Company's business, one only is available for general passengers. It is expected that by and by all three will be placed at the disposal of the public, and in that event the sailings of the Shanghai-Tairen steamers will be increased accordingly.

We explained briefly in a recent issue that the connection of Tairen with Shanghai by a regular service of steamers would shorten the journey from Shanghai to London by 3 days. That statement was based on telegraphic information from Shanghai. It now appears that the Nippon Yusen Kaisha have duly advertised the service in Shanghai, and we find the following on the subject in the N.-C. Daily News.

By an extended notice appearing in our advertising columns, the Nippon Yusen Kaisha, who have been appointed local agents for the South Manchuria Railway, announce that arrangements have now been concluded for an accelerated steamship service between this Port and Dalny, which is the terminus of the Railway, to connect with the trans-continental trains to Europe. The Kobe Maru, formerly on the Shanghai-Yokohama run, will leave Shanghai every Friday, beginning on August 14, and is timed to reach Dalny on the following Sunday morning. Over the broad gauge line by luxurious cars embodying every modern convenience, built expressly for the service by the Fullman Car Co., passengers will be transported over the 440 miles between Dalny and Kuangchengtze in eighteen hours and without delay will connect there with the Chinese Eastern Railway, reaching Harbin six hours later. To avoid confusion the junction for northward-bound trains is effected at East Kuangchengtze and those from Europe at West Kuangchengtze.

The through journey to London from Shanghai will be accomplished in sixteen days by this route, at least, so it is confidently expected when complete supervision is established. To ensure comfort and as an inducement to passengers to break their journey in Manchuria, the Company has built hotels at the principal stations along the line, at Dalny, Kuangchengtze and Port Arthur, whilst one at Mukden is in course of construction. Opportunity will be offered to visit the battlefields around the great naval fortress and in the peninsula of the Regent's-Sword. Mr. Tanaka, the Managing Director, on whom has devolved to a very large extent the work of administration, is at present in Shanghai perfecting arrangements and hopes to have everything running smoothly by the advertised date of inauguration.

Messrs. Racine, Ackermann & Co., agents for the International Sleeping Car, are also Booking Agents for the South Manchuria Railway.

THE FAKUMEN RAILWAY.

Tokyo papers publish a statement to the effect that the English people have at length come to appreciate the rights and wrongs of the Fakumen Railway question. They see that Japan is merely insisting upon her treaty privileges when she refuses to allow the construction of a line parallel to the South Manchuria Railway for the purpose of exploiting the Liao valley, which already constitutes a fair field for exploitation by the latter road. They see also that there can be no intention of obstructing the development of Manchuria, inasmuch as the Japanese are quite willing that the Fakumen district should be served by a line having Mukden for its starting point instead of Hsinmintun. Such a line would be 20 miles longer than the direct route from Fakumen to Hsinmintun, the latter being only 90 miles and the former 110. But 20 miles is not a large matter where such weighty interests are in question. At all events people are abandoning the extravagant notion that Japan is deliberately setting herself to oppose the investment of British capital in Manchuria, or that she is going back upon the open door policy. It has taken a long time to convince the British public of these facts, and we trust that they really have been convinced.

POLITICAL.

The Tokyo News Agency quotes Prince Yamagata as saying that he originally accepted the office of President of the Privy Council in succession to Prince Ito merely as a temporary measure and by the Sovereign's command. He is neither young enough nor strong enough to discharge the duties of this office in combination with his military functions.

This utterance, if credible, may be interpreted as confirming the reports recently circulated that Prince Ito will resume the post of President of the Privy Council and hold it in conjunction with the office of Resident General.

THE WEATHER.

Friday, August 7.

On the morning of the 6th the centre of the depression, which was originally reported from Riukiu, reached Oshima off the south coast of Kyushu. It was then observed to be progressing slowly northward, but if the conditions did not change, the probability was that Kyushu alone would feel the effects of the disturbance. The meteorological authorities are silent about the storm of wind and rain that broke over Yokohama and Tokyo on the evening of the 6th and during the night of that day as well as the afternoon of the 7th, but doubtless the phenomenon may be identified with the centre of shallow depression which appeared off Kazusa on the 5th. We may mention that typhoons at this season do little damage to the crops, unless there is resulting inundation, or a continuance of low temperature.

Saturday, August 8.

The movements of the centres of depression now visiting, or that have just visited, the seas of Japan are somewhat perplexing. Some days ago news was received of a deep depression in the neighbourhood of the Riukiu Islands, and this was said to be moving up steadily towards the north-east, so that its advent might be expected in Kyushu and Shikoku, as well as in the Western regions of the country. Intelligence now to hand shows that Shikoku was actually the scene of a severe storm on the 7th instant, but the phenomenon was not of long duration, and as yet the subsequent movements of this cyclone are not telegraphed. On the same day, however, Tokyo and Yokohama experienced a severe gale of typhoon force, which blew from the evening of the 7th until past midnight, and was accompanied by the fitful deluges of rain that always mark these phenomena. This depression seems to have been distinct from that which moved up from the Riukiu archipelago and to have had its origin somewhere in the sea of Japan, for its violence was experienced at Kobe, Utsunomiya, Nagoya and Hamamatsu, though Echigo appears to have escaped, a fact difficult to account for. Last year Japan became entangled, during September, in what might almost have been termed a network of cyclones, and the present condition seems to suggest something of the kind. Of course the very exceptional heat of late July and early August was bound to be followed by some atmospheric disturbance.

Sunday, August 9.

The storm which visited Yokohama and Tokyo on the afternoon and night of the 7th inst. turns out to have been that which had been reported some days previously as moving slowly in a northeasterly direction from the Riukiu Islands. Its course then seemed likely to take it into the Sea of Japan via Kyushu and Kyoto. But this centre of depression was met by another in the Gulf of Akita, and the result of the impact was that the two moved together to the east and north at an increased speed and worked right up to Japan to the Tsugaru Straits. There is no other centre of depression now in sight though the weather has not yet assumed a really settled appearance. Of course a certain amount of damage was done to telegraphs, bridges and railways, but it is not thought that the crops have suffered appreciably. Japan never escapes without two or three typhoons every year, and it is only a question whether they come at seasonable or unseasonable times. According to the reports of the meteorological authorities, the greatest velocity attained by the wind was a little over 52 miles an hour, in connexion with which we may note that the corresponding figure in the case of the recent Hongkong typhoon was 90 miles.

Monday, August 10.

Another centre of depression has formed in the neighbourhood of the Riukiu Islands. The direction in which this centre is travelling has not yet been clearly ascertained, but it is believed to be northwesterly, which would carry the storm to the Chinese coast.

Tuesday, August 11.

The deep centre of depression which was reported from the neighbourhood of the Riukiu Islands on the morning of the 9th inst., took an eastward course on the 10th inst. and seems to have been dissipated without doing any mischief. There are, however, three small centres of depression cruising around. One has its origin near Quelpart, another on the northwest of Kyushu and yet another in the provinces of Shinshu and Koshu. These three phenomena are not expected to be productive of anything more than heavy showers and some thunder.

Wednesday, August 12.

The rain which prevailed in Tokyo and Yokohama from the afternoon of the 11th inst. is not regarded as the precursor of a storm. But there seems to be a centre of depression somewhere between the Yellow Sea and Formosa, and until its movements become definite the weather will probably remain unsettled.

Thursday, August 13.

There is a centre of depression in the China Sea which appears to be responsible for the unsettled weather prevailing up to Thursday. Reports from the extreme south and the extreme north show clear skies and fine weather, so that the central districts alone are troubled. Present appearances, however, are favourable.

FORESTRY IN JAPAN.

There appears to be a good deal of talk about a subject which was once much discussed, namely, that of forestry in Japan. Statistics show that forests occupy 60 per cent of the total area of the country. They measure in fact 55 million acres, of which about 18 million acres belong to the State, 5 million acres to the Imperial Household and the rest to private individuals or local corporations. The State forests contribute 12 million yen to the income shown in the Budget for the current year, whereas four years ago they contributed only 3½ millions. Last year a new forestry law was enacted which empowered the administrative authorities to take steps for the prevention of the destruction of forests and for their replanting, and also contained many other provisions useful for purposes of conservation and profitable working. But the question is now raised whether many of these State-owned forests can be satisfactorily exploited by the Government, and whether it would not be wiser from an economic point of view to dispose of them to the people. It is a fact, though not generally known, that the Imperial Household has been very liberal with its property of this nature, and that considerable grants have been made to distinguished members of the new nobility. Undoubtedly the State forests will have immense value as means of communications improve, but just at present when the extension of railroads over taxes the financial ability of the Government, the outlook is not very bright in the case of forests which lie outside beaten tracks. Hence it will possibly be the wisest policy to dispose of a part of this property, though undoubtedly the operation would involve a heavy sacrifice.

"THE JAPAN FINANCIAL AND ECONOMIC MONTHLY."

We can not compliment Mr. Mochizuki on the fact that the May number of his periodical has only just appeared. Our deliberate opinion is that the magazine would serve a more useful purpose in the majority of cases if its contents were abbreviated so as to enable it to be published within a fortnight of the close of the month to which it relates. There is doubtless much difficulty in the matter of printing, but that one can scarcely suppose to be insuperable. The magazine itself shows no sign of flagging energy. Its contents are useful and well chosen, though we are compelled to say that the text would be at once more intelligible and more convincing to English readers if a little more attention were paid to the phraseology. Sometimes the sense is hard to follow. We observe that Mr. Mochizuki lends the weight of his authority to the charges recently preferred against the Germans in connexion with the Taya iron mine. He evidently thinks that the Germans did not play the game. Can these charges be substantiated? The article in the "Financial and Economic Monthly" alleges, among other things, that the Germans, having obtained the contract for supplying rails and rolling stock, constructed the line along a circuitous route for the express purpose of using a large quantity of material. That is difficult to credit.

One of the best articles in this number is an appreciation of Marquis Yamagata. Mr. Mochizuki had previously published a similar account of Count Okuma's career, and we hope that he intends to continue the series. There is also an instructive account of the new harbour at Miike, and the whole story of the Anglo-Japanese Hydro-electric company is given, with fully detailed figures. From these we observe that, on an apparently very conservative basis, the dividend payable on the first occasion will be 8.44 per cent., after putting aside a legal reserve of 5 per cent. and making all necessary appropriations. On the second occasion the dividend will be 13.8 per cent. The Company has already concluded with the Tokyo Railway Company a contract for supplying motive power at a cost of 1,080,000 yen annually.

BASEBALL.

A match was played on Sunday morning on the Cricket Ground between the Connor Club and the Yokohama Baseball Club. After a closely contested game, the Japanese won by 9 runs to 6.

The line up was as follows:—

Y'hama Baseball Club.	Connor Club.
Hiroka.....	p. ....Yoshihara
Matsuda.....	c. ....Quni
Sndzuki.....	1b. ....Donker-Curtius
Kurimoto.....	2b. ....Da Costa
Kato.....	3b. ....Caldwell
Yamada.....	s.s. ....Pass
Kato, K.....	r.f. ....Da Cos'a (junior)
Kuriyama.....	c.f. ....Holmes
Hamaguchi.....	l.f. ....Apar

Score by innings:—

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Y. B. C. ....	0	0	1	3	0	3	2	0	0=9
Connor.....	1	0	2	1	0	0	0	0	6

Umpire, Mr. Hunter.

BUSINESS NOTES.

Friday, August 7.

We read in the Munichi Dempo that the revenue derived from the tobacco monopoly during the current year will certainly exceed the estimates by at least 6 million yen. During the period from the 1st of April to the middle of July there was an excess of yen 4,800,000 as compared with the corresponding period of last year.

Meanwhile, bitter complaints are heard from many quarters about the exceedingly bad quality of the official brand of cigarettes, and it looks as if the profits of the monopoly might be seriously menaced defective by management.

We read in the Asahi Shimbun that the long talked-of Anglo-Japanese Insurance Company has been formed. Its object is to insure factories and their plant. The capital of the Company is 500,000 yen in 50 yen shares, of which 4,500 have been taken up by the English promoters.

The Nichi Nichi Shimbun says that the Industrial Bank's project of obtaining a foreign loan of 20 million yen has been unsuccessful owing to the impossibility of agreeing about terms.

There is again talk of a lottery scheme in connexion with the sale of tickets for the great Exhibition. It is estimated that the City of Tokyo will have to put its hand into its pocket to the extent of at least 14,370,000 yen, and therefore every possible device for obtaining funds must be employed. The lottery idea is confined to the sale of tickets. The plan is to sell these in blocks, and to allot various prizes to the purchasers, who for the purpose would be divided into sections according to the number of tickets bought by them. The whole programme has been submitted for official approval, but the Department of Agriculture and Commerce is hesitating to give its consent.

Saturday, August 8.

We observe that the Yorozu Choho publishes a statement about debentures to be issued by the Seikosha, but it is evident that this paper is very ill-informed with regard to the matter.

Mr. Nishino, President of the Histrionic Company of Tokyo, has published a proposal with reference to the affairs of the Tokyo Railway. Premising that with the present system of a uniform fare all suburban extensions of the lines are impossible, and therefore the growth of Tokyo is effectually checked, he advocates the substitution of sectional fares, beginning at 2 sen, and increasing by 2 sen up to 8. We need not reproduce his arguments in favour of this programme, as the topic is already worn threadbare. It will be observed, however, that Mr. Amenomiya takes a different view and advocates the maintenance of the present system with an additional one sen for every change of cars.

The Tokyo Electric Light Company, which has been in the market for some time seeking foreign capital for the purposes of its business, is now said to be in need of a sum of 9 million yen to be applied to procuring an additional supply of water-power electricity to the extent of 30,000 horse-power. Finding difficulty in getting the money, the Company recently approached two German firms which offered to put up 3 million yen for a period of 3 years, provided that interest at the rate of 7 per cent was paid, that the endorsement of a sound bank was obtained and that the necessary plant should be purchased from the lenders. After careful consideration these terms have been deemed so onerous that the Electric Light Company has determined to seek the aid of the Industrial Bank for floating debentures.

This item of news is somewhat inopportune, for during the gale on the 7th inst. the water-power supply of electricity to Tokyo was interrupted at 9 p.m. and could not be renewed until midnight. Something like consternation prevailed throughout the City in consequence.

Sunday, August 9.

To-day is the day fixed for a general meeting of the shareholders of the Imperial Commercial Bank. The affairs of the Bank are attracting a great deal of attention, for it has a capital of 8 million yen, of which 5,600,000 is paid up, and it has always been regarded as the chief organ of the Tokyo Stock Exchange. The Bank's losses in connexion with the depression in the share market have undoubtedly been very considerable, and the question is whether these losses shall be radically written off by reducing the number of shares, or whether a portion of them shall be regarded as partially recoverable in the future. The shareholders appear to be divided into two parties towards this question. One section, headed by Mr. Nakamura, is in favour of heroic measures, but this section seems to be in the minority and a somewhat unsightly dispute has arisen between the leaders on both sides. Recently a committee was appointed to investigate the state of the Bank's accounts, but no very definite result was reached, and it is apprehended that the meeting to-day will break up without coming to any decision. The temporizing section want to postpone final action until next year and to devote the intervening space to adjustment. The Bank's great trouble is understood to be that it has advanced large sums against shares whose market value is now much below the price at which they were taken as security.

It will be remembered that last year Russia returned to China the Mohe gold mines, which were supposed to be a very valuable property. Since then, however, they have proved a source of loss in Chinese hands, and a commissioner despatched by the Viceroy of Pechili to report upon the prospects has arrived at the conclusion that if the mines were skilfully worked, they might pay expenses for a period of two years, but thereafter they would be barren. Learning of this pessimistic report, the Mitsui firm is said to have formulated a proposal through Mr. Obata, Japanese Consul in Tientsin. The Mitsui's offer is to take over the mines and work them for two years, the firm to bear all losses that may accrue and to pay to the Chinese Government 20 per cent. of the profits, should there be any. At the end of two years the mines would revert to the Chinese Government on reasonable terms. It is stated that the Chinese, though disposed to accept this very liberal offer, are doubtful as to the political wisdom of placing in the hands of a Japanese Company property which has just been recovered from Russia.

Monday, August 10.

According to the Asahi Shimbun, the Camphor Monopoly of Formosa has fared very badly since the sale of the camphor was removed from the very competent hands of Messrs. Samuel Samuel & Co. and placed in those of the Mitsui firm. The trouble is that the price now demanded for the Formosan camphor renders it quite incompetent to compete with artificial camphor, the production of which is steadily increasing in Europe. If the Formosan authorities were content with a reasonable profit, they could still compete successfully, but they are now asking 196s. for what they used to sell at 136s., and naturally they are out of the running. Something like a boycott has been organised against Japanese camphor in France, Belgium and Germany, and altogether the Formosan authorities have reason to regret that they did not stick to the great English firm which formerly managed their affairs shrewdly and prosperously.

The Tanko Kaisha held its general meeting on the 9th inst. and declared a dividend of 14 per cent. for the half year ended June the 30th. The President, Mr. Inouye, in answer to a question, said that without reference to any profits which may be derived from the Seikosha, he expected that the Company would be able to pay a dividend of 14 per cent. in the future as it had done in the past.

According to the Hochi Shimbun the directors of the Tokyo Railway Company are introducing various reforms with the object of economising expenditures. Unless something very substantial can be effected in this respect a rise of fares will be inevitable.

Tuesday, August 11.

The general meeting of the Imperial Commercial Bank on the 10th inst. proved, as had been expected, a somewhat turbulent affair. Without entering into wearisome details, it will suffice to explain that there were two parties, one of which had for object the removal of the present directors and a radical overhauling of the state of affairs, while the other desired to leave the directors in office and to postpone final action until the next general meeting six months hence, the interval to be employed in making full investigation and preparing an accurate report. Neither party succeeded in carrying its point, and the ultimate result was that a month's law should be allowed, at the end of which period an extraordinary meeting should be held for the purpose of arriving at a final conclusion.

There has been some excitement in Tokyo about the action of the City Aldermen in selecting banks for depositing the Municipal funds. When this subject first came upon the tapis some months ago, it was said that the Aldermen's transactions had been connected with the share market and that the City would probably lose heavily. Happily that rumour proves to be greatly exaggerated. There is no reason to apprehend any serious loss, but the fact has been established that considerable sums have been lodged in 15 banks which are not precisely the kind of institutions a cautious man would select for such a purpose. Thus between the 22nd of March and the 7th of May last year a million yen was withdrawn from the Industrial Bank and deposited in sums of varying magnitude with 13 comparatively small banks. It is true that all these latter banks offered very favourable terms, but the impression is that the Aldermen were not well advised in their action, though there does not appear to be any evidence whatever in support of the rumour that the withdrawals and re-deposits were connected with share transactions. The City's money appears to be safe enough, but of course the publicity given to this affair will produce a feeling of more or less uneasiness, and will make it difficult to withdraw the money immediately without impairing the credit of some of the banks. It has therefore been decided by the Municipal Council that the money shall be gradually withdrawn between the present time and next March from all banks which have a capital less than a million yen, and shall be re-deposited with strong institutions. This decision has to be endorsed by the City Assembly.

The Nichi Nichi Shimbun quotes an official of the Department of Communications with reference to the subject recently discussed by certain newspapers, namely, the desirability of reducing the sums given by way of encouragement to shipbuilding and navigation. This official points out that the laws under which these monies are paid are not perpetual in their operation. They were enacted in 1896, one for a period of 18 years, the other for 15 years. Relying upon these enactments enterprising men have devoted capital to shipbuilding and to navigation. To meddle with the laws now suddenly would therefore be a flagrant breach of good faith likely to have very injurious consequences.

Wednesday, August 12.

We read in the Nichi Nichi Shimbun that it has been decided to dissolve the Toyo Seizai Kaisha (Oriental Timber Company). This decision is a direct result of the destruction wrought to the offices and plant of the Company a few months ago by the workmen employed there. Our readers are aware that this company was started by French capitalists at the instance of Mr. Loonen. It is to be hoped that the Japanese authorities have granted some compensation for the lawlessness of which the Company was the victim. An exceedingly bad effect will be produced in foreign countries if such an affair is dismissed as a mere normal incident.

The Hypothec Bank, having been very successful with its recent issue of 5 per cent. premium-bearing bonds, is said to be about to place upon the market another sum of a million and a half yen.

It appears to have been finally decided that Mr. Ozaki Yukio will not withdraw his resignation and that an election for the office of Mayor will have to be held. We have already explained what is involved in this matter.

Thursday, August 13.

The Progressists on the 12th inst. published a financial programme which is given in detail by Tokyo journals, but to republish it would only confuse our readers. The gist of the matter is that the Progressists propose to convert into a 12 years' scheme the 6 years' programme of the last Cabinet. They claim that by so doing all inconvenient pressure may be removed and all recourse to loans averted. Some publicists construe this move on the part of the Progressists as an overture to the present Cabinet, but in our opinion it is a frank appeal to popular sentiment. If such an extension could be effected, it would doubtless be most heartily welcomed by the nation, and the politicians connected with it would receive corresponding applause.

With regard to redemption of the national debts, the Progressists do not think it possible to increase the amount appropriated for this purpose by so much as 30 million yen annually. Their view is that the 37 millions already devoted by law will suffice if the method of redemption by lot be resorted to, and if it be clearly understood that all surpluses otherwise available shall be applied as far as possible to the same purpose.

We read in the Mainichi Dempo that Prince Ito has definitely declined to become President of the Privy Council. His Highness is determined to complete his work in Korea before turning his back upon that country. In these circumstances talk is again heard of giving the portfolio of Finance to Viscount Sone, since his presence in Korea will not be required if Prince Ito remains there.

The Niroku Shimbun has a somewhat sensational paragraph. It says that, simultaneously with a radical re-adjustment of the finances, the Katsura Cabinet will follow a bold course in foreign policy, with the object of placing upon a more practical basis the Ententes with France and Russia and the Alliance with England, so as effectually to ensure the preservation of peace in the East.

According to investigations made by the Japanese authorities, the number of Japanese emigrating to the United States has undergone a marked decrease since official steps were taken to impose restrictions. Thus the number of emigrants during the six months ended May 31st, 1908, was only 3,416, whereas the number for the corresponding period in 1907 was 6,045.

It has been decided that the American business men who are to visit Japan will leave San Francisco on the 29th of September. There have been numerous applications, but the number has been strictly limited to 60, that is to say 30 married couples.

We yesterday reproduced from the N.ichi Nichi Shimbun a statement that the Toyo Seizai Kaisha (Oriental Timber Company) was about to dissolve. It is now stated on trustworthy authority that such is not the case. The Company's final action in this matter will be determined by the fate of its claim for reasonable indemnification. There is therefore good ground for hoping that the business will not be abandoned. The Kyushu rioters did not reflect that they were doing their country a great mischief when they had recourse to destructive violence last spring, but we fully anticipate that the Japanese Government will recognise the national necessity of not allowing the French Company to be driven out of Japan by insufficient protection for life and property.

N-TES ON CURRENT EVENTS.

Some time ago the Government in Tokyo received intelligence, it is said, that the anti-Japanese boycott in South China was losing its force. Evidently there must always be some difficulty in diagnosing such an affair, but we read in the Asahi Shimbun that during the past few days the Yokohama market has furnished evidences which confirm the official report. Marine products, which for several months have been excluded from the Canton market, are beginning to be once more contracted for. These transactions have not as yet taken a direct form, but there is no question about their reality nor can they be interpreted otherwise than as indicating that the boycott has lost its vim. The probability now is that things will soon be restored to their normal condition.

Yokohama, apart from the shortness of the water supply, is afflicted by two nuisances. One is a woman who has for months been collecting money from the credulous, but who was exposed easily on Thursday by a ship captain from whom, by the judicious display of the cards of the leading foreign ship chandler and compradore in Yokohama and of a medical man whose duties lie largely among the shipping, she had obtained yen 10. It was found that the use of one of the cards was absolutely unauthorised and presumably the other was similarly employed. The other nuisance is the line of women in China town the gauntlet of which has to be run by all residents going to and returning from the Bluff. The Police have been repeatedly appealed to about the latter nuisance. Can they do nothing in either case?

It is stated that a large programme has been devised for the entertainment of the officers and men of the American Battleship Squadron. The Naval Authorities will be the actual hosts, and they will work in co-operation with the Tokyo Municipality. The time will just coincide with the autumn manoeuvres of the Japanese Navy, so that the ships engaged in the manoeuvres will be able to join the demonstration of hospitality.

Shanghai wires that the Russian Consul at Tientsin was sleeping soundly when somebody broke into his room and stabbed him. According to the original report the wound was not dangerous, but the latest news is that his condition is serious. There is as yet no clue to his would-be assassin.

On the 6th inst. the newly American Japanese Trade-mark Convention between the United States and Japan passed through its final stage. The ratifications were exchanged at the Foreign Office in Tokyo between Viscount Terauchi and Mr. Jay, Secretary of the United States Embassy.

The customs returns show the following figures as the result of the foreign commerce for the first ten days of August:—

	Yen.
Exports .....	8,669,000
Imports .....	7,995,000
Excess of Exports .....	674,000

The figures for the trade from January 1st to August 10th are:—

	Yen.	Comparisons with corresponding period of 1907.
Exports.....	212,829,000	— 34,722,000
Imports.....	296,340,000	— 18,816,000
Totals .....	509,177,000	— 53,538,000
Excess of Imports..	83,519,000

On the other hand General Kuropatkin is once more quoted as saying that when the War was brought to a close the Russian Army had become superior in strength to the Japanese, and that at the time of the signing of the Portsmouth Treaty General Linewitch might have assumed the offensive with a good prospect of success. Nobody will grudge this measure of consolation to the men who fought a losing game with so much valour, but after all it is futile to count up the "might have beens" of life.

T. Taneda of the Tokyo branch of the Niigata Bank committed suicide on the night of Aug. 8th by throwing himself into the creek near South Odawara-cho, Tsukiji. Temporary insanity is believed to have been the cause.

THE TOKYO STOCK EXCHANGE.

Saturday, August 8.

There is nothing to be said of Friday's market except that it was characterized by the extreme dullness of the preceding day. On Thursday the total transactions reached only 6,700 shares; on Friday the figure was very similar. Buyers and sellers alike are resting.

Monday, August 10.

The market showed a little activity on the 8th instant. There was no very marked rise, but a general upward tendency developed itself, and the present impression is that a stronger feeling prevails.

Tuesday, August 11.

The market was active on Monday. Fine weather and the prospect of the Bon season passing satisfactorily produced a good effect, but this was somewhat impaired by uncertainty as to the result of the foreign trade for the first 10 days of August, some rumours being circulated that imports continued to be in excess.

Wednesday, August 12.

The market reverted to its habitual state of dullness on Tuesday. Buyers seem to be weary of waiting for a solid improvement, and as week after week sees their hopes disappointed, they have lost heart. In the afternoon a little activity was inspired by news that exports had exceeded imports during the 10 days ended the 10th instant, but this impetus produced very trifling effects. Judging from the record of the past month, buyers will hold their hand until the Cabinet's financial programme is definitely announced.

Thursday, August 13.

The market was wholly lifeless on Wednesday. Cottons were undoubtedly influenced by the depreciation of silver, which is now quoted at 24 pence, a lower price than any recorded for some time. Other shares suffered more or less from the wet weather, and the apprehension that a period of rain has set in just when hot dry days are needed. There is no reason to anticipate any improvement in the prevailing inactivity. Added to the fact that August is always a dull month, there is much uncertainty as to the financial outlook.

Friday, August 14.

The tone was a brisker in the Tokyo Stock Market on Thursday. Prices were sustained and in many cases rose slightly. This is attributable to the improved climatic conditions, and to the receipt of news that silver has slightly appreciated. But there is no denying the fact that the market is in a condition of stagnation, and that, without some strong impulse, it will not develop any resilience. With the exception of the Stock Exchange's shares all securities have remained virtually unaltered during the past three weeks. We append the quotations for October delivery:—

	Aug. 12th.	Aug. 13th.
Tanko Kisen .....	82.50	83.00	+.50
Tokyo Railway .....	57.25	57.50	+.25
Kei-Hin Railway .....	—	—	—
Yusen Kaisha .....	79.60	80.40	+.80
Toyo Kisen .....	—	29.80	—
Tokyo Gas .....	81.00	—	—
Tokyo Dento .....	65.85	65.90	+.05
Fuji Gas Spinning .....	84.50	85.00	+.50
Tokyo Spinning .....	32.60	32.00	-.60
Kaenagafuchi Spinning .....	86.85	87.50	+.65
Beer .....	77.80	77.80	—
Sugar .....	74.25	75.40	+.15
Takarada (Hoden) Oil .....	—	—	—
Nippon Oil .....	—	—	—
Namboku .....	—	—	—
Stock Exchange .....	112.20	112.40	+.20

HYDROPHOBIA.

The present outbreak of hydrophobia in and about Yokohama is believed to be traceable to a dog from Odawara, which after its arrival in Yokohama developed the disease. At any rate, however originating, the epidemic is spreading with alarming rapidity, and the police are now killing an average of a couple of dogs a day. Our object in calling attention to the serious character of the affair is two-fold. In the first place we desire to warn foreigners of the danger incurred by women and children on any of the roads of the district mentioned. A mad dog will go out of his way to attack moving objects, and human beings who, weaponless, encounter such an animal are likely to suffer from the meeting. Only the other day the whole available population of Honmoku was out sweeping the fields and hills in line after two dogs which had already bitten three persons and many other dogs. So far as we know those wretched animals are still alive and at liberty. For our second point we would urge all owners of dogs to tie them up at once and to secure that they cannot be approached by dogs from the outside; in the case of dogs that have been bitten, though the biter is unknown, they should at once be destroyed, or, if this is objected to, the owner's duty to the community is to put them instantly on the chain and keep them under the closest observation. It is hardly necessary to say that strong suspicion must attach itself to every bite under present conditions.

EDUCATIONAL REACTION IN CHINA.

Mr. Nampa Tsuneo, who is quite an authority on education in China, having himself been engaged in school work in the province of Se Chuen for a considerable time, has recently arrived in Tokyo and is reported by the Asahi Shimbun to have made the following observations respecting educational work and prospects in China. In the province of Se Chuen there is only one High School. Each Prefecture has two or three Middle Schools and each District has some 70 or 80 Primary Schools. Below these are what are known in this country as temple schools (tera koya). These are no better than they were 40 years ago and are in fact quite unworthy of being considered as schools at all. During the past two or three years education in Se Chuen has certainly been retrograding, but in my opinion the backward movement has not been confined to this province, it has extended to the whole of China. There are no doubt many causes for this state of things, but the principal ones are not hard to discover. (1) The enthusiasm for education which followed the suppression of the Boxer disturbances was the result of the fashion of the hour and had its origin in pressure brought to bear from without rather than from deep-seated convictions on the part of the mass of the inhabitants. The transition from the old state of things to a new era which it was sought to effect was too sudden. Reaction was bound to follow. The change of sentiment has revealed itself in the great decline in the number of students going abroad, to which repeated attention has been drawn in the daily press during the past few months. It must be borne in mind that for many centuries the object of study in China was always Government employ or honour. A man who had a degree, even though disconnected with the Government was always a great man in his native town or village. Learning was valued, then, not for its own sake, but for what it secured in social life. But the abolition (in 1906) of the system of promotion according to literary degrees deprived students of the old way of thinking of the main objects of study—Government employ or special social distinction. Men of the new school study from other motives, but they still constitute a very small band. So the immediate effect of the reform of 1906 was to discourage study, though its ultimate results will doubtless be of an opposite kind. (2) Another great source of the present educational stagnation in China is the indifference shown to elementary education. The Primary Schools of China are still in a lamentably backward condition. Now in all progressive countries elementary teaching is the foundation of all after-instruction, but in China the lower schools are despised and left to themselves and as a consequence among the masses of the people the standard of general knowledge is far beneath what it is in this country. (3) Another cause of the slow progress of education in China is the great expense which it involves. Almost all the schools of China are boarding schools and the charges at these establishments are far too high to suit the purses of ordinary Chinese parents. The consequence is that in numerous instances pupils have to be removed from schools before they have half finished the course for purely financial reasons. The cost of keeping a lad at a Primary School runs to some 60 dollars a year and the cost at Middle Schools is in many cases as high as 90 dollars a year. Considering how poor most of the Chinese are, it is evident that the scale of school fees ought to be reduced by some means or other. There is no way of improving the state of education in China except by a thorough reorganization of the Primary School system, and so far there are no signs that such a measure is contemplated in any of the provinces.

In the province of Se Chuen there are 40 Japanese engaged in teaching in Chinese schools. Among these more than 20 reside in the capital. But the interest in Japanese has declined very much and English is studied in preference to it in a great many schools. So much is this the case that a good many Japanese teachers have given up teaching their own language and teach English instead. There was formerly a Special School for the study of Japanese at the capital of the Province, but some months ago it was closed in obedience to strict orders from Peking.

W. D.

THE KANAGAWA COOLIE TROUBLE.

In connexion with the fracas among the coolies employed by the Ota-gumi and Iida-gumi, contractors, at Kanagawa, last week, the trouble seems not to have been settled yet, though some contractors are endeavouring to settle it amicably. On the evening of Aug. 9th, some coolies belonging to the Ota-gumi tried to make an attack upon those of the Iida-gumi. They were checked by the Kanagawa police and three of them were taken to the police office.

On the night of Aug. 11th, about 600 coolies belonging to the Iida-gumi stationed themselves at several places in Kanagawa and were about to make an attack upon those of the Ota-gumi whose head-quarters were at Koyasu, when the Kanagawa police arrested several of the men and confiscated their arms, including revolvers. The Tamura-gumi tried to settle the matter amicably on Aug. 11th with representatives of both parties.

A fight took place on Aug. 11th on the Goten Hill in which three men belonging to the Ota-gumi were severely injured. Subsequently a number of men belonging to the Hanshō-gumi attacked the tea house, Hashimoto-ro, where the Ota-gumi provided their head quarters. A serious fracas occurred, a large number of the men being more or less injured. Later about fifty men of the Ota-gumi also attacked the Kanagawa Police Office where about 30 of the Ota-gumi were detained. The assailants, however, were soon dispersed by the police. The police arrested some forty men of both parties and seized their arms, including 5 swords, 28 lances made with bamboo, 23 clubs, 31 sword-canes and 1 revolver. Public Procurators Yamashita and Ohira of the District Court, proceeded to the Kanagawa Police Station and investigated the trouble. On the morning of Aug. 12th, a number of police were sent from the Isezaki-cho and Kotobuki-cho offices to Kanagawa. In the meantime some leading employers of coolies arrived from Tokyo and other places and are trying to settle the dispute amicably.

THE AMUR RAILWAY.

NOT a few publicists are writing about the Amur Railway in a very alarmist strain. They find a text in an alleged extract from the report of the Russian Committee of National Defences. The Committee, after having received secret explanations from the Ministers of War and Foreign Affairs, are said to have written:—

"We came to the unanimous decision that this line must be built at once, without delay, and that we must complete it by or in 1912. We must also lay down the second track within the same time. . . . For we note that the strategic and political situation in the Far East has changed somewhat after the war—that our neighbours are sparing neither efforts nor means to increase their armed strength. Against whom those forces are aimed we do not of course know. But, at all events, we perceive that China is arming. . . . Japan is arming, and, as we gather, the programme of Japan's military preparations will have been carried out precisely in 1912."

Of course if the Committee really did embody such a pronouncement in their report, there is much reason for pessimism. But we altogether decline to believe in the correctness of the quotation, or even in its approximate correctness. The reasons of our scepticism are simple. In the first place there is the general reason that committees do not perpetrate such colossal blunders. In the second place, if the Russian committee-men based their statement on secret information obtained from two Ministers of State, they would have respected the confidence placed in them. And, in the third place, had such a report been presented, the utmost care would have been taken to keep it from public knowledge. It is safe to conclude, we think, that the whole story is a canard. But there are writers who, without any reference to this document—probably they never heard of it—nevertheless regard the Amur Railway with many misgivings, and persuade themselves, as they seek to persuade their readers, that the completion of the road will inaugurate a renewed and colossal struggle between Russia and Japan. We ourselves were among those who watched with profound uneasiness the gradual progress of the East-China Railway, and openly expressed the opinion on more than one occasion that its completion would prove incompatible with the preservation of peace in the East. But we entertain no such apprehension in the case of the Amur Railway. There appears to us to be a very obvious difference between the potentialities of the two roads. The East-China Railway gave direct access to Manchuria. With the East-China Railway in its possession not only would the Great Northern Power have consummated its perennial ambition, access to the open ocean at no less than three points, but also it would have held Manchuria in the hollow of its hand and would assuredly have added the Three Provinces to its East-Asian possessions. That accomplished, what must inevitably have followed? The annexation of Korea. The Korean plumb would have fallen into the lap of the Power holding Liaotung and Vladivostok as inevitably as the sun rises. Japan could not have endured such results. They would have signified her condemnation to an utterly cramped and restricted existence on the extreme confines of the Far East. She would have been compelled to fight. But the building of the Amur Railway does not involve any such contingencies. It does not give access to any Manchuria nor does it bring Russia a yard nearer to Korea. It is a railway communicating with territory which has been an integral part of the Russian dominions for more than half a century, and if Russia chooses to equip herself with a railway inside her own borders, that is no reason why Japan should fight with her. It is necessary to suppose Russia the aggressor; necessary to credit her statesmen with planning a deliberate scheme of revenge which would involve the gradual massing of at least a million men in the Amur region and their ultimate descent upon Korea. Can any one be in any doubt as to what all that involves, and can any one be blind to the fact that Russia would have to carry on her preparations for months if not years in the open eyes of the world? Finally, what would be her gain if she reached the shores of the Sea of Japan or even of the Gulf of Pechili? An open sea-board? Certainly not, unless she possessed a fleet capable of sweeping Japan's ships from the face of Far-Eastern waters. Even if, by such a war—a war which would permanently deprive her of all title to be called a civilized Power—Russia succeeded in driving the last Japanese soldier from the peninsulas of Korea and Liaotung, not a Russian merchantman could venture to enter or clear at any port on the continental littoral of East Asia. The whole coast from the mouth of the Peiho to the mouth of the Tumen would be blockaded. It is not less an insult to Russia's intelligence than to her honour to suspect her of such mad-cap designs almost before the ink on the Portsmouth Treaty is dry. We feel, indeed, that we owe our Russian friends an apology for discussing such contingencies seriously.

THE CENSUS AS TAKEN IN TŌKYŌ.

In an article published by the To Sai Nam-Boku Count Yanagizawa, a member of the House of Peers, makes the following remarks on the above subject:—In all powerful countries in the West it is customary to take the census once in five years or at any rate once in 10 years. In the winter of 1901 a Bill providing for the taking of the census passed both Houses of the Diet and the following year it became law. According to that Bill the census was to have been taken in 1905. But the war rendered this next to impossible, and so another Bill was introduced by the Government, which stated that the time for taking the first national census should be determined by the Emperor, who would issue an Imperial Order bearing on the matter at a suitable time. In Western countries the census is taken in many different ways. In some countries the statistics gathered are confined to the number of inhabitants, but in America, for instance, occupations, religion, property and various other particulars are recorded. The inclusion of these particulars greatly increases the expense of census-taking, and it is questionable whether in the United States the results yielded warrant the extra outlay. But there are certain things that a Government ought to know besides the mere number of the people in a country, such, for instance, as the proportion of males to females, the number of persons engaged in certain industries, the number of houses vacant and the general condition of the various orders of society. The censuses that have been taken in this country since the beginning of the Meiji era have all been most imperfect. It was for this reason that the new Law bearing on censuses was passed by the Diet in 1901. That Law still remains on the Statute Book waiting to be carried into operation, but when the necessary Imperial Order will be issued it is impossible to say. But it is satisfactory to find that the Tōkyō Municipality have recognized the necessity of taking a census in the metropolis and have determined to devote a sum of 140,000 yen to this object. The first regular metropolitan census is to be taken on October 1st of this year. But one fact is worthy of attention. The Tōkyō Municipality at the end of last year took a rough kind of census, according to which Tōkyō was said to contain over 2 million people. But according to statistics collected by the Police there are only about one million three hundred thousand people in Tōkyō. Here is a discrepancy of some 700,000 persons. For a Municipality not to know how many people are to be taxed, nor for how many people water and other conveniences have to be provided must certainly be very embarrassing. Hence the taking of an accurate census in Tōkyō is "the most urgent among urgent affairs."

What it is desirable to know in reference to the inhabitants of Tōkyō over and above their mere number is the proportion of males to females, the proportion of able-bodied men and women to children and aged or sick persons, the number of married couples and the average number of permanent residents as compared with the number of visitors, the most flourishing industries and the extent to which the various learned professions are patronized. One great difficulty connected with collecting statistics bearing on property is encountered in all countries where the authorities who ask for returns have the power to make those returns a basis for assessing taxes. The real value of property is sure to be concealed. Our property-holders are pretty clever at that kind of thing. But in the case of landed property or house property this is not easy to accomplish. The month of October has been chosen for taking the census because by the beginning of that month people have all returned from their summer trips and have settled down to their ordinary occupations. Public-spirited citizens should do all they can to assist the authorities in the collection of reliable statistics. Much of the unfair taxation complained of could be easily remedied were the authorities in possession of trustworthy information bearing on property. The example set by Tōkyō is being followed by other cities. Kōbe is going to take a census on November 1st. Kumamoto took one last fall. Local censuses will help to prepare the way for the national census, the taking of which cannot well be postponed much longer. W.D.

DR. KOCH.

Dr. and Mrs. Koch arrived at the Osaka Railway Station at 11 a.m. on Aug. 12th from Nagoya. Mr. Takasaki, Governor of Osaka-Fu, and a large number of the citizens, welcomed them. They then drove to the Public Hall in the Nakanoshima Public Gardens where a dinner was given in their honour. Mr. Yamashita, Mayor of Osaka, made a speech welcoming the great German doctor. Dr. Kiyono, President of the Osaka Doctors' Society, and Professor Sata also delivered speeches in German. The Osaka Doctors' Society presented Dr. Koch with a pair of silver flower vases.

Dr. and Mrs. Koch left Osaka by the 1.05 p.m. train for Kobe where they arrived an hour later. A similar reception to that given in Osaka was held in Kobe. At 6 p.m., they left by the steamer Koro Maru for Miyajima in company with Professor Kitazato and a number of well-known Japanese doctors. In the party, was Dr. Frenker, of Germany, who arrived on Aug. 11th from Vladivostok.

THE BOOKSHELF.

Dean's Hall; by MAUDE GOLDING. London. John Murray.

SCOTT assigned to himself the task of making his readers love Quakers and gird at their prejudiced persecutors. The beautiful character of Joshua Geddes was well conceived to serve this double purpose. But the authoress of "Dean's Hall" makes her Quakers such gloomy ascetics, such intolerant bigots, that one's sympathies go out wholly to their suffering contemporaries. Not once does "Prudence Dean" become lovable; Enoch Mathers seems far too noble to be mated with such a block of marble, and it is a profound satisfaction when Elder Warrington's hypocrisy is exposed. Certain it is, however, that had Miss Golding desired to paint her Quakers in attractive colours she could have done so, for Mrs. Felicity Arnott is a most charming woman of the world and Lettice Thwaites is a fine creation, an impressive portrait painted with a few masterly strokes. The delight of "Dean's Hall" is that it takes us into the realm of English country life, George Elliott's special domain, and throws upon its denizens and their surroundings a searchlight almost as powerful as that of the first immortal portrayer of the rustic classes. Such a work is at once refreshing and welcome. Great emotions are depicted without the aid of any wearisome analysis; a feat of true art, for in life we learn to know men and women not by hearing their characters dissected but by observing their acts and expressions. The book strongly recommends itself also by the absence of all morbid or vulgar passion. There is plenty of love-making certainly, but it is a good wholesome pageant, free from every trace of delirium or hysteria, a mere incident of life not its be all and end all. There is one terrible tragedy, the fate of Meg of Ljttendale, and it is a story that fills the reader with horror to think that such things could have happened in England a hundred and fifty years ago, though unfortunately there is no room to doubt that they did happen. "Dean's Hall" is destined to delight a wide circle of readers.

Islam, A Challenge to Faith, by S. M. ZWEMER. New York, Student Volunteer Movement.

CHRISTIANITY had been in existence for six centuries when Mohammed began his religious crusade, and Mecca is only eight hundred miles from Jerusalem. Yet Islam conquered all Asia, and was not beaten back in Europe until it reached the walls of Vienna. It has fully 200 million followers to-day, being thus incomparably the most numerously obeyed creed ever known to humanity. What is the explanation of this wonderful success? If we hold that there is a God because all men in all ages have believed in a divine being, must not the same reasoning go far to convince us that Mohammed was a prophet, since 200 millions of human creatures have believed in him for fifteen centuries? It is therefore a matter of profound interest to know what the creed of Islam really is and what are the true sources of its greatness. Mr. Zwemer's book is intended to teach us all that there is to be learned about the faith of the son of Abdullah and the father of Fatimah. He is not a sympathetic narrator. Very soon his readers discover that he abhors Islam and that he writes rather to bring it into discredit than to expose the sources of its immense strength. One attribute, however, he possesses so eminently that we see even things which he does not seek to show us, the attribute of wide research and profound knowledge of his subject. His work is so exhaustive that it furnishes material for any analysis however minute. For our own part we never could credit the theory that Mohammed's religious trances were merely epileptic seizures to which he assigned a mystic character. Had there been any wretched deception of that kind, it could not have borne the searchlight of so many centuries. No one can intelligently conceive that his name could have continued to be honoured through all the ages had he been a poor, commonplace impostor. Mr. Zwemer himself writes:—"His name is never uttered or written without the addition of a prayer. 'Ya Mohammed' is the open sesame to every door of difficulty—temporal or spiritual. One hears that name in the bazaar and in the street, in the mosque and from the minaret. Sailors sing it while hoisting their sails; hamals groan it to raise a burden; the beggar howls it to obtain alms; it is the Bedouin's cry in attacking a caravan; it hushes babes to sleep as a cradle song; it is the pillow of the sick and the last word of the dying; it is written on the door-posts and in their hearts as well as, since eternity, on the throne of God; it is to the dumb Moslem the name above every name." May we not add that it is a name which makes men strong in battle and enables them to look death in the face without flinching. Mohammed's life, after the death of Khadijah, may have been grossly sensual; he may have set a very low standard of sexual morality to his disciples, yet the reverence they conceived for him could have been inspired only by a man of transcendent gifts. It may also be true that Mohammed was not an originator but an adapter. Islam is no new faith. Learned men have shown it to be a collection of what is commonly called "heathenism" as it existed in Arabia at the time of Mohammed's appearance upon the scene, of Judaism as found in the Old Testament, and of Christianity. Yet the fact remains that Mohammed's genius mixed all these elements into a panacea which has served to satisfy two hundred millions of minds during fifteen hundred years. There is no gainsaying these stupendous results. The great problem is that propounded by Dr. Shedd: will Islam survive close contact with modern thought and civilization? "It must meet these changed conditions if it is to live, and the question arises whether it can do this or not. History shows that Islam is capable of great things and of flourishing under very varied conditions. It also shows that it has received into its system from the very beginning elements from outside, and it is reasonable to suppose that this process may go on. . . . However, the elements which have entered Islam from outside in the past have not been assimilated. The inability of Islam to assimilate the elements received into it has been made the reason for denying to it the claim to be a universal religion, and the argument seems to be thoroughly valid." As a means of reaching an intelligent appreciation of these colossal eventualities the work of Mr. Zwemer is invaluable.

A Bounty Boy, by FRANK T. BULLEN, F.R.G.S. London, T. Fisher Unwin.

THIS book will not, we are afraid, enhance Mr. Bullen's fame. Yet his motive cannot be too much applauded. It is set forth by him in a very brief preface, where he says:

"All the introduction to my book that I deem necessary is to say that in it I have endeavoured to sketch a community for whom I have the highest admiration, the descendants of the mutineers of the Bounty, who, I maintain, are a standing proof of the miraculous power of the Gospel in the regeneration of mankind when unhindered by sacerdotal interference. And in order to make the subject as full as possible, I have taken one typical islander, the Bounty Boy, out of his surroundings into the world, and told his adventures therein with a view of showing how the Christian who is one indeed may fare."

The story begins on Christmas Day fifty years ago at Norfolk Island, whither some two or three hundred descendants of the Bounty mutineers have been transferred by the British Government. The occasion is a prayer meeting incidental to the birth of the hero of the tale. Mr. Bullen introduces us in this first chapter to the simple and unaffected piety of the people, to the natural charms of the island, and to the fine physical beauty of such of the inhabitants as present themselves to the reader, and it may as well be said at once that he harps on those points to the verge of nausea. Then we have a whale hunt followed by another prayer meeting, the address of gratitude for the new-born babe at which is given in full, with devout reflections by the author. The child is named Christmas Bounty Adams, but this is shortened to plain "C.B." and the latter is used all through the book. Now an author who designates his hero by initials, while permitting the other characters in the book to address him by one or other of his proper names, risks yielding himself to a greater or less sacrifice of dignity, and when this is taken in conjunction with the conversational style of Mr. Bullen the reader must be excused if he becomes impatient at times. But to get on. We pass over C.B.'s childhood and find him at the age of eighteen "risen to the full stature of a man in all that makes for true manliness, innocent without being ignorant of all that was worth his knowing, brave, modest and strong, and withal, in spite of the uncouth garb in which he was clothed in common with all his fellows, handsome as the statue of a Greek god." This domain of piety, virtue and perfect happiness is visited by a whaleship with a fiendish captain, whom, however, by the aid of experience, they are able to send away satisfied; and next two men, barely alive, survivors of a party of four whose boat bore signs of cannibalism, claim the hospitality of the islanders and immediately upon recovering set about abusing it. Their first escapade calls forth a display of C.B.'s wonderful strength. Half killed, the new comers are put under guard, and C.B. who feels that his outburst of temper has caused the simple islanders to hold somewhat aloof from him decides to go out into the world. At this moment a British warship and an American warship arrive. The former relieves the community of its foul-tongued prisoners, and on the latter C.B. is enrolled as captain's boat-steerer. His life at sea is full of incident from the very outset. The Portuguese harpooners hate him at first sight and this feeling is not lessened when our stalwart hero, required by the captain to show his skill, harpoons eleven porpoises in succession and winds up the exhibition with a throw which impales two of these big fish on one harpoon. After some pious reflections on the spiritual dangers that threaten him in that ungodly company C.B. kills his first whale most creditably. He acquires at this time the valuable friendship of Merritt, the fourth mate, the Guamese product of a Spanish father and a Chinese mother, and the first result is that Merritt thrashes a harpooner who has cut C.B.'s line so that he may lose his next whale. We are taken in a number of chapters over a succession of whaling incidents which of course are described by Mr. Bullen with detail supplied from his intimate knowledge of the subject. At Honolulu, C.B., who has been treated almost from the first with the deepest deference by the Kanaka portion of the crew, undergoes what Mr. Bullen calls his "great temptation." The natives who come on board with provisions intimate their desire to accord him supernatural honours and ask him to become a chief high priest. Mr. Bullen actually remarks of this incident, "I know of no subtler form of temptation than this for a good man unless gifted with an exceptionally large fund of commonsense and much experience." C.B.'s mind was chaos for a time, but "unknown to any save his Maker his heart went up in prayer to be kept humble, true and diligent." He refuses to be tempted, and so ends this ridiculously inconsequential episode. But the captain is seriously injured by a whale and wants to go home, and at his request C. B. goes with him. They proceed on a British man-of-war from the Bonins to Yokohama and there take steamer to San Francisco. On the voyage C.B. awakens much interest among the passengers, especially after he saves the life of a married lady who attempts to drown herself—and kindles the flame of love in the heart of the young daughter of a wealthy American, himself all unconscious and unresponsive. How the pair arrive at an understanding, and how just before their marriage the millionaire is ruined and the three start for Norfolk Island, and after some vicissitudes arrive to spend the remainder of their lives there, we leave the author to tell for himself.

The International, edited by Dr. RODOLPHE BRODA. London, T. Fisher Unwin.

THE June number of this review comes late to hand. Its list of contents includes a number of articles which should be interesting to a large circle of readers. In a note on the coming of Socialism, the editor deals with the growing development of trusts, with State Socialism in South Australia Land Nationalization in New Zealand, Municipal Socialism in Vienna and other developments of social reform. "The Coming of Protection in England," by Mr. J. A. Hobson, sets forth the condition of the protectionist cult and finds that if the opposing forces of free trade and protection in England continue to move with the force and in the direction they are moving now, nothing but a large and most unlikely revival of industrial prosperity will be able to prevent the débâcle of British free trade at the next general election. Mr. J. Castberg, Minister of Justice at Christiania, has an enlightening article on "Norway: the Pioneer State of Democracy in Europe"; Mr. J. Ingram Bryan writes on "Democracy in Japan", and there are other notes and papers on phases of the world's progress, with many reports by correspondents from European, American, and Asiatic countries.

Shakespeare, by WALTER RALEIGH, Fellow of Magdalen College, and Professor of English Literature in the University of Oxford. London: Macmillan & Co.

THIS is certainly a very remarkable book. It is one of the "English Men of Letters" series and hence it was expected to turn out a failure, as nobody supposed it possible for a critic to compress into some 200 small sized pages a symmetrical account of so great a genius as Shakespeare. As one reviewer has observed:—"In most works of this class, written to fit the exigencies of a series, one witnesses little more than two hundred pages of scramble for supremacy between cramped criticism, perfunctory reflection and inadequate (or else irrelevant) biography." But Professor Raleigh by confining himself to a standpoint that is plain, practical and intelligible, succeeded in producing the best all-round book on Shakespeare for modern lovers of general literature that has been published. The little volume is full of admirable things well put. There is not a dull page in it from cover to cover. But it treads on many literary corns. It has offended almost every school of Shakespeare Students; because it boldly asserts that Shakespeare has been habitually misunderstood and misinterpreted by these writers. All specialists are apt to have a certain kind of infallibility imputed to them by an ignorant and all too credulous public. Professor Raleigh sets out by asserting:—"The indispensable preliminary for judging and enjoying Shakespeare is not knowledge of his history, not even knowledge of his works, but knowledge of his theme, a wide acquaintance with human life and human passion as they are reflected in a sensitive and independent mind..... There is no book, except the Bible, which has been so misread, so misapplied, or made the subject of so many idle paradoxes and ingenuities." According to Professor Raleigh all Shakespeare's characters and all his plays are but the revelations of the working of his own mind. "There is no thrill of feeling communicated from the printed page but has first been alive in the mind of the author; there was nothing alive in his mind that was not intensely and sincerely felt." Many critics fail to understand poetry because they are always seeking to interpret a poet by what they suppose to be his doctrine and his creed. "They ask a poet what he believes, and the answer does not satisfy them. A poet believes nothing but what he sees. Where dull minds rest on proverbs and apply them, he reverses the process; his brilliant general statements are sudden divinations born of experience, sparks thrown out into the darkness from the luminous centre of his own self-knowledge." Shakespeare having revealed his whole mind to us has made it impossible for us to affix a label to him that correctly describes him. It is one of the habits of mankind to name everything. So the naming and re-naming of Shakespeare has gone on merrily from age to age. Books have been written to prove that he was an Atheist, a Roman Catholic, an Anglican. The fact was he was that rarest of all things, a whole man. "It is only warped and stunted partisans who are unable to see any virtue or truth on the other side," says Professor Raleigh. "A Catholic who finds no force in the Protestant position, a Protestant who has never felt the fascination of the Catholic ideal,—these are not the best of their kind; and if all were like them, the strife of party would sink below the level of humanity. They are 'damned, like an ill-roasted egg, all one side.'" Shakespeare was the freest of all free thinkers, the most open minded of all men—a seer and a sceptic. "There is no contradiction in all this. Large minds are open and wise, where small minds are close and cunning. Those who have never seen more than a little dare not express all their doubts. In Shakespeare there are no little devices of shelter and concealment. He lets us know all he thinks whether it suits our creeds and theories or not. The conclusion which Professor Raleigh reaches is that as a rule Moralists don't understand Shakespeare at all. He is too wide and too strong, too catholic in his sympathies and too generous in his acceptance of facts to suit this class of writers. His morality is not their morality; his suburbs are not their suburbs. Hazlitt says of Shakespeare:—"He was in one sense the least moral of all writers; for morality (commonly so called) is made up of antipathies; and his talent consisted in sympathy with human nature in all its shapes, degrees, depressions and elevations." This is the great drawback of Shakespeare's many critics. They pretend to be so much more moral than he is. They turn away in disgust from much that he presents. Their morality is made up of condemnation and avoidance and protest. "What they shun in life they shun also in the drama, and so shut their eyes to nature and to Shakespeare." This, according to Professor Raleigh, is all very childish. "Childhood," he says, is amazingly moral with a confident, dictatorial, unflinching morality. The work of experience, in those who are capable of experience, is to undermine this early pedantry, and to teach tolerance, or at least suspense of judgment. Nor is this an offence to virtue; rather virtue becomes an empty name, or fades into bare decorum, where sin is treated as a dark horrible eccentricity.

Throughout the whole book Professor Raleigh demonstrates how annoying to the doctrinaire Shakespeare is, how he says the very things the doctrinaire would not have him say, exposes to public gaze what he would fain conceal. Shakespeare makes it plain that the world will jog along its own way despite the theories of the moralists "Dost thou think, because thou art virtuous, there shall be no more cakes and ale?"

When Shakespeare goes down deep into nature and into the world in which we live, he tells us what he finds there. And it is here that he shows us how superior he is to the doctrinaires. "All doctrines and theories concerning the place of man in the universe, and the origin of evil," says Professor Raleigh, "are a poor and partial business compared with that dazzling vision of the pitiful estate of humanity which is revealed by Tragedy: . . . There is no moral lesson to be read, except accidentally, in any of Shakespeares tragedies. They deal with greater things than man; with powers and passions; elemental forces, and dark abysses of suffering; with the central fire, which breaks through the thin crust of civilisation, and makes a splendor in the sky above the blackness of ruined homes. Because he is a poet, and has true imagination, Shakespeare knows how precarious is man's tenure of the soil, how deceitful are his quiet orderly habits and his prosaic speech. At any moment, by the operation of chance, or fate, these things may be broken up and the world given over once more to the forces that struggled in chaos."

I have quoted enough to indicate what is the keynote of the whole of Professor Raleigh's instructive book. The impression it produces on one is that the moralists and doctrinaires have never understood Shakespeare. He had all the unconventionality of a true poet. When he bids farewell to the world in what was probably his last play, the Tempest, he utters no cant phrases such as moralists would put into his mouth. He passes out of life as jovially and as philosophically as he had passed through it. For it is Shakespeare's voice that we hear speaking through Prospero:

"You do look, my son, in a mov'd sort
"As if you were dismay'd. Be cheerful, sir;
"Our revels now are ended. These our actors,
"As I foretold you, were all spirits, and
"Are melted into air, into thin air;
"And like the baseless fabric of this vision,
"The cloud-capt towers, the gorgeous palaces,
"The solemn temples, the great globe itself,
"Yea, all which it inherit, shall dissolve,
"And like this insubstantial pageant faded
"Leave not a rack behind: we are such stuff
"As dreams are made on; and our little life
"Is rounded with a sleep."

There is no finer picture of human insignificance in the English language. But the wonderful thing is that the darker side of life, which nobody has painted as well as he, does not depress Shakespeare. He died, as we all hope to die, without croaking. "Be cheerful, sir; our revels now are ended." W.D.

THE IMPERIAL COURT.

The 100th day's religious services for the late Prince Yamashina were held at 8 a.m. on Aug. 9th at the Toyoshima-go-oka Cemetery. Representatives of the Emperor, the Empress, the Crown Prince and Princess, as well as a number of Princes and Princesses of the Blood were present. The rite was concluded at noon.

The Crown Prince of Korea left Tokyo on Aug. 10th by the 8 a.m. train for the Western districts in company with Prince Ito. At 3.46 p.m. to-day, Aug. 11th, he will embark by the cruiser Manshu for Kure. On his way, he will visit Miyajima, Maiko, Uji, etc.

The Emperor of Korea has presented the Emperor of Japan with fifty volumes of old Korean essays. The books were recently conveyed to the Palace by Prince Ito.

On August 11th Mr. Li Kia-chou, Chinese ex-Minister, and Mr. Hu Weitch, new Chinese Minister, had audience of the Emperor. Mr. Li presented to His Majesty a letter from the Emperor of China releasing him. Mr. Hu presented his credentials, after which he was received by the Empress in audience.

A telegram has been received by the Imperial Court to the effect that Prince Fushimi, the younger, now in London, will be present at the British naval manoeuvres which will commence on Aug. 13th in the Mediterranean lasting for two weeks. The Prince will be on board the battleship Agamemnon.

The Emperor decorated Mr. Li Kia-chou, Chinese ex-Minister in Tokyo, with the First Order of the Sacred Treasure on Aug. 11th.

MONTHLY SUMMARY OF JAPANESE
CURRENT LITERATURE.

That in this country the business world and the educational world have little connexion with each other and that business suffers much on this account is the opinion of quite a number of Japanese writers. In the July number of the Taiheiyo Mr. T. Mizushima, Director of the Kōbe High Commercial School, expresses himself in the following terms on this subject:—In the West commercial schools are controlled by business men and in the majority of cases their establishment even can be traced to the enterprise of business men. The great Chambers of Commerce in London, Manchester and Birmingham superintend both the elementary and the higher education of boys designed for business. The same is the case in both France and Germany. High commercial education at the College of Commerce attached to the Berlin University has reached a stage of development unapproached elsewhere, but that institution too is in close touch with leading business men in Germany. In Vienna there is a high-class Commercial Academy which is under the control of the managers of the Industrial Exhibition. These men conduct the examinations at the Academy. They are all business men. It says much for the technical knowledge and learning possessed by Austrian business men that the managers of an Exhibition should be competent to fill the place of examiners in one of the best commercial colleges the world contains. Turning to industry in the West, we find the same close connection between the men engaged in industry and the schools that give technical training to mechanics, operatives, &c. The machinery and various appliances used in the schools have in many cases been supplied gratis by business men, sometimes as a means of advertising, but often too from enthusiasm in the cause of industry. There is nothing of this kind to be found in this country. Our industrial schools are run solely on Government support and the capitalists among business men regard them with indifference. In Western countries students of industry are allowed to visit various factories in company with their teachers and the practical knowledge thus obtained forms one of the subjects taught in the school in which students have to pass examinations. In the West theory and practice go hand in hand, but in this country the heads of students are stuffed full of theories of whose practical working they have no knowledge. This is a very inadequate preparation for after-life. "Too much theory and too little practice" well describes our Japanese system of education in the case of many subjects. Our factories are not thrown open to inspection and we have in this country no such institution as the South Kensington Museum, where school boys and school girls can obtain a practical knowledge of the working of machines and of the various uses to which steam and electricity are put. Unless measures are taken to improve the practical knowledge of lads designed for commerce or industry in the way that is done in other countries, successful business competition with foreigners is out of the question, concludes Mr. Mizushima.

Baron Goto writes in the Taiheiyo on the future of the South Manchurian Railway and on the amicable relations established between Russia and Japan in the working of their respective railways. He says he is confident that the Russian Siberian Railway, the East China Line and the Japanese South Manchurian Railway will work in harmony with each other, resulting in the development of highly efficient railway services from China to Europe.

* * *

Many of our readers are no doubt somewhat wearied of hearing about the defects of Japanese political parties and of the slow progress that Japan is making towards the goal which many years hence she is destined to reach—constitutional government. Mr. Shimada Saburō never seems to grow tired of writing on this subject. In the July Taiyo appears an article of his entitled, "The Future of Political Parties." He maintains that with all its imperfections the Shimpotō has always followed a high ideal, and he says that among the unattached politicians there are men whose views are thoroughly sound as to what are the requisites of successful party government. The Seiyū kai he deems to be quite hopeless. It is used by the Clan leaders or by the men appointed by these leaders as an instrument for carrying out the policy of the hour. In no sense does the Party represent the nation nor does it affect national policy to any great extent. Its dissolution would be the best thing that could happen for the country. If the new Cabinet shows itself strong enough to steer clear of this self-seeking, corrupt and corrupting party, and if it relies for support in the Diet on the band of high-principled politicians who are to be found there, the nation will certainly highly approve of the new move. Politicians in Japan to-day are of two sorts: the public-spirited, devoted, and high-principled men and the self-interested, place-hunting, unprincipled political adventurers. If our leading statesmen to-day would only recognize this and resolutely seek only for the support of the former class, constitutional government would make a big stride forward. But will they do so? We have our doubts, observes Mr. Shimada.

In the July Taiyo appears an article from the pen of Dr. J. Soeda entitled "The Evils of the Times and their Lessons," in which he compares Japan's situation as a State with that of other Powers in the following manner:—The strength of States depends largely on the extent to which they are consolidated, and consolidation is greatly affected by race, history, religion, language and customs. Looking around the world, we find that all the great Western Powers have certain elements of dissension among them which are not found in this country. England has her troublesome Irish problem, which has proved strong enough to overthrow Cabinets time and again. It is a question in which both race and religion are involved. In the United States the ruling race is in the minority and is required to cater for a number of aliens whose sentiments and tastes differ widely. Germany, consisting as it does of a number of federated States, has to consult local sentiments and interests in determining on a national policy. The French, though a united nation, suffer much from repeated radical changes in the administration of government. The Russian empire extends over such a vast area and Russian territory is peopled by so many races that the centralization of government is no easy task. In Austria there are the constant rivalry and hatred existing between three distinct races. In Italy there is a perpetual conflict on religious grounds between the spiritual power, represented by the Pope, and the civil power. In the possession of the fundamental elements of union there is certainly no country in the world more happily situated than Japan. She has practically one race of people; she has one language, one past history and one set of customs. . . . At the present time in Western countries there is a continual warfare going on between those who champion the State as against the individual and those who place the individual high above the State. But the fact is that in every well ordered country individual development and State development are inseparable the one from the other. It is impossible to have a strong State composed of weak individuals. But if the State is dependent on individuals, to an equal extent are individuals dependent on states, for without the State the highest hopes of an individual can never be realized. There are certain things which individuals can reasonably expect the State to perform. Whether our State fulfils all its duties to individuals may be open to question, but seeing that the safety, comfort and whole welfare of individuals are only attainable under a strong Government, it is the duty of each individual composing the nation to do his utmost to help the Government out of the difficulties it has to encounter. The times call for strict economy. As a nation we are ill acquainted with business methods and there is too great a tendency among us to push our own personal interests at the expense of the State. The devotion to public interests displayed during the late war is by no means so much in evidence now as it was then.

* * *

In the Kyōiku Jiron we find a review of Dr. Toda's book on modern Germany entitled Waga Doitsu Kwan (My views on Germany), written by Mr. Yamamoto Ryōkichi, which we epitomize below:—Professor Toda's book should prove very valuable to reformers in Japan, as it gives a thorough account of modern Germany under the following eight headings Education, Law and Politics, Armaments, Finance, Industry, Agriculture, Communications and Colonization. The state of things in Germany is constantly contrasted with what is found here, but Dr. Toda goes farther than this: he compares German methods with English, French and American methods, indicating the particulars in which they seem to him to excel or to be defective. The book is distinctly popular in form. It is designed for ordinary Japanese readers rather than for experts. It is singularly free from learned technicalities. On every subject treated Dr. Toda furnishes a number of valuable facts. When writing on Industry, for instance, he gives an account of the lives led by mechanics, their wages, the prices of the necessities of life, and so on. This reveals the fact that relative to wages the cost of living in Germany is pretty much what it is here, but it also makes plain another fact, namely, that the German mechanic spends his money more economically than the Japanese workman. As Dr. Toda's special subject of study is economy, it is but natural that his book should deal more fully with commerce, industry, and the like than with German education and German ethical standards, but what the author has to say on the latter topics is well worth reading. On the subject of education there is one lesson that the book teaches us. It is that in general mental training we are far behind the Germans. We do not teach our students how to think and how to find out things for themselves in the way the Germans do. Then there is a certain practicality that is imparted to the student in German schools which our lads fail to obtain here. In the teaching of special subjects we are not behind the Germans, speaking generally, but in all-round development of the mental powers and capabilities we do not approach them. On the kind of life that a teacher lives in Germany Dr. Toda says little. This is to be regretted, as we Japanese have little information on that subject.

* * *

The Tō-Zai Nam-Boku publishes the following two extracts from German papers. The foreign students in German Universities 12 years ago numbered only 1,800. This year there are 3,869 such students. Last year there were as many as 4,349. The decrease is attributed to a great falling off in the number of Russian students owing to the depressed financial state of that country. Japanese students this year numbered 177, Bulgarians 163 and Turks 42. Statistics referring to other countries for this year are as follows:—France, 64; Belgium, 25; Holland, 57; England, 146; America, 301; Austria, 690. A German who has made special investigations in German fiction says that the writers of pornographic novels in that country are invariably women. He had not discovered one instance of a totally bad book which had been written by a man.

In an article quoted by the Tō-Zai Nam-Boku Dr. Yokoi Tokio, an authority on Agriculture, affirms that in some parts of Japan there is a flocking to large towns and that agriculture is suffering therefrom. It would seem, says Dr. Yokoi, as though eventually Japan will be, like England, almost solely dependent on imported food. Poverty is on the increase among the farmers and the impossibility of making two ends meet drives hundreds of them into big towns, where there is a demand for cheap labour.

* * *

Mr. T. Urai, who has graduated in Forestry, writes as follows on that subject in the Kyūshū. In Germany the love of trees reveals itself everywhere. It is taught in the German text-books used in Primary schools. One of the consequences of this is the great attention Germany has given to tree-planting. The abundant supply of timber that Germany has kept up has helped the country's progress in numerous ways. In Japan we are all behind in respect of forestry. Building timber, ship timber, wood used for the embankments of rivers, for mines, factories and other purposes have all been going up in price for a long time past owing to the scarcity of material (Mina genryō ketsubō de toki shite oru). The amount of wood available for use every year in this country is very small. According to a report issued by the Department of Commerce and Agriculture three years ago giving an account of the money value of Japan's products per year—rice was put at 680 million yen, silk, at 110 million yen, marine products, at 50 million yen and timber at only about 25 million yen. Now about 60 per cent. of the total area of Japan consists of forest land. Though the forest land is about six times as much as that under cultivation, its yield is only about one fortieth part of arable land. Under proper management the yield might be made 30 or 40 times as big as it is now.

In the Niroku Shinbun we find an interesting article entitled "Literary Men and Politicians," contributed by Mr. Goto Chūgwai, which contains the following remarks. When we come to inquire to what it is that our leading politicians owe their influence to-day, we find that it is partly to be attributed to their repeated enunciation of vague theories, which seem to impress certain people, and partly to the persistency with which they appeal to public sentiment. In no sense can the leaders of our political parties be considered great men. In most cases they first made themselves known by writing, but neither in their education nor in literary power are they to be compared to our leading writers. In the West there have been striking instances of literary men who have turned out very successful politicians, and it seems to us to be most desirable that their example should be followed in this country. Our literary men hold themselves too much aloof from the workaday world and lay themselves open to the charge of being mere idle theorists and literary dilettantes who do little to develop the country and improve society. The minds of our literary men would certainly be benefited by their taking part in politics. It would save them from a certain super-sensitiveness, from an excessive amount of the croaking spirit, from mental depression and extreme pessimism, to all of which they are now subject. By the busy world in which they live our writers are despised as lacking real strength, as grumblers, as deformed specimens of humanity, not altogether without reason. (Seken kara bungakusha too yowa-mushi, naki-mushi, kataru-mono no yōni yasuku mirarete ita). Literary men have it in their power to change public opinion in reference to them. There are not a few literary men in this country who if they entered the political arena would certainly have many followers. Such men as Messrs. Uchida Roan, Higuchi Ryōkyō, Sasakawa Rimpū, Fujita Kumpō, Toyabe Shuntei, Tobari Chikufu, Miyage Setsurei, Nakajima Kotō, Kōda Rohan, Yamagata Kōhō, Iwano Hōmei, Dr. Tsubouchi Shōyō, and some others, were they to enter the Diet and discuss politics in right earnest would certainly wield far more influence than men like Messrs. Oishi Masami and Inoue Kakugorō. Their mental calibre and education would qualify them for dealing in a thorough and superior way with all the various questions brought up for discussion session after session. In debating ability, in command of language, in the mental power to master details, in logical acumen and in judgment such writers as we have named and others that might be named would occupy a higher platform than the majority of the men who are now entrusted with the settlement of the nation's affairs.

In commemoration of the publication of its seven thousandth issue, on Aug. 3rd, the Yamato Shinbun came out with an illustrated number covering some 30 odd pages. The paper has been in existence 23 years. The present proprietor, Mr. Matsushita Gunji, took the paper over 8 years ago, when it was in a very bad way and improved it in sundry particulars. Its name was then changed from Kinsei Jimbutsu-shi to Yamato Shinbun. Seven years ago the office of the paper was totally destroyed by fire. But it soon recovered itself and its circulation, it is said, has considerably increased in recent years. About 18 months ago an attempt was made to increase the circulation of the paper by devoting a small space to German and English, but it was not a financial success, for reasons that were apparent to everybody. Half a column of English is still printed each day, in imitation of the practice of one or two other Japanese newspapers, but it is very doubtful whether the sale of the journal is increased by the adoption of this course, the space devoted to English not being sufficient to tempt readers of that language.

Among the matter published by the Yamato Shinbun in its commemorative number there are some remarks of Mr. Ozaki Yukio relating to municipal government in general and to the peculiarities of Tōkyō which seems to us to deserve attention. Mr. Ozaki says that all over the world local autonomy is better developed in small towns and in villages than it is in huge cities. Among the cities of the West local administration is greatly affected by the size of the population and also by the habits, sentiments and previous history of the persons assembled in each place. Every large town has something peculiar to itself, and so it happens that persons who have lived in certain cities bear traits of character that distinguish them from other people. Thus men speak of a Londoner, a Parisian or a Bostonian as a distinct type of humanity. In the Tokugawa era what were called the Edokko began to be noted all over Japan for special characteristics—for a chivalric spirit, great independence, a careless way of using money, honest outspokenness, and so on. Some of these characteristics still remain, but in recent years the population of the metropolis has grown apace and the accessions have hailed from the provinces. So it has happened that all sorts of incongruous elements have collected together in the great city. This renders municipal government difficult. But nevertheless it is better than it was a decade ago.

The Yamato Shinbun has published 10 articles on the Ueno School of Music, where, it is alleged, serious abuses have resulted from the mixture of sexes. Reports of a similar kind have appeared in one or two other papers, but it is impossible to say how far they are reliable. The Japanese are strongly opposed to the mixture of boys and girls in schools, asserting that the system followed in some Western countries can never be made to work here, owing to traditional and practically ineradicable notions on this subject.*

The Demand for School Graduates" is the title of an interesting article which appeared in a recent issue of the Tōkyō Asahi Shinbun, the gist of which we now proceed to give:—As things are situated in this country to-day, boys whose parents have very limited means suffer much hardship. At school they have to pass hard examinations in a great many subjects. Some of them imagine that when they graduate their troubles are over, but in numerous instances the reverse is the case. They seek in vain for employment to enable them to keep body and soul together. Parents and guardians, after the strain on the family exchequer caused by the necessity of paying school fees and providing for other incidental expenses expect lads to earn their own living after graduation. But the attitude of the business world to these lads is as a rule distinctly unfriendly. Even low wages they find it hard to obtain. One reason for this is the fact that the ordinary school education given in this country counts for little in the eyes of the majority of business men. To us it seems, says the Asahi, that boys are cruelly treated in this country by those who are responsible for the school curriculum now followed and the system of examinations in operation and also by society generally. The financial circumstances of our middle classes and the lower orders are such that few who belong to them can scrape together the money needed for the education of boys without suffering much privation, and how great must be their disappointment when they find that the education given to boys does not prove a stepping-stone to permanent, paying work! It is asserted by those who are in a position to know that in no previous year has there been so much distress among graduates as now exists. That on the threshold of life, at a time when under normal conditions all should look bright and hopeful, our young men should be oppressed by burdens which in most other countries few young people are called on to bear is a national calamity for which every serious-minded person should endeavour to find some remedy. That the health of school graduates is much injured by the arduousness of their studies while at school seems to be an undoubted fact. The authorities, while insisting on hard school training, show no disposition to give employment to school graduates in preference to persons of less education. This is certainly wrong.

* Articles have recently appeared in English papers which maintain that the mixture of sexes in American Schools has on the whole worked badly in respect of the development of character in the case of boys.—(WRITER OF SUMMARY.)

Writing on "The Behaviour of Soldiers" * the Tōkyō Asahi Shinbun says: The public is always disposed to treat soldiers indulgently as a return for their readiness to die for their country. But as regards our Japanese soldiers, it is true to say that at the present time there is no call at all for this indulgence. Taking the Army as a whole, since the war was over, the men have shown great self-restraint and respect for discipline. The cases of glaring misconduct have been remarkable few. The prevailing spirit among the troops is good, but there is no saying how long it will last. Spirit of this kind is as liable to speedy corruption as fresh fish (Shiki [士氣] wa nao sengo no gotoshi. Sukoburu fuhai shi yasuki mono tari). History seems to show that the spirit of soldiers is never better than just after an arduous war, that morals and manners alike degenerate in time of peace. This was so with Ieyasu's famous Mikawa warriors and with the Hatamoto. In this country it has always happened that long years of peace have demoralized our warriors. The troops who served under the Bakufu in its last days were a laughing-stock to the country. No one could have supposed that the fine spirit of the Mikawa warriors could have been so entirely stamped out by the enervating and corrupting influences of a series of uneventful years. Personal courage was retained, however. Some of these soldiers fought well; but their lives were dissolute and their behaviour was frequently outrageous.

Why is it that the finer qualities of warriors are not retained for any length of time? The answer is that they have always been produced under the same condition and they are not apparently maintainable under any other condition. War is the condition to which we refer. Armies are created to-day, not with the object of being used in war, but with the object of maintaining peace by a big show of military preparedness. Sensō suru ga tame no guntai too tsukurazu shite, sensō sezaruru ga tame no guntai too tsukuru koto to nareba, konnichi ni oite mo, shiki wa shizen ni fuhai sezaruru too yezu. Hence it is that the true martial spirit is sure to decline. The huge army we have created has been formed with the object of overawing other nations by a big display of numbers, capacity, and general warlike appearance and strength, with the ultimate end of avoiding war. The men who compose that army may be well taught and well disciplined, but it is impossible to infuse into them the spirit of the men to whom war is a daily occupation. The true martial spirit can neither be artificially created nor artificially maintained. And so it will come about that as years of peace succeed each other the character of the soldier will certainly deteriorate, despite all the military precautions taken against it. (Sensō sezaruru ga tame no guntai wa ikani kyōiku shite mo, kunren shite mo, kekkyoku wa fuhai too manmarubeka).

* This article was penned before the Peking episode connected with Captain Kawakita was known in Japan.—(WRITER OF SUMMARY.)

rasaru nari). The policy of modern States is to expend large sums of money in maintaining thousands of men in a state of preparedness for war, in order to prevent war. The men are being trained to do what they are never likely to be called on to do. This they know, and the effect on character is bound to be bad. In this matter we are following in the wake of other nations, and so to maintain the fine old martial spirit in the presence of the numerous corrupting influences of years of peace will prove as impossible to us as to them.

* * *

The Director of the First High School, Dr. Nitobe is well known for his outspokenness on all subjects connected with education. Report says that he is always treading on official corns. Be that as it may, Dr. Nitobe is rendering good service to the nation by the unreserved way in which he exposes mistaken sentiments and wrong principles. In the field of education, despite constant revision of school rules and notwithstanding the fact that teachers are far more efficient to day than they were a decade ago, many harmful notions find strong supporters. A great deal of cant on a variety of subjects falls from the lips of students and only very rarely is it rebuked by teachers. The worship of muscularism, the grandiloquent profession of public-spiritedness and special devotion to State interests, the fashion of referring to business men as mercenary, self-seeking, ignominious types of humanity are all too common among students to-day. In the July number of the Chūō Kōron Dr. Nitobe refers to these subjects. Such words as Tenka and Kokka coming from the lips of students create a bad impression on the mind of Dr. Nitobe, he tells us. A young man's chief concern should be the development of his mental and moral powers. By doing this he will aid the State in the best way possible. To discuss public affairs is not his province. The desire to appear wise beyond his years is a piece of vanity that needs suppression among students. Mr. Kanō Jigorō many years ago started the notion that the practice of that form of wrestling known as judo is conducive to morality. There is a general notion prevailing throughout the country that tests of strength and skill of all sorts are especially conducive to moral culture and so what are known as Shōbu-kai (尚武會) have been formed in most of the great towns of Japan. Dr. Nitobe says that he doubts whether physical exercise of this kind improves the character of the young man taking part in it. He does not condemn these forms of recreation, but he points out that they often prove to be conducive to a certain roughness of manner and to self-assertiveness which are anything but desirable or graceful in young men. The notion that from patriotic motives young men should take part in rough sports and tests of strength Dr. Nitobe ridicules as founded on a mistaken notion of patriotism. The very essence of patriotism is the devotion of personal acquirements to the country's interests. It is only in countries where character has been highly developed by individuals that there is anything worthy of being placed at the disposal of the State when a crisis comes. To prate less about devotion to the State and to pay more attention to self-development is the advice given by Dr. Nitobe to Japanese students.

CONVENTION BETWEEN JAPAN AND THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA FOR THE PROTECTION IN KOREA OF INVENTIONS, DESIGNS, TRADE-MARKS AND COPYRIGHTS.

His Majesty the Emperor of Japan and the President of the United States of America being desirous to secure in Korea due protection for the inventions, designs, trade marks and copyrights of their respective subjects and citizens have resolved to conclude a convention for that purpose and have named as their Plenipotentiaries, that is to say:

His Majesty the Emperor of Japan, Baron Kogoro Takahira, Shosannin, Grand Cordon of the Imperial Order of the Rising Sun, His Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary to the United States of America; and

The President of the United States of America, Robert Bacon, Acting Secretary of State of the United States;

Who, after having communicated to each other their Full Powers, found to be in good and due form, have agreed upon and concluded the following articles:—

Art. I.—The Japanese Government shall cause to be enforced in Korea simultaneously with the operation of this convention, laws and regulations relative to inventions, designs, trade marks and copyrights similar to those which now exist in Japan.

These laws and regulations are to be applicable to American citizens in Korea equally as to Japanese and Korean subjects. In case the existing laws and regulations of Japan referred to in the preceding paragraph shall hereafter be modified, those laws and regulations enforced in Korea shall also be modified according to the principle of such new legislation.

Art. II.—The Government of the United States of America engages that in case of the infringement by American citizens of inventions, designs, trade marks or copyrights entitled to protection in Korea, such citizens shall in these respects be under the exclusive jurisdiction of the Japanese courts in Korea, the extraterritorial jurisdiction of the United States being waived in these particulars.

Art. III.—Citizens of possessions belonging to the United States shall have in respect to the application of the present convention the same treatment as citizens of the United States.

Art. IV.—Korean subjects shall enjoy in the United States the same protection as native citizens in regard to inventions, designs, trade marks and copyrights upon the fulfillment of the formalities prescribed by the laws and regulations of the United States.

Art. V.—Inventions, designs, trade marks and copyrights duly patented or registered in Japan by citizens of the United States prior to the enforcement of the laws and regulations mentioned in Article I hereof shall without further procedure be entitled under the present convention to the same protection in Korea as is, or may hereafter be, there accorded to the same industrial and literary properties similarly patented or registered by Japanese or Korean subjects.

Inventions, designs, trade marks and copyrights duly patented or registered in the United States by subjects or citizens of either High Contracting Party or by Korean subjects prior to the operation of the present convention shall similarly be entitled to patent or registration in Korea without the payment of any fees, provided that said inventions, designs, trade marks and copyrights are of such a character as to permit of their patent or registration under the laws and regulations above mentioned and provided further that such patent or registration is effected within a period of one year after this convention comes into force.

Art. VI.—The Japanese Government engages to extend to American citizens the same treatment in Korea in the matter of protection of their commercial names as they enjoy in the dominions and possessions of Japan under the convention for the protection of industrial property signed at Paris, March 20, 1883.

"Hong" marks shall be considered to be commercial names for the purpose of this convention.

Art. VII.—The present convention shall be ratified and the ratifications thereof shall be exchanged at Tokyo as soon as possible. It shall come into force ten days after such exchange of ratifications.

In witness whereof, the respective Plenipotentiaries have signed the present convention in duplicate, and have thereunto affixed their seals.

Done at the City of Washington the 19th day of the 5th month of the 41st year of Meiji, corresponding to the 10th day of May in the nineteen hundred and eighth year of the Christian era.

K. TAKAHIRA. [L. S.]
ROBERT BACON. [L. S.]

CONVENTION BETWEEN JAPAN AND THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA FOR THE RECIPROCAL PROTECTION IN CHINA OF INVENTIONS, DESIGNS, TRADE-MARKS AND COPYRIGHTS.

His Majesty the Emperor of Japan and the President of the United States of America being desirous to secure in China reciprocal protection for the inventions, designs, trade marks and copyrights of their respective subjects and citizens have resolved to conclude a convention for that purpose and have named as their Plenipotentiaries, that is to say:

His Majesty the Emperor of Japan, Baron Kogoro Takahira, Shosannin, Grand Cordon of the Imperial Order of the Rising Sun, His Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary to the United States of America; and

The President of the United States of America, Robert Bacon, Acting Secretary of State of the United States;

Who, after having communicated to each other their Full Powers, found to be in good and due form, have agreed upon and concluded the following articles:—

Art. I.—Inventions, designs and trade marks duly patented or registered by subjects or citizens of one High Contracting Party in the appropriate office of the other Contracting Party shall have in all parts of China the same protection against infringement by subjects or citizens of such other Contracting Party as in the dominions and possessions of such other Contracting Party.

Art. II.—The subjects or citizens of each of the two High Contracting Parties shall enjoy in China the protection copyright for their works of literature and art, as well as photographs, to the same extent as they were protected in the dominions of the other party.

Art. III.—In case of infringement in China by a subject or citizen of one of the two High Contracting Parties of any invention, design, trade mark or copyright entitled to protection in virtue of this convention the aggrieved party shall have in the competent territorial or consular courts of such Contracting Party the same rights and remedies as subjects or citizens of such Contracting Party.

Art. IV.—Each High Contracting Party engages to extend to the subjects or citizens of the other Contracting Party the same treatment in China in the matter of protection of their commercial names as they enjoy in the dominions and possessions of such Contracting Party under the convention for the protection of industrial property signed at Paris, March 20, 1883. "Hong" marks shall be considered to be commercial names for the purpose of this convention.

Art. V.—Subjects of Korea and citizens of possessions belonging to the United States shall have in China the same treatment under the present convention as subjects of Japan and citizens of the United States respectively.

Art. VI.—It is mutually agreed between the High Contracting Parties that the present convention shall be enforced so far as applicable in any other country in which the contracting Party may exercise extraterritorial jurisdiction.

All rights growing out of the present convention shall be recognized in the insular and other possessions and leased territories of the High Contracting Parties and all legal remedies provided for the protection of such rights shall be duly enforced by the competent courts.

Art. VII.—Any person amenable to the provisions of this convention who possesses, at the time the present convention comes into force, merchandise bearing an imitation of a trade mark owned by another person and entitled to protection under said convention, shall remove or cancel such false trade mark or withdraw such merchandise from the market in China within six months from the date of the enforcement of this convention.

Art. VIII.—Unauthorized reproductions by the subjects or citizens of one High Contracting Party prior to the operation of this convention of the works of literature and art as well as photographs of the subjects or citizens of the other Contracting Party published after the 10th day of May, 1906, and entitled to protection in virtue of this convention, shall be withdrawn from sale or circulation in China within one year from the date of the enforcement of this convention.

Art. IX.—The present convention shall be ratified and the ratifications thereof shall be exchanged at Tokyo as soon as possible. It shall come into force together with the convention relative to the protection of inventions, designs, trade marks and copyrights in Korea, ten days after such exchange of ratifications.

In witness whereof, the respective Plenipotentiaries have signed the present convention in duplicate and have thereunto affixed their seals.

Done at the City of Washington the 19th day of the 5th month of the 41st year of Meiji corresponding to the 19th day of May in the nineteen hundred and eighth year of the Christian era.

K. TAKAHIRA. [L. S.]
ROBERT BACON. [L. S.]

YOKOHAMA.

The dead bodies of two women—one about 55 years old and the other, apparently 20 years—who seemed to be mother and daughter, were found on Aug. 6th in the sea off Byobu-ura near Negishi. The right hand of the old woman and the left hand of the young were bound together with a silk cord. They are believed to have committed suicide by throwing themselves into the sea. They were not identified.

M. Iwase, the nominal editor of the Kosei Shinbun in Yokosuka, who is charged with having published a military secret, has been removed to the Yokohama District Court. T. Ishiguro, a clerk of the Yokosuka Naval Station who was charged with having supplied the material to the newspaper was sentenced on Aug. 4th by Court Martial to six years' minor confinement.

Baron Sufu, Governor of Kanagawa prefecture, has issued a notification, No. 70, in connexion with the hydrophobia now prevalent in Yokohama, stating that dog-owners must keep dogs in their compounds, or if they are allowed freedom a muzzle must be used. Any person infringing this notification renders himself liable to 10 days police detention or a fine of between sen 5 and yen 1.95. Mr. Ishida, Chief of the Yokohama Sanitary Office, says that almost all ownerless dogs have been killed, and that as dog-owners have arranged to muzzle their dogs no anxiety need now be felt. Mr. Ishida warns the public that as soon as any symptom of the disease is observed the dog must be examined by a veterinary surgeon.

Messrs. Y. Mogi and K. Oshima of Yokohama and Messrs. S. Wada and G. Matsu-ura of Shizuoka have been elected to the committee of Income Tax Investigation in the jurisdiction of the Yokohama Tax Bureau.

A detective of the Yokohama Harbour Station arrested a man on Aug. 9th in Miyoshi-cho on a charge of stealing a quantity of brass fittings from some cars in the Yokohama and Shinagawa Railway Stations.

On the afternoon of Aug. 10th a youth while riding down Yatozaka at full speed on his bicycle dashed into the iron railings along the creek-side so violently that he was thrown bodily into the canal, sustaining severe injuries on the head. He was quickly got ashore and medical aid was procured. The doctors who are attending him think that his life is not to be despaired of.

An employee of a local Japanese newspaper has been arrested on a charge of having misappropriated yen 500 belonging to his office. On Aug. 10th, he was removed to the District Court.

The health returns of Kanagawa prefecture during the week ended Aug. 9th are as follows:—

	Cholera.	Dysentery.	Typhus.	Diphtheria.	Scarlet fever.	Small pox.
Yokohama—
New cases ...	8	8	2	—	—	—
Died .....	2	1	—	—	—	—
Other Districts—
New cases .....	17	73	3	—	—	—
Died .....	—	9	2	—	—	—

During ten days ended Aug. 10th the foreign trade of Yokohama was: Exports, yen 4,184,042; and imports, yen 2,916,679. Excess of exports was yen 1,267,363.

Public Procurator Y. Fukuoka has been appointed to the Yokohama District Court in addition to the Local Court.

At 3.39 a.m. on Aug. 12th, a shock of earthquake was felt in Yokohama. Two seconds after the occurrence, the motion became severe, the maximum amplitude of horizontal motion being 2.18 millimeters per minute and 30 seconds. The whole duration including vertical motion was 3 minutes and 10 seconds, and the direction was between north and south. At 1.45 p.m. on the same day, another, and more severe shock was also felt in Yokohama.

On the night of Aug. 11th and the following day, heavy rain fell in Yokohama. According to the Observatory, the quantity of rain from 10 p.m. to 2 a.m. was 66 millimeters. The Observatory officials believe that in the western districts of Kanagawa prefecture the rain has been heavier.

Landslides have occurred at two places in the Sagami peninsula—near Yokosuka and Uraga respectively—as the result of the recent heavy rainfall. Three houses in all were wrecked and two men sustained slight injuries.

The Kawasaki district is also threatened with floods as the Kogoku-kawa is rising rapidly.

On Aug. 13th, Mr. N. Mitsuhashi, Mayor, issued a notification to the public in connexion with the proposed reception of the American Fleet. He therein announces that the American battleships will arrive here on Oct. 17th and will stay for about a week. During that period citizens are requested to adorn their houses with Japanese and American flags, painted lanterns, etc. The streets throughout the city should also be decorated in every possible way. The various public bodies should organize processions in honour of the visitors, and exhibit fireworks as often as possible.

The coolie trouble at Kanagawa was settled on the evening of Aug. 12th through the efforts of some prominent employees from Tokyo and other places.

About 4 p.m. on Aug. 12th, a coolie lodging in an inn attacked, with a razor, the wife of the innkeeper while she was in bed, injuring her severely in the throat. The offender was immediately arrested by the Isezakicho police. The cause is not reported.

YACHTING.

A moderate to fresh southerly breeze prevailed on Saturday and but for a rain squall or two the weather would have left little to be desired.

There was no race for the big boats, though one had been arranged for the Futsu-saki course, Mary only going out, though Nautica had a short cruise in the course of the afternoon.

Four Mosquito Club yachts, Sunbeam, Pele, Winsome and Elsa, raced over the Tachibana-Quarantine Ship course for the Edna cup. Sunbeam led out of the harbour entrance, Winsome next, but at the Tachibana mark Pele was first and Sunbeam last round. Sunbeam got first round the Lightship, followed closely by Pele. The three leading boats were close together in beating up the harbour, and having cut her last tack rather fine, Sunbeam was only able to get across the line by a half board. Winsome, with more room, was 25 seconds later, but as she received 30 seconds she won the cup, the points, however, going to Sunbeam. Times:—

	Start.	Finish.	Corrected.
	h.m.s.	h.m.s.	h.m.s.
Pele .....	2.15.30	3.35.35	3.35.35
Winsome .....	2.15.30	3.34.55	3.34.25
Sunbeam .....	2.15.17	3.34.30	3.34.30
Elsa .....	2.15.37	3.40.20	3.39.20

Nine Larks started and four were able to go over the course. Three capsized and two had accidents which put them out of the race. The contest, which was scratch, resulted as follows: 1st No. 12, 3.08.38; and No. 11, 3.10.59; and 3rd No. 10, 3.12.25.

STORM.

A heavy storm was experienced in Yokohama on the night of Aug. 7th and early on the following morning. In Yamate-cho and Yamashita-cho, there was no special damage except the destruction of old fences, chimneys, etc. In South Otamachi and Kanagawa several sheds collapsed, the roofs of several houses were damaged and several landslides occurred. In Negishi, several houses were flooded, and a number of telegraphic and telephonic lines were destroyed. In the harbour, the damage was very severe, a large number of small boats being wrecked and several missing. A lighter laden with 30 tons of salt from the German steamer Sylvia, sank while on its way to the Customs bonded warehouse in Kanagawa. The sendoes were saved.

In the rural districts of Kanagawa prefecture, the damage seems to have been heavier than in Yokohama. Inquiry was caused to cultivated fields by the heavy downpour combined with the inundations. Kamakura, Enoshima, Chigasaki, and Kugenuma were visited by high waves, several houses situated near the beach being damaged, and at Hayama the wooden and stone fences of the Imperial villa were damaged. About 250 ken of the embankment of the river Banyu which was under repair was destroyed.

The Bankoku Maru (2,339 tons), belonging to the Oshiro Steamship Company of Nihonbashi, laden with coal from Muroran met, with a heavy storm off Shirasura, Chiba Prefecture, and was at the mercy of the waves with her rudder shattered. On Saturday at 3 a.m. the vessel sank and only eleven out of 38 of the crew and 1 passenger were saved but with severe injuries. The ship was built in England in 1873, and during the Japan-Chinese, and Russo-Japanese wars was employed as a transport. The loss is estimated at yen 100,000.

Telegrams from the provinces also report damage in connexion with the storm. In Shizuoka prefecture all the rivers overflowed their banks, causing destructive inundations. Telegraph poles collapsed in some places. A train was delayed between Kanbara and Ejiri for half an hour. The well-known bridges Tenryu, Koike and Tsurumi were washed away. Similar damage was sustained in Hamamatsu, where telegraphic and railway services were temporarily stopped. In Nagoya, railway service was also impeded and about 6,000 houses were inundated, 3 bridges were washed away, and several buildings collapsed. The loss in Kyoto is estimated at yen 100,000 in all. Further telegrams from central and northeastern districts report more or less damage. Some lives were lost.

NIPPON KEIBA KWAI, MEGURO.

The following is the result of the drawing for 25 Australian Subscription horses, recently arrived by the S.S. Prinz Sigismund, shipped by George G. Kiss, Sydney.

No. Drawers	No. Drawers
1. Osada.	14. K. Hiranuma.
2. M. Kimura.	15. Seki.
3. K. Mori.	16. Katsura.
4. Imabayashi.	17. Naka.
5. Nakadai.	18. Nile.
6. Dead.	19. Emori.
7. Minada.	20. Sonoda.
8. Ii.	21. Takagi.
9. Sumiyoshi.	22. Katsura.
10. Iida.	23. Oyamada.
11. Kaneyama.	24. Dead.
12. Morito.	25. S. Sato.
13. I. Kimura.

The steamer Tsinan with 20 Australian mares consigned by the Kiss firm to the Keihin (Kawasaki) Race Club, is reported by telegram to have encountered heavy weather on the Australian coast, and to have lost 6 of her cargo. Steps were at once taken to replace them and the additional mares will probably arrive ten days or a fortnight later than the main body.

The N.R.C. have placed an order with the Kiss firm for yen 1,000 mares for the next Spring Meeting.

THE LAW COURTS.

SHIPPING CASE.

In an appeal lodged by Messrs. Siber, Wolff and Co., against Messrs. Butterfield and Swire, the Yokohama agents of the Ocean Steamship Co. and the China Mutual Steam Navigation Co., claiming yen 1,501.29 for the short delivery of flannel and white shirtings brought by steamers belonging to the foregoing shipping lines judgment was passed on July 27th in the Tokyo Appeal Court.

1.—Judgment given in the Yokohama District Court in favour of the ship owners is quashed.

2.—The respondents were ordered to pay to the appellants yen 1,303.65, with interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum from May 4th, 1905, until the execution of the judgment.

3.—The remainder of the appellants' claim was dismissed.

4.—Respondents were ordered to bear the costs of the hearings in the Yokohama Court and in the present Court.

It may be recalled that Messrs. Siber, Wolff and Co. instituted a case against the Yokohama agents of the same shipping firms, in the Yokohama District Court in 1905 for short delivery of one case containing flannel and two cases containing white shirtings. After several hearings, the plaintiffs' claim was dismissed on the ground that the goods were shipped in England and the bills-of-lading were made in accordance with British law, and that according to the shipping documents the ship owners were not liable for the loss of the goods through unavoidable accident or theft. The plaintiff firm appealed to the Tokyo Appeal Court against this judgment.

The ground of the judgment delivered in the Appeal Court is that the ship owners were responsible for the goods until these were carried to the destination specified in the shipping documents and were delivered to the consignees.

The facts found and the reasons adopted by the Tokyo Court in the judgment are held over till next issue.

The following is the text of the judgment given in the Tokyo Appeal Court in the appeal instituted by Messrs. Siber, Wolff and Co. against the Ocean Steamship Company and the China Mutual Steam Navigation Company, whose Yokohama agents are Messrs. Butterfield and Swire, the gist of which decision was published in a previous issue of this journal.

FACTS.—Appellants' Counsel asked the Court to quash the judgment in the Yokohama District Court and also to order the two respondent firms to pay jointly to Appellants yen 1,501.29 with interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum from May 4th, 1905, till the execution of judgment and also to order them to bear the costs. Respondents' Counsel asked the Court to dismiss the appeal.

Appellants' Counsel stated as facts in the dispute that (1) one case contained flannel, 1,222 yards in all and 30 inches in width, and two cases contained 124½ pieces of white shirting in all, 40 yards in length and 36 inches in width each. The foregoing three cases were missing when delivery was about to be taken at Yokohama from the Yokohama agents of the respondents. The cost of the one case of flannel was yen 720.98 including duty and consumption tax paid, and of the white shirtings was yen 780.31, including duty and tax paid. The claim of appellants was made on these three cases undelivered. (2) The goods in question ought to be delivered in the enclosure of the Yokohama Customs to appellants who were the consignees and also bearers of the bill-of-lading. Respondents must maintain their responsibility until the goods were delivered to the consignees. (8) Exhibit No. 2 of A-1, namely a bill-of-lading for 15 cases of white shirtings, was issued in Kobe. Consequently the transportation contract should be dealt with under Japanese law and not in accordance with British law though the shipping document expressed that the contract should be dealt with under British law. All the clauses in the shipping document were in English. The document was first received by Toda Sokichi, who did not understand the foreign language. The clauses could not be taken as conditions mutually agreed on between the Japanese and the Kobe agent of the respondents. (4) Even supposing that the present dispute was to be dealt with in accordance with British law as shown in Exhibits 1 and 2 of A-1, an objection should be made as to the meaning of "thieves" on which respondents claimed to be free from responsibility. "Thieves" would include theft accompanying a forcible action as was often mentioned in marine insurance policies and would not include secret thieves only. Even if the word includes secret thieves only, the Yokohama agents did not pay all possible attention to the goods after the whole lot was landed in the customs grounds. Through the carelessness of a landing agent employed by respondents, three cases of the lot were stolen in the day time. The crime was entirely to be attributed to grave negligence on the part of respondents. In such a case respondents could not escape their responsibility even though there were clauses in the document favourable to them. Even if respondents might escape from their responsibility under English law, Art. 592 of the Japanese Commercial Code was applicable to such a matter. The article of the Commercial Code was provided for the benefit of the public interest. According to Art. 30 of the Ordinance, the present dispute should be dealt with under the foregoing article of the Commercial Code. Thus respondents could not be exempted from responsibility. The further contention need not be given here as it was the same as that used in the lower Court.

Respondents' Counsel held that the transportation contract should be treated in accordance with British law as the clauses provided in Exhibits No. 1 and 2 of A-1, namely, original bill-of-lading issued in England and another bill-of-lading issued at Kobe on account of the transshipment of the goods there. According to British law, the word "thieves" in the shipping documents includes secret larcenies, and the ship's owners were free from the action of a thief. Respondents paid every attention to protecting the goods in question and had not been guilty of negligence as alleged by Appellants' Counsel. Even supposing that the loss of the property originated in the alleged negligence of respondents, their responsibility was removed in consequence of the special clauses in Exhibit A-1. Respondents availed themselves of the further statements given in the lower Court.

As evidence, Appellants' Counsel produced Exhibits A-1, 4, 5, 6, and 7, as well as the statements in the lower Court by Hattori Isamu, Nagase Renji and Minamide Benzo. Counsel also availed himself of the statements in the present Court by Mr. A. J. Parkhill, Toda Sokichi, Kobayashi Kumanoshin, Sasaki Seitaro, Hattori Isamu and Matsunami Jin-ichiro, and of the statement by Respondents' Counsel at the hearing in the lower Court which took place on May 14th, 1906. Appellants' Counsel further availed himself of Exhibits B 4 and 5 produced by Respondents' Counsel.

Respondents' Counsel referred to Exhibits B 1-5 and availed himself of the statements given in the lower Court by Minamide Benzo, Kobayashi Kumanoshin, Mr. A. J. Parkhill, Hattori Isamu and Sasaki Seitaro, and in the present Court by Matsunami Jin-ichiro, Hattori Isamu, and Sasaki Seitaro who were examined as experts or witnesses. Counsel admitted the existence of all evidence produced by Appellants' Counsel.

REASONS.—(1) There was no dispute between the parties on the facts that the ship's owners had accepted instructions from appellants to transport white shirtings and flannel; in consequence of these instructions, the ships' agents issued the bill-of-lading, Exhibits Nos. 1 and 2 of A-1; and appellants were the consignees of the goods and bearers of the shipping documents. It is explicit that according to Exhibits Nos. 1 and 2 of A-1, one case marked "S.N. 6874" containing flannel, one of a lot consisting of seven cases in all, and also two cases marked "S.N. 283 and 844" containing white shirting, belonging to a lot consisting of twenty cases in all, were short-delivered. Nevertheless, Respondents' Counsel held that the whole cargo was delivered to the consignees but did not produce sufficient evidence as to his contention. Therefore his point could not be admitted.

(2.) In Exhibit Nos. 1 and 2 of A-1, it is notified, as contended by Respondents' Counsel, that cargo should be delivered to consignees on board the ships and that after the goods leave the ship, the ship-owner's responsibility terminates. Yet it is also noted in a subsequent clause that sometimes the shipping firms land, in lighters employed by them, cargo destined for Japan and Kosaku (?) and that in this case, the responsibility of the ship-owners under the bills-of-lading would continue until the goods were landed and delivered to the consignees. According to the statement by Hattori Isamu, who was examined in the lower Court as an expert, goods imported from a foreign country were always delivered to the consignees at the enclosure of the Yokohama Customs. This has been a shipping business practice for thirty years past, notwithstanding the fact that the foreign bill-of-lading has a clause making delivery of the cargo on board the ship. Further it is inferred from the endorsement made on Exhibits Nos. 1 and 2 of A-1 that Messrs Butterfield and Swire, the agents of the respondent firms employed Captain A. Weston as landing agent in order to ship or land goods for them. Therefore the clause—that the responsibility of Respondents would terminate after giving delivery of cargo on board the ship, as contended by Respondents' Counsel, could not be taken as applicable to the goods brought to Yokohama or other ports in Japan. They must be handed over to the consignees at the landing place specified by the Customs. Consequently the contention of Respondents' Counsel that his clients' responsibility would terminate when the goods were removed from the ship could not be admitted. Respondents' Counsel also urged that Captain A. Weston was not employed by the ship-owners and that practically he landed the goods on behalf of the Appellants. Nevertheless, Messrs. Butterfield and Swire made an endorsement on the shipping documents that delivery of the goods would be made by Captain A. Weston at the hatoba. Also according to Hattori Isamu, who was examined in the lower Court as an expert, Capt. A. Weston landed the cargo in the capacity of representative of the Respondents. Consequently the above mentioned contentions of Respondents' Counsel are all groundless.

(3) Minamide Benzo, a convict in the Yokohama Jail at that time, who was examined in the present Court as a witness, stated that in April, 1905, he stole two cases containing white shirting and one case containing flannel, all with the mark "S. W." in the triangle, from the enclosure of the Yokohama Customs. He did not remember the numbers accompanying the mark. At a hearing in the lower Court, Tōme Tomotaro stated that three cases of shirtings and flannel with the mark "S.W." in a triangle, belonging to the appellant firm, had been stolen from a shed in the grounds of the Customs in 1905. The statements by the foregoing two men entirely agreed. There was no doubt that one case of flannel and two cases of shirtings, which were short delivered to Appellants, had been stolen in April, 1905, from a shed in the Customs compound. There was no evidence rebutting the statements by Sasaki Seitaro, who was examined in the present Court, and by Minamide Benzo, examined in the lower Court.

(4) In the bills-of-lading, namely, Exhibits Nos. 1 and 2 of A-1, a clause was provided that the transportation contracts should be dealt with under British law. Accordingly the contracts should be treated under British law in accordance with Clause 1 of Art. 7 of the Ordinance. Yet Appellants' Counsel contended that a third party, Toda Sokichi by name, who did not understand English received the bills-of-lading at Kobe and that the shipping documents should be treated under Japanese law as the delivery of the documents took place in Japan. Counsel availed himself of the statement of the man, Toda Sokichi, who was examined in the lower Court. Nevertheless the witness, Toda Sokichi, did not personally conclude the shipping contract. Takeda Tsunejiro, a man in the same office, made the contract on behalf of Toda with the Kobe branch of Respondents. Takeda understood English to some extent. Toda Sokichi, who understood the contents of the bills-of-lading, namely, the conditions with reference to rights and obligations, received the documents from Takeda Tsunejiro. Therefore, the contention of Respondents' Counsel, that the receiver had not consented to the conditions in the documents, was not admissible.

(5) As already explained, the bills-of-lading must be treated under British law. In a clause in the documents, the word "thieves" was used as a special instance under which ship-owners would be exempted from responsibility. Respondents' Counsel insisted that the word meant secret larcenies while Appellants' Counsel held that "thieves" meant men who relied on forcible action for committing theft. It is still a question among British jurists whether "thieves" means forcible theft or secret theft. There has not yet been a definition given by judges or law scholars in general. According to Exhibit B-4, "thieves" in the bills-of-lading should be taken in the same sense as used in the conditions in marine insurance policies. According to Exhibit 3 of A-6, namely Arnold's Marine Insurance Law, "thieves" in marine insurance policies involves forcible theft and does not include secret larcenies. From this reasoning, it may be inferred that "thieves" in Exhibit Nos. 1 and 2 of A-1, viz. bills-of-lading, means men who employ forcible actions for committing theft, and not secret larcenies. This inference agrees with the view adopted by Judge Archibald as shown in Exhibit B 4. A similar view is given on page 43 of Charnier and Owston's Marine Insurance Law published in 1903. From the foregoing views, the view adopted by most British jurists as to the meaning of "thieves" will be clear. If "thieves" include all who commit theft as stated by Matsunani who was examined in the present Court as an expert, ship-owners will always escape from responsibility by using such ambiguous words. The result will be that conflict takes place with the definition which was employed by British jurists for a long time past.—Refer to Exhibit B 5, namely the view adopted by Judge Fry that ship-owners were not permitted to escape from responsibility unless there was clear language in the bills-of-lading. Thus it is to be concluded as to "thieves" in the documents in question that the goods were not stolen by a thief employing forcible action but by secret larceny as already referred to in the views of British jurists. Therefore the Appeal Court will not admit the contention of Respondents' counsel that the goods in question had been stolen by a thief employing forcible actions, and that consequently the ship-owners would be exempted from responsibility for the loss of the property.

(6.) There is no doubt that Ship-owners must pay for goods lost which ought to be delivered to the consignees at an appointed time and place and the price of such goods should be based on the current market value. (Refer to page 877 of Carper's Sea Transportation Law.) A portion of the flannel was lost during the period from April 15th to 29th, 1905; and a portion of the white shirtings was missing during the time from April 17th to May 3rd in the same year. The remaining portions of the flannel and shirtings were delivered at the time above mentioned. Naturally the goods short delivered ought to have been handed over to the consignees at the same time and place—the landing place specified by the Yokohama Customs,—as was admitted by Respondents' Counsel. Consequently the prices of the goods lost should be based on current quotation on the Yokohama market at that time. As shown in Exhibits Nos. 1 and 3 of A 4, the case marked S.M. 283 contained 1,222 yards flannel, 30 inches wide. It was stated by Nagase Renji examined in the lower Court that the price of flannel of similar quality was sen 51 per yard on the Yokohama market from April 14th to the beginning of the following month in 1905. Therefore the whole cost of the flannel lost was yen 629 33. As also shown in Exhibit No. 2 of A-4, other two cases contained 124 3/10 pieces of white shirtings, each 40 yards in length and 36 inches wide. According to the same expert, the market cost of shirtings of similar quality was yen

5.40 per piece, making a total of yen 674 33. Respondents are jointly liable to pay to appellants yen 1,303 65, the total price of the two lots, and also to pay interest at the rate of 5 per cent per annum from the time when the goods were to be delivered until the execution of this judgment. The rate of interest is that commonly employed in commercial circles in Great Britain.—(Refer to page 724 of the fourth edition of Carper's Marine Transportation Law, and to a case between the British-Columbia Saw Mill company and the Nettleship described on page 499 of Law Report Vol. III which case explains current price and rate of interest. The foregoing sums are entered by the Court as a portion of the claim of appellants, and the remainder of their claim is dismissed.) Appellants included in their claim duty and consumption tax, which their Counsel asserted had been paid to the Customs before delivery was made. There is no sufficient evidence, however, to support contention of Counsel. Therefore Appellants' claim for duty and tax is not entertained by the Court. The costs are to be treated under clause 1 of Art 73 and clause 2 of Art 73 of the Procedure of the Civil Code, as shown previously.

This judgment is signed by Presiding Judge Yanagawa Katsuzo and Judge Associates Tomita Suketaro, Yokomura Yonetaro, and Sasaki Kiji, at the 3rd civil section of the Tokyo Appeal Court. Dated July 24th 1908.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE "COMET."

(TO THE EDITOR OF THE "JAPAN MAIL.")

SIR,—With reference to the paragraph in your issue of 3rd Aug. headed "A Comet," this was an exceptionally large and brilliant meteor, and passed Dairi (Buzen) at 10.07 p.m. on the 31st July.

The motion was so slow (south to north-east) that people had time to come from other parts of my house to witness it.

It is probable that the meteor struck the earth in N.W. Sliokoku; it would be interesting to know where.

Yours truly

N.Y.Z

Moji, August 5th, 1908.

YOKOHAMA YACHT CLUB.

(TO THE EDITOR OF THE "JAPAN MAIL.")

SIR,—I observe a paragraph in your yesterday's issue intimating that the Editor of the Rudder has been pleased to offer a prize to the Yokohama Yacht Club for a long distance race. In view of the present condition of the Club I very much fear that in this case the giving of such a prize is like the throwing of the proverbial pearls.

With the exception of the Lark class, which is run as a semi-independent branch of the Club I believe, and a little racing amongst the 22 rating class, the Yokohama Yacht Club is dead. Dead as a door-nail!

In 1886 when the Club was started (it was called a Sailing Club then, and it was a Sailing Club) we had only one or two boats, which by a stretch of courtesy might be called yachts, but we had enthusiasm and we had sport. We got old ship's boats, or anything we could lay hands on, we decked them in and we ballasted them, and we had sport—lots of it!

To-day we have a fine fleet of yachts Kingsfisher, Mary, Aborigine, Maid Marion, Riever, Wanderer, Namika, Cygnel, Banzai, Aimee, Nina, Asagao, and others which might take part in racing, in fact any amount of material, but no committee capable of organizing a race!

When a racing club is run by a fossilized committee in such a perfunctory manner that the members lose their interest in the racing, surely it is high time to try a new broom.

It is a mistake to think that there is not as much enthusiasm in sport to-day as there was twenty years ago. Yacht owners will race their craft to-day just as gladly as they did then, provided that the conditions will afford them sport. This is another illustration of the fact that the efficiency of a committee is not necessarily ensured by its members being all individually good fellows.

I have a great deal more to say about the Yokohama Yacht Club, but at present will not trespass farther on your valuable space.

Yours faithfully,

ALAN OWSTON,

Yokohama, August 13th, 1908.

CRICKET.

The game on Saturday, Foster's XI. v. Kilby's XI., resulted in an easy win for the former by 153 runs to 68, the top scorers being P. E. Bousfield, 37; V. A. Hearne, 23; B. C. Foster, 20; A. J. Cornes, 40. For Kilby's eleven the only batsmen to get into double figures were C. von Fallot, 12; H. W. Kilby, 13; W. F. Bludgon, 13; and E. L. Squire, 19.

B. C. FOSTER'S XI.

A. G. Hearne, bowled von Fallot	1
H. T. Hume, bowled Kilby	3
P. E. Bousfield, c. Vincent b. Squire	37
W. Morris, bowled von Fallot	0
V. A. Hearne, l.b.w. b. Hayward	23
B. C. Foster, bowled von Fallot	20
A. J. Cornes, bowled Bludgon	40
N. Buckle, bowled Bludgon	16
G. Grey, bowled Bludgon	0
L. M. Whyte, not out	7
W. Blundell, bowled Bludgon	0
Extras	6

153

BOWLING ANALYSIS.

	B.	R.	M.	W.
Von Fallot	78	24	7	3
Kilby	48	35	1	1
Squire	36	27	—	1
Hayward	30	29	—	1
Bludgon	44	32	—	4

Von Fallot bowled a wide.

H. W. KILBY'S XI.

R. E. Davur, c. Buckle b. Foster	1
W. Hayward, c. and b. Buckle	2
C. von Fallot, bowled Foster	12
H. W. Kilby, bowled Buckle	13
W. F. Bludgon, bowled Foster	13
E. L. Squire, l.b.w., b. Buckle	19
L. C. Sharman, not out	4
J. Meredith, bowled Buckle	0
W. Gray, c. and b. Buckle	1
S. A. Vincent, bowled Bousfield	1
W. Graham, c. Hearne b. Bousfield	0
Extras	2

68

BOWLING ANALYSIS.

	B.	R.	M.	W.
Buckle	54	31	1	5
Foster	48	30	1	3
Bousfield	14	5	—	2

The V. C. & A. C. played a match against a team from the P. & O. steamer Syria on Sunday afternoon and won very easily, with an innings to spare.

V. C. & A. C.

P. E. Bousfield, st. Meredith b. Evans	57
H. C. Gregory, bowled Evans	39
N. Buckle, c. & b. Davis	1
A. G. Hearne, not out	29
W. S. Read, bowled Meredith	70
H. W. Martyr, not out	14
W. Hayward	0
D. E. M. Drummond	0
B. Deveson	0
B. C. Foster	0
A. E. Bateman	0
Extras	12

223

"SYRIA."

W. Jackson, bowled Read	2
C. Filler, bowled Read	6
W. F. Budgen, not out	28
S. R. Pearson, bowled Read	0
W. Hamilton, st. Martyr b. Foster	0
L. Evans, bowled Foster	0
G. J. Jenkins, bowled Read	2
G. K. Greig, bowled Read	0
W. J. Davis, bowled Foster	1
J. C. Meredith, l.b.w., b. Bousfield	12
R. Balston, bowled Bousfield	0
Extras	3

54

"SYRIA" (2ND INNINGS.)

W. F. Bludgon, bowled Bousfield	0
L. Evans, bowled Bousfield	5
J. C. Meredith, bowled Bousfield	2
C. Fitter, bowled Hayward	2
S. R. Pearson, c. Foster, b. Bousfield	4
J. G. Jenkins, run out	1
W. Hamilton, bowled Hayward	6
G. Greig, bowled Bousfield	0
M. Jackson, not out	2
W. J. Davis, run out	2
R. Ralston, c. Deveson, b. Hayward	0
Extras	0

24

VISCOUNT ENOMOTO.

AN INTERESTING CAREER.

Viscount Enomoto is reported to be seriously ill as the natural consequence of his advanced age.

By the order of the Tokugawa Shogunate, he proceeded to the Netherlands and received his education there at a naval college. In 1866, he returned home on board the corvette Kanyō Maru built at Amsterdam to the order of the Feudal Government. In the civil war of the Restoration, he commanded the naval forces of the Tokugawa and fought against the Imperialists at Hakodate for several months. On surrendering, he suffered confinement in a prison in Tokyo. He was, however, released one or two years later, and immediately received an appointment as special envoy to St. Petersburg in order to conclude the treaty respecting the exchange of Saghalien for the Kuriles. In 1882, he was gazetted Minister to Peking. Since then, and up to the present time, he has occupied several high positions in the Ministry. He is now 74 years old.

A SPORTING OFFER.

The Editor of the Rudder has offered to present a cup for a long distance yacht race in local waters. The Rudder is the leading yachting paper of the world, and has done invaluable work in fostering the true spirit of sport in yachting, not only in the States, but all over the world. During the past few years the Rudder has been instrumental in promoting long distance yacht races in various quarters of the globe, and there is little doubt that these races for Rudder Cups are more beneficial to the real sport of yacht racing, than the races for the American Cup itself.

Leaving minor details to be settled by the Club managing the race, the only stipulations laid down by the donor of the Cup are that the race shall be open to all yachts whose owners will enter, and that the distance shall be not less than 100 miles.

Further details will be published later on, when the course has been decided on. For a first attempt, a race round Hatsushima, just off Ajiro on the Idzu coast, will probably be most suitable.

FIRES.

Early on the morning of Aug. 8th fire broke out in the district of Niiseki, Akita prefecture, destroying 106 houses. About the same time, an outbreak of fire occurred in Terato-machi, Utsunomiya, ten houses being burned down. The cause in the last case was sparks from the locomotive of a train.

Fire occurred in Tomikawa-cho, Fukagawa, Tokyo, at 5.10 p.m. on Aug. 10th, destroying four houses. Negligence is reported to have been the cause.

About midnight on Aug. 10th, fire broke out in the district of West Kubiki, Niigata prefecture, fifty-four buildings being destroyed including three warehouses and a school. One person was killed.

About the same time, another outbreak of fire occurred in North Murakami, Yamagata prefecture burning down twenty-one houses.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

A new case of cholera was reported on August 8th at Moji.

A gas explosion has occurred at the Miike coal mine, six workmen being injured.

Mr. N. Someya, formerly Resident in Korea, has been appointed first Consul at Batavia.

The British torpedo destroyer Whiting, driven ashore in the Hongkong typhoon, has been floated and docked.

On Aug. 10th, a destructive storm was experienced in Oita prefecture. In the district of Hayami, many houses were damaged. One person was drowned; three were crushed to death by the collapsing of a house; eleven are missing; and 23 bridges have been washed away.

It is said that Prince Henry of the Netherlands intends to pay a visit to the Dutch East Indies in the course of this year.

According to a Tokyo paper, Dr. Mano of the Department of Education, will be appointed President of the Kyoto University.

There has been a decrease in trade in British North Borneo during the past year to the value of $592,906, or a little over 7½ per cent.

A case of cholera appeared on a British steamer which arrived at Moji on Aug. 9th from Shanghai. The patient was an Indian among the crew.

Mr. Newenham A. E. Graydon, F. R. G. S., the Special Commissioner of the Oxford University Press, has again arrived in Japan on a short visit.

A telegram from Otaru reports that the Hiro-umi Steamship Company's steamer Myō Maru has gone ashore at Senhoshi, in the district of Rijiri. She is expected to be soon refloated.

Notice is given by the Department of Communications that the siren at Yerimo-zaki Lighthouse, Province of Hidaka, is not sounded at present.

Aug. 7th being the 18th anniversary of the birth of Prince Fumi, a daughter of the Emperor, now at Miyanosita, the usual celebration was held at the villa.

Barons M. Inouye and H. Okubo have been promoted from lieutenant-generals to the rank of general; and Vice-Admiral Baron S. Hidaka has been promoted to the rank of admiral.

A Moji telegram reports that on Aug. 8th a British steamer collided with a German steamer in the Strait owing to the storm. Both sustained damage which was estimated at yen 2,500 each.

Hydrophobia seems to be prevalent in Tokyo. On Aug. 9th, two dogs attacked three men in the Shiba Urban Division. The dogs were at once taken to the Metropolitan Police Office for examination.

Referring to the serious riots in Bombay, a telegram to Hongkong states that the Volunteers were turned out. They fired and killed five of the mob. All the military were under arms and in readiness for action.

A man armed with a sword broke into the house of a merchant living in Takashiro-cho Kyobashi, near Shinbashi, early on the morning of Aug. 10th, but escaped on finding he was detected by one of the occupants.

According to a telegram from Baron Takahira, Japanese Ambassador in Washington, Mr. Loomis, the Chairman of the American Committee to the proposed Japanese Grand Exhibition, will arrive in Tokyo about Sept. 20th.

A thunder-storm was experienced in the district of North Koma, Yamanashi prefecture. As a result of the inundations which followed some bridges were washed away and several houses damaged. Landslides occurred at several places.

Early on the morning of July 31st, an armed man broke into the house of a French Missionary living at Fukuyama-cho, Hiroshima, but while menacing two servants, was arrested by two policemen who happened to be passing the street.

A telegram to the China Mail from its Singapore correspondent states:—The rumour which is being circulated in regard to the capture of Dr. Sun Yat-sen, the rebel leader, is without foundation. Sun Yat-sen is at present comfortably living at Singapore.

A Peking dispatch states that H. E. Cleng Wen-ping, Admiral of the Yangtze, has been impeached by Censors on various serious counts and that in response to the recommendation of the Ministry an Imperial Rescript has been issued commanding Viceroy Ché Kuei-lung of the Hukuang provinces to investigate the charges. We may state that the Admiral of the Yangtze is Commander-in-Chief of the Naval forces of the five provinces Kiangsu, Anhui, Kiangsi, Hunan and Hupeh.

An outbreak of fire occurred on the night of Aug. 6th on the steamer Choko Maru at Otaru. The flames were put out at 3 o'clock the following morning. The crew and passengers escaped injury, but a portion of the cargo was damaged. The fire is reported to have originated in the engine room.

It seems from official correspondence published in Hongkong papers "that the United States Government did not accept the invitation of the Hongkong Government to the American Fleet to visit Hongkong; and it would appear that a mistake was made in the cablegram from London to this Government on the subject."

The Postmaster-General's instruction that in future "the time and attention of his staff is not to be spent over correspondence intentionally addressed in a puzzling manner" is a welcome reform that has been long delayed. The only wonder is that this protection of hard-worked public servants against funny people was not established long ago.

The sailing vessel Horai Maru went ashore about 4 p.m. on Aug. 8th at Chiyogasaki between Uraga and Kumihama and was subsequently wrecked. It appears that she left Bonin island on June 27th with a cargo of stuffed birds, etc., valued at yen 13,000 in all. About 3 nautical miles off Oshima, at 3 p.m. on Aug. 7th, she encountered a gale. The crew were saved.

The Seattle Post Intelligencer states that the Boston S.S. Co.'s big liner Shawmut is to be withdrawn from the Oriental run and will be replaced by the steamship Inveric. The United States Government has not yet announced, the paper adds, whether the Shawmut and Tremont will be purchased for use in connection with the Panama canal.

A correspondent writing to a Hankow paper from Changsha recounts an exciting episode. He says that the Commissioner of Customs was out walking with his favourite sporting dog, when the animal suddenly "pointed," and up rose a leopard which fortunately did not appear ferocious, and made off. A battue was organised by the residents, but their quarry had disappeared.

On July 31 the British Municipal Council at Hankow served an injunction on the Tung Che Ice Co., prohibiting them from manufacturing or selling ice until the health officer was satisfied that no danger need be apprehended from its use. The Hankow Daily News states that two deaths were found to be "distinctly traceable to their ice" and comments strongly upon the attitude of the Ice Co. in not closing down voluntarily when this was proved to be the case.

A Japanese subject was charged with stealing from a dressing room at the Walthamstow Palace Theatre a lady's half hoop diamond ring, valued at £30, the property of Daisy Dormer, a music-hall artist. The Bench said the case was a difficult one, for they felt they were not dealing with a thief. Under the circumstances, and on the promise of the brother of the prisoner to redeem and return the ring, she would be bound over on her brother's surety to come up for judgment if called on.

H. E. Tang Shao-yi, Special Chinese Commissioner to the American Government, was received in audience by the Empress-Dowager on July 30th, and was to leave for the United States in the course of a few days. The grant of the brevet rank of President of a Ministry recently accorded to H. E. Tang by Imperial Edict is held to indicate his probable promotion to be President of the Waiwupu on his return next spring from Washington. In these circumstances it is expected that H. E. Yuan Shih-kai will become Comptroller-General of the Ministry of War in the place of Prince Ching. It is reported that while his Excellency was received in farewell audience by the Throne the Empress Dowager commanded him to study the conditions of affairs prevailing in Europe, after carrying out his special mission to the United States; and that the sum of ¥1,400,000 for his expenses has been provided for by the Waiwupu.

Mr. S. Araki, a Public Procura'or of the Numadzu Local Court, who was recently reported to have disappeared, was arrested on Aug. 10th in Tokyo. Tokyo contemporaries say that he accepted a bribe from a gambler while attached to the Kisaradzu Local Court in Chiba Prefecture.

Notice is given by the Department of Communications that Hommoku Lightship, at the entrance to Yokohama Harbour, will be replaced by the following lighted buoy about the middle of September this year:—Construction and painting:—iron can buoy, painted black, surrounded by a lattice work supporting the lantern. Height of light above the water:—about 15 feet. Character of light:—Pintch gas occulting white light. Further notice will be given when the replacing has been effected.

According to a telegram received in Yokohama on Aug. 6th, money interest has gone up in Lyons by  $\frac{1}{2}$  making  $1\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. In New York, the interest rate also went up by  $\frac{1}{4}$  making a quotation of  $4\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. A change was also noted in London, the discount for 3 months' sight going down by  $\frac{1}{2}$ , making a grade of  $1\frac{3}{4}$  per cent., while that for 4 months' sight advanced to  $1\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. Gold bullion went up to 77s. 10 $\frac{3}{4}$ d. The  $4\frac{1}{2}$  per cent Chinese bonds rose gradually, making a price of £100 $\frac{3}{4}$  which has not been noted for a long time past.

Affairs in Acheen have indeed taken a new course, says a Straits contemporary. Formerly the official reports of successful encounters with the rebels spoke only of the enemy's loss in killed. No mention was made of wounded or prisoners, owing, doubtless, to the fact that no quarter was given, and that prisoners were simply shot down. An official telegram from Acheen dated July 13, shows that a change has set in, by noting an engagement, in which only two of the enemy fell, but 15 of them were taken prisoners. The point is that Achinese who lay down their arms are no longer killed straight off.

According to the Leipzig Neueste Nachrichten, the heavy increase in working expenses has compelled the Hamburg American Line and the North German Lloyd Company to take steps to secure financial assistance from the German Government in the form of loans of Imperial funds at a low rate of interest. The Leipzig journal understands that a well-known Berlin banker has already approached the Emperor William on this subject, and that his Majesty has expressed himself in favour of the proposal. According to this account, the Government loans would be devoted to new construction.

During a baseball game between the Shanghai Club and the U.S.S. Concord a very unfortunate accident took place. Mr. Laurence Bittner, who was on third base, while endeavouring to get home threw himself down to touch the plate. He just failed and in falling fractured his elbow and also injured his thumb. Fortunately Dr. Tucker, Assistant at St. Luke's Hospital, was among the spectators and rendered first aid. Mr. Bittner was then conveyed away in a motor car. While the Doctor was arranging a temporary splint Bittner asked—"I suppose I was out?"—and says a contemporary, seemed disappointed on receiving an affirmative reply.

The Japanese gunboat Fushimi has gone ashore on Tuntien Lake in Chehkiang. Bluejackets are busily engaged in trying to float her. On Aug. 6th, the Japan-China Steamship Company's steamer Shonan Maru attempted unsuccessfully to do so. According to a naval officer, says the Asahi, the water in the lake is subject sometimes to sudden reduction. The present accident seems to be attributable to an unexpected fall in the water level in consequence of the drought. It is hoped that the ship may be floated after the next heavy rain. Otherwise, she must be left in her present position until the spring when the water will rise after the melting of the snow. No damage has been sustained by the ship.

Magnetic iron sand abounds on the South Coast of Java close to the port of Tjilatjap, either mixed with sea sand or in separate deposits. It is found in enormous quantities which are practically inexhaustible, owing to fresh supplies being continually washed ashore by the sea. To work the deposits in the province of Banyumas, a syndicate has just been granted concessions to run for 40 and 75 years over an area of 4,695 acres. Another syndicate has applied for concessions covering 4,517 acres. Samples of the sand sent to Europe have been favourably reported upon. It is intended, says an exchange, to utilise a new invention for winning iron and steel from this sand, which was patented in England in 1907. The two syndicates are capitalised at £1,500,000.

It is understood, says the N. C. Daily News, that an agreement has been arrived at between Viceroy Yang, of Chihli, and Tartar General Chang, of Ili, whereby a large cotton-spinning and weaving company is to be started in Tientsin jointly by the provincial governments of Chihli and Ili. The sum of ¥1,300,000 has been raised for the former purpose and an equal sum will be provided for the latter. The first lot of machinery, which has been ordered from Russia, is expected to arrive shortly. We may state en passant that Viceroy Yang, with his well-known interest in industrial matters, proposes to send a deputation under Taotai Shih Shao chi (better known as Alfred Sze), who is a competent official and can write and speak English fluently to visit the industrial centres in Europe.

The conditions of another "public" tender, this time for the Peking-Hankow Railway, are published by the N. C. Daily News. Sleepers to the number of 300,000 are required by this company, and the first consignment of 200,000 is to be delivered in October. The decision to call for tenders was taken in Peking on July 23, and the advertisement appeared first on July 31. Tenders have to reach Peking by August 13, and must be accompanied by samples. In neither of these cases can it be held that sufficient time has been given to agents and others in order to allow "a fair field and no favour" in regard to the tenders. It is to be hoped, adds our contemporary, that in each case want of thought has led to the mistake, and not any deliberate attempt to debar those who are "not in the know" from tendering. The policy of the open door is of the widest application, and should be rigidly adhered to by all.

Local Japanese journals, says the Nagasaki Press, report that the Nagasaki office of the Osaka Shosen Kaisha has received a reply to a communication addressed to the head office concerning the omission of Nagasaki from the ports of call of the Kaisha's proposed American service. The reply states that one steamer is expected to consume three thousand tons of coal during the round voyage and arrangements have been made for the vessels to coal at Moji owing to the fact that the fuel can be obtained there at prices varying from yen 1 to yen 1.20 per ton lower than at Nagasaki. The selection of the latter port would therefore cost the Kaisha from yen 3,000 to yen 3,500 each trip. If arrangements can be made for the fuel to be obtained here at prices nearer those which obtain at Moji, the vessels may be permitted to come here. It is admitted by the head office that passengers and cargo for, and from, Shanghai and Hongkong may be obtained here and this is a point in favour of the ultimate selection of Nagasaki.

The London and China Express of July 10 states that the question as to responsibility for the loss of a British ship after its capture by the Japanese was decided by the House of Lords on 3rd inst. The case came up on appeal by the plaintiff from an order of the Court of Appeal affirming a judgment of Mr. Justice Channell in favour of the defendant. The plaintiff claimed under a marine insurance policy in respect of the steamship Romulus. The Romulus was captured by a Japanese cruiser at the time of the Russo-Japanese war, and while being taken to a Japanese port she was lost at sea. She had become a total loss before she was condemned, as she ultimately was by the Japanese Prize Court. In these circumstances the action was brought by the plaintiff to recover from the underwriters. The Lord Chancellor delivered judgment dismissing the appeal. He said that the Courts below had held that the loss was occasioned by capture and that what happened subsequently was immaterial. He agreed with that view.

CONVENTION CONSULAIRE ENTRE LE JAPON ET LES PAYS-BAS EN CE QUI CONCERNE LES POSSESSIONS EN COLONIES NEERLANDAISES.

Sa Majesté l'Empereur du Japon et Sa Majesté la Reine des Pays-Bas, jugeant qu'il est désirable qu'indépendamment du Traité de Commerce et de Navigation entre le Japon et les Pays-Bas, une convention spéciale détermine les droits, devoirs, pouvoirs, privilèges, exemptions et immunités des fonctionnaires consulaires japonais dans les possessions ou colonies des Pays-Bas, ont nommé, afin de conclure la dite convention, pour Leurs Plénipotentiaires, savoir:

Sa Majesté l'Empereur du Japon: Sato Ainaro, Jushii, décoré de la 2<sup>e</sup> classe de l'Ordre Impérial du Soleil Levant, etc., etc., Son Envoyé Extraordinaire et Ministre Plénipotentiaire à La Haye.

et Sa Majesté la Reine des Pays-Bas: le Jonkheer R. de Marees van Swinderen, Chevalier de Son ordre du Lion Néerlandais, etc., etc., Son Ministre des Affaires Étrangères; lesquels, après s'être communiqué réciproquement leurs pleins pouvoirs, trouvés en bonne et due forme, sont convenus des articles suivants:

ARTICLE PREMIER.

Les Consuls Généraux, Consuls, Vice-Consuls et Agents Consulaires du Japon seront admis dans tous les ports des possessions d'outre-mer ou colonies des Pays-Bas ou résident ou résideront des agents de la même catégorie de toute autre nation étrangère.

ARTICLE II.

Les Consuls Généraux, Consuls, Vice-Consuls et Agents Consulaires du Japon seront considérés comme des agents commerciaux, protecteurs du commerce de leurs nationaux dans leur arrondissement consulaire.

Ils résideront dans les ports des possessions d'outre-mer ou colonies des Pays-Bas indiqués dans leur commission et seront soumis aux lois tant civiles que pénales de ces possessions ou colonies, sauf les exceptions que la présente convention établit en leur faveur.

ARTICLE III.

Avant d'être admis à l'exercice de leurs fonctions et de jouir de tous les pouvoirs, privilèges, exemptions et immunités qui y sont attachés, les Consuls Généraux, Consuls, Vice-Consuls et Agents Consulaires doivent présenter au Gouvernement de Sa Majesté la Reine des Pays-Bas une commission, indiquant leur arrondissement consulaire et le lieu de leur résidence.

Le Gouvernement de la possession ou de la colonie leur délivrera, sans aucun frais, l'exequatur, dûment contresigné, nécessaire à l'exercice de leurs fonctions; et sur l'exhibition de cette pièce, les dits fonctionnaires consulaires de tout grade auront droit à la protection du Gouvernement et à l'assistance des autorités locales pour assurer le libre exercice de leurs fonctions.

Le Gouvernement de la Reine se réserve la faculté de retirer l'exequatur ou de le faire retirer par le Gouverneur de la possession ou de la colonie, en indiquant les motifs de cette mesure.

En cas de décès, d'empêchement ou d'absence des Consuls Généraux, Consuls, Vice-Consuls et Agents Consulaires, leurs Elèves-Consuls, Chanceliers ou Secrétaires, après que leur caractère officiel aura été notifié à et approuvé par l'autorité compétente, seront, de plein droit admis à gérer, par interim, les affaires des postes respectifs; ils jouiront, pendant toute la durée de cette gestion temporaire, pour autant que leur position comme étrangers non-commerçants y donne lieu, conformément à l'article XV, de tous les droits, pouvoirs, privilèges, exemptions et immunités accordés aux titulaires.

ARTICLE IV.

Les Consuls Généraux, Consuls, Vice-Consuls et Agents Consulaires sont autorisés à placer au-dessus de la porte extérieure de leur demeure un écusson aux armes de leur Gouvernement, avec la légende:

Consulat Général, Consulat, Vice-Consulat ou Agence Consulaire du Japon.

Il est bien entendu que ces marques extérieures ne pourront jamais être considérées comme donnant droit d'asile, ni comme pouvant soustraire la maison et ceux qui l'habitent, aux poursuites de la justice territoriale.

ARTICLE V.

Il est entendu que les archives et documents relatifs aux affaires consulaires seront protégés contre toute recherche, et qu'aucune autorité ni aucun magistrat ne pourra les visiter, les saisir ou s'en emparer d'une manière quelconque et sous aucun prétexte.

ARTICLE VI.

Les Consuls Généraux, Consuls, Vice-Consuls, et Agents Consulaires ne sont investis d'aucun caractère diplomatique.

Aucune demande ne pourra être adressée au Gouvernement Néerlandais que par l'entremise de l'agent diplomatique accrédité à La Haye.

En cas d'urgence, les Consuls Généraux, Consuls, Vice-Consuls ou Agents Consulaires pourront recourir directement au Gouverneur de la possession ou de la colonie prouvant l'urgence et exposant lesquels la demande ne pourrait être adressée aux autorités subalternes, ou en démontrant que les demandes antérieurement adressées, à ces autorités, seraient restées sans effet.

ARTICLE VII.

Les Consuls Généraux et Consuls pourront nommer des Agents Consulaires dans les ports mentionnés à l'article I.

Ces Agents Consulaires pourront être indistinctement des sujets Japonais, des Néerlandais, ou des nationaux de tout autre pays, résidant ou pouvant, aux termes des lois locales, être admis à fixer leur résidence dans le port où l'Agent Consulaire sera nommé. Ces Agents Consulaires, dont la nomination sera soumise à l'approbation du Gouverneur de la possession ou colonie, seront munis d'un brevet délivré par le Consul, sous les ordres duquel ils exerceront leurs fonctions.

Le Gouverneur de la possession ou de la colonie peut, en tout cas, retirer aux Agents Consulaires, en communiquant au Consul Général ou Consul les motifs d'une telle mesure, l'approbation dont il vient d'être parlé.

ARTICLE VIII.

Le passeport délivré ou visé par les fonctionnaires consulaires, ne dispense nullement le porteur de l'obligation de se munir de tous les actes, requis par les lois ou règlements locaux pour voyager ou s'établir dans les possessions ou colonies, et ne porte aucun préjudice à l'exercice du droit que possède le Gouvernement de la possession ou colonie, d'y interdire le séjour ou d'en ordonner l'éloignement de tout individu muni d'un passeport.

ARTICLE IX.

Toutes les opérations relatives au sauvetage des navires japonais naufragés sur les côtes d'une des possessions ou colonies des Pays-Bas seront dirigées par les Consuls Généraux, Consuls, Vice-Consuls ou Agents Consulaires du Japon.

L'intervention des autorités locales aura seulement lieu pour maintenir l'ordre, garantir les intérêts des sauveteurs, s'ils sont étrangers aux équipages naufragés, et assurer l'exécution des dispositions à observer pour l'entrée et la sortie des marchandises sauvées.

En l'absence et jusqu'à l'arrivée des Consuls, Généraux, Consuls ou Agents Consulaires, les autorités locales devront d'ailleurs prendre toutes les mesures nécessaires pour la protection des individus et la conservation des effets naufragés.

Il est de plus convenu que les marchandises sauvées ne seront tenues à aucun droit de douane à moins qu'elles ne soient admises à la consommation intérieure.

ARTICLE X.

Les Consuls Généraux, Consuls, Vice-Consuls et Agents Consulaires peuvent requérir l'assistance des autorités locales pour l'arrestation, la détention et l'emprisonnement des déserteurs des navires Japonais, marchands ou de guerre. A cet effet, ils adresseront par écrit aux autorités compétentes la demande de ces déserteurs, et si la preuve est rapportée par les registres du navire, les rôles d'équipage ou par tout autre document authentique, que les hommes réclamés faisaient partie de l'équipage, la remise des déserteurs ne pourra leur être refusée, à moins que l'individu dont il s'agit ne soit sujet Néerlandais.

Les autorités locales seront tenues d'exercer toute leur autorité pour faire arrêter les déserteurs. Après leur arrestation, ceux-ci seront mis à la disposition des dits fonctionnaires consulaires et pourront être détenus à la réquisition et aux frais de ceux qui les réclament, pour être ensuite renvoyés à bord des navires auxquels ils appartiennent, ou d'un autre navire de la même nation. Néanmoins, si ces déserteurs ne sont pas renvoyés dans les quatre mois à partir du jour de leur arrestation, ils seront mis en liberté et ne pourront plus être arrêtés du même chef. Il est entendu, toutefois, que la remise du déserteur qui aurait commis quelque crime, délit ou contravention sera renvoyée jusqu'à ce que le tribunal des possessions, des colonies ou de la mère-patrie, saisi de l'affaire, ait rendu la sentence et que celle-ci ait été exécutée.

ARTICLE XI.

A moins de stipulations contraires entre les armateurs, chargeurs et assureurs, toutes avaries essuyées à la mer par les navires japonais, soit qu'ils abordent volontairement au port, soit qu'ils se trouvent en relâche forcée, seront réglées par les Consuls Généraux, Consuls, Vice-Consul ou Agents Consulaires du Japon.

Si, cependant, le fonctionnaire consulaire a quelque intérêt dans le navire ou la cargaison, ou s'il en est agent ou si des sujets des Pays-Bas ou des sujets ou citoyens d'une tierce nation se trouvaient intéressés dans les dites avaries et que les parties ne pussent s'entendre à l'amiable, le recours à l'autorité locale compétente serait de droit.

ARTICLE XII.

Lorsqu'un sujet japonais vient à décéder dans les possessions ou dans les colonies des Pays-Bas sans héritiers ni exécuteurs testamentaires connus, les autorités néerlandaises chargées d'après les lois ou ordonnances de la possession ou de la colonie de l'administration de la succession, en donneront immédiatement avis aux fonctionnaires consulaires du Japon afin de transmettre aux intéressés les informations nécessaires, ceux-ci, de leur côté, devront donner les mêmes informations aux dites autorités lorsqu'ils seront informés des premiers.

L'autorité locale compétente complètera le dit avis par la remise d'une expédition, en due forme et sans frais, de l'acte du décès.

ARTICLE XIII.

Les Consuls Généraux, Consuls, Vice-Consuls et Agents Consulaires du Japon auront le droit de recevoir, dans leurs chancelleries, dans leur demeure privée, dans celle des sujets intéressés de leur pays ou à bord des bâtiments de leurs pays, les déclarations des capitaines et équipages des navires de leur pays, des passagers qui se trouvent à bord, et de tout autre sujet de leur pays.

ARTICLE XIV.

Les Consuls Généraux, Consuls, Vice-Consuls ou Agents Consulaires du Japon seront exclusivement chargés de l'ordre intérieur à bord des navires de commerce de leur nation.

Ils connaîtront seuls de tous les différends, qui se seront élevés en mer ou qui s'élèveront dans les ports entre les officiers et les hommes de l'équipage, y compris ceux qui concernent le règlement des salaires et l'exécution des engagements réciproquement consentis.

Les tribunaux ou les autres autorités de la possession ou de la colonie ne pourront à aucun titre s'immiscer dans ces différends à moins que ceux-ci ne soient de nature à troubler la tranquillité et l'ordre public à terre ou dans le port, que des personnes étrangères à l'équipage ne s'y trouvent mêlées, ou que les Consuls Généraux, Consuls, Vice-Consuls et Agents Consulaires ne requièrent l'assistance des dites autorités pour mettre leurs décisions à exécution ou en maintenir l'autorité.

ARTICLE XV.

Pour autant qu'au Japon les mêmes faveurs seront accordées réciproquement aux Consuls Généraux, Consuls, Vice-Consuls et Agents Consulaires des Pays-Bas, les Consuls, Généraux, Vice-Consuls et Agents Consulaires du Japon, qui n'exercent pas le commerce ni aucune fonction ou profession autre que leurs fonctions consulaires, seront exempts de tous les services militaires, réquisitions ou logements militaires, impositions pécuniaires au lieu du service militaire ou de l'impôt personnel, ainsi que de toutes les impositions générales ou municipales ayant un caractère personnel, à moins qu'ils ne soient sujets néerlandais. Cette exemption ne peut jamais s'étendre aux droits de douane ou autres impôts indirects ou réels.

Les Consuls Généraux, Consuls, Vice-Consuls et Agents Consulaires qui ne sont pas sujets néerlandais, sont, même s'ils ne tombent sous les stipulations du premier alinéa de cet article, exempts de tous les services militaires, de réquisitions militaires et de toutes impositions pécuniaires, au lieu du service militaire, en tant qu'au Japon le même privilège aux Consuls Généraux, Consuls, Vice-Consuls et Agents Consulaires des Pays-Bas.

Les Consuls Généraux, Consuls, Vice-Consuls et Agents Consulaires, sujets des Pays-Bas, mais auxquels il a été accordé d'exercer des fonctions consulaires, conférées par le Gouvernement Japonais, sont obligés d'acquiescer toutes les impositions ou contributions de quelque nature qu'elles puissent être.

ARTICLE XVI.

Les Consuls Généraux, Consuls, Vice-Consuls et Agents Consulaires, de même que les Elèves-Consuls, les Chanceliers et les Secétaires du Japon jouiront de tous les autres pouvoirs, privilèges, exemptions et immunités dans les possessions ou colonies des Pays-

Bas, qui sont ou seront accordés par la suite aux agents du même rang de la nation la plus favorisée.

ARTICLE XVII.

La présente Convention est conclue pour un terme de cinq ans, et sera mise en vigueur à partir du dixième jour après l'échange des ratifications, lequel aura lieu à Tokio dans le délai de quatre mois après la signature de la Convention ou plus tôt si faite se peut.

A moins qu'une des deux Hautes Parties contractantes n'ait notifié à l'autre, au moins un an avant ce terme, son intention d'en faire cesser les effets, la Convention restera en vigueur jusqu'à l'expiration d'une année après la dénonciation faite par l'une des Hautes Parties contractantes.

En foi de quoi, les Plénipotentiaires respectifs ont signé la présente Convention et y ont apposé le sceau de leurs armes.

Fait à La Haye, le vingt septième jour du quatrième mois de la quarante et unième année de Meiji, correspondant au vingt septième jour du mois d'avril 1908.

(L. S.) AIMARO SATO.

(L. S.) R. DE MAKEES VAN SWINDEREN.

THE STRANDING OF THE PORT MARIA.

The following is the finding of a naval court held at Kobe on Aug. 8th to deal with the stranding of the steamer Port Maria near Tsuruga—the members of the court being Mr. H. A. C. Bonar, British Consul-General (President), Captain G. C. Cundy, R. N. R., of the Flintshire, Captain G. W. McArthur, of the Eastern, and Captain Harris, of the Cyclops :—

At noon on the 16th July observations were taken and, as the ship was found to be making a good course, the latter was left unaltered. The weather at the time was clear and the wind N.E. The Master was called by the Third Officer at midnight, when the weather was still clear and fine, the sea smooth and the moon shining. The Master again retired, giving instructions to be called as soon as Tateishi Light was visible. At 3 a.m. when the Master returned to the bridge, the light was not yet visible, but the weather conditions appeared the same, except for what was apparently a fog bank ahead. The atmospheric conditions were such that the Captain thought he could see 5 miles, but not seeing Tateishi Light, he slowed down the engines at 3.13 a.m. One minute later he observed broken water ahead and immediately ordered the helm hard a-port. He then put the engines full ahead with a view to the rudder having greater effect, and almost simultaneously the ship struck on a submerged rock, scraping her starboard bilge without losing way, and causing considerable damage from No. 2 hold to abaft the engine-room. Finding the ship was not making much water, the Master then made for Tsuruga with all possible speed. Arrived at that port there was a list of 17° to port and all port fires were washed out by water in the stokehold.

The passengers and mails were safely landed. Thereupon, the Chief Engineer reporting that he could not keep the water under, the ship was beached with her port side to the land. But for the extraordinary and timely exertions of two German war vessels lying in the harbour, the Master states that the ship might then have become a total loss. Owing to the valuable assistance from the German vessels aforementioned she was able to be refitted by the following evening and brought round to Kobe under her own steam. The Court, having regard to the circumstances above stated, finds as follows :—

That more caution should have been used in approaching the land as the weather was hazy, the Tateishi light not having been sighted at the time expected.

That it would have been more prudent if the Master had steered a more southerly course from say 1 a.m., which would have enabled him to use the bank for soundings and if a p.m. observation had been taken as a check to the ship's position that day.

That the accident was due, under deceptive atmospheric conditions prevailing, to the over-confidence of the Master in steering so fine a course, especially as the soundings were of no use until practically too late.

The Court does not propose to deal with any certificate.

In all other respects the Court finds that the conduct of the Master, officers and crew was seamanlike and proper.

That the Port Maria was properly supplied with the usual charts.

The Court orders that the sum of £10 8s. 10d., being the costs of the proceedings, be paid by John Williams, Master of the Port Maria.

THE HONGKONG TYPHOON.

We avail ourselves of the following summary made by the Kobe Herald from a Hongkong paper:—

Peril and terror cloaked by darkness are the more terrible to those involved, for death comes with more mystery and swiftness, and although the typhoon of Mynday night and Tuesday morning was awaited with steam up, small craft sheltered, and houses shuttered and barred, the daylight was never more welcome. While the typhoon of 1906 was immeasurably more terrible because it struck without warning, the extensive damage of this July storm indicates that it may be classed in power as practically as powerful as its great fore-runner. Many scores, and possibly hundreds of Chinese lives have been lost, probably because the owners of junks disregarded the warning signal and tarried till too late, and it is possible that some of the launches sunk were caught while endeavouring to save junks. The list of vessels sunk or stranded is a long one, but fortunately the great majority have been refloated or can be fairly easily saved from destruction. The saddest feature of all is the disappearance of the Canton steamer Ying King with its hundreds of lives. When the news that the steamer was missing was known in Hongkong there was a deep and genuine regret, and unfortunately the latest news does not make the disaster less terrible than supposed. Heroism shone as brightly amidst darkness in July 1908, as it shone in daylight in September 1906, and we may particularly praise the gallantry of those Astraea officers and bluejackets, who went into the typhoon in an open boat and never slackened effort till they had completed a rescue which should never be forgotten in Hongkong. The heavy rain which preceded the typhoon made the work of the storm on land more destructive than would otherwise have been the case, and this may account for the collapse at the Pacific Mail offices and at Kingsclere, though it is only possible to surmise, as the causes of both are not known. The damage on land was greater in many cases than in 1906. "Green-Red-Green" on the Timar, and a close stillness with a suggestion of sulphur, were the only signs at 8.30 p.m. on Monday that a typhoon was approaching. The darkness hid, but revealed also, for the carpet of bury lights was missing and the lights showing were nearly all those of steamers. Occasionally the fast moving gleam of a launch showed between the big vessels. At eleven o'clock rain was falling, gusty and increasing, and the wind was rising also in gusts. As the minutes went, wind and rain became more violent. At 11.15 p.m. or 11.20 p.m., three explosive rockets soared, one after the other, and with the explosions, the lights on the Tamar changed to the Red-Green-Red, signifying danger within striking distance. . . . The typhoon came within minutes, growing in squalls which shook and were accompanied by stinging, driving rain, lashing, pitiless continuous rain. Thus for a few moments the harbour would be grey mist, then the red lights faintly emerged and presently the white flash from the Astraea could be seen in its movements. The vivid lightning often disclosed the scene. By its aid the harbour could be seen, angry and boiling, a white tossing surface. The wind was driving almost straight down the harbour but at times the gusts drove the waves on to the Praya in a succession of crashes, the spray rearing high in air and springing forward in blinding clouds. With it all the wind shook and whistled and threatened to beat down all in its path. The crash of the Pacific Mail roof and floors was only a degree more startling than the yeast of sound. Over all was the night and the unknown thereof!

THE LOSS OF THE "YING-KING."

The Canton River steamer Ying King, Captain Page, left Canton on Monday night 9 o'clock. Other steamers report having seen her up to a certain time but then they lost sight of the steamer and shortly afterwards saw wreckage on the beach. She had 30 passengers on board as well as Captain Page, Chief Officer Ferguson, and Chief Engineer Fotheringham. The Ying King was one of three vessels coming from Canton, and being the fastest boat reached the Brothers first. The Falckan arrived next, and the Kwongsai (Capt. Crowe) last. The latter was to be anchored at Tiger Island but Capt. Crowe deemed it best that he should keep company with the others. His glass was then 29.60, and very erratic. A heavy squall came on with hurricane force as he anchored, the glass being 29.70. After the squall had passed he could see nothing of the Ying King. All doubt as to the fate of the vessel was settled when Mr. Ferguson, chief mate of the Ying King arrived at the office of his ship's company about 9.30 last night, along with a party of 40 or more Chinese, passengers and crew, having been brought in by the second of the two launches sent out to the scene of the wreck. Mr. Ferguson reports the vessel a total wreck but can say nothing as to the fate of either

Capt. Page or Mr. Fotheringham, the chief engineer. The Tung Wah Hospital launch proceeds to the scene of the disaster in the morning, when it is to be hoped that some more survivors may be found. The Ying King, which was a boat of 459 tons nett register, is a total loss. No trace of her is to be seen, except for her boats and deck wreckage along the shore. Captain Page is a married man with one child. His wife and child sailed for England less than three months ago.

A section of the building occupied by the Pacific Mail Steamship Co. collapsed during the storm, and the roof fell right through the inside of the building to the ground floor. Under great difficulties Mr. Halton, the Manager, and his staff carried on their work.

The Persia went ashore near Hungghom Bay, on a mud-bottom, lying easily, and it is expected that she will be got off on this morning's tide. It is surmised that she lost one anchor, and dragged the other. The Mongolia rode through the storm nicely, only losing a gangway. The Asia never moved an inch. Some injury has been done to one of the propellers of the Nunantia, otherwise she is all-right.

The Charles Hardouin, one of the Canton boats, was lying near Bailey's slip but drifted away and went ashore on Kowloon Beach.

The Katherine Park drifted right across the harbour during the storm.

Those aboard the Mongolia saw a junk passing early yesterday morning, with about twenty Chinese on board, screaming and panic-stricken. What became of them is not known.

The commander of the Juteopolis, Capt. Stewart, had gone to his cabin when one of the masts carried away. It fell on the cabin, wrecking it, and Capt. Stewart was knocked down. Fortunately he escaped without further injury.

During the typhoon the P. and O. launch Jeanette ran ashore near Yaumati and sank. It is expected that she will be refloated, as portion of her superstructure is showing above water, but the extent of the damage is not known.

The torpedo-boat destroyer Whiting went ashore near Lyceum Pass, but the officer commanding and all aboard were saved. The Admiralty despatched assistance to her early yesterday morning.

Several Revenue cutters appear to have suffered to the full the effects of the typhoon. The fate of their crews is unknown. The West River is a mass of floating wreckage, mostly junks and sampans.

Early yesterday morning the Praya was a scene of desolation, wreckage, and misery. Almost all the wharves suffered, but the Hongkong and Canton Steamboat Co.'s wharf was the most unfortunate. Two great lighters that had, apparently, broken from their moorings collided with it. One was driven right into the wharf, carrying away the ornamental brick building that marked the entrance to the wharf. Yesterday morning the forward portion of the lighter was resting on top of the wharf—a silent testimony as to the evil powers of the fury of a typhoon. A big lighter was lying near Blake Pier. The roofing of Blake Pier went to the winds very early, and an hour or so later watchers saw the roofing of the Ferry Wharf, and its kiosk, fall before the raging typhoon. Examination yesterday showed that many of the great shoring piles that form the buffer "loop" into which the ferry steamers run had also gone. All along the Praya were masses of floating wreckage—smashed sampans, wrecked junks, great beams and spars, overturned boats, and odd items of the cargo of lost lighters. Amidst this debris the desolate Chinese were endeavouring to save enough of an odd sampan to make a new start in life. What misery is the lot of Hongkong's floating population who eke out their life in these craft! Among other Government damage to Crown buildings was the removal of portion of the verandah at Government House, and the loss of the verandah of the Education Department. The roof of the large central hall of the Queen's College, only recently repaired was torn away. The roofs of the class-rooms on the north west all received damage. The whole building was more or less water-soaked. Luckily the summer vacation is close at hand, and the building may be put into a proper state of repair again, for the resumption of tuition work.

A STEAMSHIP PASSENGER'S NARRATIVE.

The following interview was obtained from a passenger on one of the steamers in the Harbour:— At about 8 o'clock on Monday night a few sharp showers fell, and seemed the precursor of a severe storm. The wind freshened gradually with squalls, the barometer falling. At 11.30 p.m. the barometer had fallen to 28.83. The squalls came with fast increasing force, until the typhoon was upon us. The speed of the wind was terrific, and must have touched ninety miles an hour at times. Our vessel was ranging about 8 points on her cable with each successive squall. There was a danger of the hawse pipes carrying away and of the chain cutting through the steamer's sides. At 2 a.m. the squalls commenced to decrease in force. On board our ship the Captain was anxiously watching developments from the bridge, and the Chief Engineer nursed his engines and watched for every move of the telegraph. Everything loose or detachable was carried along decks by the force of the gale and several members of the crew received injuries to the head and feet through the flying debris. The cable was standing out like a bar of rigid iron whenever the strain came. As an instance of the force of the blow, I may mention that the Captain sent his Chief Officer along the deck to give an order. During his painfully slow progress against the wind, he was three times driven flat against the deck, and when he began the return journey he fairly flew back. The scene at daybreak made me thankful that we had been able to weather the storm. The E. and A. steamer Eastern was lying at her buoy and there was a strange buoy beside her. The steamer Chilli had evidently been in difficulties. We noticed the sailer Juteopolis lying with two of her masts gone by the board and the top gallant mast was hanging over the stern. On the southern part of Stonecutters, the Powhattan and Laisang were ashore, and on the eastern side of the Island the Schuykill had grounded. All around us was floating wreckage, including a box of Oregon pine, apparently. The steamer Asia had a list, and pumping was going on. In the North Fairway the mass of sunken vessels could be seen. None of the Kongmoon steamers could be seen at their wharves, and in fact all the wharves in the harbour were deserted.

A REMARKABLE ESCAPE.

A sensational collapse of portion of the east wing of Kingsclere private hotel, Kennedy Road, occurred at the height of the typhoon. The heavy driving rain and wind seemed to have softened the top portion of the east storey, and the roofs of two of the rooms collapsed with a tremendous crash, which brought the occupants of the hotel into the corridors and downstairs. The gas had failed, but, in spite of the darkness, and the fear that the whole roof might fall, after the first few moments of alarm the utmost courage was shown by all. A roll call was hastily held, and it was found that Mr. Hunt, of Messrs. Shewan, Tomes, was missing and was evidently buried under the mass of brickwork in his room. The men in the hotel hurried to the rescue, and after calling out loudly from the blocked doorway, heard Mr. Hunt's voice faintly. Desperate efforts to clear away the debris failed, and messengers were sent to the German Club and elsewhere for help, while the Fire Brigade were summoned. Eighteen coolies, in charge of an inspector, were speedily at work with pickaxes, etc., and all the men in the hotel took part, Messrs. Bevington and Hagen being specially mentioned by one of the residents from whom the story was obtained. Occasionally Mr. Hunt's voice could be heard, and the grand pluck which he displayed was a lesson and an incentive. After five hours' work a hole was made in the wall of an adjoining bedroom and a small passage cleared in the debris, thus enabling Mr. Hunt to be lifted carefully out and carried downstairs on a mattress. It was evident that both his legs were injured, and he was sent to the Government Civil Hospital in a state of collapse. According to the position in which Mr. Hunt was lying, and from the fragments of his own story, he had a wonderful escape from instant death. He had been standing at the window watching the storm on the Peak, when the ceiling of the next room cracked loudly. As he turned round he felt that his own room was going, and instantly he flung himself under the bed. A second later the roof and ceiling fell. Three legs of the bed snapped, but the fourth, just over his head, held and saved his life.

The Hongkong Daily Press of July 31st said: There was little information to hand yesterday, except from the outlying districts, but the reports that came in indicate that our estimate of a death roll of 1,000 is not likely to be beyond the mark. This includes a larger number of Europeans than was at first thought, the loss of the Ying King accounting for at least four. There seems little doubt now that Captain Page was not among the survivors, and besides Mr. Newman, whose body was brought to Hongkong on Wednesday, two passengers were drowned. One of these is apparently Mr. E. Pariz, who was in charge of the Standard Oil Company's installation at Canton. The work of salvage in the harbour is proceeding.

The police report from Ping Shan states that at 2 a.m. on the 28th a written message was received from Mr. Fotheringham, engineer on the steamer Ying King asking for assistance. Sergt. Baker and a party of police went to Castle Peak farm and found Mr. Fotheringham, one Indian watchman, and 30 Chinese, passengers and crew. These were apparently all the survivors of the Ying King. The steamer capsized near Castle Peak and Captain Page and two European passengers from Canton, names unknown, but supposed to be connected with the Imperial Maritime Customs, and about 120 passengers, and 35 to 40 of the crew were reported as missing. Mr. Fotheringham was supplied with clothing, and Mr. Tso Pui Chik, assistant manager at Castle Peak Farm, ministered to the necessities of the shipwrecked people. The beach is being searched for bodies. The Tung Wa Hospital launch has recovered about 200 bodies.

Our correspondent writes that the City has suffered heavily. The damage done both by the wind and rain is heavy and unprecedented. Over two hundred houses have collapsed, in some cases with loss of life. The telephone, electric lighting and telegraph lines are down in every street and the regular service will take a few days to restore. The Electric Light Company with considerable energy have been able to make temporary repairs, and Shamen, in spite of the heavy damage done, was lighted by electricity at about 9.30 p.m. on Wednesday night.

Another correspondent writes:—"Shortly after the occurrence of the great flood which wrought such immense destruction in Kwangtung, it was reported that the Imperial Astrologer at Peking had predicted that Canton would be visited by a terrible catastrophe during the 7th and 8th moons of this year and that a great many people would perish. The more superstitiously inclined thoroughly believed in the prediction and had copies of it printed and circulated as an 'Express.' Those who read the prediction with a contemptuous smile are now disposed to believe that the Imperial Astrologer is a wise man after all. The natives here say that Canton has not had such a terrible visitation as this for thirty years or more."

The following summary, compiled by the Harbour Master, was published by the China Mail on July 30th:

Men-of-war ashore.....	1
Ocean steamers ashore.....	5
do vessels damaged.....	13
River steamers sunk.....	2
do ashore.....	2
do damaged.....	5
Steam launches sunk.....	7
Steam launches ashore.....	7
do damaged.....	0
European lighters sunk.....	10
do ashore.....	2
do damaged.....	7
Junks, cargo boats, sampans, etc. sunk.....	75
do ashore.....	0
do damaged.....	16
Persons reported missing in harbour.....	21
do outside.....	433

THE NEW LAW COURTS OF KOREA.

On Saturday the 1st inst. the opening of the new Korean Courts of Law was commemorated by a dinner given at the Japanese Club by the principal members of the Judiciary in Seoul, namely, Mr. Nobu Watanabe, Chief Justice of the Court of Cassation, Mr. Sangai Kokubu, Chief Public Prosecutor of the Court of Cassation, Mr. Kazuma Jo, Chief Justice of the Seoul Court of Appeal, Mr. Yuiro Seko, Chief Public Prosecutor of the Seoul Court of Appeal, Mr. Takezo Nakamura, Chief Justice of the Seoul Local Court, and Mr. Ichisuke Nakagawa, Chief Public Prosecutor of the Seoul Local Court. The guests present numbered over a hundred and fifty, including Viscount Sone, Deputy Resident-General, General Viscount Hasegawa, Commander of the Japanese Army in Korea, Mr. Ko, Minister of Justice, Mr. Song, Minister of Home Affairs, Mr. Cho, Minister of Agriculture, Commerce and Industry, Mr. In, Minister of Finance, Mr. Yi, Minister of Education, General Yi, Minister of War, E. Ishizuka, acting Director-General of the Residency-General, Mr. Kuratomi, Vice-Minister of Justice, Mr. Arai, Vice-Minister of Finance, Mr. Oka, Vice-Minister of Home, Mr. Komiya, Vice-Minister of the Imperial Household, Mr. Kinchi, Vice-Minister of Agriculture, Commerce and Industry, Dr. Ume, Legislative Adviser, Major-General Murata, Major-General Muta, Mr. Tawara, Vice-Minister of Education, M. Vincart, Belgian Consul-General, M. Belin, French Consul-General, Mr. Sammons, the United States Consul-General, M. de Kehrberg, acting Russian Consul-General, Dr. Wendtchuch, German Vice-Consul, and other well-known members of the community, Korean and Japanese.

Chief Justice Watanabe, on behalf of the hosts thanked the guests for gracing the occasion with their welcome presence. The original idea had been to ask the guests to inspect the Court building and then adjourn to the Club for dinner, but in view of the hot and uncertain weather lately prevailing the first part of the programme was abandoned with a view to saving the guests the attendant discomfort. The occasion was one for sincere congratulations for the sake of Korea. Korea had not been without courts or laws, but this was the first time that she was ever blessed with an independent Judiciary created under a law of organisation based upon the principles of civilised jurisprudence. The First of August, 1908, therefore, was an important day in Korean history: it ushered in a new era in the history of her progress in civilisation. Conscious of the gravity of the responsibilities with which they were charged, it was the determination of the Chief Justice and his colleagues to do their utmost to secure the success of the new system of administration of justice just put in operation. But in order to attain full success, they must rely upon the support and assistance of the leaders of the community, so many of whom it was their honour to have as their guests on the present occasion. This was especially so, because the Korean Judiciary, as at present organised, was without some of the necessary adjuncts. To cite one instance by way of illustration, the Courts were not provided with executing officers, with the result that, in serving summons or in executing a sentence, assistance would have to be asked of the police, district magistrates, or other public functionaries. The Courts being thus unprovided with some useful auxiliary machinery, the distinguished Judge could not but ask those present to assist him and his colleagues in their humble endeavours to secure a successful operation of the new system.

Mr. Ko, Minister of Justice, agreed with the Chief Justice in asking for the cordial support of all present in making the new Judiciary a success. This memorable day in his country's history was, he had no doubt, being similarly celebrated in various other places in all parts of the peninsula, and he was deeply gratified with the brilliant success of the celebration in Seoul. In conclusion, His Excellency hoped that the Japanese and Korean members of the Judiciary would harmoniously co-operate for the smooth working of the new system.

Viscount Sone, who followed next, did not think it necessary for him to dilate upon the great significance of the occasion; sufficient emphasis had already been laid on that point by the Chief Justice of the Court of Cassation. Neither did he mean to make any speech, but he might be permitted to remark that in few civilised countries were courts of law opened in a hot season like the present. His Excellency could not therefore help sincerely hoping that, by hard and conscientious labour on the part of the legal officers and as the result of progress of the people in civilisation, it might in future become possible for the Judges and Public Prosecutors to enjoy a holiday in the summer time.

General Viscount Hasegawa proposed the health of His Majesty the Emperor of Korea and called for three Banzais for His Majesty, which, it is needless to say, were given with much enthusiasm.—Seoul Press.

TELEGRAMS.

(REUTER'S SERVICE.)

MINISTERIAL CRISIS IN CONSTANTINOPLE.

London, August 6.

The Turkish Cabinet has resigned. Kiamil Pasha has been entrusted with the formation of a new Ministry. Two ex-Ministers, with other prominent officials, were arrested and conveyed to prison amid the jeers of the crowd.

THE ZEPPELIN AIRSHIP DISASTER.

The disaster which overtook Count Zeppelin's air-ship at Stuttgart yesterday was witnessed by a crowd of 40,000 people, who were seized with a panic. The soldiers holding the ropes were dragged into the air and sustained injuries more or less severe. Zeppelin is in despair. The German Government pays £25,000 compensation.

THE GREAT BUSH-FIRE.

The number of deaths resulting from the British Columbia bush-fire has been greatly exaggerated. The latest estimate is about seventy. The last trains out from the doomed region traversed sheets of flame, the carriages being repeatedly on fire. Four hundred refugees struggled into Nelson for relief. Stores are pouring in from all directions.

THE CONFERENCE OF BISHOPS.

Later.

The conference of bishops at Lambeth Palace, at which 243 bishops took part in the communion, has been concluded.

ZEPPELIN'S AIRSHIP.

It appears that a squall struck the stern of the airship, lifting it from the ground. It then fell heavily. This caused a spirit tank to explode. The disaster has caused remarkable chagrin in Germany.

RUSSIA AND FINLAND.

The Finnish Diet has been opened. There was a stern speech from the Throne lamenting the absence of any feeling of solidarity or of interest with the Russian people, and that there was no recognition of the obligations the empire imposed on the Finns. The President replied firmly, insisting upon the principle of independent administration, any departure from which would be considered to be a disregard of Finnish rights.

SAGHALIEN.

London, August 8.

The Russian Minister for Foreign Affairs and the Japanese Chargé d'Affaires have exchanged notes referring to the demarcation of the Russian and Japanese possessions in Saghalien.

MR. LOWTHER AND THE SULTAN.

The new British Ambassador, Sir Gerard Lowther, has presented his credentials to the Sultan, whom he warmly congratulated on behalf of the British Government upon the introduction of a Constitution.

The Ambassador's drive in State to the Porte was the occasion of remarkable demonstrations, crowds cheering enthusiastically.

CHRISTIANS IN THE TURKISH MINISTRY.

There are two Christians in the new Turkish Ministry, Prince Mavrogordato, Minister of Agriculture, who belongs to the Greek Church, and Gabriel Effendi, Minister of Public Works, who is an Armenian Christian.

All the Ministers are new men.

GERMAN AIRSHIP SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Later.

Subscriptions are pouring in to Count Zeppelin from all quarters of Germany. Some capitalist has given £5,000 towards a new airship.

PARIS PLUNGED IN DARKNESS.

Later.

On Friday night Paris was plunged in darkness for two hours owing to a strike of electricians, meant as an ostentatious warning to the Prefect of the Seine for expelling federation tradesmen from the labour exchange. Theatrical performances were stopped, and the greatest confusion prevailed there, in cafés and elsewhere.

EMPTYING THE PRISONS IN TURKEY.

Troops who returned to Smyrna from Salonika immediately released the criminals from the gaols. Most of the prisons in Turkey have now been emptied.

NEMESIS OVERTAKES PALACE CAMARILLA.

Riza Pasha, ex-Minister for War, and all prominent officials of the palace camarilla have been arrested. Rahile Pasha, ex-Chamberlain, resisted arrest and fired on the police from a window of his house. He was ultimately secured.

YOUNG TURK MISSIONARIES IN PERSIA.

It is reported from St. Petersburg that Young Turks have arrived at Tabriz and are carrying on a propaganda for the unification of the Mussulman States. The Daily Telegraph's correspondent at Tabriz says the people have declared themselves Turkish subjects.

RUSSIA AND TURKEY.

London, August 9.

Russia has made an communication to the Powers with regard to the Anglo-Russian reform scheme. The obtaining of correct information respecting events in Turkey is the only object in view. The Powers should defer any action implying distrust of the Sultan's wish to carry out the reforms.

The message goes on to intimate that Russia will follow attentively and sympathetically the efforts made by Turkey, and will do all in her power to insure the working of the new regime. Interference is deprecated, but should the Sultan's measures prove resultless, the Powers must resume the work of reform.

Britain intends to follow the same course with regard to the British proposals for a Macedonian mobile force.

THE BATTLESHIP FLEET.

London, August 10.

The American Battleship Fleet has arrived at Auckland, New Zealand.

MACEDONIA.

Rifts are beginning to show in the situation despite the appeal to universal brotherhood. The Bulgarians are manifesting a tendency to seize Patriarchist villages and churches. The Young Turkish Committee are promised severe measures of retributive justice.

LOCK-OUT AT STETTIN.

London, August 10.

Owing to a dispute over wages 12,000 men have been locked-out by the ship-building yards of Stettin. Unless the dispute is settled by Wednesday 58,000 men will be idle. Meanwhile the construction of German warships is hampered.

DECREASES IN BRITISH TRADE.

The decreases in imports for July were £5,434,739 and in exports £6,746,606, including cotton £2,382,340.

ACTIVE TROUBLE IN MACEDONIA.

Later.

The Young Turks have ejected from Macedonia with violence and contumely Mussafi Pacha, President of the Commission, surveying the Novibazar Railway projected by Austria. The people rushed to the station and spat in the Pacha's face, tearing off his epaulettes.

FIGHTING AT TABRIZ.

There was stubborn fighting at Tabriz on Saturday, the revolutionaries sustaining heavy losses and losing some guns.

THE AMERICAN FLEET AND AUSTRALASIA.

London, August 11.

The American Fleet has met with an enthusiastic welcome from the people and the press of Australasia.

The newspapers dwell on the Anglo-Saxon brotherhood which will help to keep Australasia white. One newspaper suggests that on the expiration of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance an Anglo-American Alliance would be more natural.

Chinese are trying to enter Australia in defiance of the immigration laws. The Federal immigration searchers at Sydney yesterday discovered nine Chinese lying on the boilers of the German steamer Prinz Waldemar. They were unrecognizable with dust and grime.

THE DISSATISFIED OLYMPIA CONTESTANTS.

The American newspapers are printing numberless interviews with the returning Olympia contestants, denouncing English unfairness.

THE KING'S CONTINENTAL VISITS.

London, August 11.

The King has started for Cronberg, where he meets the Kaiser. Thence he proceeds to Ischl, where he will meet the Emperor Franz Josef, and afterwards he goes to Marienbad.

The German semi-official press welcomes the visit, expressing the hope that it will conduce to an untroubled relationship between the two countries.

GERMANY AND PERSIA.

St. Petersburg.—The Novoe Vremya says that Germany is actively working for the establishment of a bank with trading facilities at Tabriz, with the idea, it is believed, of securing the summoning of an international conference with regard to Persia similar to that at Algieras.

DESTROYER'S CREW DISSATISFIED.

A destroyer has arrived in the Firth of Forth from the recent manœuvres, the crew of which, dissatisfied with the rations and the stopping of shore leave, threw signal books and gun-sights overboard. Several are under arrest and it is understood they will be court-martialled.

THE HONGKONG OPIUM DENS.

London, August 12.

The proposals respecting the closing of the dens are at present in abeyance.

KING EDWARD.

The meeting between King Edward and the Kaiser at Cronberg was of the most cordial description.

THE SULTAN'S GENEROSITY.

The Sultan has offered to defray personally the cost of constructing a Parliament House.

THE KING AND THE KAISER.

London, Aug. 12.

King Edward has left Cronberg for Ischl. The Kaiser bestowed the first Class Order of the Red Eagle on Sir Charles Hardinge, who is accompanying the King.

THE MONTENEGRO PLOT.

Numerous prominent Croats and Bosnians implicated by the evidence of the witness Nastic (referred to in a telegram dated June 7th) has been arrested in connection with the Greater Serbia irredentist movement. The alleged conspirators are charged with planning a revolt in Croatia and Bosnia having for its object the formation of a Greco-Slav Union with the aid of Montenegro and Serbia.

LARGE FUND FOR MISSIONS.

Later.

A memorandum by the Archbishop of Canterbury recommends that the unallocated balance of £220,000 on the Pan-Anglican Congress thank-offering be devoted to education and mission work in the Colonies, Japan, China, India and Ceylon.

RUMOURED STATE VISIT OF THE KING TO BERLIN.

According to a story appearing in several papers a state visit of King Edward to Berlin has been arranged.

THE MEETING OF THE SOVEREIGNS.

London, August 13.

King Edward is at Ischl. The meeting of His Majesty with the Kaiser is the topic of Europe. It is remarked that King Edward wore the uniform of Blucher's Hussars, whereas in 1907 he was in mufti.

Both monarchs appeared to be in the best of spirits and pleased at the meeting.

The Times' correspondent at St. Petersburg says the visits of the monarchs are highly approved in Russia, where opinion is crystallizing into the satisfactory belief that European rivalries are inconsistent with the awakening of the Asiatic peoples.

(By SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH THE "TOKYO ASAHI SHIMBUN.")

TURKEY.

London, August 7.

Constantinople.—As a result of an intimation from the Sultan to the Reform Committee Hiamil Pasha has formed a new Ministry. Members of the Palace group have been all imprisoned or have fled. The Committee have issued a manifesto demanding the cessation of demonstrations and threatening to treat all disorderly persons as traitors. The new British Ambassador, Sir Gerard Lowther, has been enthusiastically received by the people and the officials.

Sofia.—The troops at Adrianople have recovered their tranquillity. They have been assured that the Sultan is alive and is a free agent. They declare themselves enthusiastic supporters of the Constitution. All political prisoners have been liberated. The Reform Committee is endeavouring to reconcile the Greeks and Bulgarians.

MACEDONIAN REFORMS.

St. Petersburg, August 9.

The withdrawal of the Anglo-Russian Scheme for the reforms in Macedonia will be formally notified to-day.

The Russian correspondent in Persia reports that the Shah has pawned the Crown Jewels.

THE CRISIS IN TURKEY.

Constantinople, August 9.

The new Cabinet has been well received. Commercial confidence is returning. Ex-Minister Mehmedtriza and the Armenian Ex-Patriarch Ormanian have been arrested on a charge of malversation of funds.

A NEW GERMAN SHIPPING SUBSIDY.

Berlin, August 9.

The Berlin Government and the North-German Lloyd Steamship Company have signed a new agreement by which the Company will receive the substantial subsidy of £11,500 for providing a monthly steamship service between New Guinea, Sydney and Hongkong.

ZEPPELIN TO BUILD ANOTHER AIRSHIP.

Zeppelin announces his readiness to build a new airship, subscriptions for which are pouring in. £150,000 has already been received.

ELSWICK ENTERPRIZE.

Armstrong, Whitworth & Co. are issuing a million 4 per cent. debentures at 102½ for extensions of their works in Italy and Japan.

THE AMERICAN FLEET.

London, August 10.

The American Fleet has arrived at Auckland. The Admiral declares that his reception has been even warmer than it was at San Francisco. Battle evolutions have been carried on every day. The machinery is in excellent order.

Some of the newspapers suggest an Anglo-American treaty at the expiration of the Anglo-Japanese treaty, as a more natural arrangement. They regard the visit as helping to sustain the policy of a white Australia, in view of Japan's rise to power.

THE GRAND DUKE NICHOLAS.

Later.

St. Petersburg.—The Grand Duke Nicholas has been relieved from the Presidency of the Council of National Defence.

An Imperial Decree announces an important measure of Army Reform.

CONVICT PRISON SCANDALS IN GEORGIA.

New York.

Terrible accounts are published with reference to the horrors resulting from the system pursued in the State of Georgia. When convicts are released they are provided with labour by unscrupulous contractors. The convicts are kept in chains, tainted food is set before them, and they are whipped and murdered.

Georgia has profited to the extent of £5,000 by this system.

A FRENCH AIRSHIP.

M. Lemaux, the inventor of Wright's remarkable aeroplane has made a flight of 2500 feet in 1¾ minutes, at an average height of 30 feet above the ground. French experts who were present declare that the machine is capable of remaining for an hour in the air.

THE BATTLESHIP FLEET AND THE YELLOW PERIL.

Washington, August 11.

The arrival of the Battleship Fleet in Australasia does not attract much notice. The New York Herald urges that there is a common bond between Australia and the United States, in connection with exposure to the Yellow Peril, and adds—obviously referring to the Japanese—that the visible embodiment in the Fleet of American power and resources may produce a moral effect upon a people more impressionable than the Australians.

THE DISMISSAL OF GRAND DUKE NICHOLAS.

St. Petersburg, August 12.

The newspapers regard the dismissal of the Grand Duke Nicholas as the first step in the army reform demanded in the Duma by M. Gutschoff. It is understood that the department will be subordinated to the Ministry of War.

CHOLERA IN RUSSIA.

The cholera is spreading in the valley of the Volga and the neighbouring villages.

EUROPEAN RIVALRIES AND EASTERN NATIONS.

The impression has arisen in Europe that European rivalries are unwise, as being inconsistent with the uprising of Eastern nations.

KING EDWARD'S ACUMEN.

The visit of King Edward to Cronberg is interpreted as another indication of His Majesty's acumen.

JAPANESE SECURITIES.

London, August 12.

Japanese securities are well supported. They have risen from 1s 8d. to 3s 3d.

THE RECENT DEMONSTRATIONS IN CONSTANTINOPLE.

Constantinople, August 12.

The Reform Committee has issued orders to the law-abiding citizens to check demonstrations at the houses of Ex-ministers and other persons. They promise that they will be fairly tried after parliament meets.

AMERICAN FLEET AT AUCKLAND: ADMIRAL SPERRY ON VERSATILITY.

Auckland, N.Z., August 13.

The officers and men of the American Squadron are delighted with their reception. Admiral Sperry acknowledges the intense hospitality and cordiality which have marked their welcome.

The Times correspondent says that a remarkable feature of the cruise is the amalgamation of the line with the engineering corps. Sperry's watchword is versatility. Experience shows that a successful gunner makes a good engineer, and vice versa. Only twice since leaving San Francisco has a ship fallen out of the line, and then only for a few minutes.

The saving in coal consumption has greatly increased with the steaming radius. About 25 per cent. of the ships coaled at Honolulu and carried sufficient provisions to reach Sydney.

RUSSIA AND JAPAN A SEALING CONVENTION.

St. Petersburg, August 13.

It is authoritatively stated that Russia and Japan are about to negotiate an agreement for the mutual protection of seals and other fisheries in the western Pacific.

Regarding the incident of the capture of the Mye Maru, to which Count Komura referred in his conversation with Mr. Iswosky, the opinion is expressed that the Japanese Government treated the affair with admirable sang-froid. Incidents of this kind must nevertheless be avoided.

(RECEIVED AT THE FOREIGN OFFICE.)

THE C.P.R. STRIKE.

Vancouver, August 6.

About 6,000 workmen on the Canadian Pacific Railway went on strike on the 4th instant, with the result that their places have been taken in many instances by Japanese labourers.

RAILWAY FREIGHTS.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has declared that the rates of freight to be declared by the Railway Companies on imports and exports need not be the same rates on domestic produce. The Committee does not regard as illegal any discrimination that may be made in accordance with circumstances and conditions.

(FROM THE "ASAHI SHIMBUN.")

THE RAILWAY FREIGHT AFFAIR.

New York, Aug 5.

The revision of the railway freight rates to be imposed on Japanese merchandise will come into force on Nov. 1st, the new imposition being as follows:

Antimony wares, not over 1 car load.....	$ 1.00
Bamboo baskets and bamboo wares not over 1 car load .....	1.50
Brushes not over 1 car load .....	1.00
Curios, toys, gold and silver wares, and Ornaments, not over 1 car load.....	1.50
Earthenware, Seiji, Kaga, and Imari porcelain and not including Satsuma and other porcelains in superior quality, not over 1 car load.....	1.30
Lantern, parasol, napkin, painted parasol, and fans of all kinds, not over 1 car load.....	1.25
Lacquered wares, not over 1 car load.....	1.25
Figured matting, Dansu , and other carpets, not over 1 car load .....	1.25
1 car load, minimum by 20,000 lbs. ....	1.00
Straw braids, not over 1 car load .....	1.50
Tea .....	1.00
Raw silk, per car load .....	4.00

The foregoing revision has not yet been approved of by the Interstate Commercial Committee, though there is no doubt that the revised rates will come into force on Oct. 1st.

GOVERNOR FOR NEW YORK.

The Election for Governorship of New York will take place in November. It is believed that President Roosevelt is not desirous of having Mr. Hughes, the present Governor, re-elected. The explanation given is that if Mr. Hughes occupies the position a second time his influence will be further increased. The electoral campaign is now in full swing.

THE EQUITABLE LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY.

New York, August 8.

The Equitable Life Assurance Society intends to build a 62 storied office, and 1,000 feet in height, in New York. The Government granted permission on Aug.

7th. The cost of construction is estimated at $20,000,000.

MR. HARRIMAN.

San Francisco, August 8.

Mr. Harriman arrived in San Francisco yesterday. He said to an interviewer that the raising of the railway freight rates was unavoidable for the maintenance of business. The railways ought to impose proper charges as other commercial enterprises are doing. The shipping services on the Pacific would not be sold to Japanese or other foreigners. Mr. Harriman was willing to advise the Government to establish a special law with regard to subsidies. He added that necessary steps will be taken in Congress as to the matter. Referring to the forthcoming Presidential Election, he said that he had no special views as to the platforms of the Republicans and the Democrats, and that naturally he was not willing to participate in the election either of Mr. Taft or Mr. Bryan.

STRIKE IN CANADA.

All the workmen employed at various iron factories belonging to the Canadian Pacific Railway Company have struck. The relation between the strikers and the other whites, Japanese, and Italians, who have been engaged are serious. The conductors and other employees on the same railway have struck in sympathy with the workmen. The traffic will be stopped.

THE AMERICAN FLEET.

San Francisco, August 10.

On the morning of Aug. 10th, the American Fleet arrived at Auckland, New Zealand. Salutes were exchanged between the American warships, and the forts as well as with the German warships in the harbour. Visits were exchanged between Rear-Admiral Sperry, American Commander-in-Chief, and Lord Plunket, Governor of New Zealand. The citizens welcomed the Americans emphatically. The fleet will remain there for about a week.

THE STRIKE IN CANADA.

In connexion with the strike of workmen employed by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, the report that a number of Japanese were engaged to fill the places of the strikers is untrue. The Japanese were offered good wages, but they refused to close with the offer. This act on the part of the Japanese seems to have created an impression among the white strikers. There does not seem any likelihood of the strike being settled yet.

ANTI-JAPANESE AGITATION.

A society has been formed in Washington to exclude Asiatics. Mr. Jordan, formerly a member of the House of Representatives, was elected president and some well-known citizens were appointed on the committee. In the main, the view adopted by the society is that the permanent maintenance of American liberty and the Republic is dependent on the efforts of the white men, by whom alone American civilization can be upheld. A large number of Chinese and Japanese have arrived in the districts adjacent to the Pacific and they endanger the industrial and commercial enterprises of the whites. If further entry of the Asiatics is not prevented, they will at length trespass on other States throughout the Union. The society notes that some opposition to the proposed Asiatic exclusion has arisen. This opposition was based on the pretext that such a policy of exclusion should not be adopted for the sake of the Oriental trade and that employment can be found for cheap labour. The foregoing argument, in the opinion of the Society, cannot be admitted as a ground for opposing Asiatic exclusion. Membership of the Society is limited to persons born in the United States.

KING AND KAISER.

London, August 10.

King Edward meets the Kaiser to-morrow at Cronberg. The German Press regards the opportunity a favourable one for friendly discussion of outstanding questions.

MR. THOS. O'BRIEN.

New York, August 10.

Since Aug. 8th, Mr. Thos. O'Brien, Ambassador to Japan, has been staying with Rear-Admiral Marrel at Newport. He also witnessed naval exercises and was entertained at the Naval Yacht Club. On Aug. 11th, he will be present at a dinner in the Anton Hotel given by the Japan Society in his honour. He will leave on the following day for Europe on his way to Tokyo via Siberia.

ALLEGED ABUSE OF AMERICAN FLAG.

San Francisco, August 10.

According to an official telegram received at the American Department of State, a number of Royalists have hauled down the flag of the American Consulate at Tabriz and trampled on it. The authorities of the State Department deem the affair to have occurred through a misunderstanding; but have made enquiries of the American representative in Teheran.

THE AMERICAN FLEET.

The American Fleet is being welcomed at Auckland, New Zealand, with great enthusiasm. In connexion with the visit of the fleet, the view is being entertained in Australia that an Anglo-American Alliance should be concluded in order to maintain the interests of whites in the Pacific against the yellow races. All the newspapers in the islands are supporting the proposal.

GERMAN SPIES.

Two German military spies have been arrested in Ireland.

AMERICAN BUSINESS MEN TO VISIT JAPAN.

San Francisco, August 11.

At the invitation of the Tokyo and four other Chambers of Commerce in Japan thirty American business men have decided to leave San Francisco on Sept. 25th in company with their wives. Other merchants desired to join them but restrictions were made to limit the number.

THE JAPAN SOCIETY AND MR. O'BRIEN.

New York, August 11.

At 1 p.m. on Aug. 11th, the Japan Society gave a dinner at the Anton Hotel in honour of Mr. Thos. O'Brien, American Ambassador to Japan. About eighty persons, American and Japanese, were present, including Rear Admiral Coghlan and Baron Takahira, Japanese Ambassador in Washington. The Baron's first toast was President Roosevelt and Mr. O'Brien. The American Ambassador said the Japanese were a peaceful people. He expressed his appreciation of the sincere attitude assumed by the Japanese towards America and said that the friendly relations between the countries must be permanently maintained. The speech was received with enthusiastic applause. Subsequently Rear-Admiral Coghlan and Mr. Midzuno, Japanese Consul-General in New York, spoke, after which the company dispersed. Mr. O'Brien will leave at 2 p.m. on Aug. 12th for Europe on his way to Tokyo via Siberia.

LATEST COMMERCIAL.

IMPORTS.

No special change in raw cotton and yarn. Cotton piece goods are very quiet. No improvement has been noted in Woollens.

RAW COTTON.

	PER PICUL.
American Middling...	32 50 to 33 75
Egyptian Daniel...	42 00 to 42 50
Indian Broach...	26 50 to 28 00
Chinese (Old crop)...	—
Chinese (New crop)...	24 50 to 26 00
Nos. 2/60, Gassed...	260 00 to 285 00
Nos. 2/80, Gassed...	360 00 to 385 00
Nos. 2/100, Gassed...	440 00 to 450 00

COTTON YARN

	PER PICUL.
White Shirtings—40 yds. 36 in.	5 00 to 8 50
Grey Shirtings—9lb. 38½ yds. 45 in.	4 50 to 5 25
Common to Medium	—
Grey Shirtings—9lb. Good to Best	—
Grey Shirtings—46-48 yds. 44-45 in.	4 60 to 6 00
Ordinary to Medium	—
Grey Shirtings—46-48 yds. 44-45 in.	5 50 to 7 50
Good to Best	—
Grey Cambrics—46-48 yds. 45 inches...	7 00 to 9 50
Prints—24 yards, 30 inches	3 10 to 3 60
Cotton Italians and Satteens—32 in.	0 25 to 0 35
Cotton Italians and Satteens—36-40 in.	0 30 to 0 45
Turkey Reds—2.8 to 3lb 24-25 yards, 30 inch.	1 90 to 2 25
Turkey Reds—3.8 to 5lb, 24-25 yards, 32 inches	2 50 to 3 65
Velvets—Black, 35 yards, 22 inches	10 00 to 16 00
Victoria Lawns, 12 yards, 42 inches	0 95 to 1 50
Flannelette	0 15 to 0 30
Cashmere...	0 85 to 0 90

WOOLLENS AND WOOLLEN MIXTURES.

Flannels...	0 50 to 0 70
Italian Cloth, 32 in.	0 40 to 0 60
Italian Cloth, 36-40 in.	0 40 to 0 55
Mousseline de Laine, 120-140 yards, 30-32 inches Common to Medium	0 20 to 0 28
Mousselines de Laine—120-140 yards, 30-32 inches Good to Best	0 28 to 0 32
Cloths—Pilots, Presidents, and Union, 54 to 56 inches	0 50 to 1 35
Cloths—Army Cloth	0 85 to 1 50
Cloths—All other	1 25 to 3 00
Blankets—Assorted, per lb.	0 70 to 0 80
Wool Australian—No. 1 per lb.	0 60 to 0 71
" " " 2 " " "	0 58 to 0 64
" " " 3 " " "	0 46 to 0 55
Wool, Tientsin—No. 1 per lb.	0 40 to 0 44
" " " 2 " " "	0 34 to 0 39
" " " 3 " " "	0 25 to 0 30

METALS.

No change to note.

	PER PICUL.
Iron or Mild Steel, Bar, flat, round and square	V. 3 80 to 3 90
Iron or Mild Steel, Plate...	4 40 to 4 50
do Sheet...	5 25 to 5 35
Galvanised Iron Sheets Corrugated	10 70 to 11 00
do Flat	11 50 to 11 75
Wire Nails, Ordinary assortments...	6 60 to 8 50
Tin Plates, golts. L.C.W.	6 75 to 7 00
Pig Iron, No. 3 "Redcar"	2 10 to 2 15

KEROSENE.

No improvement has been noted.

Chester	V. 3 65 to 3 87
Victory	3 57 to 3 69
Borneo and Sumatra	2 25 to 3 10
Hokuyetsu	3 30 to 3 60
Nippon	3 30 to 3 75
Ogura Hokuyetsu	3 50 to 3 60
Tozai	3 60 to 3 75

SUGAR.

The market remains brisk. The import of foreign sugar has continued.

	PER PICUL.
Brown Takao	V. 9 00 to 9 75
Brown Manila	10 00 to 11 50
Brown China	8 00 to 13 50
White Java and Penang	14 50 to 17 50
White Refined (German)	15 50 to 19 00
" (Hongkong)	15 00 to 20 00

INDIGO.

Business has continued brisk.

Calcutta first	Yen. 265
" second	250
Java, first	320
" second	290
Madras, first	160
" second	145
Artificial "horse and lion" brand	205
Artificial "Kenshin"	200

FLOUR.

An improvement has been noted. The freight from America will be raised on Sept. 1st.

Gold Drop	4 sacks 9 80
Flag	9 80
Royal	9 80
Trophy	9 80

Red Seal	4 sacks 9 80
Lion	10 90
Portland	10 35
Premier	10 25

Japanese:

Rising Sun	6 kwamme 2 45
Takasago	6 " 2 41
Fuji	6 " 2 41
Pine	6 " 2 45

WHEAT.

Enquiries from the provinces have continued as it is expected that the freight rates will be raised in America on Sept. 1st. The revised rates are: $3 per ton to Yokohama, Kobe, Nagasaki and Moji; $3.50 to Hongkong, $4 to Shanghai and Manila; and $4.50 to Amoy.

	Yen.
White Walla Walla, 100 kin	4 80 — 5 00
Red "	4 25 — 4 75
Blue Stem	5 00 — 5 50

EXPORTS.

RAW SILK.

The market still continues brisk.

Good enquiries for re-reels, principally of the Minami San-sha, Joshi have been noted. Business in fine filature is quiet.

On Aug. 12th stocks were: filatures 12,179 bales; Re-reels, 1,309 bales; Orikaishi 798 bales; and Sundry, — bales.

QUOTATIONS.

Filature—Extra No. 1, Coarse	1 130 to 1 130
Filature—Extra No. 2, Coarse	1 090 to 1 100
Filature—Yajima Class, Coarse	1 060 to 1 070
Filature—No. 1, Coarse	945 to 950
Filature—No. 1½, Fine	1020 to 1030
Filature—No. 1½, 10-12 den.	975 to 980
Filature—No. 1½, Coarse	935 to 940
Filature—No. 1½, 10-13 den.	950 to 960
Re-reels—Extra No. 1	1 030 to 1 035
Re-reels—No. 1	1 000 to 1 005
Re-reels—No. 1½	975 to 980
Re-reels—No. 2	950 to 955
Kakedas—Gold Cup Chop Extra	990 to 990
Kakedas—Veiled Woman Chop No. 1	950 to 960
Kakedas—One Horsehead Chop No. 1½	930 to 940
Kakedas—No. 2	910 to 920
Kakedas—No. 2½	890 to 900

QUOTATIONS ON THE EXCHANGE.

	Present delivery.	Aug. delivery.	Sept. delivery.	Oct. delivery.
Aug.	yen.	yen.	yen.	yen.
7th	976	—	965	976
8th	981	—	—	980
9th	—	—	—	—
10th	978	—	—	—
11th	976	—	—	—
12th	975	—	—	975
13th	969	935	—	967

WASTE SILK.

The market is weak, excepting business with filature kibiso. The inactivity seems to have originated in prices over which purchasers and sellers could not agree.

On Aug. 12th stocks were: Noshi, 3,125 bales; Kibiso, 5,071 bales; and sundry 932 bales.

QUOTATIONS.

Noshi—Filatures, Best	135 to 140
Noshi—Filatures, Good	120 to 135
Noshi—Oshiu, Best	130 to 140
Noshi—Oshiu, Good	125 to 130
Noshi—Oshiu, Medium	100 to 120
Noshi—Shinshiu, Best	90 to 95
Noshi—Shinshiu, Good	55 to 60
Noshi—Bushi, (or Joshi) Best	75 to 85
Noshi—Bushi, (or Joshi) Good	70 to 80
Noshi—Bushi, (or Joshi) Medium	35 to 60
Kibiso—Filatures, Extra	105 to 115
Kibiso—Filatures, Best	100 to 105
Kibiso—Filatures, Second	85 to 90
Rereel—Fair	65 to 70
Rereel—Best	60 to 65
Rereel—Good	50 to 55
Rereel—Medium	30 to 35

HABUTAE.

The market is steady. Enquiries have appeared from abroad.

KANAWAZA.

	4 me.	4½ me.	5 me.	5½ me.
Inches.	Yen.	Yen.	Yen.	Yen.
19½	—	9 25	8 85	8 65
22½	—	8 80	8 65	8 55
27	—	8 80	8 65	8 55
"PINE-LEAVES" MARK. (RUKUI.)
	6 me.	6½ me.	7 me.	7½ me.
Inches.	Yen.	Yen.	Yen.	Yen.
22½	9 30	8 85	8 70	8 75
27	9 10	8 80	8 75	8 70
36	9 25	8 85	8 75	8 70

"GOLD" MARK.

Inches	4 1/2 me.	5 me.	5 1/2 me.	6 me.
19 1/2"	Yen.	Yen.	Yen.	Yen.
22 1/2"	8.40	8.00	8.00	—
27"	9.00	8.50	8.30	—
36"	8.65	8.10	8.10	—

KAWAMATA.

Inches	3 me.	3 1/2 me.	4 me.	4 1/2 me.
19 1/2"	Yen.	Yen.	Yen.	Yen.
22 1/2"	8.70	9.50	10.60	11.20
27"	10.10	10.70	11.40	12.00
36"	10.70	11.80	12.60	14.00
27"	14.20	15.20	16.50	18.20

SILK HANDKERCHIEFS.

A moderate business has been done during the week.

Plain Habutae (Hem stitched.)

20" x 1 1/2"	6 me.	doz.	yen.
22" x 1 1/2"	7	"	4.25-4.52
24" x 1 1/2"	7 1/2	"	5.10-5.40

Figured Habutae (Hem stitched.)

20" x 1 1/2"	9	"	4.30-4.50
22" x 1 1/2"	10	"	5.30-5.60
24" x 1 1/2"	12	"	7.20-7.40

Figured Habutae (scallop):—

10" x 1 corner embroidered	"	0.95-1.00
12" x 4	"	1.15-1.20

COPPER.

A rise has been reported from London, but it has affected nothing in Japan.

According to a London telegram under date Aug. 11th, the quotation was £62.2.6.

Refined per 100 kin	Yen 45-49
Bessemer per 100 kin	" 52-50
Electric refined per 100 kin	" 53-57

TEA.

Nothing to note.

QUOTATIONS.

Choicest	Y.	—	—
Choice	—	10	—
Finest	55	10	60
Fine	45	10	55
Good Medium	45	10	50
Medium	32	10	34
Good Common	29	10	32
Common	26	10	29

RICE.

The market is generally unsettled owing to the recent inclement weather, but no special rise has been noted during the week.

Domestic rice in Fukagawa	428.809
Foreign rice in Fukagawa	139.518
Delivery	Closing Price.
August	16.95
September	17.10
October	16.63

RICE AT WHOLESALE: STANDARD PRICE.

	(Tokyo.)	per koku.
Superior	Yen 18.30
Medium	17.30
Common	16.30
Average	17.30

	(Osaka.)	(Kobe.)
August	16.52	16.49
September	16.78	16.80
October	16.28	16.28

EXCHANGE.

Yokohama Aug. 13.

London silver slightly firmer and China sterling quotations as well as local rates are unchanged.

London—Bank T.T.	100/3 1/2
— 4 months' sight	100/0
— Private 4 months' sight	100/1 1/2
— 6 months' sight	100/3 1/2
Paris & Lyons—Bank sight	255 1/2
— Private 4 months' sight	259 1/2
— 6 months' sight	261
Hongkong—Bank sight	per $100 87 1/2
— Private 10 days' sight	85 1/2
Shanghai—Bank sight	85 1/2
— Private 10 days' sight	86 1/2
India—Bank sight	153
— Private 30 days' sight	155
America—Bank sight	49 1/2
— Private 30 days' sight	50 1/2
— Private 4 months' sight	51
Germany—Bank sight	207
— Private 4 months' sight	211 1/2
Bar Silver (London)	23 1/2

* Nominal.

FUKUSHIMA &amp; Co., BROKERS &amp; DEALERS IN BONDS &amp; SHARES, FINANCIAL AGENTS, &amp;c.

Tokyo, August 14th, 1908.

BONDS AND STOCKS.	Fare Value.	Paid Up.	Dividend Per Annum.	Dividend Payable.	Average Quotations.	Remarks.
Bonds and Debentures.
EXCHEQUER BONDS 1st	100	100	5	June to December	99.60
EXCHEQUER BONDS 2nd	100	100	5	March to September	97.20
EXCHEQUER BONDS 3rd	100	100	5	March to September	96.30
NEW IMPERIAL BONDS ISSUED 1906	100	100	5	June to December	83.70
Tobacco Monopoly Bonds (Mark 3=H)	100	100	5	June to December	95.00
Tobacco Monopoly Bonds (Mark 12=E)	100	100	5	June to December	92.70
*Tobacco Monopoly Bonds (Mark 5=H)	100	100	5	June to December	83.80
CONSOLIDATION LOAN BONDS (SEIRI)	100	100	5	June to December	82.70
WAR LOAN BONDS (GUNJI)	100	100	5	June to December	82.70
5% IMPERIAL LOAN BONDS (GOBURI)	100	100	5	March to September	83.30
NEW EXCHEQUER BONDS (Otsu-goburi, Mark I)	100	100	5	June to December	90.90
Yokohama Water Works Bonds	100	100	6	June to December	91.50
Yokohama City Works Bonds	100	100	6	June to December	90.50
Osaka Harbour Construction Bonds	100	100	6	June to December	89.20
Kobe Water Works Bonds	100	100	6	June to December	90.00
Kawasaki Shipbuilding Yard's Debentures	100	100	6	June to December	89.00
Osaka Steam Ship Co.'s Debentures	100	100	6	June to December	91.00
Banks.
Nippon Ginko (Bank of Japan)	200	200	12	February to August	530.00
Kogyo Ginko (First class)	50	50	8	June to December	36.70	E.D.
" (Second class)	50	37.50	8	June to December	42.40	E.D.
YOKOHAMA SPECIE BANK	100	100	12	February to August	204.50
Taiwan Ginko (Bank of Formosa)	100	100	10	February to August	135.00
Railway &amp; Electric Tramway Co.'s
Nippon Railway Co.	50	50	11 1/2	June to December	87.90
" 3rd Issue New	50	35	11 1/2	June to December	61.10
Sanyo Railway Co.	50	50	11	March to September	76.10
Kansai Railway Co.	50	50	5.9	March to September	44.70
Kyushu Railway Co.	50	50	9.7	March to September	70.10
Hokkaido Tanko Steamship Co.	50	50	14	June to December	81.50
" (New Issue)	50	12.50	14	June to December	20.50
Tokio Railway Co.	50	50	7	May to November	56.00
" New	50	25	7	May to November	27.00
KEIHIN ELECTRIC TRAMWAY CO.	50	50	10	May to November	63.50
YOKOHAMA ELECTRIC TRAMWAY CO.	50	50	6	May to November	36.00
Hanshin Electric Tramway Co.	50	50	12	April to October	46.80
Electric Light and Gas Co.'s
TOKYO ELECTRIC LIGHT CO.	50	50	10	May to November	64.50
" New	50	25	10	May to November	32.40
YOKOHAMA ELECTRIC LIGHT CO.	50	50	14	May to November	63.00
" New	50	20	14	May to November	28.80
Osaka Electric Light Co.	50	50	15	June to December	108.50
Kobe Electric Light Co.	50	50	13	June to December	69.50
Uji-gawa Electric Co.	50	12 1/2	no.	March to September	6.20
TOKYO GAS CO.	50	50	13	June to December	80.00
" New, 2nd Issue	50	12.50	13	June to December	26.60
Osaka Gas Co.	50	50	8	June to December	79.50
Steamship and Dockyard Co.'s
Japan Mail Steam Ship Co. (N.Y.K.K.)	50	50	12	April to October	79.70
Oriental Steam Ship Co. (T.K.K.K.)	50	50	12	February to August	30.50
Osaka Steamship Co. (Osaka Shosen K.K.)	25	25	6	June to December	14.50
YOKOHAMA DOCK CO.	50	33	12	May to November	48.40
Uraga Dock Co.	50	50	no.	June to December	10.00
Kawasaki Ship Building Yard	50	50	12 1/2	May to November	51.52
Spinning and Weaving Co.'s
KANEGAFUCHI COTTON SPINNING CO.	50	50	16	June to December	36.80
" News	50	12 1/2	16	June to December	25.20
Tokyo Cotton Spinning Co.	50	50	8	June to December	32.80
FUJI GASIAN COTTON SPINNING CO.	50	50	18	June to December	83.50
Imperial Hemp Weaving Co.	50	50	12	June to December	52.00
" New	50	25	12	June to December	25.60
Nishin Spinning Co.	50	12.50	no.	May to November	8.10
Exchange.
TOKYO STOCK EXCHANGE	50	50	10	May to November	111.00
Tokyo Rice Exchange	50	50	15	May to November	90.00
Osaka Stock Exchange	50	50	9	May to November	102.70
Osaka Rice Exchange	50	50	9 1/2	June to December	62.00
Brewery Co.'s
DAI NIPPON BEER BREWERY CO.	50	50	15	June to December	76.50
Japan Beer Brewery Co. (Kirin)	50	50	8	June to December	60.00
Godown Companies.
YOKOHAMA CHIUO GODOWN CO., LTD.	50	50	12	June to December	50.50
Yokohama Boeki Godown Co., Ltd.	20	20	15	June to December	25.50
Fire Insurance Co.'s
Tokyo Fire Insurance Co., Ltd.	50	12	no.	June	11.50
YOKOHAMA FIRE & TRANS. INS. CO. LTD.	50	12	16	May	17.50
Meiji Fire Insurance Co., Ltd.	50	50	20	March	220.00
Oil Co.'s
Hoden Oil Co.	50	50	36	March to September	104.70
Nippon Oil Co.	50	50	24	June to December	86.00
Nanboku Oil Co.	50	50	8.8	June to December	36.20
Sugar Manufacturing Co.'s
Dai-Nippon Sugar Refinery Co.	50	50	15	April to October	74.00
" New	50	12 1/2	15	April to October	21.30
Taiwan Sugar Manufacturing Co.	50	50	10	June	55.00
" New	50	25	10	June	25.50
Ensuikow Sugar Manufacturing Co.	50	15	20	June	19.00

HAD ECZEMA FOR 10 YEARS

Doctors and a Skin Hospital did Him
No Good—Sickness Caused Loss in Wages of Over £300—A Friend Whose Father was Cured of Eczema Advised Him to Try the Cuticura Treatment.

A TRIPLE CURE BY THE CUTICURA REMEDIES

"My eczema has been ten years' standing and it has cost me over £300 in loss of wages. I am a carpenter and joiner by trade. I have been under doctors, and I also attended the skin hospital, but none of them did me any good. When I was at Horley I purchased some of the Cuticura Remedies, and I was working about all the day, not giving my leg a chance, but after purchasing twelve sets of the Cuticura Remedies they cured the eczema in my limb. I also had spots on the scalp, but they are all gone now. I have had these sore pimples fifty years. My scalp is now all clean. My eczema was on the right limb from the ankle upwards, which was as raw as a piece of beef. I shall recommend the Cuticura Remedies to all I see afflicted with eczema. Publish this statement for all the world, and let any one write to me and I will reply."

"I also purchased three vials of Cuticura Pills for my wife and they have done her a lot of good. Before taking them she dared hardly to eat anything on account of the pain afterwards; now she can eat anything and plenty of it. She is getting quite fat now and is quite a different woman. I was first advised to try the Cuticura Remedies by a man who lives at Redhill whose father was cured of a bad eczema on the head. No doctors nor hospitals could cure it. After a few applications the whole crust of the head came off and left him a healthy scalp. This man's age was over seventy years. Although I am cured of eczema I shall always have Cuticura by me, and use the Cuticura Pills now and then, for I find the Pills keep my head very clear and my appetite good. Chas. Gambrell, 166, High St., Ramsgate, March 7 and April 17, 1906."

Complete External and Internal Treatment for Every Humour of Infants, Children, and Adults consists of Cuticura Soap to cleanse the skin, Cuticura Ointment to heal the skin, and Cuticura Resolvent Pills (Chocolate Coated) to Purify the Blood. A Single set often cures. Sold throughout the world. Depot: London, 27, Charterhouse Sq.; R. F. F. & Co., Sydney; London, Cape Town, & S. K. Paul, Calcutta; Potter Bros and Co., Corp., Sole Proprietors. Post-free, Cuticura Book on Skin Diseases.

LATEST SHIPPING.

ARRIVALS.

Glenroy, British steamer, 3,141, F. Darke, 8th Aug.,—London via ports, General.—Jardine Matheson & Co.
Kosai Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,423, M. Ogino, 9th Aug.,—Shanghai via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Mikawa Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,853, E. Combes, 9th Aug.,—Otaru via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Korea, American steamer, 5,651, A. Dixon, 9th Aug.,—San Francisco via Honolulu, Mails and General.—P.M. S.S. Co.
Prinz Regent Luitpold, German steamer, 3,920, O. Pahnke, 7th Aug.,—Hamburg via ports, Mails and General.—H. Ahrens & Co., Nachf.
Mortlake, British steamer, 1,737, F. Batten, 7th Aug.,—Kobe.—Dodwell & Co., Ltd.
Pak Ling, British steamer, 2,875, Taylor, 10th Aug.,—Glasgow and Liverpool via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.
Deucalion, British steamer, 4,476, Riepenhausen, 11th Aug.,—Glasgow and Liverpool via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.
Fukuoka Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,997, Igawa, 11th Aug.,—Takao, General.—Osaka Shosen Kaisha.
Flintshire, British steamer, 2,476, G. C. Cundy, 12th Aug.,—London via ports, General.—Samuel Samuel & Co.
Yarra, French steamer, 2,115, H. Sellier, 12th Aug.,—Marseilles via ports, Mails and General.—M. M. Co.

Asia, British steamer, 2,936, Harry Gaukroger, 12th Aug.,—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—O. & O. S.S. Co.
Kasenga, British steamer, 2,923, Dobbs, 13th Aug.,—New York via ports, General.—Sile and Frazar.
Chikuzen Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,458, N. Shimizu, 13th Aug.,—Shanghai via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Anhui, British steamer, 1,350, A. H. Harris, 13th Aug.,—Shanghai via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.
Riojun Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,980, T. Tibbals, 13th Aug.,—Otaru via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Tokasago Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,065, M. Machida, 13th Aug.,—Newchwang via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Nigata Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,353, K. Sveda, 13th Aug.,—Hakodate, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Kichiu Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,492, R. Watanabe, 13th Aug.,—Wakamatsu, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Yawata Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,366, K. Homma, 13th Aug.,—Melbourne via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Linan, British steamer, 1,352, Williams, 13th Aug.,—Shanghai via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.
Buyo Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,044, 13th Aug.,—Uruga, Toyo Kisen Kaisha.

DEPARTURES.

Armand Behic, French steamer, 2,819, Guionnet, 8th Aug.,—Marseilles via ports, Mails and General.—M.M. Co.
Eroll, British steamer, 2,887, James, 8th Aug.,—New York via ports, General.—Dodwell & Co.
Chinhua, British steamer, 1,349, J. B. Harris, 8th Aug.,—Shanghai via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.
Kagoshima Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,731, N. Teranaka, 8th Aug.,—Otaru via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Silvia, German steamer, 4,212, Taeger, 8th Aug.,—Havre and Hamburg via ports, General.—C. Illies & Co.
Yamaguchi Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,059, Y. Kamoshita, 9th Aug.,—Shanghai via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Yechigo Maru, Japanese steamer, 712, T. Terada, 9th Aug.,—Yokkaichi, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Tango Maru, Japanese steamer, 4,627, W. Thompson, 9th Aug.,—Mojji, Ballast.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Yechigo Maru, Japanese steamer, 712, T. Terada, 7th Aug.,—Yokkaichi, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Mortlake, British steamer, 1,680, F. Batten, 10th Aug.,—New Castle N.S.W., General.—Dodwell & Co., Ltd.
Korea, American steamer, 5,651, A. Dixon, 10th Aug.,—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—P.M. S.S. Co.
Mikawa Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,853, E. Combes, 10th Aug.,—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Syria, British steamer, 4,191, D. C. Gregor, 12th Aug.,—Marseilles, London and Antwerp via ports, General.—P. & O. S.N. Co.
Pakling, British steamer, 2,875, Taylor, 12th Aug.,—London, Amsterdam and Antwerp via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.
Kosai Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,423, Ogino, 13th Aug.,—Shanghai via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Asia, British steamer, 2,936, Harry Gaukroger, 13th Aug.,—San Francisco via Honolulu, Mails and General.—O. & O. S.N. Co.
Koshun Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,657, Ichiji, 13th Aug.,—Katsura, General.—Osaka Shosen Kaisha.

PASSENGERS.

ARRIVED.

Per German steamer Prinz Regent Luitpold from Hamburg and Bremen via ports:—Mr. Bergrat Newmann, Mr. Arthur, Miss Arthur, Mr. W. H. Purcell, Miss C. Harris, Mr. and Mrs. Ferd. Bornemann, daughter and servant, Mr. von Lochmeyer, Mr. Isenman, Mr. Schlichting, Dr. Paravicini, Mr. Ch. Braess and nurse, Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Ohl, Miss Ohl, Mr. W. F. Langten, Mr. Th. Gribayedoff, Mr. W. A. de Havilland, Mr. A. Mosch, Mr. Hano Dézes, Mr. Chas. Muir, Siebenschlein, Mr. Chas. W. Shearer, Mr. J. Georg, Mr. E. Steppen, Mr. Che San and family and Mr. Kwong Kwan Uh and party in cabin.
Per American steamer Korea from San Francisco via Honolulu:—Mr. C. W. Atkinson, Mrs. C. W. Atkinson, Miss M. F. Alchin, Mr. Frank Ashmore, Prof. Dr. Boedecker, Mrs. K. G. Gastleman, Miss Cornelia A. M. Clapp, Miss Clara A. Converse, Mr.

S. E. Cresap, Mr. Richard Cuntz, Rev. J. L. Cunningham, Miss G. D. Chu, Mr. W. M. Crunden, Mrs. A. B. Cook, Mr. F. N. Dressing, Mr. Wm. Gammell, Mr. W. Gilka, Mrs. J. G. Hyland, Dr. H. A. Hare, U.S.N., Mrs. H. A. Hare, Mrs. B. F. Hutchinson, Mr. M. M. Johnson, Mrs. M. M. Johnson, Mrs. O. P. Jackson, child and maid, Miss Kawashima, Mr. K. Kobayashi, Dr. W. Kaestner, Mr. Bruno Kuhn, Mr. J. G. Kniesche, Mrs. E. Knippenberg, Mr. E. M. Lyon, Mrs. E. M. Lyon, Miss Ruth Lyon, Mrs. A. Le Breton, Miss M. Le Breton, Rev. H. W. Lampe, Mr. Ramon Larrain, Mr. Ramon Larrain Jr., Miss Emma Larrain, Miss Aida Larrain, Mrs. R. W. McNeely, Mrs. J. R. McKeldin, Mr. Karl Mann, Mrs. J. H. Meniam, Mr. Frank Metzner, Mr. Murray Marshall, Mrs. J. Murray Marshall, Miss C. E. Mills, Mr. L. C. Mowry, Mrs. L. C. Mowry, Mrs. R. F. Nicholson, Mr. E. H. Parrish, Mrs. E. H. Parrish, Mrs. Sarah V. Paiks, General-Lieut. Von Saldern, Mr. C. W. Pang, Mrs. E. F. Qualtrough, Mr. Ernest Roussin, Mr. Ernest Rosenfeld, Mr. Frederick Richter, Mrs. W. H. H. Southerland, Miss Southerland, Miss M. Southerland, Mr. W. S. Springman, Miss M. E. Sullivan, Mr. B. H. Taylor, Mr. H. Taylor, Bishop Seth Ward, Mr. F. Wilhelm, Mrs. Dion Williams, Mr. Wm. R. Whitier, Mrs. Wm. R. Whitier, Miss Chioi Yamada and Mr. Y. G. Yung. For Kobe:—Mr. W. F. Bull, Mrs. W. F. Bull, Master W. F. Bull, Miss Mary V. Bull, Miss Margaret Bull, Master Gordon Curtis, Miss B. L. Mackenzie, Miss K. McCune, Mr. J. Paige, Mrs. J. Paige, Miss Emeline Paige, Mr. Manuel Perry, Dr. A. M. Sharrocks, Mrs. A. M. Sharrocks, Miss Ella Sharrocks, Miss Marion Sharrocks, Miss Theodora Sharrocks, Mr. S. Uchiyama, Rev. Harry Rhodes, Mrs. Harry Rhodes. For Shanghai:—Mrs. C. H. Blake, Miss Blake, Mr. C. B. Clarke, Mr. Henry V. Lacy, Mr. Wm. Martin, Mr. Thomas T. Griffin, Mrs. Thomas T. Griffin, Mr. Wm. H. Nafey, Mrs. Wm. H. Nafey, Mrs. L. D. Ross Thompson, Mrs. Helen H. Taylor, Miss Helen B. Taylor, Mr. R. Van Loo, Miss Grace Woodbridge, Mr. Kim Yun Lam and Mrs. Jennie C. Lam. For Hongkong:—Mr. Y. S. Chung, Mr. R. J. Andrews, Mr. T. A. Baumeister, Mr. C. Blosser, Mr. W. M. Chisholm, Mr. L. E. Doyle, Mrs. L. E. Doyle, Judge W. L. Goldsborough, Mr. J. W. Graham, Mr. W. C. Holmes, Mr. H. Homans, Mr. E. W. Hulet, Mr. B. E. Lear, Mr. C. D. Lefevre, Mrs. Georgia Leonard, Comdr. Edward Lloyd Jr., U.S.N., Mr. W. E. McVey, Mr. Wm. Mustard, Mrs. Florence Mustard and child, Miss Edith Moore, Mr. E. A. Morgan, Mr. G. W. Satterthwaite, Mr. H. S. Schick, Mr. W. H. Taylor, Dr. F. J. Whitehill, Mrs. Frances Jensch and Miss Emily Jensch in cabin.

EXPECTED.

Per British steamer Asia from Hongkong via ports:—Mr. A. S. Hewitt, Mrs. E. Holly, Miss A. A. Bolton and Mr. H. R. Spencer. For Honolulu:—Mrs. H. C. Anderson. For San Francisco:—Col. W. C. Green, Dr. W. J. Calbraith, Mr. W. Daniel, Mr. A. R. Lewis, Capt. T. J. Owen, Rev. J. E. Thomas, Miss Lillian Thomas, Master Walter Thomas, Miss C. Green, Mr. C. Glover, Mr. T. C. Haston, Mr. J. Jannicke, Mrs. T. J. Owen and infant, Mrs. J. B. Thomas, Miss Edith Thomas and Mr. Alex. Ichon in cabin.

DEPARTED.

Per German steamer Prinz Eitel Friedrich from Europe via ports:—Capt. Wollseifen, Mrs. Alf. Aurum, Mr. Tos. M. P. Hermanns and Mr. Hans Koller in cabin.
Per French steamer Armand Behic for Marseilles via ports:—Dr. Y. Y. Ching, Mr. le Breton, Mr. Peri Noel, Miss Domballe and 3 enfants, Mrs. and Dr. Chagarain and Mr. Robert Chainaye in cabin; Mr. Ah Chan in steerage.

Per American steamer Korea for Hongkong via ports:—Mr. Ko and native servant, Mr. Thos. Weer and wife, Mrs. Wong, infant and amah, Mr. F. G. Rogers, Mr. F. B. Jackson, Mr. O. G. Bonnett, Mr. E. M. Lyon and wife, Miss Lyon, Mrs. V. C. Cooper and Mr. C. W. Blake in cabin.

Per British steamer Syria for Marseilles, London and Antwerp via ports:—Mr. A. Learnmouth, Mr. T. A. Ross and Mrs. Ayscough in cabin; one Chinese in steerage.

Per British steamer Asia for San Francisco via Honolulu:—Mrs. H. C. Anderson, Mr. W. Daniel, Dr. W. J. Galbraith, Mr. C. Glover, Col. W. C. Green, Miss C. Green, Mr. T. C. Haston, Mr. A. Ichon, Mr. H. Jennicke, Mr. A. R. Lewis, Capt. T. J. Owen, Mrs. T. J. Owen and infant, Mr. E. Schreck, Rev. J. B. Thomas, Mrs. J. B. Thomas, Miss L. Thomas, Master Walter Thomas and Miss Georgina Weaver in cabin.

CARGO.

Per British steamer Syria for Marseilles, London and Antwerp via ports:—Raw silk, 99 bales. Waste silk, 45 bales.

SILK SHIPPERS.

Raw & Waste Silk shipped per steamer
Armand Behic:—

	RAW.				WASTE.
	Marseilles	Lyon.	Russia.	Milan.	Marseilles	Trieste.	Genoa.
Nabholz & Co.	147	—	—	—	—	—	—
Siber Wolf & Co.	135	30	—	—	—	—	—
Boyer, Mazet Guil-	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
lee & Co.	62	—	—	—	—	—	—
Hara Yushutsuten	50	—	10	—	—	—	—
Sieber & Co.	40	—	—	—	—	—	—
do Tamaito	10	—	—	—	—	—	—
L. Mottet	21	—	—	—	—	—	—
Sulzer Rudolph & Co.	10	—	—	—	—	—	—
Ulysse Pila & Co.	—	149	—	—	—	—	—
F. Strahler & Co.	—	112	—	—	—	—	—
Jewett, Bent & Co.	—	20	—	—	—	—	—
P. Dourille	—	3	—	—	—	—	—
Bavie & Co.	—	10	—	—	—	—	—
C. Eymard & Co.	—	—	—	—	38	—	—
Jardine, Matheson	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
& Co.	—	—	—	—	—	20	—
Total	475	324	10	—	58	—	—

Silk shippers by Hongkong Maru, for San Francisco, on 5th Aug.:—

Siber, Wolff & Co.	109
Mitsui Bussan Kaisha	482

Total ..... 591

Silk shippers by Shinano Maru, for Seattle, on 5th Aug.:—

Nabholz & Co.	76
F. Strahler & Co.	65
Vivanti Bros.	60
China & Japan Trading Co., Ltd.	30
L. Mottet	15
Kitto Gomet Kaisha	211
Mitsui Bussan Kaisha	101
Doshin Kaisha	41

Total ..... 590

VESSELS TO ARRIVE.

NAME.	FROM.	REPORTED.
A. Apar	Calcutta	Due Kobe	Aug. 17
Ailsa Craig	London	Passed Canal	Aug. 3
Aldworth	London	Passed Canal	Aug. 3
Ambria	Hamburg	Passed Canal	July 16
America Maru	San Francisco	Left	Aug. 1
Arconia	Odessa	Left S'pore	July 27
A'ral Exelmans	Antwerp	Leaving Kobe	Aug. 20
Ajax	Liverpool	Leaves	June 27
Australien	Marseilles	Passed Canal	July 23
Bengloe	London	Left S'pore	July 15
Bellerophon	Liverpool	Left	June 20
Benlawers	London	Passed Canal	July 20
Benvenue	London	Passed Canal	Aug. 3
Bisley	New York	At H'kong	July 28
Bloemfontein	New York	Passed Gibr.	July 22
Bombay Maru	London	Left	Aug. 2
Brasilia	Hamburg	Passed Canal	July 27
Burrfield	Phila	Left	May 26
Cathay	London	Left S'pore	Aug. 6
Caravellas	Hongkong	Left	Aug. 11
Crewe Hall	London	Passed Canal	July 27
Cyrus	London	Passed Canal	June 26
Delhi	London	Left H'kong	Aug. 6
Derfflinger	Hamburg	Passed Canal	July 27
Deucahon	Liverpool	At Kobe	Aug. 6
D. Rickmers	Phila	Left	June 5
E. of Japan	Vancouver	Left	Aug. 5
E. of India	Vancouver	Left	Aug. 5
G'ganshire	Hamburg	Passed Canal	July 13
Glenfarg	Hongkong	Leaves	Aug. 8
Glenloch	Hamburg	Passed Canal	July 20
Hector	Liverpool	Left S'pore	Aug. 5
Hitachi Maru	London	Leaving	Aug. 8
Idomenus	Liverpool	Passed Canal	July 16
Inaba Maru	London	Left Suez	July 24
Indrani	New York	Passed Canal	July 23
Inverclyde	New York	Left	June 30
Inveric	Seattle	Left	Aug. 3
Ixon	Liverpool	Left	May 23
Jason	Liverpool	Passed Canal	July 23
Jesseic	New York	Due H'kong	Aug. 10
Kaga Maru	Seattle	Leaves	Aug. 4
Kamakura M.	London	Passed Canal	Aug. 10
Keemun	Tacoma	Leaves	Aug. 5
Koranna	New York	Leaves	Aug. 5
Lennox	Vancouver	Left	July 27
M. Rickmers	Hamburg	Passed Canal	July 30

Macduff	London	Passed Canal	July 16
Mongolia	Hongkong	Left	Aug. 8
Moyori Maru	Bombay	Left S'hai	Aug. 5
Myrmidon	Liverpool	Left S'pore	Aug. 4
Nicomedia	Astoria	Left	July 29
Ningchow	London	Passed Canal	July 30
Nore	London	Passed Canal	July 30
Numantia	New York	Left H'kong	July 31
Nyanza	Antwerp	Left S'hai	Aug. 7
Ouessant	Antwerp	Left S'hai	Aug. 5
Pakling	Liverpool	At Kobe	Aug. 5
Palma	London	Left Penang	Aug. 3
Patroclus	Liverpool	Left S'hai	July 31
Pera	London	Leaving	Aug. 1
Polyphemus	Ymuiden	Left	May 26
P. E. Friedrich	Bremen	Passed Canal	Aug. 3
Prometheus	Liverpool	Passed Canal	July 27
Queen Helena	Phila	Left	June 23
Silvia	Hamburg	Left S'hai	July 30
Slavonia	Hamburg	Left S'hai	Aug. 7
Takasaki Maru	Bombay	Left	Aug. 5
Tamba Maru	London	Left S'pore	July 31
Tjikini	Batavia	At Kobe	Aug. 6
Tjilatjap	Batavia	Left M'cassar	July 24
Tudor Prince	New York	Leaving	July 30
Vandalia	New York	At H'kong	July 24
Vorwaerts	Trieste	Left	June 16
Yawata Maru	Melbourne	Leaving H'kong	Aug. 5
Yunnan	London	Left S'hai	July 26

SAILING VESSELS.

Preussen	New York	Y'kohama	Left May 26
M'chal Suchet	New York	Loading	May 27
Beaunanoir	New York	Loading	May 27

Taking

BOVRIL

means fortifying yourself against disease.Lea and Perrins'
Sauce.By Royal Warrant
to
His Majesty the King.

THE ORIGINAL AND GENUINE WORCESTERSHIRE.

MAIL STEAMERS.

NEXT MAIL IS DUE

From	Line.	Steamer.	Date.
Hongkong	B. T.	Suvaric	Th. Aug. 13
Hongkong	P. & A.	Numantia 1	Sa. Aug. 15
Hongkong	P. M.	Mongolia 2	Tu. Aug. 18
Portland	P. & A.	Nicomedia 3	Tu. Aug. 18
America	T. K. K.	America Maru 4	W. Aug. 19
Vancouver	C. P. R.	Em. of Japan 5	W. Aug. 19
Hongkong	C. P. R.	Glenfarg	Th. Aug. 20
Seattle	N. Y. K.	Kaga Maru	Th. Aug. 20
Europe	N. D. L.	Derfflinger	Sa. Aug. 22
Tacoma	H. T.	Inveric	Su. Aug. 23
Hongkong	C. P. R.	Em. of India	M. Aug. 24
America	P. M.	Siberia 6	Th. Aug. 27
Hongkong	T. K. K.	Tenyo Maru	F. Aug. 28
Vancouver	C. P. R.	Monteagle	M. Aug. 31
America	P. M.	China	Th. Sept. 3
Hongkong	P. M.	Korea	W. Sept. 9
Seattle	G. N.	Minnesota	Sa. Sept. 19
America	T. K. K.	Hongkong Maru	Tu. Sept. 15
America	O. & O.	Asia	Sa. Sept. 26
Hongkong	P. M.	Siberia	Th. Oct. 1

- 1 Left Hongkong on the 31st ult.
- 2 Left Hongkong on the 8th inst.
- 3 Left Astoria on the 29th ult.
- 4 Left San Francisco on the 1st inst.
- 5 Left Vancouver on the 5th inst.
- 6 Left San Francisco on the 11th inst.

NEXT MAIL LEAVES

For	Line.	Steamer.	Date.
Tacoma	B. T.	Suvaric	Sa. Aug. 15
Europe	N. D. L.	P. R. Luitpold	Sa. Aug. 15
Portland	P. & A.	Numantia	Su. Aug. 16
Shanghai	N. Y. K.	Chikuzen Maru	Th. Aug. 16
Hongkong	T. K. K.	Ho kong Maru	M. Aug. 17
Hongkong	B. T.	Inveric	Tu. Aug. 18
Europe	N. Y. K.	Sanuki Maru	W. Aug. 19
Seattle	N. Y. K.	Tango Maru	W. Aug. 19
Hongkong	C. P. R.	Em. of Japan	W. Aug. 19
America	P. M.	Mongolia	W. Aug. 19
Hongkong	P. & A.	Nicomedia	W. Aug. 19
Vancouver	C. P. R.	Glenfarg	Th. Aug. 20
Hongkong	T. K. K.	America Maru	Th. Aug. 20
Europe	M. M.	Yarra	Sa. Aug. 22
Australia	N. Y. K.	Yawata Maru	Sa. Aug. 22
Hongkong	N. Y. K.	Kaga Maru	M. Aug. 24
Vancouver	C. P. R.	Em. of India	M. Aug. 24
Hongkong	P. M.	Siberia	Sa. Aug. 29
America	T. K. K.	Tenyo Maru	Su. Aug. 30
Hongkong	C. P. R.	Monteagle	M. Aug. 31
Hongkong	P. M.	China	Sa. Sept. 3
America	P. M.	Korea	F. Sept. 11
Hongkong	G. N.	Minnesota	Th. Sept. 17
Hongkong	O. & O.	Asia	Su. Sept. 27
America	P. M.	Siberia	F. Oct. 2

(毎土曜日一回發行)

總發行人兼發行人 エフ プリンター
支那人兼印刷人 ロバート ヘー
發行所 横濱市山下町五十五番
ウツパンメーブル新聞社

The Japan Weekly Mail:

毎土曜日 A REVIEW OF JAPANESE COMMERCE, POLITICS, LITERATURE, AND ART. 一回刊行

No. 8

REGISTERED AT THE G.P.O.
AS A NEWSPAPER.

YOKOHAMA, AUG. 22ND, 1908.

明治廿五年三月廿日
第三種郵便物認可

VOL. L.

CONTENTS.

Summary of News .....	300
The Seoul Affair .....	310
The Great Exhibition .....	311
Finance .....	312
The Two Schooners .....	312
America and China .....	313
The Kawakita Affair .....	313
China .....	314
Korea .....	314
The Portsmouth Negotiations .....	315
Extravagance Among Soldiers .....	315
Count Okuma .....	315
The Army .....	316
Prince Ito .....	316
The Fishery Question .....	316
"Fifty Years of Open Japan." .....	316
Impartiality .....	317
A Suggestion .....	317
The Weather .....	317
Notes on Current Events .....	317
Business Notes .....	318
The Tokyo Stock Exchange .....	318
Amateur Dramatic Club of Yokohama .....	319
Leading Articles:—
Foreign Capital .....	320
Education for Foreign Children in Japan .....	320
The Insurance in Korea .....	321
Count Okuma .....	321
Around Port Arthur .....	322
The West Japan Presbyterian Mission .....	322
Far Eastern Public Hall Co., Ltd. .....	323
Ugly Symptoms in Japanese Society and Their Cause .....	323
The Bank of Japan .....	324
The Backshelf .....	324
Thunder Storm .....	324
The Dolai Lama .....	324
Yokohama .....	325
Baseball .....	325
Band Reclamation .....	326
Mr. S. Cocking .....	326
Yachting .....	326
The Imperial Court .....	326
News of the Week .....	326
Marriage Customs Among the Natives of Southern Nigeria .....	327
Gaul Outbreak at Shanghai .....	327
Japan in Korea .....	327
C. response:—
The "Rudder" Cup .....	328
Stray Dogs .....	328
British Association Language Scheme .....	328
The Mail Bag .....	328
The Yokohama Yacht Club .....	328
Kindergarten Union of Japan .....	328
Hirado and Will Adams .....	328
Dorham White Stevens .....	329
Telegrams .....	333
Trouble in the K. R. & A. C. .....	333
Latest Commercial .....	333
Latest Shipping .....	335

"FAIS CE QUE DOIS; ADVIENNE QUE POURRA!"

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

No notice will be taken of anonymous correspondence. What is intended for insertion in the "JAPAN WEEKLY MAIL" must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer, not for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

It is particularly requested that all letters on business be addressed to the MANAGER, and Cheques be made payable to same; and that literary contributions be addressed to the EDITOR.

YOKOHAMA: SATURDAY, AUG. 22ND, 1908.

BIRTHS.

SALE—On the 14th inst. at No. 118 c, Bluff, the wife of F. G. SALE, of a Daughter.

At 221 Bluff, Yokohama, Aug. 17, 1908, to Mr. and Mrs. EDWIN T. IGLEHART of Aoyama Gakuin, Tokyo, a son.

ABENHEIM—On the 18th instant at 35 Kitanocho, Kobe, the wife of F. B. ABENHEIM of a Son.

SUMMARY OF NEWS.

THE first meeting of the Essa Race Club in Niigata will be held on Sept. 5th, 6th, 8th, and 9th.

THE Yokohama Railway between Kanagawa and Hachioji will be opened for traffic at the end of August.

ON Aug. 17th, an old man was found to have hanged himself in the grounds of the Buddhist temple Shotoku-ji, Yokosuka. He was not identified.

THE damage caused by the recent storm in Yokosuka and adjoining districts seems to have been severe. In the city 200 landslides occurred and 70 houses collapsed or were partly damaged,

In Kimibama, 160 houses were flooded and a number of bridges were washed away.

DRS. G. SHIBAYAMA, J. TSUDZUKI and Y. MIYAMOTO has been appointed to investigate beri-beri in Batavia.

DYSENTERY has appeared in the district of the upper Doshi River, the source of the Yokohama Water Works.

THE bazaar opened by Chinese at Canton on Aug. 6th in aid of the flood fund, drew $30,000 for the first two days.

MARQUIS GUICCIOLI has been appointed Italian Ambassador to Japan. He will arrive in Tokyo about the beginning of October.

TWENTY-THREE printers, book-sellers and illustrated post-card sellers were arrested in Tokyo on Aug. 13th, for selling indecent pictures.

PRINCE KANIN has been appointed to preside at the opening ceremony of the trans-Formosan railway at Taihoku, to take place on Oct. 24th.

OWING to the recent storm the cable between Moji and Kelung has been damaged. Communication was stopped on the evening of Aug. 12th.

THE Crown Prince of Korea arrived at Gifu on Friday. His Highness is expected to proceed at once to the villa of Prince Ito in Oiso, where he will stay for a few days.

BARON G. HAYASHI, new Ambassador to Italy, left Yokohama on Aug. 19th by the Sanuki Maru to take up his position. A large number of high officials from Tokyo saw him off at the pier.

FURTHER details are to hand of the conflagration which occurred at Horonai near Sapporo on Aug. 13th. Two hundred and seventy-seven houses were destroyed. The damage is estimated at yen 220,000.

ABOUT the end of July the deposits in postal saving banks throughout the Empire were yen 101,877,719. The figures show an increase of yen 1,714,650 over the sum at the end of the previous month.

ON Tuesday afternoon, a man, apparently a workman, about 30 years of age committed suicide by throwing himself into the sea near Takashimacho. He was not identified, and the cause of his action remains unknown.

THE K. R. & A. C. Autumn Regatta will take place, says the Kobe Herald, on the 3rd October, when there will be the following events:—International Fours, Senior Fours, Junior Fours, Senior Pairs, Junior Pairs, Senior Double Sculls and Tubs.

THE positions of the warship Yashima, Takasago and Sebastopol, which were sunk off Port Arthur during the war, have been ascertained. They are said to lie in 50 fathoms. According to a report from Saselo the floating of the ships is not entirely hopeless.

A YOUNG man was arrested on Aug. 19th by a detective of the Kaga-cho Police Office. He had broken into the office of the International Cash Register Co., No. 70, on the night of July 18th and stolen a silver flower-vase and a type-writer, valued at yen 300 in all.

MR. E. OLDENBURG had a rather unpleasant experience on Friday afternoon while going up the hill at Kobe in a jinrikisha. He was caught by a telephone wire which was left by the men at work on it to hang low over the road. Fortunately he was able after the first shock, retaining his seat, to pass the wire over his head but in the effort lost his gold rimmed glasses, which were later found in fragments.

THE sale of the latest number of the Tokyo Puck has been prohibited on the ground that this ostensibly comic periodical published an illustration injurious to social order.

A PAINFUL lift accident took place on Aug. 6th at the new premises of Messrs. Mustard & Co., Shanghai, where a young foreigner named C. M. Sequeira, aged 18, had his hands caught between a descending lift and one of the floors. He is badly injured but will recover.

ANOTHER scene took place in the Kobe Chihō Saibansho on Saturday in connection with the examination of the notorious burglar, Morikami Kenji. As on former occasions the accused was very violent; at the conclusion of the hearing judgment was reserved till Aug. 20th.

OWING to the great destruction of property and loss of life in the recent typhoon, H.E. Viceroy Chang has given instructions to the Commissioner of Customs at Canton to establish an Observatory and erect three stations in the Harbour for hoisting typhoon signals to warn the public of approaching typhoons.

A LONDON telegram was received on Aug. 19th in Tokyo to the effect that the money market was generally quiet. Owing to purchases by some capitalists, the price of the various Japanese loan bonds has risen. The transactions however were not of a speculative character. Enquiries have appeared in London from the Continent for gold bullion.

IT may be of interest to numismatists to know that a new dollar recently struck in Tientsin has it recorded on the obverse side that this is the "33th" year of the reign of the Emperor. The mistake was soon detected, and it is estimated that only about 2,000 of the coins were left in circulation after the order for their recall had been given.

ACCORDING to reports received at the Yokohama Police headquarters, damage from the recent storm seems not to have been severe in rural districts. A house was destroyed by lightning in Ideura near Yokosuka; some trees collapsed in Kamakura, Oiso and other places. Slight damage was sustained in Yokohama as the result of floods and small landslides.

AN Indian passenger died on the British steamer Arratoon Apea, which arrived at Yokohama on Monday morning from Shanghai. Two other Indians were found to be ill, and on examination it was found that all three were cholera cases. The surviving patients have been placed under treatment and the vessel proceeded to Nagahama on Monday to undergo five days quarantine.

WHILE Messrs. A. McGlew, E. H. Reynell, and M. Ellerton were fishing on Sunday in the Harima Nada, about two miles west of the Shikano-se Buoy, said the Kobe Herald of Aug. 18th they encountered four sharks of the hammer-headed type. The first one was hit on the back with a harpoon consisting of a three pronged instrument on the end of a bamboo pole about 20 feet long. The second shark dived just as the harpoon was hurled at it. The third lost a bit of flesh, but the fourth was hit fair and square in the side. The shark went down rapidly, taking out about fifty fathoms of line, and on getting him about half way up he went off again at a tremendous speed, but after playing him for about 40 minutes he was landed safely in the boat at 6.30 p.m. amid great excitement. The shark was brought to Kobe on the 17th and is now being stuffed. It measured five feet from head to tip of tail.

THE SEOUL AFFAIR.

Friday, August 14.

The escape of Mr. Yang, Korean editor of the Dai Han Mai-Il Shinpo, assumes a curious aspect when viewed by the light of the latest intelligence. It is to be expected that very varied accounts will be published of this affair, and prudent people will consequently be disposed to suspend judgment until the exact particulars are known. Meanwhile the story published is this:—For some time back the friends of Mr. Yang had been publishing statements to the effect that his confinement was undermining his constitution and that his nervous system threatened to break down. No signs of any such trouble were visible to the prisoner's custodians, but it was finally decided that as the prison was not provided with any suitable sick bay, steps should be taken to secure admittance for Mr. Yang into the Government hospital in Seoul. When conveying this intelligence to him the head jailer warned him that his release was not contemplated for a moment and that he must promise to consider himself still a prisoner while in hospital. Yang gave the necessary engagement and was allowed to emerge from the jail, the belief being that the escort to conduct him to the hospital had already arrived. But it chanced that this was not the case. The escort had not yet put in an appearance and Yang took advantage of the opportunity to effect his escape to the office of the Dai Han Mai-Il Shinpo. He was followed thither by the escort, but the foreign proprietor of the paper refused to give him up without the authority of a Consular warrant. The Japanese Resident therefore addressed a request to the British Consul-General, but the latter declined to give any such document without reference to his superiors. This is one of the most inexplicable features of the affair, for Yang had been duly remanded for trial on a charge of malversation, and it is difficult to understand what consideration can have induced the British Consul to refuse a warrant for the man's arrest. There must be some explanation of such an exceptional course and we necessarily refrain from comment pending the publication of the Consul's story. The Nichi Nichi Shinbun publishes the text of the Procurator's charge against Mr. Yang. It is very explicit. The allegations are that a sum of about 100,000 yen collected for the alleged purpose of discharging the National Debt and for other objects was falsely asserted to have been lodged with Messrs. Collbran and Bostwick, whereas in reality it was spent by Yang and his confederates for purchasing shares and for other improper purposes. The name of Mr. Bethell appears in the indictment, but whether he is accused of actual malversation or only of having co-operated in collecting the subscriptions we can not clearly discern. The evident apprehension is that Yang will utilise his temporary freedom to destroy proofs of his guilt, if he be really guilty.

Saturday, August 15.

Most unfortunate misunderstandings have arisen with reference to the Yang business in Seoul. There appears to be no doubt that the British Consul has refused a warrant for the re-arrest of Yang. It must be assumed that he has good reason, according to his own opinion, for taking such a step, but the reason assigned to him and telegraphed to all leading Tokyo journals from Seoul is not only incredible, but also calculated to provoke a strong feeling of resentment. He is said to have rejected the application of the police on the ground that when Yang appeared as a witness at the Bethell trial the Japanese authorities gave an engagement that no proceedings would be subsequently issued against him in connexion with any evidence he might give. On the strength of that assurance the Consul is now represented as maintaining that Mr. Yang cannot properly be arraigned. We can not for a moment believe that the Consul has adopted such a line. It is evident to the most obtuse intelligence that the assurance given in connexion with the Bethell trial must have been limited to incidents directly arising out of that trial, and cannot possibly be construed as a guarantee of perpetual immunity with regard to any and every act of Mr. Yang's life. The malversation of funds subscribed for the purpose of national-debt redemption is a matter entirely apart from the offences for which Mr. Bethell was arraigned two months ago. An attempt has been made by certain unscrupulous partisans of Mr. Bethell to persuade the public that the arraignment of Yang on the charge of malversation has no foundation in justice but is simply a vindictive act of revenge planned and engineered by the Residency-General. There may be folks so malicious as to believe this, and unhappily there are newspapers like the Japan Chronicle and the Japan Herald sufficiently reckless to lend their columns for the ventilation of such slanders in a case actually sub judice. But that the British Consul should openly assist in fixing such a gross insult upon the Japanese Government we cannot believe. What has probably happened is that the British Consul complains of the unfortunately irregular procedure followed by the Seoul police in the first instance in effecting Mr. Yang's arrest, and that he has asked to be assured of the existence of a prima facie case before consenting to give a warrant. Even that is unfortunate enough in the circumstances, for in the eyes of the general public in Japan and Korea the Consul's conduct will certainly be misconstrued. We would therefore remind both the Koreans and the Japanese that one of the rarest events in the world is an act of deliberate injustice on the part of a British official, and that it is absolutely necessary to suspend judgment until the exact facts are known. Tokyo papers add that people in Korea are now fully persuaded as to the act of malversation. They allege that in his preliminary examination Yang admitted that the inception of the subscription scheme had been formed by him and Mr. Bethell. He affirmed that the money was safely invested in shares in private hands or in banks, but inquiries made by the Court failed to establish the truth of these allegations, and therefore the prisoner was remanded for trial.

Sunday, August 16.

The Nichi Nichi Shinbun has a telegram from Seoul dated the 15th inst. which says that, in answer to the application made by Mr. Consul Cockburn, the British Government declined to sanction the handing over of Mr. Yang. But in its same issue the Nichi Nichi publishes a doubly leaded paragraph in exactly the opposite sense. From this we learn that the British Government, having been advised by the British Ambassador in Tokyo, disavows any right to impose a veto and instructs that the accused shall be handed over without delay. This perplexing subject requires a good deal of explanation.

The action of the British Government, in the sense indicated by the Nichi Nichi's paragraph, was a foregone conclusion, but the action of the British Consul in refusing to act without instructions from London must have been due to some exceptional circumstance which has not been yet explained. The treaty between Great Britain and Korea is absolutely explicit. It says:—“If a Korean subject who is charged with an offence against the laws of his country takes refuge on premises occupied by a British subject or on board a British merchant vessel, the British Consular authorities, on receiving an application from the Korean authorities, shall take steps to have such person arrested and handed over to the latter for trial.” This article leaves no discretion whatever to the British Consular authorities. They are bound to act on receipt of an application from the Korean authorities. Mr. Cockburn was of course perfectly well aware of all this, and there must have been some special reason for his exceptional procedure. We entertain no doubt that he acted according to a full conviction of his duty and that his conduct will be found to have been justifiable when all the details are known.

Monday, August 17.

The Seoul Press of the 14th instant gives the following account of the recent strange affair:—

A curious thing has happened in connection with the National Debt Redemption Case. The accused, Yang Kitak, who has been under arrest, is now at large, having taken refuge in the building of the Tai Han Mai-Il Shinpo.

It happened in this way. On Tuesday the 11th inst., the accused underwent a medical examination in prison, when it was found that, although he was not suffering from any particular complaint, his digestive organs were somewhat impaired. It was consequently decided to send him to the Tai Han Hospital and have his condition more fully examined and if necessary to be treated there, as there was no sick ward in the prison. The Chief Procurator of the Local Court, consequently, issued instructions to the Governor of the Seoul Prison, ordering him to send the accused to the Hospital under proper police escort. This was shortly after five on the same afternoon. The Governor of the prison at once summoned the prisoner before him and told him that he was going to be sent to the hospital under arrest to be examined and if necessary to receive treatment there. The prisoner was then conducted back to his place of confinement. At the same time, the necessary orders were issued to the subordinate prison officials. But while they were waiting for the arrival of a police escort from the Metropolitan Police Office, one of the guards, who had immediate charge of the prisoner, set him free, thinking somehow that he had been released on bail.

On the discovery of the stupid mistake, officers were at once sent out to re-arrest the accused. It being soon found that he had gone to the office of the Tai Han Mai-Il Shinpo, the officers went there and asked the English proprietor of the paper to hand over the man, as he had been released by mistake. The request being refused, the Korean Government approached the British Consul-General, through Resident Miura, asking for assistance in putting the accused under arrest. The British Consul-General, however, refused to render the required assistance, alleging that he could not take any step until he had communicated with his home Government and received its instructions.

Under the circumstances, the public trial announced for Saturday the 17th inst., has been postponed sine die.

Our contemporary comments editorially on the above in the following strain:—

As mentioned elsewhere, an unexpected hitch has arisen relating to the case of alleged fraud in connection with the fund collected at the office of the Korea Daily News and the Tai Han Mai-Il Shinpo for the Quixotic object of paying off Korea's debt to Japan. The case was to come up for hearing at the Local Court of Seoul to-morrow morning, but, owing to the temporary absence of the accused under peculiar circumstances, the trial has had to be postponed indefinitely. The prison guard whose stupidity is primarily responsible for the regrettable hitch, will no doubt be dealt with as he deserves. But it is a source of sincere regret for us to have to record in connection with this incident the strange conduct on the part of the respected Consular Representative of our European Allies. It is expressly stipulated in Article IV (paragraph 9) of the Treaty between England and Korea, that "if a Korean subject who is charged with an offence against the laws of his country takes refuge on premises occupied by a British subject or on board a British merchant vessel, the British Consular Authorities, on receiving an application from the Korean Authorities, shall take steps to have such person arrested and handed over to the latter for trial." According to this stipulation, there is no room for doubt that, on receipt of application from the Korean Government, through Resident Miura, for the arrest of Yang Kitaik, he having taken refuge on British-occupied premises, it was the duty of the British Consul-General to lose no time in having him arrested and handed over to the Korean Authorities. The necessity for immediate action in such cases generally is self-evident, for delay may very possibly defeat the ends of justice. Prompt action was particularly necessary in this special case for it so happened that the accused had taken refuge exactly where for obvious reasons it was least desirable. Yet in face of the express stipulation of the treaty and in view of the peculiar circumstances demanding prompt action, Mr. Cockburn, strange to say, refused to do anything for the apprehension of the accused, on the ground that he had first to communicate with the Home Government before he could take any steps in the matter. The result is that the accused is still staying with men who are most intimately interested in the case and with whom it is most undesirable in the interests of justice that he should have any communication. The British Consul-General, it is only fair to presume, has reason, and, from his point of view, good reason for his attitude in regard to this matter. But we are constrained to say frankly that we experience considerable difficulty in reconciling his attitude with the plain obligation which the express treaty stipulation imposes upon him.

There is no news this morning as to how this business has ended, but the Nichi Nichi Shimbun has a telegram from Seoul saying that Mr. Consul Cockburn has been instructed to hand over Mr. Yang, on condition that the latter is allowed to remain in hospital until the day of his public trial. From this we infer that a suspicion exists as to the accused having been subjected to torture, or, at any rate, to harsh treatment, during his detention in prison. It is impossible to say what may not happen in a Korean jail, but we trust that the reforms which Japan is introducing in Korea will soon extend to the realm of prison management. There is talk in Seoul that this temporary release of Mr. Yang has been utilized to destroy proofs. That is very likely if we assume that Yang is guilty, but we have no business to make any such assumption. At any rate the fact that he has been suffered to go at large when the ends of justice required his close confinement is very unfortunate, and we sincerely trust that Mr. Cockburn's reasons for postponing re-arrest will be fully explained.

Tuesday, August 18.

According to a telegram published by the Fiji Shimpō there had been no signs of the surrender of Mr. Yang up to the evening of the 17th inst. If the information thus far published be trustworthy, the situation is decidedly strange. It is understood that the British Government lost no time in instructing the Consul in Seoul to hand over Mr. Yang, and it is plain from the terms of the Treaty that no right of exercising discretion in such a matter is vested in a British Consul. Yet more than five days have elapsed since Mr. Yang obtained his liberty and nevertheless he remains still at large. The only explanation we can conceive is that his health has broken down so badly that to be placed again in confinement might be fatal. But, however desirous we may be to adopt that explanation, the fact remains that the Korean police authorities had arranged to send Mr. Yang to the hospital and to leave him there until his public trial took place. At any rate, even if the British Consul were acting purely in obedience to humane motives, it would seem to have been his duty to enlist the coöperation of the police. One good result may possibly be obtained from the incident: the Korean Government may be induced to undertake the work of prison reform. There is so much to be done in Korea and the resources available for doing it are so scanty that one hesitates to complain of tardiness, especially in the matter of prison reform, which in all countries received only belated attention. Still everything that stimulates the Koreans to undertake this reform is to be welcomed.

Thursday, August 20.

Two somewhat contradictory telegrams are published by the Asahi Shimbun this morning (Thursday) with reference to the affair of Mr. Yang. One of these telegrams represents the British Consul as still hesitating; the other alleges that he has made up his mind to surrender Mr. Yang unconditionally.

We may mention here that a mischievous and most misleading article has been published by a Yokohama journal on this subject. The article contains several statements inconsistent with the Treaty between Great Britain and Korea, and deliberately endeavours to create a prejudice in favour of the accused person by appealing to the rights of British subjects. It is obviously out of the question to enter into a discussion of this matter while the case is sub judice. The journal to which we allude professes to believe that the British authorities refused to hand over Mr. Yang and that proceedings against him have therefore been abandoned. On the strength of that belief it claims exemption from the charge of seeking to prejudice a case which is actually under trial. The whole proceeding is about as disingenuous and mischievous a piece of journalism as has ever been witnessed in this settlement. It strikingly illustrates the abuses to which the extraterritorial system is liable. The British authorities may be fully trusted to deal with this matter in full accord with the principles of justice and the provisions of the Treaty. There is no question of any violation of the rights of British subjects.

THE GREAT EXHIBITION.

For the last few days there has been a good deal of talk of postponing the great Exhibition until 1915. This change is attributed to financial considerations. More than one publicist has contended that the scheme of the Exhibition is like the proverbial strip of stuff, too short for a girdle and too long for a shoulder cord. On the other hand, to extend the scheme to suitable dimensions would be an undue tax on the Treasury's resources at present, and therefore postponement is reported to be under serious consideration. But in other quarters this is stoutly denied. Viscount Kaneko says that he has heard nothing of it, and neither has Mr. Wada, the head of the Business Bureau of the Exhibition. On the whole we are disposed to think that postponement would not be a wise measure. It would suggest a degree of financial embarrassment which does not exist, and it would place in a decidedly awkward position the foreign States which have already given a practical response to Japan's invitation. The alternative seems to us much more commendable, namely, that Japan should cut her coat according to her cloth: that is to say, while adhering to her original project so far as time is concerned, she should adapt its dimensions to her own convenience. She is not called upon to make a great splurge. Nobody expects it of her and nobody would be deluded by it. The first International Exhibition held in London was only the embryo of its successor, yet it satisfied and astonished the world at the time, and it is pretty certain that if Japan manages cleverly—as we are confident she will do under the direction of Viscount Kaneko—she can have a most attractive show without putting her hand too deeply into her pocket.

The question of postponing the Exhibition of 1912 appears to be assuming dimensions which could scarcely have been anticipated. Publicists in favour of postponement urge the impossibility of completing the necessary preparations in the short space of three and a half years now remaining. They speak of linking up land and sea communications, of improving railways and of building hotels. All these things will require a large expenditure of money, and such outlays are not convenient in the present condition of the finances. On the other hand, the advocates of adhering to the original programme affirm that the Exhibition was originally intended to be a domestic affair and that its international character is a mere addendum. Whatever postponement may be made, Japan cannot hope to rival rich foreign countries in the display she offers, neither will foreign countries expect her to rival them. After all, the object of the Exhibition is to promote trade and industry, and not merely to make an ostentatious display. Then there is the further consideration that invitations have already been issued to foreign Powers, and that some of them have actually made appropriations and appointed committees with the object of taking part in the affair. What adequate excuse for postponement could be offered to these States? The Nippon, we observe, writes in the sense that if the Cabinet, by way of preface to postponement, effects substantial reductions in the appropriations for the Army and the Navy, the nation will acquiesce, but if the Exhibition is sacrificed on the altar of expanded armaments, there will inevitably be a loud outcry.

In spite of official denials Japanese newspapers continue to insist that a postponement of the Exhibition of 1912 is earnestly discussed. The Chuo, for example, quotes an anonymous Minister of State as saying that things cannot possibly be ready in time. The outlay is put at 16 million yen, of which the Treasury has to find 6 millions. So far as the Government is concerned, that is not a difficult programme, since it is spread over a period of some four years, but the Tokyo Municipality is in a much more difficult position. The plan for raising revenue by an increased scale of fares, after the municipalization of the Tokyo Railway, has fallen through, and no substantial source of revenue is in sight. This Minister thinks, therefore, that instead of trying to do more than she is competent to accomplish, Japan should quietly postpone the date of the Exhibition for several years. He notes that in spite of the wonderful development of German industries, Germany has not yet thought of organising an international exhibition, and he does not see that Japan would lose prestige or forfeit confidence by frankly acknowledging that she took a premature step when she fixed 1912 as the date for this enterprise.

FINANCE.

Friday, August 14.

The Chuo Shimbun publishes some interesting calculations relating to the redemption of national debts. We shall not set down the calculations in detail as it will suffice to give the broad results. These are that the total sum allotted by the present law for the payment of principal and interest of the national debts in 176 million yen. The question is how much of this goes to interest and how much to amortization. Our contemporary's calculations show that taking every item into account the total interest payable is 135,707,000 yen. If this be subtracted from the above sum of 176 millions, there remains 40,293,000 yen available for purposes of amortization. To this has to be added 3½ millions, being interest on the Treasury bills now in process of redemption, and thus the total available for purposes of amortization is 43,793,000 yen. It appears, therefore, that if an additional sum of about 16 millions was provided, the amortization fund would be brought up to the figure advocated by the bankers, namely, 60 million yen.

There is a great deal on the subject of finance in the columns of the Tokyo press at present. This indeed is the problem to which public attention is mainly directed. It seems to be agreed on all sides that the Katsura Cabinet has devised some means of introducing a great improvement in the method of compiling the Budget, so that there shall be no more Departmental scrambling for appropriations as has hitherto been the case.

The Mainichi Dempo says that Marquis Katsura's schemes of financial adjustment are even larger than those advocated by the people. He aims at producing an appreciation of State securities by 10 or 12 points. Until such appreciation shall have taken place the bonds representing the purchase-price of the private railways can not be handed over, and only three years now remain of the period assigned by law for the completion of this transaction.

The Jiji Shimpō quotes a member of the House of Peers described as being intimate with Marquis Katsura. According to this authority's statements, the Marquis does not contemplate retrenchment and postponement merely for the purpose of redeeming the national debts. He considers it just as essential that really productive enterprises should be carried on, and that some increase should be made of junior officials' salaries, which are now so inadequate that good men cannot be induced to serve.

Sunday, August 16.

Marquis Katsura entertained the leading business men of Tokyo at the Mitsui Club on the 14th inst. and made a speech which was of course couched in general terms. The gist of it was that his Excellency warmly acknowledged the assistance he had received from the business men during the War with Russia, and expressed a confident hope that the same aid would be given to him in adjusting the national finances.

The Asahi Shimbun devotes three columns to an exposé of the Government's financial policy, based on information said to have been received from a trustworthy source. The statement does not differ from accounts already published in a more fragmentary form by other journals. Its gist briefly epitomized is this:—Immediately after the War, the Government, sharing the expansive feeling which then prevailed, drafted a budget whose dimensions were not consonant with the real state of affairs. This defect became apparent while the Saionji Cabinet was in office, and steps were accordingly taken to effect large postponements of the original programme. Even this, however, did not prove sufficient, and the Saionji Ministry resigned the conduct of affairs to the present Cabinet. Marquis Katsura came into office with the firm conviction that, except in the case of enterprises so productive as to forbid postponement, a negative policy must be everywhere substituted for a positive, all recourse to further loans must be abandoned, and objectionable taxes must be as far as possible revised or removed. In pursuance of this resolve the six-year programme which, by postponements aggregating 100 million yen, the Saionji Cabinet elaborated, must now be extended to 10 or 11 years, and steps to that end are actually under consideration. With regard to the redemption of national debts, a considerable increase will be made in the sum annually allotted for that purpose, though whether as large an amount as 60 million yen can be reached is doubtful. Of course, reduction of administrative expenditure is contemplated, but as this involves administrative reforms which may cause delay, nothing complete can be accomplished in time for the next budget, and the method immediately pursued will be to cut down the appropriations for each Department by a certain percentage, which process will produce a sum of from 5 to 10 millions.

The Jiji Shimpō deals with the question of the third and fourth installments of exchequer bills, which have to be paid in 1910 and 1911 respectively, the sum due in the former year being 100 million yen, and that due in the latter 80 millions. It is the Government's intention, according to our contemporary, to increase to 50 million yen the annual appropriation for debt redemption purposes, and thus the amount to be paid in December 1910 will be provided. But there will be a deficiency of 30 millions in dealing with the sum due in December 1911. Moreover, the Government considers it necessary to provide an amount of some 50 million yen which may be applied to sustaining the market price of the bonds issued on account of railway nationalization. Of course, if 50 million yen be spent in buying up these bonds, the nation's liabilities will be diminished to that extent, but the redemption of exchequer bills falling due in 1911 will still have to be dealt with, and at present re-writing appears to be contemplated. The railway bonds will not be handed over en bloc, but will be paid out as circumstances warrant.

The Nippon and the Shogyo Shimpō allege that the Ministers of War and the Navy have agreed to further postponements of extraordinary expenditures to the extent of 50 million yen in the three fiscal years beginning with 1909. The saving effected on the Army's side will be 15 million yen in 1909 and an equal amount in 1910, and the savings on the Naval side will be 10 millions in 1909, 6 millions in 1910 and 4 millions in 1911.

On the 25th of this month Treasury bills of the total value of 10 million yen fall due for re-payment. It is stated that the Treasury intends to re-write them, and that a lower rate of interest will probably be adopted.

Thursday, August 20.

All the leading papers of Tokyo say that at a meeting of the Cabinet held on the 18th inst. three important decisions were unanimously adopted. The first was that the appropriations for the various departmental undertakings should be reduced by postponements; the second, that the utmost possible economy should be exercised in all directions, and the third, that all new works should be abandoned. The exact amounts involved in these resolutions are not stated, but with regard to the redemption of the National Debt we read that from 10 to 15 millions will be added annually to the existing fund. This will bring the total yearly redemptions to 52 or 53 million yen, so that the exchequer bills redeemable in 1909 and 1911—180 millions in all—will be provided for with the exception of a sum of from 20 to 30 millions, which it is probably proposed to rewrite for a short term.

The doubtful factor in the situation is the possibility of effecting still greater reductions in the appropriations for unproductive purposes. The Army and Navy have already been cut down so largely that nothing very signal seems to be expected from these Departments in the present scheme of reductions. We may call attention here, however, to an interesting feature of the remarks recently attributed to Prince Ito at Maiko. His Highness very plainly hinted the possibility of adjusting the system of training soldiers in such a way as to increase the number of reservists while diminishing that of the men with the colours. We interpret this to mean some shortening of the period of service with the colours, which would of course represent a corresponding saving of money. But evidently the matter has not passed beyond the embryo stage.

THE TWO SCHOONERS.

With regard to the telegrams just received about the seizure of two fishing schooners by the American Preventive authorities, it appears that the vessels are the Kinsei Maru and the Sekai Maru. The former is a schooner of 127 tons with a crew of 36 and is owned by the Japan Deep Sea Fishery Company. The latter belongs to a Mr. Ishikawa of Hakodate and her tonnage is 117. No direct news of the seizure has yet been received by the owners of the schooners, but it is recalled that another schooner, the Kayo Maru, was seized last year in the vicinity of St. Paul's Island. The schooner herself was lying outside territorial waters, but one of her boats, manned by three sailors, had penetrated within the limit. It was proved, however, to the satisfaction of the American local authorities that this boat was acting in contravention of instructions given by the master of the schooner, and consequently the affair ended with the punishment of the boatmen and the release of the vessel. The owners of the Kinsei Maru declare themselves entirely incredulous as to her having exposed herself to legitimate seizure. Her master is a Japanese but her crew consist of foreigners naturalized in the Bonin Islands. These men are mostly averse to anything like poaching operations, and it is said that when taking service they exacted from the master a pledge to abstain from all violation of fishing limits. The Deep Sea Fishery Company are inclined to think, therefore, that the schooner herself was outside territorial waters, but that, like the case of the Kayo Maru, one of her boats had rowed in either for water or for some other harmless purpose.

The Tokyo Shooting Club held a meeting on Aug. 19th at Omori.

AMERICA AND CHINA.

Most extraordinary news reaches the Asahi Shimbun from New York. In the first place the New York Herald has published a leading article advocating an offensive and defensive alliance between the United States and China. Our readers will probably say that this is not at all astonishing. The New York Herald has been for some time the leader of the anti-Japanese agitation in America and if the calamity of a rupture of relations between the two countries should ever take place, history will undoubtedly refer a large part of the responsibility to the New York Herald. The line of argument now adopted by it is that just as Japan's expansion in the East constitutes an obstacle to the development of American commerce in that part of the world, so her treatment of China is a constant menace to the latter's sovereignty. Therefore the United States and China may be said to be rowing in the same boat against the aggressiveness of Japan, and the New York journal recommends that they should cement an alliance against their common foe. It is here that the extraordinary part of the story comes in. The New York Herald claims to have sent a member of its staff to wait upon the Chinese Representative in Washington, Mr. Wu Tingfang, and to have elicited from his Excellency frank approval of the alliance scheme. Mr. Wu, according to the reporter, could not undertake to say officially what the attitude of his Government would be towards such an alliance, but, speaking as an individual, he strongly welcomed the article in the New York Herald. China, he said, was undoubtedly falling into a perilous position owing to Japan's aggressions, and her interest in restraining these aggressions was on all fours with America's interest in the Far East. Therefore an alliance between the two Powers seemed to be the most potent manner of solving the problem.

Did Mr. Wu make these assertions? If he did, he has been guilty of perhaps the gravest indiscretion ever perpetrated by a duly recognised diplomatist. Knowing him to be an official of prudence, tact and experience, our inclination is to treat the whole matter as a pure canard. But can the statements of such a journal as the New York Herald be dismissed incontinently? It is a grave situation. Unless Mr. Wu explicitly denies that he ever made use of such language, the Chinese Government will have to recall him promptly or his colleague in Tokyo may expect to have his passport handed to him. What illimitable potentialities for mischief a leading newspaper possesses!

The New York Herald continues its campaign in favour of a Sino-American Alliance. Its contention is a repetition of previous arguments, namely, that without such an alliance the integrity of China cannot be preserved against Japan, or the due expansion of American trade guaranteed. The New York journal says that Asia must be the Asia of the world, not the Asia of Japan, and it writes in a strongly condemnatory strain of the demands said to have been preferred by France in connexion with the Yunnan affair. The Herald publishes interviews between its representatives and several prominent men in America. These interviews show that opinion in the south of the United States would be in favour of such an alliance. But in view of the utterances attributed by the Herald to Mr. Wu Tingfang, and in view indeed of the well known character of American newspaper interviews in general, not much value can be attached to this part of this Herald's campaign. As an illustration of the personages whom the Herald approaches for its present purpose we note the name of Mr. Li, who is described as the proprietor of a Hongkong vernacular newspaper and who is now on a visit to Paris.

It will be observed that while talking a great deal of Japanese aggression, the New York Herald does not appear to quote any proof whatever of this charge. There are no evidences of Japanese aggression visible to people living in the Far East, and the Chinese themselves would be very much perplexed to produce such evidences if they were required to do so. Perhaps we overrate the influence of the New York Herald, but however that may be, it appears to us that an alliance concluded between two countries for the explicit purpose of restraining the aggressions of a third would amount to something very like a declaration of war.

Telegrams to the Asahi Shimbun from New York say that the American journals are treating with indifference or ridicule the crusade so earnestly engaged in by the New York Herald in the cause of a Sino-American alliance against Japan. The Chinese Representative in Washington, Mr. Wu Tingfang has publicly repudiated the statements attributed to him by the Herald. Nobody who has watched Mr. Wu's career could seriously suspect him of making such assertions, but what are we to say of a paper which, while claiming to be the leading journal in a civilised country, publishes fictitious interviews with responsible statesmen and thus perverts its columns into a medium for ventilating mischievous falsehoods and fomenting international enmities? Imagine for a moment what sort of outcry would be raised on all hands if a prominent Japanese journal perpetrated a rascality of this nature: why, we should never heard the end of it. The whole Japanese press would be declared tainted, and the whited sepulchres who sit habitually in judgment on Japan and the Japanese would be furnished with material for perennial condemnation.

It is no longer possible to place the slightest confidence in any statements attributed by the New York Herald's interviewers to either Chinese publicists or any other publicists. One imagines that the New York paper, if it had any residuum of decent feeling, ought to drop its present campaign with all possible celerity. But unabashed apparently by the exposure of its duplicity in the case of Mr. Wu, it now falls back upon a certain Mr. Li Sunling, editor of a Chinese paper, and quotes him as saying that according to prevailing opinion in China, Japan, if she had money, would declare war against the United States at once. If the Herald expects to be believed in its version of Mr. Li Sunling's statements, and if the latter editor expects to be accepted as an exponent of prevailing opinion in China, it is to be feared that both will be disappointed. We can no longer give the New York Herald the credit of being even patriotic. If it really cared for American reputation, it would not disgrace American journalism by publishing glaringly false statements. The trouble is, however, that this new campaign of mischief-making is started just on the eve of the arrival of the American Fleet in Japanese waters. As the Japan Times justly remarks, however indifferent men of mature experience may be to agitators like the New York journal, it is to be apprehended that all this writing and talking may produce an effect upon the minds of some of the officers and men of the Fleet and may therefore deprive their visit to Japan of the character it would otherwise have borne. The truth is that when one looks calmly at the situation it presents almost incredibly strange aspects. What has Japan done to provoke all this suspicion and distrust? Absolutely nothing. The whole crusade has been started and engineered by a small section of the American people. The leaders of this section began by informing Japan that her people must be specially discriminated against in the United States, and they now go on to tell her that American statesmen, as their Fleet approaches a hospitable entertainment given by her in its honour, are imbued with feelings of mistrust and that the American people will experience a sentiment of relief when the entertainment is over. No sane man will believe for one moment that such feelings animate the American nation properly so called. The people of the United States, acting through their statesmen, and speaking through their publicists, have always shown themselves thoroughly friendly to Japan, and if a small coterie of vulgar agitators, whether to win notoriety for themselves or for some other equally respectable reason, are now endeavouring to sow seeds of discord between the two nations, we have confidence that Japan will be great enough not to mistake the accents of these mischief makers for the voice of her old friend.

THE KAWAKITA AFFAIR.

We find a great deal in Tokyo newspapers about the unfortunate affair in Peking. It appears that a Japanese officer accompanied by some gendarmes in plain clothes repaired to the house where Capt. Kawakita was living. The owner of the house was a Mr. Ting, a staff officer. What passed at the outset is not clearly stated, but it is plain that Capt. Kawakita was induced to meet the Japanese officer who at once began to propound troublesome questions. Kawakita had apparently received some sort of warning. He quickly drew his sword and offered violent and determined resistance to arrest. The result was that the Japanese officer or one of the gendarmes—this point is obscure—fired a revolver at him and inflicted a wound from which he expired while being carried from his residence to the police barracks. In his room were found some Chinese trunks containing maps and copies of various secret documents, as well as his will, and on searching the body a sum of money and a dose of poison were found in his girdle, suggesting that he had been always prepared for flight or self-destruction. It is hinted that his proceedings had some connexion with a Chinese high official and consequently the Chinese Government are anxious to hush the matter up as far as possible. But there is one feature which does not easily lend itself to reticence, namely, the fact that the Japanese gendarmes entered the residence of a Chinese officer and effected an arrest there without a warrant from the Chinese authorities. This matter appears to have been vehemently taken up by vernacular papers in China. They are naturally indignant at such a breach of treaty provisions, and they urge reprisals in the case of any disaffected Chinese who may be living in Japanese residences. Considering the temper of the Chinese nation at present, it is distinctly unwise that irregularities of this kind should be perpetrated.

CHINA.

Sunday, August 16.

News comes from Yongampo on the Yalu that a great number of Chinese fishing boats have assembled there, and that they threaten to prevent any fishing operations by Japanese or Koreans.

The action of the Japanese gendarmes in arresting the late Captain Kawakita while in the house of a Chinese subject without a warrant from the Chinese authorities, is said to be under official discussion in Peking. The line taken by the Japanese Government is that the gendarmes sent in their cards to the master of the house and proceeded with his tacit consent. At any rate it is alleged that explanations given by the Japanese Legation have satisfied the Chinese authorities and that the matter is practically settled. It is definitely denied that the deceased had any dealings with Russian officers.

With regard to the smuggling of arms at Hsienchow in the province of Fukien, it is now stated that there was no ammunition, and that the consignment consisted of 12,000 old rifles, the greater part of which were useless except as scrap iron. The persons engaged in the operation were 4 or 5 Chinese from the mainland, one Chinese from Formosa and one Japanese. If it be proved that there was any violation of Chinese Customs' regulations, the Japanese Government will not attempt in any way to shield its offending subject.

Monday, August 17.

The would-be assassin of the Russian Consul at Tientsin has been apprehended at Newchwang. He turns out to be a Chinese subject, and the motive of his crime is said to have been jealousy. It appears that he had ransomed one of the "flower-maidens" of Tientsin and put her to live within the foreign settlement. During his absence on business this preserve was poached upon by the Russian Consul, with the result which startled the public a fortnight ago. The victim of the stabbing has now nearly recovered.

The Peking and Tientsin Times gives the following account of the recent fire in Peking:—

A fire broke out between 9 and 10 p.m. on Sunday night in the German Legation Quarters; it started in the Gun Shed of the German Barracks which is known as "Waldersee Kaserne." At the time of the fire there were six guns with ammunition-carts in the shed, and so quickly did the fire spread that it was impossible to remove them, only one gun and one ammunition-cart being got out. A certain amount of ammunition was also stored in this shed, of which only twelve shrapnel were removed; it was impossible to remove any more. About 10.30 the remaining shrapnel and the small arms cartridges exploded with a tremendous explosion, causing destruction everywhere. There were fears that the fire would gain access to the large magazine, but fortunately this was averted by the hard work of the Austro-Hungarian Bluejackets.

All available assistance was sent by the Legations and Chinese Authorities. The German soldiers worked like slaves in the face of extreme danger and were ably backed up by the French Guard. These guards suffered most by the explosion. In spite of the united forces the fire spread to the stables and cammen, completely burning them out. By 1 a.m. the fire was under control, but it was between 5 and 6 a.m. before the fire was finally put out. Splendid order was maintained. The lack of water told badly against fighting the fire effectively. For the detachments sent from the other Legation Guards, nothing but praise for their hard and willing work was heard. The new building of the Deutsch-Asiatische Bank suffered considerably from the explosion and heat. The explosion broke all the windows and hurled great burning beams upon the roof, but these were quickly removed, without any further damage.

The German Detachment had two killed, six badly wounded and twenty slightly wounded.

The French Detachment had two killed and eight men wounded. In all forty-seven patients were treated at the Hospitals. The Doctors of all the Legations attended and did all in their power to relieve the sufferers.

The funeral of two of the unfortunate German soldiers killed on Sunday night by the explosion took place yesterday with full military honours.

Wednesday, August 19.

The Chinese Government is said to have ordered strict inquiry into the affairs of all persons suspected of revolutionary designs. The followers of Mr. Liang Keichu are specially mentioned, but it seems hard that they should be regarded as revolutionists. From what we know of Mr. Liang's career—and he has passed many years in Japan where he is now residing—we should be inclined to call him a "legitimate constitutionalist." At all events the order is said to have produced something like consternation in China, for the net of the police is likely to be cast very wide when mere suspicion is its only limit.

The Chinese Council of State is busily discussing the currency question. Telegrams to the Mainichi Shempo say that, at a meeting of the Council held on the 18th inst., a decision seemed likely to be taken in favour of the silver standard, making the yen the unit of currency. But at this point a vehement discussion arose, and the Council separated without coming to any resolve. It is expected, however, that a final step will be adopted at the next meeting. China is in a very difficult position with regard to this matter. Her statesmen must be well aware of what is patent to all foreign observers, namely, that there is now practically only one sound monetary system in the world, and that is gold monometallism. Twenty-five years ago, when bimetalism was still a practical possibility, some latitude for choice existed, but all the great countries of the earth having now pledged themselves to the single gold standard, any nation adopting the system of silver monometallism deliberately condemns itself to perpetual vicissitudes and embarrassments in consequence of the fluctuations of the white metal. Japan has been through this mill and China should profit by her neighbour's experience. The curious thing is that it was China who by paying Japan a substantial indemnity in gold after the war of 1894-5 placed within reach of this country an opportunity to adopt gold monometallism, and now twelve years after the adoption of that most fortunate decision by Japan, China herself is precluded by lack of gold from taking a similar step.

There is a report, according to a telegram to the Asahi from Peking, that a circular has been distributed throughout China over the signatures of Kang Yuwei and Liang Keichu recommending that the present system of camera government by the Empress Dowager should be given up and that the capital should be moved from Peking to Nanking. It is not impossible that this circular is the proximate cause of the order spoken of above with reference to the examination and arrest of political suspects.

Mukden persists in its opposition to the house tax proposed by Viceroy Hsu. Delegates representing the recalcitrant merchants arrived in Peking on the 17th inst.

Thursday, August 20.

On the 18th inst. a body of 28 bandits boarded a train in the vicinity of Yenkiatun and secured a considerable quantity of booty. This incident has proved somewhat startling, for it was generally supposed that the South Manchuria Railway had been guaranteed against any repetition of such crimes. Probably that confidence was premature. When we recall how frequent were the outrages committed by mounted bandits in Manchuria two years ago, it is scarcely conceivable that these lawbreakers have been completely eradicated as yet.

KOREA.

Friday, August 14.

The last budget of news published by the Seoul Press in its issue of the 11th instant gives quite a long list of operations against the insurgents between the 18th of July and the 7th of August. Twenty-five incidents are catalogued, and they resulted in the deaths of 124 insurgents in all, while several were made prisoners and firearms and ammunition were seized. With the exception of four affairs these incidents seem to have been all of a comparatively petty nature. No case is recorded of an attack from the side of the insurgents.

Saturday, August 15.

Preliminaries for the formation of the Eastern Colonization Company are said to be progressing favourably. It is expected that the programme of the Company will be published on the 25th inst. and that all the arrangements for organisation will be completed by November.

The latest bulletin published by the Seoul Press shows seven operations against the insurgents, resulting in the death of 17 of the latter and the usual seizures of arms and ammunition.

Sunday, August 16.

It is noted by Japanese papers that the prison authorities in Korea have been very unsuccessful in their management since the new Courts were opened. They have not only failed to prevent the escape of 14 prisoners after a riot, but also they allowed Mr. Yang to get away in circumstances which betrayed great slackness.

In the Seoul Press' bulletin of news published on the 13th inst. with regard to the insurgents, we find that between the 23rd ultimo and the 3rd inst. there were six incidents, ending in the death of 38 of the rebels and the capture of several others.

Tuesday, August 18.

We used to hear a great deal in former times about the Peddlars' Guild in Korea. They were supposed to comprise all the disorderly elements in the Peninsula. Since the War, however, they have passed comparatively out of sight, though doubtless such of them as remain have been working in company with the insurgents. We now read, however, in Seoul telegrams to the Nichi Nichi Shimbun, that the leader of this Guild has enrolled himself in an association called the Tadong-Hoi, which is described as an anti-Japanese Body. We presume that this means the disappearance of the Peddlars' Guild as a separate organization, and we trust that it also means the disappearance of the insurgents as a potential force. It appears to be thought in some quarters that because the accounts published by the Seoul Press with regard to the state of the insurrection show numerous encounters and a somewhat heavy tale of casualties on the Korean side, therefore the insurrection is very far from being quelled. But if those who take this view examine the record carefully, they will detect a striking difference between the conditions now existing and those existing a few months ago. That difference is that the insurgents never figure now in the rôle of assailants. They used to be heard of constantly as attacking Japanese posts or raiding villages, but now they have to be sought out by the Japanese on every occasion, and the plain inference is that they no longer possess spirit or strength to assume the offensive. If that inference be correct, then it is also correct to say that the insurrection is on its last legs. Of course there is the consideration that the Japanese troops and gendarmes being in overwhelming strength, the insurgents have no choice but to avoid encounters. But that, after all, is only another way of saying that the trouble is in process of eradication.

The Asahi Shimbun has a telegram from Seoul complaining that the sentence of suspension against two Japanese newspapers published in the Korean capital remain still in force although a fortnight has elapsed since it was announced. The two newspapers are thus threatened with ruin. It is not denied that the authorities had right on their side in restraining the inflammatory utterances of these two journals with regard to the question of the election of municipal officials in Japanese settlements. But our contemporary's correspondent seems to think it hard that the punishment should be prolonged so as to threaten such dire consequences. We are not acquainted with the details of the offence committed by the journals, and we have not the slightest sympathy as a rule with the licence which certain newspapers permit themselves to exercise under the lofty guise of liberty of the press. But there are limitations in all things, and it does seem hard that a journal should be driven to bankruptcy for a single act of intemperance in discussing such a matter as the appointment of municipal officers.

Wednesday, August 19.

A meagre telegram from Seoul to the Mainichi Dempo says that it is probable that Mr. Yang will be handed over to the police authorities on the 19th or the 20th inst. It is singular that the correspondents of our Tokyo contemporaries, who are generally so liberal in their use of the wire, do not send some explanation of the very interesting questions connected with the reluctance hitherto shown in this matter by the British Consul.

Preparations are evidently going on vigorously for the organisation of the Eastern Colonization Company. Many points have to be settled as to its supervision and legal status. Apparently the present intention is to launch the Company about the month of October.

One of the Seoul newspapers to which we alluded in our last issue has had its sentence of suspension withdrawn and the other has resumed publication under a changed name.

THE PORTSMOUTH NEGOTIATIONS.

The Asahi Shimbun's New York correspondent has sent to that journal a very long telegram embodying the gist of an article said to have been contributed to the European Gazette by Professor Maxim Kwarevoski (?) of the St. Petersburg University, on the subject of the Portsmouth Treaty. The article does not contain anything which was not already known to well informed persons, but it is interesting as conveying a very clear idea of the attitude of Count de Witte and the President of the United States. The Russian Professor quotes verbatim from documents which have come into his possession. He shows that at one stage of the negotiations

Count de Witte had abandoned all hope of a peaceful solution unless Russia consented to purchase the northern half of Saghalien Island from Japan for 1000 million roubles, which sum was to include also the cost of maintaining the Russian prisoners in Japan. De Witte, himself, urged this course upon the Czar in the strongest terms; pointed out that if Japan's terms were rejected, she might become bankrupt, but on the other hand Russia would lose Vladivostok as well as all her possessions in Far Eastern Asia, and expressed the opinion that by accepting these terms Russia would not be in any sense humiliated. The Court in St. Petersburg, however, declined firmly to endorse such a proposal and telegraphed to its Plenipotentiary that the Conference must be broken off and the war resumed. President Roosevelt then stepped once more into the arena. He urged upon Japan the consideration that if she persisted in insisting on the ransom of northern Saghalien, she would place herself in the position of carrying on a sanguinary war for the sake of money alone, and she would therefore not only forfeit the respect of the civilised world but also cut herself off from all further financial assistance, while her only gain would be a large area of undeveloped territory. At the same time the President urged strongly upon Russia the acceptance of Japan's terms, and endorsed the Japanese contention that Russia's prestige would not be at all injured by buying back the northern half of Saghalien. The Russian statesmen, however, were quite clever enough to see that Japan could not afford to incur the reproach of continuing the war for the sake of money alone. They stood firm and Japan yielded.

With all the above most of our readers were tolerably acquainted. But why was northern Saghalien given up? That is what we could not understand at the time and have never been able to understand since. If Russia was not willing to buy back this important part of her possessions, then, according to all principles of right that property should have remained in the hands which actually held it, namely, Japan's hands. And it was a property of immense value. As between the northern and the southern halves of the island there is no room for comparison. The southern half may be worth a few millions of yen on account of its fisheries, its forests and perhaps its mines, but the northern half has immense strategical importance, for it absolutely commands the mouth of the Amur River. Why was it given up?

EXTRAVAGANCE AMONG SOLDIERS.

Some strange criticisms have appeared recently in the columns of Japanese newspapers. The soldier is their subject. It is complained that the Japanese Tommy Atkins has developed extravagant habits and is spending money on luxuries and dissipations such as he formerly eschewed altogether, for the very good reason that he could not afford them, even assuming him to have been disposed to self-indulgence. The matter has been taken up by an authority so worthy of respect as the Asahi Shimbun, and we observe with some surprise that our distinguished contemporary writes in a somewhat incendiary strain. It speaks of the taxpayer's indignation at seeing this squandering of money paid by him to the State with much moil and toil, and it contrasts the hard lives led by the peasants with the comparative opulence of the soldiers who, after all, are themselves simply peasants. Of course it is not for an outsider to traverse the accuracy of these remarks, but when we observe the cause assigned for the soldier's present extravagance, we can not but be sceptical as to the justice of the whole criticism. The cause assigned is that enormous sums of money have been paid out as gratuities to men who served in the war, and that large sums are still paid out annually to those who have received orders. But surely such reasoning is singularly thoughtless? The men who received gratuities and the men who are in receipt of annual allowances or pensions are no longer serving with the colours. They have long ago been released and if they are squandering the gifts made to them by the State, their extravagance can produce no visible effect whatever on the men who have since been enrolled as conscripts and are now serving with the colours. The two classes are entirely distinct. The soldier now in the ranks has no connection whatever with the soldiers among whom a grateful country distributed some well earned gratuities. If the former appears to be well off, it is not because of any assistance given to him by the State. His pay and allowances are just what they always have been. Possibly his friends and relatives find themselves able to make him a more liberal allowance than they used to, but, if so, the fact is a direct contradiction of the argument that the peasants observe with indignation the extravagance of the soldier as compared with their own penury. It appears to us that in this matter a very hollow and thoughtless clamour has been raised. The newspapers have unaccountably confounded the soldiers of to-day with men who were soldiers 3 years ago, but who have long since been released. If the recipients of gratuities and pensions are squandering money, they must be doing so as ordinary civilians, not as soldiers.

COUNT OKUMA.

Somebody with a very lively imagination has made a discovery which we, living, as the proverb says, at the foot of the lamp, have failed altogether to apprehend. It is that Count Okuma has been boasting of the qualities of the Japanese soldier, declaring that the expansion of the American Navy is obviously directed against this country, and affirming that Japan is prepared to try conclusions at any moment. It need hardly be said that this tale furnishes grist to the mill of the New York Herald. That pestilential stirrer up of strife sneeringly remarks that in view of the corrupt state into which the Japanese Army has fallen, as proved by recent sales of military secrets, Count Okuma would probably be disappointed by the result of his challenge. The only comment we have to make upon this foolishness is that we do not believe that Count Okuma made such a statement or anything resembling it. The New York Herald seems to have fallen into a mood of indiscriminating fury. It opens its ears eagerly to every story, from however tainted a source, provided that the details furnish a plausible text for anti-Japanese denunciations, but it closes its ears carefully to the innumerable evidences daily furnished of Japan's quiet, peaceful and dignified mood. If Count Okuma said anything of the sort, his words have not been quoted in Japan. They seem to have come into existence on the voyage to America.

THE ARMY.

Major-General Iiguchi, head of the Military College, has been interviewed by the Asahi Shimbun, and is quoted as expressing an opinion not very favourable to the present condition of the Japanese Army. He says that 20 or 25 years ago the men who applied for commissions were already imbued with the bushi spirit and there was consequently no occasion to pay special attention to their moral training. In that respect they were fully qualified, and all that was needed was to give them a suitable technical training. But things have gradually changed. The young officer now-a-days takes more thought for his craft than for the spirit of a soldier. In short, technical education has come to occupy a place of too much importance. The case of the late Captain Kawakita is very much in point. That officer graduated with the highest honours, and gave such promise of obtaining distinction that he was immediately placed upon the Staff, and a brilliant career seemed to open for him. But he lacked moral instinct, and so his talents were not only wasted but also perverted to evil uses. Of course, account must be taken of the fact that the number of officers now required for the army is immensely larger than it was in the days when seven Divisions represented the whole of the Empire's military force. Among a number so greatly increased it is perhaps inevitable that some black sheep should be found. But the Major-General's emphatic opinion is that too much importance is now attached to technical training and too little attention paid to morality. He speaks with much approval of the German method of selecting officers by the judgment of regimental commanders, upon whom there thus devolves a certain measure of responsibility for the quality of the men chosen by them. Major-General Iiguchi thinks, however, that the German system cannot be adopted in Japan, and he does not distinctly suggest any substitute. He alludes also to the various devices resorted to by youths to avoid conscription. Medical certificates and even certificates from local officials are obtained in many cases without any substantial ground whatever, and such practices tend to lower the moral standard of the whole force.

Major-General Iiguchi here puts his finger upon one of the weak points of the conscription system. Conscription is like a protective tariff. Each encourages fraudulent attempts to evade it.

PRINCE ITO

Prince Ito has been speaking very frankly at Maiko, where he is at present staying. He admits that there has been talk of his entering the Privy Council, but he says that heavy work still confronts him in Korea, and that inasmuch as the peace of the East may be said to depend upon the successful management of affairs in that country, he has no idea of abandoning the problem until its solution is fairly in sight. The Prince ridicules the idea that the Koreans are an incompetent and gullible people. He says that on the contrary they are shrewd and intelligent, and in not a few cases Japanese who attempted to take advantage of their supposed mental deficiencies were themselves victimised. In dealing with Korea, Japan has always to remember that ever since the days when Hideyoshi, in pursuance of his own recklessly ambitious policy, invaded Korea, the people of the latter have entertained towards their insular neighbours a feeling of dislike and distrust. This has proved a great obstacle to the progress of reform, and it is not probable that the light will shine fully in Korea for several years to come. The habits of mind and the customs which have been growing unchecked for centuries cannot be eradicated in a night and a morning. One trouble is that Korean officials are almost invariably prone to depend solely on punitive methods. They look at things through distorting spectacles, and it seems almost hopeless to cure them of this propensity. It is a matter of prime importance to correct such an error of administration. Alluding to the question which recently created so much commotion, namely the official nomination of Mayors of Japanese municipalities instead of their election by the people, Prince Ito says that it is really a financial question and that it has nothing whatever to do with politics or popular rights. Under the old system a very marked tendency had developed to squander money upon salaries and in other unnecessary directions. The object of the change to official nomination is simply to correct these abuses.

Speaking of finance, the Prince alluded to the general cry for reduction of military expenditures, but he noted that no one as yet had put forward any definite plan for effecting such reduction. It is not possible to lay down a hard and fast rule as to the limits of the sums that shall be appropriated for each Department of State. The circumstances of the time must be taken into account in arranging such matters. Japan may be regarded as the pivot upon which the peace of the East turns, and she must act up to that character. One way of reducing military expenditures might be found in diminishing the men with the colours and increasing the reserves, so that in case of emergency a powerful army could be mobilized. The Prince believes that the present Cabinet, whose existence may be said to depend on its treatment of the financial problem, is giving the fullest attention to the matter. He referred to the case of Italy, which had not shrunk from burdens much larger than those borne by Japan, yet by industry and perseverance had emerged from a very difficult position. Japan is passing through a similar crisis of her national existence, and must make up her mind to boldly face the necessities of the situation.

THE FISHERY QUESTION.

The Japanese fishermen are said to be strongly opposed to the project now on foot for Japanese adhesion to the Behring Sea Conservation Treaty. They recall the fact that in 1896 when the terms of that Treaty were under discussion by Russia, America and England, Japan, after due deliberation, declined to enter the Union on the ground that its provisions would greatly check the development of her pelagic industry. It may be urged that things have changed since then, since Japan has come into possession of southern Saghalien which includes Robben Island. But the fishermen say that, so far as they can see, the rookery on Robben Island is an insignificant affair, and they declare that they will radically oppose the Government if, for the sake of avoiding petty international friction it sacrifices the interests of the country's fisheries. The Tokyo press takes an entirely different view. It heartily approves of the idea of joining the Behring Sea Convention, not merely because Japan's material interests suggest that course, but also because she owes something to Russia for the latter's friendly attitude. The three great breeding grounds of the seal are the Pribyl Islands, the Commander Islands and Robben Island. This last used to be carefully preserved by Russia, but during the war the efficiency of her protection was necessarily diminished, and wholesale advantage was taken of the fact by poachers, so that the rookery suffered greatly. There can be no doubt, however, that if it were protected, it would soon become as prolific as ever. Japan is therefore equally interested with Russia America and England in conserving the fisheries in northern waters, to say nothing of the value of international amity, and she must not allow herself to be influenced by the complaints of a few fishermen.

There appear to be some differences of opinion between the Marine Products Bureau of the Department of Agriculture and Commerce and the Foreign Office as to the advisability of Japan joining the Behring Sea Convention. The Foreign Office is entirely in favour of the proposal, and it is stated that not only Count Hayashi approved of the idea when he held the portfolio of Foreign Affairs, but also Count Komura practically gave his consent during his recent visit to St. Petersburg. The Bureau of Marine Products is quoted as saying that the Convention is defective in one important respect. It provides for the protection of seals against attacks from the sea, but it does not protect them against attacks from the shore. The immediate result of joining the Convention would be that whereas Japanese hunters now take about 30,000 pelts per annum, they would not take more than 10,000 under the new arrangement. We (Japan Mail) are disposed to think that whatever system of protection is good enough for Russia, the United States and England ought to be good enough for Japan. At all events, from an international point of view, it looks very bad that this country should isolate herself, merely on the ground that her hunters have thereby a freer hand in capturing the very animals which it is the object of the Convention to protect. That may be a rough judgment, but it is what the world will inevitably say.

"FIFTY YEARS OF OPEN JAPAN."

A copy of this remarkable compilation, which owes its existence entirely to the enterprise and munificence of Count Okuma, has been presented to the Emperor, and duly received. The work is monumental, and what it leaves untold in the story of modern Japan is not worth telling. It would seem, however, that there is some difficulty in arranging for the publication of an English version. The original idea was that The Times would bring out the work, but the great London journal, in the sequel of its fight with the booksellers, seems to have imposed some limitations on its publishing enterprise, and we cannot gather that any other publisher has yet been found willing to take the risk of bringing out such a voluminous work. Two or three years ago there would not have been any difficulty of this nature, but interest in Japan and her affairs is not so keen now as it was then, and moreover the public has been rather deluged with books of all kinds about the Far East. It will be a thousand pities, however, if no one can be found sufficiently enterprising to make this great work accessible to Anglo-Saxon readers. We should think that American publishers, who are proverbially much more enterprising than their English confreres, could easily be induced to take the risk.

IMPARTIALITY.

It is really curious to observe the displays of impartiality evoked by the Yang incident in Seoul. The Japan Chronicle, for example, opens its columns to letters which avow Mr. Yang's complete innocence of the charges preferred against him, and plainly state that he has been arrested and accused solely because he gave evidence in favour of Mr. Bethell at the recent trial in Seoul. These letters are published while Mr. Yang is awaiting public trial, having been duly remanded after a preliminary examination. It would not be possible more flagrantly to prejudice a case sub judice. The Japan Herald reproduces the Japan Chronicle's letters without a word of protest, and then turns round and in the very same issue accuses the Japan Mail of "indecent haste to jump at conclusions," and of "again outraging the principles of fair and independent journalism" because we wrote:—"Much interest attaches to this affair, for if the crime of malversation be established, the malcontents in Korea will have their eyes opened in some degree at any rate to the nature of the motives which have actuated their instigators." Is it not supremely comical to observe this fine frenzy about the mote in another's eye while quite oblivious of the beam in one's own? The Japan Mail did not jump at any conclusion. It did not in any way prejudice the case. It did not in the smallest degree outrage the principles of fair and independent journalism. The flagrant perpetrators of these offences are the Japan Chronicle and the Japan Herald, which publish letters not only declaring Mr. Yang's innocence but also openly suggesting that he is the victim of persecution because he ventured to give evidence unpalatable to the Japanese authorities. Not content with trying to prove Mr. Yang's blamelessness while his public trial is still pending, they actually accuse the Japanese Authorities of an act of most vindictive injustice. And then the Japan Herald turns round and with a show of solemn rectitude accuses the Japan Mail of sundry heinous offences because we pointed out the interest that centered upon the issue of the trial. It is really very amusing.

A SUGGESTION.

